

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

HL 5HKS M

Bd. Dec. 1939

HARVARD LAW SCHOOL LIBRARY

Received Jan. 2. 1891

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH RAILROAD CASES.

A complete collection of all the railroad law as decided by the American, English and Canadian courts of last resort.

Elaborate notes to the more important cases. As a means of giving the working lawyer a full collection of all the cases on the subjects treated, together with able and judicious criticism upon the points presented, they are simply invaluable.

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH CORPORATION CASES.

This series presents a full collection of the cases in all the courts of last resort, both in America and England, on the law of private and municipal corporations other than railroad companies.

1.—SCOPE. Among the topics treated of will be the following:

PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.—Agency, Assessments, Building Associations, Dissolution of Corporations, Dividends and Earnings, Ecclesiastical and Religious Corporations, Elections, Mandamus, Officers, Organization, Powers, Stock and Stockholders, Taxation.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.—Assessments, Bonds, Powers, Ordinances, Poor Laws, Streets, Taxes, Intoxicating Liquors, Injuries to Person and Property, etc., etc.

2.—NOTES. The annotations are a special feature, being very full and exhaustive.

These works are issued in monthly Parts, each Part containing not less than 224 pages. Three Parts make a complete volume. When Part 3 is published, the Parts are returned to the publisher by the subscriber, and are bound in best law sheep and returned by mail WITHOUT CHARGE FOR BINDING. The subscription price is $4.50 per volume, including NOTES OF CASES.

EDWARD THOMPSON CO., Publishers,
Northport, Long Island, N. Y.

File #

34 C#
12x

THE

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH

ENCYCLOPÆDIA

OF

LAW.

COMPILED UNDER THE EDITORIAL SUPERVISION OF

JOHN HOUSTON MERRILL,

Late Editor of the American and English Railroad Cases and the American and English Corporation Cases.

VOLUME XIV.

NORTHPORT, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.:
EDWARD THOMPSON COMPANY LAW PUBLISHERS,
1890.

S
US
O13
AME

TX
A51236

COPYRIGHT, 1890,
BY EDWARD THOMPSON CO.

Rec. Jan. 2, 1898

LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS, VOLUME XIV.

Malicious Mischief , . . .	ELMER G. SAMMIS, of the New York City Bar.
Malicious Prosecution , . . .	E. W. CUNNINGHAM, of the Emporia (Kan.) Bar.
Mandamus ,	D. M. MICKEY, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Malpractice ,	ELMER G. SAMMIS, of the New York City Bar.
Manufacturing Corporations ,	W. M. MCKINNEY, Editor Am. & Eng. Corpora- tion Cases.
Marine Insurance ,	WILLIAM CUSHING WAIT, of the Boston Bar.
Maritime Lien ,	ALBERT B. WEIMER, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Marriage ,	DAVID STEWART and LEIGH BONSAI, of the Baltimore Bar.
Marriage Settlements ,	DAVID STEWART and JOHN H. C. LEGG, of the Baltimore Bar.
Married Women ,	DAVID STEWART and LEIGH BONSAI, of the Baltimore Bar.
Marshalling Assets ,	ALBERT B. WEIMER, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Marshalling Assets in De- cedents' Estates ,	HOWARD WURTS PAGE, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Master and Servant ,	SOLON D. WILSON, of the Chicago Bar.
Master of a Vessel ,	ALBERT B. WEIMER and CHAS. E. PANCOAST, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Master in Equity ,	} THOMAS P. HOWELL, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Mayhem ,

TABLE OF TITLES AND DEFINITIONS.

See general index for numerous sub-titles and definitions contained in the notes.

- | | |
|--|--|
|  Maim, 1
 Main, 1
 Maine Law. See Intoxicating Liquors
 Mainer, 1
 MAINPRISE, 1
 Mainsworn, 2
 Maintain—Maintained—Maintaining, 2
 MAINTENANCE, 3
 Majority, 3
 Make, 4
 Maker, 4
 Making, 5
 Male, 5
 Malfeasance, 5
 MALICE, 5
 Malicious, 6
 Maliciously, 7
 MALICIOUS MISCHIEF, 8 MALICIOUS PROSECUTION, 16
 MALPRACTICE, 76
 Malt, 86
 Maltreatment, 86
 Man, 86
 Manage, 87
 Manager, 87
 Managing Agent, 88
 MANDAMUS, 88
 MANDATE, 240
 Mandatory, 249
 Manhood, 249
 Mania, 250
 MANIFEST, 250
 Manner, 251
 Manor, 254
 Mansion, 255
 Manual, 255
 Manufactory, 256
 MANUFACTURE, 257
 MANUFACTURER, 264  |  Manufacturers of Metals, 314
 MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS, 269
 Manumission, 314
 Manure, 314
 Manuscript, 315
 Many, 315
 MAP, 315
 Marauder, 315
 Mare, 316
 Margin, 316
 Marine, 317
 MARINE INSURANCE, 319
 Mariner, 409
 MARITAL RIGHTS, 409
 Maritime, 409
 MARITIME LIENS, 410
 Mark, 457
 Market, 458
 Marketable Title, 458
 Market Overt, 458
 MARKETS, 459
 Market Value, 467
 Marque, 469
 MARRIAGE, 470
 MARRIAGE BROKER, 538
 MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS, 538
 MARRIED WOMEN, 588
 MARSHAL, 684
 MARSHALLING ASSETS, 685
 MASONIC LODGES. See Societies
 MASTER AND SERVANT, 740
 MASTER IN EQUITY, 919
 MASTER OF A VESSEL, 958
 Material, 976
 Matter, 976
 Mature, 978
 Maturity, 978
 MAY, 979
 MAYHEM, 985
 Meander, 997  |
|--|--|

THE AMERICAN AND ENGLISH ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF LAW.

MAIM.—See MAYHEM.

MAIN.—See note 1.

MAINE LAW.—See INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

MAINER.—See note 2.

MAINPRISE.—It is an undertaking by one's friends for him, before certain persons for that purpose authorized, that he shall appear at a certain day and answer whatever shall be objected to him in a legal way. Thus to save him from imprisonment in the common jail. It has been used synonymously by many law writers with the word bail.³ The term is now seldom used.

1. Main Sea.—The common law definition of the main sea was that part of the sea lying outside of the terre fauces, or points on the opposite shore sufficiently near to enable persons standing on one shore to distinctly see and discern with the naked eye what is doing on the opposite shore. The water within the terre fauces, although properly called the sea, or an arm of the sea, is not the main sea within the common law definition. 2 East P. C., ch. 17, § 10, p. 804; U. S. v. Grush, 5 Mason (U. S.) 290; People Ex rel Morris v. Supervisors, 73 N. Y. 393; Angell on Tide Waters 4. Baker v. Hoag, 7 N. Y. 555; U. S. v. Millberger, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 76; Hamilton v. Frazer, Stuart's Canada Rep. 27.

Main Channel.—The main channel of a river, within the meaning of the act of Congress authorizing the building of a drawbridge over the Mississippi river at Keokuk, Iowa, and requiring that the draw shall be over the main channel of the river and at an accessible and navigable point, is that bed over which the principal volume of water flows. St. Louis & St. Paul Packet Co. v. Keokuk & Hamilton Bridge Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 755.

Main River.—Where a river is a boundary between states, it is the main or permanent river which constitutes the boundary, and not that part which flows in seasons of high water and is dry at other times.

Middle of Main Channel.—The phrase "middle of the river," when employed to designate the boundary between states, signifies the mean center line of the main channel—or, as it is more frequently expressed, the "thread of the stream," the space within which vessels may and usually do pass. Battenuth v. St. Louis Bridge Co., 5 Am. St. Rep. (Ill.) 553.

From Main Wall of a House.—24 Q. B. Div. 170.

2. In Rex v. Beare, 1 Raym. 417, the court held that when a libel is produced written by a man's own hand, and the author of it is unknown, he is taken in the mainer, and that throws the proof upon him; and if he cannot produce the composer the verdict will be against him. See also Heard, Ld. Cr. Cas., 440 n.

3. Bacon's Abr. 530.

The chief difference is that a man's mainpernors are barely his sureties and cannot imprison him themselves to com-

Definition. MAINSWORN—MAINTAIN—ED—ING. Definition.

MAINSWORN.—See note 1.

MAINTAIN—ED—ING.—To keep up; sustain; preserve; to hold or keep in any particular state or condition;² used as a verb, it does not mean to provide or construct.

pel his appearance, as his bail may. 6 Mod. 231; 7 Mod. 77, 85, 98; Ld. Raym. 706; 12 Mod. 275, 348, 606, 607, 667. Bail are sureties that the parties be answerable for the special matters only for which they stipulate. Mainpernors are bound to produce him to answer all charges whatsoever. 3 Bl. Com. 128; Bouv. L. Dict., tit. Mainpernors.

1. Foresworn, by making false oath with hand on book. Brownl. 4; Slater v. Franks, Hob. 125; Bacon's Abr. IX, 62.

2. Louisville R. Co. v. Godman (Ind. 1886), 2 West. Rep. 327.

To Maintain.—In Com. v. Kimball, 105 Mass. 467, WELLS, J., observes in his opinion: "The nuisance, in this case, consists in the illegal use of the building or place. Section 7, ch. 87, of the Gen. Stat. Massachusetts, makes anyone who 'keeps or maintains such common nuisance' liable to punishment. This phraseology is adapted to the idea of a nuisance resulting from the perversion of the building or place to an illegal use. To 'keep' may, in its ordinary and more obvious sense, apply only to one who exercises control or proprietorship of the building or place used. But to 'maintain' has no such limited application. The building is not maintained by the occupant, but the nuisance is maintained by prosecuting therein the illegal traffic. The alternative, 'whoever keeps or maintains' will apply therefore either to the one who controls the occupation and procures or permits the illegal use, or to one who engages in the illegal use, and thus maintains or aids in maintaining the public nuisance." See also State v. Main, 31 Conn. 574.

The statute 1 G. & H. 343, § 15, Indiana, providing that partition fences "shall be maintained throughout the year, equally by both parties," is not limited to repairs simply, but applies as well to the rebuilding of a fence destroyed by fire. Rhodes v. Mummary, 48 Ind. 216.

In Moorhead v. Little Miami R. Co., 17 Ohio 340, 353, the court held that to maintain a railroad implies no power to change the location after construction. BIRCHARD, C. J., observes in the opinion of the court: "To build or construct a railroad is one thing; to maintain the structure after it is erected or built, is another. The word maintenance has reference to the powers to be exercised after the completion. This is the natural force of the expression.

Maintain in Substantial Repair.—An agreement that the working company shall maintain the railway of the worked company in substantial repair and good working order and condition, the worked company being bound to provide at a certain station proper terminal accommodations to enable the working company to carry on and convey the traffic, and being bound to pay to the working company such toll rent or other consideration for the use of a third company's line and station as the working company might have to pay to such third company; it was held that the word "maintain" was limited to the railway of the worked company, and did not extend to the station or any portion of the railway of the third company. Clonmel Traders v. The Waterford & Limerick Railway Co., 4 Ry. & Can. Cas. 92.

"Maintain an Action."—The auditor of State alone is authorized to maintain an action against officers and trustees of savings banks for violation of their statutory duties. Ryan v. Ray, 2 West. Rep. 323.

In Boutiller, Admr. v. The Steamboat Milwaukee, 8 Minn. 97, an action was brought against the steamboat Milwaukee, by name, to recover damages for the killing of Francis Boutiller, by wrongfully running him down while in a small boat in the Mississippi river. The action is brought under the act concerning boats and vessels, found on page 647 of the compiled statutes, and the act concerning actions by and concerning executors, administrators, etc., page 610 of the same book. In delivering the opinion of the court, FLANDRAN, J., observes: "The argument of the counsel for no action can be commenced or originated by the personal representatives, but that they can only carry on one which had been commenced by the injured party before his death, is founded upon the peculiar language used in the statute, which provides that the personal representatives may "maintain" an action, contending that the word "maintain" means "to hold, preserve, or keep in any particular state or condition; to support; to sustain; not to suffer to fail or decline," etc. Now, without in any manner controverting this definition of the word "maintain" in its ordinary and general use, we very much doubt whether its legal signification is so restricted. There is no expression more common at the bar among the legal profession than in speaking of the existence of a cause of action to say, "Can an action be maintained upon these facts?" "Can an action be maintained upon this instrument?" Using the word "maintain" as synonymous with the existence of a cause of action. But, aside from this, we think the statute furnishes its own answer to the argument of the counsel. Whatever may be the ordinary signification of the word "legal," or otherwise, its particular sense cannot be doubted in reference to this act. The language is that the personal representative "may maintain an action" if the deceased "might have maintained an action." It cannot be seriously urged that the word "maintain," as used in speaking of the deceased having his action against the wrongdoer, can mean other than commence, institute or begin an action; and the same expression occurring in the same sentence, in reference to the same subject, to wit, the suit against the trespasser, cannot reasonably be held to have two different significations.

MAINTENANCE.—See CHAMPERTY AND MAINTENANCE; HUSBAND AND WIFE; PARENT AND CHILD; POOR AND POOR LAWS.

MAJORITY.—(See ELECTIONS, vol. 6, 445; INFANTS, vol. 10, 614).—The greater number—more than all the opponents.¹

"Maintain the Buildings."—A covenant to "maintain the buildings" binds the lessee to keep them in proper repair at all times during the term, and the lessor may maintain an action upon the covenant at any time, either before or after the term has expired. Wood's Lard. and Ten. (2nd ed.), p. 807, citing Buck v. Pike, 27 Vt. 529.

"Maintaining and Sustaining."—The words "maintaining and sustaining" a railroad have reference to keeping the road in repair, supplying it with machinery and such like acts, and not to projects for extending its business by schemes and enterprises not contemplated and expressed in clear, unambiguous terms by the charter itself. The Central R. Co. v. Collins, 3 Am. Corp. Cas. 224 (40 Ga. 582).

"Maintained" in Pleading.—A technical word indispensable in an indictment in pleading for maintenance. Bouv. Law Dict. It also signifies to support what has already been brought into existence. Louisville R. Co. v. Godman (Ind. 1886), 2 West. Rep. 327; Moon v. Durden, 2 Exch. Rep. 21.

1. "Majority of Shareholders."—The words "majority of shareholders," as used in the act of March 21st, 1872, California, mean a majority of the persons holding shares, and not "the holders of a majority of the stock," and a petition signed by less than a majority of the shareholders, though the signers held a majority of the stock, is therefore insufficient. Act held unconstitutional and void. Challar Mining Co. v. Wilson, 5 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 670.

In Walker v. Oswald, 11 Cent. Rep. (Md.) 123, the court held that under § 8, ch. 248, Maryland acts of 1886, in reference to licensing the sale of liquor in Washington county, the words "a majority of voters of said county," mean "a majority of the voters of the county voting on that subject." See also Taylor v. Taylor, 10 Minn. 107; Gillespie v. Palmer, 20 Wis. 554; Bayard v. Klinger, 16 Minn. 249; Everett v. Smith, 22 Minn. 53.

Majority in Bankruptcy Act.—In the expressions "in calculating a majority," and "the majority in value" and "the majority in number in the statute," (National Bankrupt act), the word "majority" refers to and embraces everything previously spoken of in the section as a result to be arrived at by calculation. In re Gilday, 11 Bank Reg. 108.

"Majority in Value of the Creditors."—Upon a motion for an injunction it was held that in estimating the "majority in value of the creditors," under 50 V., ch. 8, § 1 (Manitoba), the question of security held by any creditor should not be taken into account. Creditors must be taken to be such for the full amount of what the debtor owes them. Fraser v. Darroch, 9 Can. L. T. 238.

MAKE.—See note 1.

MAKER.—See note 2.

MAKING.—See note 3.

1. Make.—1. To prepare, subscribe, verify and file; as, to make answer; 2. To transfer for the benefit of creditors; as, to make an assignment; 3. To sign, seal and deliver; to execute; as to make a bill, deed or note; 4. To agree to, or to execute; as to make a contract; 5. To fail to do a thing required in the conduct of legal proceedings; as, to make default; 6. To produce, create; as, to make an issue; 7. To collect or procure under an execution; as, to make the money; 8. To swear or affirm to, in due form; as, to make oath or affirmation; 9. To transfer; as, to make over; 10. To prepare and read in open court; as, to make a presentment; 11. To certify what was done under the mandate of a writ; as, to make a return. Anderson's Law Dict.

The word "make," as it is used in § 26, ch. 12, of the Gen. Stat. Vermont, means to form, or compose, and the manual act of writing out a complaint, even though by the dictation of another, by a sheriff or deputy sheriff, is prohibited by the statute. State v. Drew, 51 Vt. 58. See also Winchell v. Pond, 19 Vt. 198; Hunt v. Vial, 20 Vt. 291; Walworth v. Farwell, 41 Vt. 212.

The word "making" is equally applicable to machines as to compositions of matter; and we see no difficulty in holding that the using or vending of a patented composition is a violation of the right of the proprietor. Fessenden Law of Patents 287.

● "Make Over" in a Deed.—The words "make over and grant" in a deed are sufficiently operative to convey lands, by way of a use, under the statute of uses. Jackson v. Alexander, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 484.

Makes Over and Confirms.—In Jackson v. Root, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 60-79, the court held, that where the grantor, for value received, "makes over and confirms" unto the grantees, their heirs, etc., forever, the intention is clear and manifest, and the words denote a present contract of sale.

2. Maker.—A term applied to one who makes a promissory note and promises to pay it when due. Bouv. Law Dict.

A law-maker means a legislator; and "the law-maker," the individual, or body that enacts a law or laws. Anderson's Law Dict.

3. Making His Law.—A phrase used to denote the act of a person who wages his law. Bouv. Law Dict.

Making.—In In re Debaum, 11 Crim. L. Mag. 48, the court say: "Forgery at common law is the fraudulent making of a writing to the prejudice of another man's right," "or, a false making of any writing for the purpose of fraud or deceit. "Making" means every alteration of or addition to a true instrument.

"Make."—In In re 163rd Starr-Bowkett Building Society's Contract, 38 W. R. 2, COTTON, L. J., observes: "This is an appeal from a decision of CHITTY, J., by which he held that a contract for sale had been duly annulled by the vendors. The sale was by public auction, subject to certain conditions of sale, one of which, after providing for the time within which requisitions and objections to title were to be sent in, continued: 'And in case the purchaser shall, etc., make any objection or requisition on the title which the vendors shall be unable or unwilling to remove or comply with, the vendors shall be at liberty at any time thereafter, etc.; by notice in writing, etc., to annul the contract and to return the purchaser his deposit.' Now, it has been said that the time to exercise the power of rescinding had not arisen, and that the word 'make' in the condition, must be taken to mean 'insist,' and that the 'making of a requisition' referred to in the condition was equivalent to 'insisting on a requisition,' and that no requisition had been insisted on. But I am not one to twist the words used so as to make them fit in with what might be considered to be the proper construction. The word 'make' means something different from 'insist on,' and that this is so is evident by the words used in the clause after the word 'make.'"

Making Distress.—The bailiff of the county court who actually levies a distress is the person "making any distress" within the meaning of section 49 of the Agricultural Holdings act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict., ch. 61). The words "making any distress" refer to the person who actually goes on the premises and real-

MALE.—Of the masculine sex; of the sex that begets young; the sex opposed to the female.¹

MALFEASANCE.—The unjust performance of some act which the party had no right, or which he had contracted not to do.²

MALICE.—(See CRIMINAL LAW; HOMICIDE; MALICIOUS PROSECUTION; MALICIOUS MISCHIEF; LIBEL AND SLANDER; CORPORATIONS; TORTS; FRAUD; INTENT; DRUNKENNESS; INSANITY).—The doing a wrongful act intentionally without just cause or excuse.³

1. Malice in Law.—Malice in the legal acceptance of the word is not confined to personal spite against individuals, but consists in a conscious violation of the law to the prejudice of another.⁴

izes the rent in arrear. Phillipps v. Rees, L. J. R., 59 Q. B. 1.

1. Bouv. Law Dict.

Male Children.—A testator having made a provision for the necessitous "male children" of his nephews, and having shown his intention of making it a perpetual charity: Held, that "male children" meant "male descendants." Held also, that under these expressions male descendants, through the male line, were alone entitled, and that those males who claimed through a female were excluded. Bernal v. Bernal, 7 L. J., N. S. 115.

Male Heirs.—A devise of lands to "my grandson, Stephen Cooper, to come into possession at twenty-one years of age, and to have and to hold the above named bequest to him during his natural life; and after his decease I give the premises unto his male heirs, equally between them; and, for want of heirs male, then to go in equal shares to his daughters, vests an estate tail in Stephen, the grandson, under the rule in Shelley's case; the clause of the statute of wills in relation to the creation and continuance of estates tail not being applicable to such a case. Cooper v. Cooper, 6 R. I. 261.

2. Bouv. Law Dict. See also the various titles in which malfeasance occurs.

By "malfeasance" under all definitions, is meant the doing of things which one ought not to do, or the doing of illegal acts. State v. Lazarus, 39 La. An. 161.

Malfeasance is the doing of an act wholly wrongful and unlawful, and non-feasance is an omission to perform a required duty at all, or total neglect of duty. The term misfeasance is often carelessly used to describe a malfeasance. Coite v. Lynes, 33 Conn. 115.

3. Bouv. Law Dict.; Willis v. Miller, 29 Fed. Rep. 238. See also the various cross references above mentioned.

Malice may be implied from the intentional commission of a trespass, as from one's shooting another's hound, although claiming to aim at a fox. Wright v. Clark, 50 Vt. 130.

Malice Construed as Malevolence.—Rideout v. Knox, 148 Mass. 368; Smith v. Morse, 148 Mass. 407.

Malice Implies Wilfulness.—Where the word "wilfully" is used in the statute (R. S. 1871, ch. 129, § 2, Maine), it will be sufficient if the word "maliciously" is employed in the indictment. State v. Robbins, 66 Me. 324.

4. Ferguson v. Earl of Kinnoul, 9 Cl. & F. 321.

Malice as an Element of Damage.—Malice means a want of legal excuse. This is the sense in which the term is most frequently employed, and it is probably the only sense in which it is properly employed. Substitute "absence of legal excuse" for "malice" in many opinions in the reports which are difficult to be understood, and they will become easily intelligible. The bad intent or malice with which an act is done is material on the question of damages, and it is an important element for the consideration of the jury. The absence of a bad intent will mitigate the damages; the presence of a bad intent will aggravate them. And here must be noted the difference between "malice in law" and "malice in fact." Malice in law does not mean malice or ill will towards the individual affected by libel or slander in the ordinary sense of the term. Malice in law, or absence of legal excuse, is an implication of law from the false and injurious nature of the charge, and differs from actual malice and ill will towards the individual,

2. Malice in Fact¹—(a) Express Malice.—When the party evinces an intention to commit the crime.²

(b) Implied Malice.—Inferred by law from the facts proved.³

MALICIOUS.—Characterizes an act not only when it arises from personal spite, but when it is a wanton and intentional injury, when it is wilful.⁴

frequently given in evidence to enhance the damages. Terwilliger v. Woods, 72 Am. Dec. (N. Y.) 420-426; King v. Root, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 113; Littlejohn v. Greeley, 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 41; Pennington v. Meeks, 46 Mo. 217; Tresca v. Maddox, 66 Am. Dec. 198; Jellison v. Goodwin, 43 Me. 287.

Malice in law, or absence of legal excuse, is not necessarily inconsistent with an honest or even a laudable purpose. Jellison v. Goodwin, 43 Me. 287.

1. Malice in Fact Not Malice in Law. It is clear that the supposed distinction between the different kinds of malice never rested on any good foundation. "Malice in law" is "malice in fact;" but "malice in fact" is not "malice in law." The true distinction is not in the malice itself, but simply in the evidence by which it is to be established. It is actual malice in either case; the proof only is different. This view will weed out "much indifferent and bad law scattered up and down in the books," and harmonizes the better decisions. Lewis v. Chapman, 16 N. Y. 372; Wilson v. Noonan, 35 Wis. 352. See also Ake v. State, 30 Tex. 473; Farrar v. State, 42 Tex. 271; Duebbe v. State, 1 Tex. App. 165; Plasters v. State, 1 Tex. App. 681; Summers v. State, 5 Tex. App. 381; Holden v. State, 1 Tex. App. 238; Pocket v. State, 5 Tex. App. 567; McKinney v. State, 8 Tex. App. 639; Wright v. State, 41 Tex. 248; Singleton v. State, 1 Tex. App. 507; Primus v. State, 2 Tex. App. 375; Jones v. State, 3 Tex. App. 155; Roberts v. State, 5 Tex. App. 151; Harris v. State, 8 Tex. App. 109; Rye v. State, 8 Tex. App. 166; Moore v. State, 31 Tex. 573; Sanders v. State, 41 Tex. 309; Taylor v. State, 3 Tex. App. 398.

2. Anthony v. State, 21 Miss. 264; People v. Clark, 7 N. Y. 393; 4 Bl. Com. 199.

Express Malice Rarely Proven Upon Trial of a Cause.—In reference to malice it is said by eminent judges that it is rarely if ever the case that express malice is proven upon the trial of a cause. Its existence lies in the heart of the slayer, and he alone knows its secrets. He is the only possible direct witness to that; and if he meant so to testify he would plead guilty. The existence or nonexistence of malice is an inference to be drawn by the jury from all the facts in the case. It is said that malice may be implied from the fact of killing with a deadly weapon. But that rule, however correct as an abstract proposition, can seldom, it is said, be of practical utility in ascertaining the species of malice; for that fact is rarely if ever presented in a case unaccompanied with other facts and circumstances explaining the killing; and when other facts appear, the presumption as thus stated is apt to mislead. U. S. v. Meagher (Tex.), 37 Fed. Rep. 879.

3. 4 Bl. Com. 199-201; Darry v. People, 10 N. Y. 138; Parke v. Blackiston, 3 Harr. (Del.) 378.

Malice to be Inferred from All the Facts in the Case.—"If malice is found, it must be drawn as an inference from everything that is proved taken together and considered as a whole. Every fact, no matter how small; every circumstance, no matter how trivial, which bears upon the question of malice, must be considered by the jury at the same time that they consider the use of the deadly weapon; and it is only as a conclusion from all those facts and circumstances that malice, if inferred at all, is to be inferred. U. S. v. King, 34 Fed. Rep. 312.

Particular malice, or personal malice, is ill-will, grudge, a desire to be revenged on a particular person. Brooks v. Jones, 11 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 261; 4 Bl. Com. 200.

4. Anderson's Law Dict. describes the state of mind in which many acts (crimes and torts) are done; as malicious, abandonment, arrest, battery, burning, communication, desertion, injury, intention, libel, mischief, prosecution, publication, etc., and for a full treatment see those titles. In a legal sense it describes any unlawful act done wilfully and purposely to the prejudice and injury of another. Com. v. Snelling, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 340.

MALICIOUSLY.—With deliberate intention to injure; wilful; as the malicious burning of a building.¹

In Com. v. Williams, 110 Mass. 401, COLT, J., in discussing the difference in the meaning of "wilful" and "malicious" says: "The injury must not only be wilful, that is intentional and by design, as distinguished from that which is thoughtless or accidental, but it must, in addition, be 'malicious' in the sense that an act or injury done, either out of a spirit of wanton cruelty or black and diabolical revenge. Wilfulness is implied maliciousness, but maliciousness is not implied in wilfulness. To make wilful imply both a wrong and malice is to give to it a force and effect beyond what it will bear, or what can be maintained, either in common acceptance or its legal import." See also Gregory v. C. C. C. & I. R. Co., 11 West. Rep. 825; U. S. v. Coffin, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 394; U. S. v. Ruggles, 5 Mason (U. S.) 192; Anderson v. How, 116 N. Y. 342; Com. v. Kneeland, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 245.

A "malicious act" is one committed in a state of mind which shows a heart regardless of social duty, and fatally bent on mischief; a wrongful act intentionally done, without legal justification or excuse. In trials for this offence, the legal signification of the words "wilfully" and "maliciously" must be explained to the jury. Bowers v. State, 7 S. W. Rep. (Tex.) 247. See also Terrell v. State, 8 S. W. Rep. (Tenn.) 215; Wright v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 343; Werley v. State, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 175.

Malicious in Statute.—In Folwell v. State, 49 N. J. L. 32, BEASLEY, C. J., observes: "The word 'maliciously' where used in the definition of a statutory crime, the act forbidden being merely malum prohibitum, has almost always the effect of making a bad intent or evil mind a constituent of the offence. The whole doctrine of that large class of offences falling under the general denomination of malicious mischief is founded on this theory. As used in Mass. Gen. Stat., ch. 168, § 28 (providing for punishing one who 'maliciously' threatens to accuse another of crime.) means wilfully and intentionally, and not necessarily with spite and malice towards the threatened person." Com. v. Goodwin, 122 Mass. 19.

In Gardner v. Mansbridge, 57 L. T., N. S. 266, SMITH, J., observes: "The question for determination in this case is whether a person who gathers mushrooms growing in their natural state in a field, and who does no other damage or injury, except what may be done by the fact of gathering and carrying away the mushrooms themselves, can be found guilty of having 'wilfully or 'maliciously' committed any damage, or injury, or spoil, to or upon any real or personal property of a public or private nature, within the intent and meaning of § 52 of the Malicious Injuries to Property act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict., ch. 97). It could not, in our judgment, be really contended that a person who merely picked mushrooms growing in a state of nature in a field was guilty of 'maliciously committing injury to real or personal property."

1. Tuttle v. Bishop, 30 Conn. 85.

In a spirit of wicked revenge towards a person, or of wanton cruelty towards an animal. Commonwealth v. Walden, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 559.

In misdemeanors and felonies, imports a criminal motive, intent or purpose. Com. v. Brooks, 9 Gray (Mass.) 303; Com. v. Boynton, 116 Mass. 345.

In Mogue Steamship Co. v. McGregor, Goa & Co., 61 L. T., N. S. 825, LORD ESHER, M. R., observes in his opinion: "The terms 'maliciously,' 'wrongfully,' and 'injure,' are words all of which have accurate meanings well known to the law, but which also have a popular and less precise signification into which it is necessary to see that the argument does not imperceptibly slide. An intent to 'injure,' in strictness, means more than an intent to harm. It connotes an intent to do wrongful harm. 'Maliciously,' in like manner, means and implies an intention to do an act which is wrongful to the detriment of another. The term 'wrongful' imports in its turn the infringement of some right. See also State v. Cook, 7 South. Rep. 64.

Maliciously, as Used in Statute.—In Com. v. Goodwin, 122 Mass. 19-35, COLT, J., observes: "There is no authority for the proposition that the word 'maliciously' as used in the Gen. Stat., ch. 160, § 28, Massachusetts, means a feeling of ill will, spite, revenge and malice towards the person threatened. The wilful doing of an unlawful act without excuse is ordinarily sufficient

mogul

MALICIOUS MISCHIEF.—(See also ANIMALS, vol. 1, p. 571.)

- | | |
|------------------------------------|----------------------------------|
| I. Definition, 8. | 2. Injury or Damage , 12. |
| 1. At Common Law , 8. | III. Indictment, 12. |
| 2. Statutes , 9. | IV. Intent, 15. |
| II. Essentials of the Offence, 11. | 1. Evidence , 15. |
| 1. Malice , 11. | V. Jurisdiction, 16. |

I. DEFINITION—1. At Common Law.—Malicious mischief, at common law, is any malicious or mischievous injury either to the rights of another or to those of the public in general.¹ At common law, some of the cases limit the offence to injuries to per-to support the allegation and that it was done maliciously and with criminal intent. There are some injuries in the nature of trespasses to property which are made criminal and punished as malicious mischief, when, in the words of the statute, the acts are done 'wilfully and maliciously.' It has been held, with reference to that class of offences, that the malice required to support the prosecution must contain the additional element of cruelty or of hostility or revenge towards the person. The wilful doing of an unlawful act, without excuse, when applied, as a definition of malice, to injuries to property alone, would make many more trespasses punishable criminally, against the plain intention of these statutes. It is the special depravity or special hostility towards the owner which makes a crime of that which would otherwise be a mere trespass to property. The crime here charged is an offence of a different description; it is an attempt to extort money, and is not to be classed with malicious mischief. The act itself implies criminal intent, and there is no occasion in construing the statute to hold that to create the offence anything more is required than is implied in the usual definition of malice."

Equivalent Words in Statute.—In describing a statutory offence in an indictment, it is sufficient, if words equivalent in meaning to those in the statute, or words of more general signification are used. Thus: Where the word "wilfully" is used in the statute, it will be sufficient if the word "maliciously" is employed in the instrument. A man may do an act wilfully, and yet be free of malice. But he cannot do an act "maliciously" without at the same time doing it wilfully. The malicious doing of an act includes the wilful doing of it. Malice includes intent and will. State v. Robins, 66 Me. 324.

1. 2 Whart. Crim. L. (8th ed.), § 1067.

"This offence includes all malicious physical injuries to the rights of another which impair utility or materially diminish value. Thus it has been considered an offence at common law to maliciously destroy a horse belonging to another, or a cow, or a steer, or any beast whatever, which may be the property of another; to wantonly kill an animal where the effect is to disturb and molest a family; to maliciously cast the carcass of an animal into a well in daily use; to maliciously poison chickens; to fraudulently tear up a promissory note, or break windows; to maliciously set fire to a number of barrels of tar belonging to another; to maliciously destroy any barrack or corn crib; to maliciously girdle or injure trees or plants kept either for use or ornament; to maliciously break up a boat; to maliciously injure or deface tombs; and to maliciously strip from a building copper pipes or sheeting." State v. Watts, 48 Ark. 56; s. c., 3 Am. St. Rep. 216.

Indictable at Common Law.—The offence was indictable at common law. People v. Smith, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 258; Loomis v. Edgerton, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 419; People v. Moody, 5 Park. Crim. (N. Y.) 568; Commonwealth v. Wing, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 1; Commonwealth v. Leach, 1 Mass. 59; State v. Wilson, 3 Mo. 125; State v. Morris, 3 Mo. 127; State v. Batchelder, 5 N. H. 549; Respublica v. Teischer, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 335; Commonwealth v. Henderson, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 708; State v. Council, 1 Overt. (Tenn.) 305; State v. Hamilton, 1 Houst. C. C. (Del.) 281; State v. Watts, 48 Ark. 56; s. c., 3 Am. St. Rep. 216; Snap v. People, 19 Ill. 79; State v. Landreth, 2 Car. L. Rep. 446; State v. Robinson, 3 Dev. & Bat. 130; s. c., 32 Am. Dec. 661. It has been held indictable also under Scotch law. 1 Hume Crim. Law (2nd ed.) 119.

sonal property.¹ A distinction is to be noted between malicious mischief, sometimes called malicious trespass, and the civil action of trespass.²

2. Statutes.—In England, and many, if not all, of the States of this country, statutes have been enacted defining the offence, and in a number of instances specifically enumerating the acts which constitute the offence.³

Not Indictable at Common Law.—

There are some cases which deny that malicious mischief was an indictable offence at common law. State v. Wheeler, 3 Vt. 344; State v. Beekman, 34 Dutch. (N. J.) 124; State v. Burroughs, 2 Halst. (N. J.) 426; Illies v. Knight, 3 Tex. 312; Black v. State, 2 Md. 376; State v. Manuel, 72 N. Car. 201; 8 c., 21 Am. Rep. 455.

1. An indictment for "unlawfully, wickedly and maliciously" cutting and destroying a quantity of standing Indian corn, cannot be supported.

An indictment for malicious mischief will only lie for the malicious destruction of personal property; and growing corn, except in a few cases, is regarded as part of the realty. State v. Helmes, 5 Ired. (N. C.) 364; State v. Robinson, 3 Dev. & Bat. (N. C.) 130; State v. Manuel, 72 N. C. 201.

The following cases hold that malicious injury to real estate is an indictable offence: State v. Wilson, 3 Mo. 125; State v. Morris, 3 Mo. 127; State v. Batchelder, 5 N. H. 549; Phillips v. State, 19 Tex. 158; Loomis v. Edgerton, 19 Wend. 419; State v. Burroughs, 2 Halst. (N. J.) 426.

2. Dawson v. State, 52 Ind. 478.

3. Injuries to Cattle and Other Animals.

—Killing, maiming, disfiguring horses, cattle or other beasts. State v. Bocker, 32 Tex. 611; U. S. v. Gideon, 1 Minn. 292; State v. Credle, 91 N. Car. 640. A horse is included under the term cattle. State v. Hambleton, 22 Mo. 452; State v. Clifton, 24 Mo. 376; Rex v. Mott, 2 East P. C. (Eng.) 1075; 1 Leach C. C. 73 n.; Rex v. Patty, 2 East P. C. (Eng.) 1074; Rex v. Moyle, 2 East P. C. (Eng.) 1076.

Cutting mane and tail of horse included under malicious injuries to animals. Oviatt v. State, 19 Ohio St. 573; State v. Smith, Cheves (S. C.) 157.

Poisoning horses. Croy v. State, 32 Ind. 384; Commonwealth v. McLaughlin, 105 Mass. 460.

Shooting and wounding a horse. Thompson v. State, 51 Miss. 353; Commonwealth v. Walden, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 558.

monwealth v. Walden, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 558.

Pouring acid into eye of mare and blinding her was maiming. Rex v. Owens, 1 M. C. C. (Eng.) 205.

Injuring a horse when it was trespassing. Snap v. People, 19 Ill. 79.

Driving nail into horse's foot, though injury only temporary. Rex v. Haywood, 2 East P. C. 1076.

Proof of killing a gelding will not support a charge of killing a horse. Ghalston v. State, 33 Tex. 342.

Wilful and wanton injury to stock, though unlawfully running at large. State v. Brigman, 94 N. C. 888.

Burning cow house, thereby causing the death of the cow, is indictable. Rex v. Houghton, 5 C. & P. (Eng.) 559.

Unlawful and malicious killing of a cow. Taylor v. State, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 285. (Compare State v. Allen, 72 N. C. 114.)

Injuring sheep by setting a dog on them was not maiming within the English statute. Rex v. Hughes, 2 C. & P. 420. But see Elmsley's case, 1 Lewin C. C. (Eng.) 126.

Altering brand of cattle includes putting new brand on cattle already branded. Linney v. State, 6 Tex. 1; State v. Nichols, 12 Rich. (S. Car.) 672.

A hog is a domestic beast. State v. Enslow, 10 Iowa 115.

Indictment for killing a sow maintainable under statute against wilful shooting of a hog. Shubrick v. State, 2 S. C. 21.

Injury to a hog included under "trees already cut or any other timber or property. Commonwealth v. Percavill, 4 Leigh (Va.) 686.

Pigs are cattle. Rex v. Chapple, R. & R. C. C. (Eng.) 77. And so are asses, Rex v. Whitney, 1 M. C. C. (Eng.) 3.

The malicious killing of a dog is an indictable offence under the statutes of Indiana. State v. Sumner, 2 Carter (Ind.) 377; Kinsman v. State, 77 Ind. 132. But not in Virginia. Davis v. Comm., 17 Gratt. (Va.) 617.

Leaving poisoned meat in a garden to kill a trespassing dog not indictable under English statute. Daniel v. Janes, 2 C. P. D. (Eng.) 351.

A buffalo, though domesticated, is not included under the term "cattle." State v. Crenshaw, 22 Mo. 457.

Injuries to Trees and Timber.—Injury to fruit trees. People v. Horr, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 9.

Injury to shade trees. State v. Priebnow, 14 Neb. 484.

Destroying trees marked to designate point in boundary line. State v. Malloy, 34 N. J. L. 410.

Carrying away timber from owner's ground. State v. Malone, 46 Ark. 140.

Injury to growing wood. Reg. v. Dodson, 9 A. & E. (Eng.) 704.

"Woods" includes an old field, abandoned and overgrown with brush, etc. Hall v. Crawford, 5 Jones (N. C.) 3.

Not necessary that the timber be carried away or cut for the purpose of gain in order to constitute the offence. Johnson v. State, 61 Ala. 9.

Not necessary that a tree be wholly destroyed. Rex v. Taylor, R. & R. C. C. (Eng.) 373.

Cutting shrubs upon an unproved allegation that they will injure a wall, is malicious mischief, though the title to the place where the shrubs grew is in dispute. Rex v. Whateley, 4 M. & R. 431.

Injuries to Grain or Crops.—An indictment under a statute prohibiting the burning of wheat or straw will not be sustained if the wheat or straw be threshed, cleaned and stored in a barn. Commonwealth v. Erskine, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 624.

A shock of wheat held not a stack. Denbow v. State, 18 Ohio 11.

Severing growing grain. State v. Gurnee, 14 Kan. 111; State v. Haney, 32 Kan. 428; s. c., 4 Pac. R. 831.

Growing wheat is not included under an act making the destruction of a barrack, shock or crib of wheat a criminal offence. Parris v. People, 76 Ill. 274.

An empty barrack not included under such an act. Chapmann v. Commonwealth, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 427.

Cutting, removing or carrying away grain, fruit or plants. State v. Allisbach, 69 Ind. 50.

One may be guilty of malicious mischief in wantonly destroying crops, though authorized to open a way through a field, if he act maliciously. Harris v. State, 73 Ga. 41.

Damage done to a field by a poacher's dog pursuing game is not a malicious mischief. Reg. v. Prestney, 3 Cox C. C. 505.

Flax seed is grain within the meaning of the act. Reg. v. Spencer, 7 Cox C. C. 189.

Injuries to Buildings.—Breaking windows. State v. Whittier, 21 Me. 341.

Malicious injury to a church or private building. State v. Brant, 14 Iowa (6 With.) 180.

Injury to public property. Read v. State, 1 Ind. 511.

Miscellaneous Cases.—Breaking up a boat. Loomis v. Edgerton, 19 Wend. 419.

Cutting ropes by which banner is suspended. State v. Webster, 17 N. H. 543.

Cutting cable of fish car and allowing car to float away. Commonwealth v. Soule, 2 Met. (Mass.) 21.

Throwing stones at a railroad train. State v. Simpson, 2 Hawks (N. C.) 460; Rex v. Bowry, 10 Jur. (Eng.) 211.

Injuring well by throwing unwholesome matter into it. State v. Buckman, 8 N. H. 203.

Knowingly injuring sick by discharging a gun in neighborhood. Commonwealth v. Wing, 9 Pick. 1.

Breaking into room of sick person with knowledge that it will injure such person. Commonwealth v. Taylor, 5 Bin. (Pa.) 277; Hackett v. Commonwealth, 15 Pa. St. 95.

Meddling with fire alarm boxes. Koppersmith v. State, 51 Ala. 6.

Injuring or interfering with machinery. Rex v. Tracey, Russ. & R. C. C. (Eng.) 452; Reg. v. Fisher, 10 Cox C. C. (Eng.) 146; s. c., L. R. 1 C. C. 7; Rex v. Mackerel, 4 C. & P. (Eng.) 448; Rex v. Hutchins, Deac. C. L. (Eng.) 1517; Rex v. Bartlett, Deac. C. L. 1517; Rex v. Chubb, Deac. C. L. 1518; Reg. v. Norris, 9 C. & P. (Eng.) 241.

Ploughs are machines within the English statute. Reg. v. Gray, 9 Cox C. C. (Eng.) 417; L. & C. 365; 33 L. J. M. C. 78; 10 Jur. N. S. 160; 9 L. T. 733; 12 W. R. 350.

Injuring an aqueduct. State v. Jones, 33 Vt. 443.

Destroying water wheel. Rex v. Fidler, 4 C. & P. (Eng.) 449.

Injuring an erection used in the business of a mine. Reg. v. Whittingham, 9 C. & P. (Eng.) 235.

Poisoning hens. Commonwealth v. Falvey, 108 Mass. 304.

Injury to ladies' dresses included under statute prohibiting injury to personal property of another. Commonwealth v. Sullivan, 107 Mass. 218.

In order to bring an offence under the head of malicious mischief it must appear that the mischief was itself the object of the act, and not that it was incidental to some other act lawful or unlawful.¹

II. ESSENTIALS OF THE OFFENCE—1. Malice.—To constitute malicious mischief at common law, in injuries to property, malice towards the owner or possessor of the property is essential, but where the offence is shown to have been wilful or wanton, malice will generally be presumed.²

Driving cattle from their accustomed range. Smith v. State, 43 Tex. 433; Darnell v. State, 43 Tex. 147.

Tearing down a fence. State v. Hovis, 76 N. C. 117; Hurlbut v. State, 12 Tex. App. 109.

Cutting warp in looms in a cotton factory. State v. Hamilton, 1 Houst. Crim. C. (Del.) 281; Reg. v. Smith, 6 Cox C. C. (Eng.) 198.

Stealing chickens an offence under "Ku-Klux" law. Walpole v. State, 9 Baxter (Tenn.) 370.

Appellant was convicted of knowingly causing horses to go within the enclosed land of one B, without his consent. The proof was that appellant rented from B a part of a field, and turned his horses upon the part he rented, whence they strayed on to the other part. The crop had been gathered, and nothing was stipulated in the rental contract upon the subject. Held, that appellant had the right to pasture his horses on the land he had rented, and, the conviction not being warranted by law, the cause is dismissed. Coggins v. State, 12 Tex. App. 109. Contra, where there was a growing crop and defendant was repeatedly warned. Cleveland v. State, 8 Tex. App. 44.

Injury to locomotive not included under statute against injury to fruit, corn, grain, or other agricultural product or property, real or personal, of any description whatever. Murray v. State, 21 Tex. App. 620; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 623; nor a private storehouse. Beeson v. State, 23 Tex. App. 406; nor a set of buggy harness. Terry v. State, 25 Tex. App. 714.

1. Wright v. State, 30 Ga. 325; Sattler v. People, 59 Ill. 68; Palmer v. State, 45 Ind. 388; Lossen v. State, 62 Ind. 437; Duncan v. State, 49 Miss. 331; Goforth v. State, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 37.

2. On an indictment under the North Carolina act (Rev. Stat., ch. 34, § 55), in relation to the altering or defacing the marks of cattle, etc., if the act of altering or defacing, etc., is proved to have been wilfully done, it necessarily follows that the intent was to defraud or injure the owner, unless there be proof to the contrary.

It is no objection to a conviction on an indictment for this offence, that the cattle, beast, etc., had, at the time the act was done, strayed from its owner. State v. Davis, 2 Ired. (N. C.) 153. See also State v. Pierce, 7 Ala. 728; Johnson v. State, 1 Ala. (S. C.) 72; Hobson v. State, 44 Ala. 380; Pippen v. State, 77 Ala. 81; Wright v. State, 30 Ga. 325; s. c., 76 Am. Dec. 656; Mosely v. State, 28 Ga. 190; State v. Jackson, 12 Ired. (N. C.) 329; State v. Latham, 13 Ired. (N. C.) 33; State v. Hill, 79 N. C. 656; Dawson v. State, 52 Ind. 478; State v. Enslow, 10 Iowa 115; State v. McDermott, 36 Iowa 107; State v. Flynn, 28 Iowa 26; Commonwealth v. Walden, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 558; Duncan v. State, 49 Miss. 331; Thompson v. State, 51 Miss. 353; U. S. v. Gideon, 1 Minn. 292; Brown v. State, 26 Ohio St. 176; Calef v. Thomas, 81 Ill. 478; Gaskill v. State, 56 Ind. 550; State v. Wilcox, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 278; s. c., 24 Am. Dec. 569; Goforth v. State, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 37; Stone v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 457; Wallace v. State, 30 Tex. 758; Branch v. State, 41 Tex. 622; Newton v. State, 3 Tex. App. 245; Compare Northcot v. State, 42 Ala. 330; Hill v. State, 43 Ala. 335; State v. Newby, 64 N. C. 23; Frazier v. Brown, 12 Ohio St. 294; Allison v. State, 42 Ind. 354; Reg. v. Tivey, 1 C. & K. (Eng.) 704; 1 Den. C. C. 63.

Reckless Conduct Causing Injury.—Where one causes internal injury to a horse, not through any malice or ill will toward the animal or owner, but simply through reckless disregard of consequences and to satisfy depraved and brutal tastes, he is guilty of maliciously injuring the animal. Reg. v. Welch, 12 B. D. (Eng.) 23; 45 L. J. M. C. 17; 33 L. T. 753.

Malice Toward Bailee.—Where prop-

2. Injury or Damage.—Injury or damage must result, or the act, however dangerous or wanton it may be, will not constitute the offence of malicious mischief.¹

III. INDICTMENT.—An indictment for malicious mischief should state the ownership or possession of the property by some one,² the nature and extent of the injury, and, in States where the value affects the punishment or jurisdiction, the value of the property destroyed or the extent of the damage should be stated.³

erty was injured while in possession of a bailee by one having malice toward such bailee. Held, that it was sufficient to prove that the act was done with malice toward the special owner or bailee. Stone v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 457.

Malice Toward Son of the Owner.—Where one was charged with malicious mischief and it was shown that the defendant was actuated by malice toward the son of the owner. Held, that this was not sufficient to sustain the indictment. Northcot v. State, 42 Ala. 330.

Malice Toward the Property Injured.—There must be malice directed toward the owner of the property and not merely against the property itself. State v. Wilcox, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 278; s. c., 24 Am. Dec. 569; Brown v. State, 26 Ohio St. 176; Shepard's Case, 2 Leach Cr. L. 609; Pearce's Case, 2 Leach 594.

Servant Acting Under Master's Orders.—If servants are ordered to do an act which, if the master have no right to order it done, is against the law and they do it believing that the master had the right, they are liable; but if anyone knew the act of the master to be wrongful he will be liable to indictment. Reg. v. James, 8 C. & P. 131.

Act Done Under Supposed Right.—Where one does an act which the statute declares a malicious mischief under a supposed right, without an evil mind, he is not liable to indictment. Reg. v. Matthews, 14 Cox C. C. (Eng.) 5.

Malicious Injury by Owner.—The statutory offence of cruelty to animals may be committed by a malicious injury of one's own animal; and malice toward the owner is not an essential ingredient of the offence. State v. Avery, 44 N. H. 392. See also State v. Hurd, 51 N. H. 176.

Maliciously, How Defined.—The word "maliciously," as used in the Massachusetts Rev. Stat., ch. 126, § 39, relating to malicious mischief, is not sufficiently defined as "the wilfully doing of any act prohibited by law, and for which the defendant has no lawful excuse." Commonwealth v. Walden, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 558.

1. Wait v. Green, 5 Park. Crim. (N. Y.) 185; Hampton v. State, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 639.

2. State v. Jackson, 7 Ind. 270; Staadon v. People, 82 Ill. 432; State v. Haney, 32 Kan. 428; s. c., 4 Pac. R. 831; Dist'g State v. Gurnee, 14 Kan. 111; Davis v. Com., 30 Pa. St. 421; State v. Smith, 21 Tex. 748; Ritter v. State, 33 Tex. 608. See Commonwealth v. Sowle, 9 Gray (Mass.) 304; State v. Bocker, 32 Tex. 611.

An indictment charging that the defendant maliciously destroyed divers windows of the county seminary building, the property of the county of Sullivan, sufficiently charges a malicious injury to public property, under the Revised Statute of Indiana, p. 975, ch. 53, § 71, and charges the offence with sufficient certainty. Read v. State, 1 Ind. Carter, 511.

"It is not denied that the prosecutor must prove the title to the property described in the indictment as he has laid it; and he does so when he gives evidence of possession. That alone is evidence of a special or qualified property, property which is sufficient to uphold an averment of ownership, in a civil or criminal case." People v. Horr, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 9.

Variance Between Proof and Allegation of Ownership.—Mayer v. State, 33 Tex. 340; Hughes v. State, 103 Ind. 344.

Failure to Prove Allegation of Ownership.—Smith v. State, 43 Tex. 433; Rex v. Patrick, 2 East P. C. (Eng.) 1059; Rex v. Howe, 1 Leach C. C. (Eng.) 481; 2 East P. C. (Eng.) 588.

When Allegation of Ownership Is Unnecessary.—Owens v. State, 52 Ala. 400.

3. State v. Garner, 8 Port. (Ala.) 447; Caldwell v. State, 49 Ala. 34; State v. Aydelott, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 157; State v. Shadley, 16 Ind. 230; Brown v. State, 76 Ind. 85; Sample v. State, 104 Ind.

Malice should be alleged, and some of the cases hold that the words "maliciously, wilfully, etc.," are sufficient.¹ Where there are statutes, care must be taken to bring the allegation within the words of the statute, and when so brought the use of particular words will not be held necessary.²

289; Commonwealth v. Cox, 7 Allen (Mass.) 577; McKinney v. People, 32 Mich. 284; State v. Heath, 41 Tex. 426; Nicholson v. State, 3 Tex. Ct. App. 31.

The affidavit need not state the value of the injury maliciously inflicted. State v. Clevinger, 14 Ind. 366.

Where the statute requires that the damage shall be over a certain sum in order to constitute the offence, it is not necessary to allege the value of each article injured, but only that the damage exceeded the statutory amount. Reg. v. Thomas, 12 Cox C. C. (Eng.) 54; 24 L. T. 398.

1. State v. Rydelott, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 157.

An indictment for malicious mischief must either expressly charge malice against the owner, or otherwise fully describe the offence. It is not sufficient to set forth that the act was done "feloniously, wilfully, and maliciously," without averring that it was done "mischievously," or with malice against the owner. State v. Jackson, 12 (N. C.) Ired. 329. See also Thompson v. State, 51 Miss. 353.

2. Force and Arms.—In an indictment for malicious mischief, it is not necessary to aver that the injury was done "with force and arms."

If the indictment charge the unlawful and malicious killing of a cow, it is good, without the use of the word "beast," a cow being a beast within the meaning of the statute. Taylor v. State, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 285.

"Break, Destroy or Injure."—In an indictment under the statute, which says that "every person who shall wilfully and maliciously break, destroy or injure," etc., the property of another (R. C. 1885, p. 584, § 60), the offence is well described as a breaking alone, or as destroying or as injuring, as either act is to commit an offence, and one or all things may be charged according to the circumstances of the case.

Under that statute no negative averment is necessary. State v. Batson, 31 Mo. 343.

Omission of word "feloniously" in indictment under Wagn. Stat. 462, § 5

(Mo.), held fatal. State v. Dieffenbacher, 51 Mo. 26.

Word "unlawfully" need not be used in charging malicious trespass. State v. Maddox, 85 Ind. 585.

Omission of word "malicious" held immaterial. People v. O'Brien, 60 Mich. 8.

Omission of words unlawfully and maliciously held bad. Rex v. Lewis, 2 Russ. C. & M. (Eng.) 1066.

The word "maliciously" used in a statute requires that the act be shown to have been wilfully done. Reg. v. Pemberton, 2 L. R. C. C. (Eng.) 119.

Injury to Cattle.—Under the statute against maliciously killing "the cattle" of another (Rev. Code, 1845, § 57), an indictment for maliciously killing a "certain horse beast, to wit, one mare," is sufficient. State v. Hambleton, 22 Mo. (1 Jones) 452.

Also "certain cattle, to wit, one mare." State v. Clifton, 24 Mo. (3 Jones) 376.

Under the same statute a buffalo, though domesticated, is not within the description of "cattle." State v. Crenshaw, 22 Mo. (1 Jones) 457.

Driving Cattle from Range.—An indictment for driving cattle from their accustomed range need not describe range nor state distance the cattle were driven. Darnell v. State, 43 Tex. 147.

Criminal Intent and Injury.—An indictment on the Rev. Stat., ch. 126, § 39, which charges the defendant, in the words of the statute, with wilfully and maliciously administering a certain poison to the horse of another person, is sufficient, without further averment of any criminal intent, or of any injury to the horse. Com. v. Brooks, 9 Gray (Mass.) 299.

Necessary Averment of Injury to Glass. An indictment upon Rev. Stat., ch. 126, § 42, for malicious destruction of glass, must aver the glass to be part of a building. An allegation that it was in a certain building is not sufficient. Com. v. Bean, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 414.

Cutting Cable of Fish Car.—On an indictment under Rev. Stat. of Massachusetts, ch. 126, § 39, charging that the defendant wilfully destroyed and injured a cable to which a lobster car was moored and fastened, proof that he cut the cable a few feet from one end, so as to let the car float off, was held sufficient to warrant his conviction. Com. v. Soule, 2 Met. (Mass.) 21.

Destroying Note.—An indictment for destroying a note, drawn under a statute which punishes any person who shall deface or destroy, etc., any promissory note for the payment of money or property, should state whether the note destroyed was payable in money or property.

When the tenor of the note cannot be set forth in such an indictment, because it has been destroyed, the substance and effect of it should at least be averred. Birdg v. State, 31 Ind. 88.

Single Offence Though More Than One Owner.—A complaint under Gen. Stat., ch. 165, § 41, which alleges that the defendant, at a time and place named, "with force and arms unlawfully and cruelly did beat and torture a certain horse of the property of" the complainant and another person, does not charge two offences. Com. v. Lufkin, 7 Allen (Mass.) 579. See also Long v. State, 43 Tex. 467.

Injury to Two Animals One Offence.—A malicious injury to two animals, inflicted as one transaction in fact, is but one offence in law. In an information for maliciously killing horses, the manner of killing need not be set forth, and if it be, it is surplusage. Hayworth v. State, 14 Ind. 590.

But when at different times the indictment should charge two offences. Burgess v. State, 44 Ala. 190.

Information for injury to property of two owners must negative consent of each owner. Govitt v. State, 25 Tex. App. 419.

Proof of injury a number of times the damages amounting in the aggregate to the statutory sum will not sustain an indictment. Reg. v. Williams, 9 Cox C. C. (Eng.) 338.

Insufficient Averments.—A complaint, which charges a malicious destruction of cabbages, "situated and growing on land," does not sufficiently charge a malicious injury to personal property, within Stat. 1846, ch. 52, for want of showing that the cabbages were not part of the realty. A complaint on Stat. 1855, ch. 457, for the malicious destruction of a tree, shrub or vine on the land of another, must aver an unlawful entry by the defendant on the land. Com. v. Dougherty, 6 Gray (Mass.) 349.

An information charged that the defendant did knowingly and wilfully, without lawful authority, cut down and carry off a lime tree between his land and the land of a certain J. H., contrary to the form of the statute. Held, that the offence was not so charged as to be punishable by any law in force in Virginia. Powell's Case, 8 Leigh (Va.) 719.

In an indictment for maliciously cutting down a tree marked to designate "a corner of a tract of land." Held, defective in that it did not specify that such corner was not a "point on the boundary," those being the words of the statute. State v. Malloy, 34 N. J. L. 410. See also Com. v. McLaughlin, 105 Mass. 460; State v. Stanton, 66 N. Car. 640; State v. McKee, 109 Ind. 497.

Consequential Damages.—The prisoners were indicted for maliciously damaging some growing trees (elsewhere than in a park, etc.), and thereby doing injury to the owners to an amount exceeding £5. It was proved that the real injury to the trees amounted to only £1, but that the cost of replacing the hedge in which they stood would bring up the amount to over £5. Held, that the latter, being only consequential injury, the indictment could not be supported. Reg. v. Whiteman, 25 Eng. Law & Eq. 590.

Miscellaneous Cases—When Evidence Would Support Charge of Larceny.—An indictment for malicious mischief will not necessarily be defeated, merely because the acts proved might have supported a charge for larceny. The State v. Leavitt, 32 Maine (2 Red.) 183.

When Negative Averment Unnecessary.—An indictment charged that the defendant "unlawfully, wilfully and maliciously did enter upon the lands of R. B. there situate, and did then and there set fire to the woods on said land." Held sufficient without stating that the lands were not the property of the defendant. State v. Purdie, 67 N. Car. 326. See also Murrah v. State, 51 Miss. 675.

Omission of Date When Offence Committed.—State v. Hoover, 31 Ark. 676; Bailey v. State, 65 Ga. 410.

Removing Parts of Wagon.—An information charging that "defendant on, etc., did maliciously and mischievously injure one wagon, the property of P & S K, of the value $40, by then and there removing certain parts thereof (men-

IV. INTENT.—The intent with which the act is done is material, and if it be shown that the defendant acted in good faith or under a claim of right, the charge of malicious mischief cannot be sustained.¹

1. Evidence.—Any evidence tending to rebut the charge of malice or going to show the animus of the defendant is admissible though it be in relation to something subsequent to the act itself.²

tioning them), where the said K could never find them, which parts, etc., were of the value of $7, all to the damage of said K, seven dollars," was held sufficient. State v. Williams, 21 Ind. 206.

1. Sattler v. People, 59 Ill. 68; Lossen v. State, 62 Ind. 437; Dawson v. State, 52 Ind. 478; Palmer v. State, 45 Ind. 388; State v. Flynn, 28 Iowa 26; State v. Kempf, 11 Mo. App. 88; State v. Zinn, 26 Mo. App. 17; State v. Reynolds, 95 N. Car. 616; State v. Winslow, 95 N. Car. 649; State v. Stevens, 109 N. Y. 159; Goforth v. State, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 37; North Carolina v. Vanderford, 35 Fed. Rep. (U. S.) 282. Compare Carter v. State, 18 Tex. App. 573; Knight v. State, 64 Miss. 802.

2. On an indictment for malicious mischief in shooting a mule which was in the defendant's cornfield, evidence of the thievish and unmanageable character of the mule and his proclivity for being in such places, is admissible to show absence of malice. Wright v. State, 30 Ga. 325. See also State v. Graham, 46 Mo. 490; State v. Waters, 6 Jones (N. Car.) 276. Compare Snap v. People, 19 Ill. 80; Jones v. State, 3 Tex. App. 228.

In a prosecution for malicious trespass in cutting a canal reservoir embankment, evidence of long disuse of the canal, and that the stagnant water caused sickness in the vicinity of the reservoir, is admissible to rebut the presumption of malice. State v. Bush, 29 Ind. 110.

When Defendant Acted Under Legal Advice.—Evidence that the defendant acted under legal advice was properly excluded where the facts made it apparent that there was no color of right of entry. People v. Stevens, 109 N. Y. 159.

It is proper to show that a person indicted for destroying a machine was compelled to do so, and that he had planned to escape from a mob so compelling persons. Rex v. Crutchley, 5 C. & P. 133.

Materiality of Right of Possession by Defendant.—In a criminal prosecution under the Rev. Stat. of Maine, ch. 162, § 13, for wilfully destroying the property of a person without his consent, it is immaterial whether the property came rightfully or wrongfully into the possession of the defendant. The State v. Pike, 33 Maine (3 Red.) 361.

In a prosecution under § 2 of the act of 1855, for wilfully destroying a fence, it must be shown that the defendant has been guilty of a trespass, and he may offer any evidence in defence which would be competent for him in an action of trespass. State v. Clark, 5 Dutch. (N. J.) 96.

In an indictment for wrongfully desecrating and disfiguring a public burying ground, to show that the defendant was the owner of the fee of small lots within it, under titles derived from various grantees to whom they had been conveyed, "to be used for burial ground," and evidence to show such ownership, is inadmissible. Com. v. Wellington, 7 Allen (Mass.) 299.

Competency of Witness.—On the trial of an indictment for malicious mischief, under the fifth section of the fourth article of the penal code, the person whose property is injured is not a competent witness for the State. Blackstone v. The State, 15 Ala. 415. See also West v. State, 32 Tex. 651.

Charge to Jury.—On trial of an indictment for malicious mischief, it is sufficient to charge the jury that they must be "satisfied" as to the ownership of the property in question. The phrase "beyond reasonable doubt" is not indispensable. State v. Sears, Phill. (N. Car.) L. 146; State v. Knox, Phill. (N. Car.) L. 312.

Evidence of the Same Acts on Other Occasions.—Upon an indictment for administering poison with intent to kill, horses, evidence of having administered the poison at other times is admissible to show the intent. But if it appear that it was done under the belief that it would improve the appearance of the horses the defendant should be ac-

V. JURISDICTION.—A justice of the peace has jurisdiction in an action for malicious mischief to real estate though the defendant claim an adverse title.¹

MALICIOUS PROSECUTION—(See also FALSE IMPRISONMENT).

- | | |
|---|--|
| I. Definition and Nature, 16. II. General Principle on Which Action Depends, 19. III. Essentials to Malicious Prosecution, 21. 1. Criminal Actions, 21.  (a) Malice, 22.  (b) Want of Probable Cause, 24.  (c) Termination of Former Action, 28. 2. Civil Actions, 32. IV. Who May Sue, 37. V. Who May be Sued, 38. 1. Generally, 38. 2. Partners, 39. 3. Corporations, 39. | 4. Infants, 41. 5. Public Officers, 41. VI. Pleading, 42. 1. Complaint, 42. 2. Answer, 45. VII. Practice, 45. VIII. Defences, 51. 1. Generally, 51. 2. Advice of Counsel, 53. 3. Miscellaneous, 58. IX. Evidence, 58. 1. Strict Rules of Evidence, 58. 2. End of Prosecution, 59. 3. Character, 59. 4. Malice, 61. 5. Want of Probable Cause, 63. X. Damages, 71. |
|---|--|

I. DEFINITION AND NATURE.—The action for malicious prosecution is, as its name would indicate, one to recover the damages sustained by a defendant in a prior proceeding which has been commenced or carried on from a malicious motive and without any probable cause therefor. Not all unfounded prosecutions by which defendants are injured afford the basis of this action. Usually a plaintiff in a civil action is sufficiently punished for the bringing of an unwarranted action by having the legal costs of such action taxed against him. And it is desirable in the interest of good government that offences against the laws be speedily and certainly punished. So those who set in motion the criminal laws for the apprehension of supposed offenders should be protected in such laudable work if the same is done with correct motive and upon probable cause.² This action is not in nature unlike an action for slander,³ and it seems may be quitted. Rex v. Mogg, 4 C. & P. (Eng.) 363.

1. State v. Rising, 10 Nev. 97.

2. Actions for malicious arrest are strictly guarded. The circumstances under which they may be maintained are accurately stated and they are never encouraged except in plain cases. Ventress v. Rosser, 73 Ga. 534; Potter v. Seale, 8 Cal. 217.

3. An action for malicious prosecution is much in the nature of an action for slander, and the malice of the prosecutor, and the disgrace, vexation and expense of the prosecuted, are not measured by the sufficiency or insufficiency of the charge on which the prosecution is instituted. Stancliff v. Palmeter, 18 Ind. 321.

In both actions the character of the plaintiff is involved. In both actions the plaintiff is required to show malice on the part of the defendant. And in both actions the plaintiff, if he recovers, may recover exemplary or punitive damages. Bailey v. Dodge, 28 Kan. 72.

An action on the case for a malicious prosecution may be founded upon an indictment whereon no acquittal can be had, as if it be rejected by the grand jury, or be coram non judice, or be insufficiently drawn. For it is not the damages of the plaintiff, but the scandal, vexation and expense, upon joined with one for false imprisonment,¹ although it has necessarily little in connection with that action.²

In order that the plaintiff may maintain this action, three things must concur. 1st. The motive of the party instituting or prosecuting the suit or proceeding must have been malicious.³

which this action is founded. Hilliard on Torts, vol. 2, p. 412.

The plaintiff may recover not only for the unlawful arrest and imprisonment and the expenses of his arrest, but also for the injury to his fame and reputation. And such recovery is a bar to subsequent action for slander for the accusation uttered for the purpose of procuring the arrest at the time when it was made. Sheldon v. Carpenter, 4 Comst. (N. Y.) 578. Cooley on Torts 193. 3 Sutherland on Dam 699.

A declaration may contain a count for slander and one for malicious prosecution. Miles v. Oldfield, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 423. Pomeroy on Rem., § 496. Martin v. Mattison, 8 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 3; Hull v. Vreeland, 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 182; Shore v. Smith, 15 Ohio St. 173.

In an action for malicious prosecution, damages may be recovered for the injury to reputation, and this will be a bar to an action of slander for the same cause. So undoubtedly a recovery in an action of slander for injury to character through a malicious prosecution would be a bar to a claim for damages on the same ground in a direct action for malicious prosecution. Jarnigan v. Fleming, 43 Miss. 710.

The slander and the malicious prosecution must, however, grow out of the same transaction. And where the arrest, for which the action of malicious prosecution had terminated, took place on October 7th, 1859, and the slander for which action was pending was uttered on the 19th of January, 1860, it was held that the former action did not bar the latter. Rockwell v. Brown, 36 N. Y. 207. On the authority of Rockwell v. Brown, the rule is thus stated in Townsend on Slander, section 251. A recovery in an action for malicious prosecution is a bar to subsequent action for slander for the accusation uttered for the purpose of having the arrest made. But when the defendant published the accusation before or after making his complaint to have the plaintiff arrested an action for that publication is not barred by the recovery in the action for the malicious prosecution. See Sheldon v. Carpenter, 4 N. Y. 579; s. c., 55 Am. Dec. 301 and note.

1. Bauer v. Clay, 8 Kan. 580; Neil v. Thorn, 88 N. Y. 270; Marks v. Townsend, 97 N. Y. 590; Barr v. Shaw, 10 Hun (N. Y.) 580; Bradner v. Faulkner, 93 N. Y. 515. Where but one detention is complained of, the party plaintiff may allege in his petition, and prove on the trial, such facts as show either a cause of action for false imprisonment, or one for malicious prosecution, or both. Wagstaff v. Schippel, 27 Kan. 450.

In Nebenzahl v. Townsend, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 353, it is held that these actions are inconsistent and cannot be joined. If the imprisonment is under legal process, but the action has been commenced and carried on maliciously and without probable cause, it is malicious prosecution. Murphy v. Martin, 58 Wis. 276; Colter v. Lower, 35 Ind. 285.

2. Addison on Torts (5th ed.) 130. Pollock on Torts 191. False imprisonment is wrongfully restraining the personal liberty of the plaintiff. Malicious prosecution is wrongfully setting the criminal law in motion against him. Stephen on Malic. Pros., Text Book Series, 120.

There is no similitude or analogy between an action of trespass or false imprisonment and this kind of action. An action of trespass is for the defendants having done that which, upon the stating of it, is manifestly illegal. This kind of action is for a prosecution which, upon the stating of it, is manifestly legal. Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 544. Although in the strict technical sense evidence to sustain an action for false imprisonment will not sustain one for malicious prosecution. Yet if the complaint contains in effect but one cause of action, namely, malicious prosecution, which includes the arrest, separate allegations not subjecting the defendant to increased damages are no ground for reversal. Neil v. Thorn, 88 N. Y. 270.

3. Motive.—It is abundantly settled that no suit can be maintained against an unsuccessful plaintiff or prosecutor, unless it is shown affirmatively that he was actuated in his conduct by malice or some improper or sinister motive. Malice is essential to the maintenance of such action, and not merely to the recovery of exemplary damages. In Farmer v. Darling, 4 Burr. 1971, one of the earliest reported cases, if not the earliest, LORD MANSFIELD instructed the jury that the foundation of the action was malice, and all the judges concurred that malice either expressed or implied and the want of probable cause must both concur. From 1766 to the present day such has been constantly held to be the law both in England and in this country. See a multitude of cases collected in 8 U. S. Dig. (1st Series) 942, p. 95. And the existence of malice is always a question exclusively for the jury. It must be found by them or the action cannot be sustained. Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 192.

2nd. The suit or proceeding complained of must have been instituted without any probable cause therefor.¹ 3rd. The suit or proceeding must be terminated.²

Malice, in fact, must be shown in order to support the action, and while the jury may find the fact from the circumstances of the want of probable cause, or from other circumstances established in the case, they are not to be told that a wrongful charge, made without probable cause, is per se malicious in fact. Harkrader v. Moore, 44 Cal. 144. To same effect see Cook v. Walker, 30 Ga. 519; Colter v. Lower, 35 Ind. 285; Dickinson v. Maynard, 20 La. An. 66; Hayne v. Blair, 62 N. Y. 19; Benson v. McCoy, 36 Ala. 710; Lindsay v. Larned, 17 Mass. 190; Medcalf v. Brooklyn Life Insurance Co., 45 Md. 198; Burris v. North, 64 Mo. 426; Burnap v. Albert, Taney (U. S.) 244; Dietz v. Langfitt, 63 Pa. St. 234; Scott v. Shelor, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 891; Willis v. Knox, 5 S. Car. 474; Glaze v. Whitley, 5 Oreg. 164; Yocum v. Polly, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 358; Mitchell v. Mattingly, 1 Met. (Ky.) 240; Woods v. Finnell, 13 Bush (Ky.) 628; Kelton v. Bevins, Cooke (Tenn.) 90; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 670; Bell v. Graham, 1 Nott. & McC. (S. Car.) 278; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 689; Smith v. Zent, 59 Ind. 362; Evans v. Thompson, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 534; Carleton v. Taylor, 50 Vt. 220; McKown v. Hunter, 30 N. Y. 625; Fagnan v. Knox, 66 N. Y. 525; Gourgnes v. Howard, 27 La. An. 339.

Malice and want of probable cause must concur in order to sustain an action for malicious prosecution. Russell v. Deer, 7 Ill. App. 181.

These ingredients are essential to the right of action, and if they are not found to coexist, the action is not maintainable. Johns v. Marsh, 52 Ind. 323; Sharpe v. Johnston, 76 Mo. 660; Sherburne v. Rodman, 51 Wis. 474; Spain v. Howe, 25 Wis. 625; Plath v. Brunsdorf, 40 Wis. 107; Castro v. DeUriarte, 16 Fed. Rep. 93; Ullman v. Abrams, 9 Bush (Ky.) 738; Gee v. Culver, 12 Oreg. 228; Mitchell v. Jenkins, 5 Barn. & Adol. 593; Clements v. Odorless Excavating Apparatus Co., 67 Md. 461; s. c., 1 Am. St. Rep. 409; Turner v. Walker, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 377; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 329; Boyd v. Cross, 35 Md. 196; Leidig v. Rawson, 1 Scam. (Ill.) 272; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 354; Mitchinson v. Cross, 58 Ill. 366; Barrett v. Spaid, 70 Ill. 408; Adams v. Lisher, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 241; Stone v. Stevens, 12 Conn. 219; s. c., 30 Am. Dec. 611; Grant v. Deuel, 3 Rob. (La.) 17; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 228; Maloney v. Doane, 15 La. 278; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 204; Williams v. Vanmeter, 8 Mo. 339; s. c., 41 Am. Dec. 644; Bartlett v. Brown, 6 R. I. 37; Griffin v. Chubb, 7 Tex. 603; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 85; Dickinson v. Maynard, 20 La. An. 66; s. c., 96 Am. Dec. 379; Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187; Cottrell v. Richmond, 5 Mo. App. 588; Wilson v. King, 39 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 384; Porter v. White, 5 Mackey (D. C.) 180; Emerson v. Cochran, 111 Pa. St. 619; Jordan v. Ala. Gt. So. R. Co. 81 Ala. 220; Woods v. Finnell, 13 Bush (Ky.) 628; Smith v. Zent, 59 Ind. 362; Carleton v. Taylor, 50 Vt. 220; McKown v. Hunter, 30 N. Y. 625; Turner v. O'Brien, 11 Neb. 108.

1. Want of Probable Cause.—See authorities cited under note 5. Stacey v. Emery, 97 U. S. 642; Wasserman v. Louisville etc. R. Co. 28 Fed. Rep. 802; Lavender v. Hudgens, 32 Ark. 763; Smith v. Zent, 59 Ind. 362; McCarthy v. Kitchen, 59 Ind. 500. But if an attachment be wrongfully sued out upon a ground untrue in fact an action will lie though there existed probable cause. Carothers v. McIlhenny Co., 63 Tex. 138.

2. Termination.—The new action must not be brought before the first be determined, because till then it cannot appear that the first was unjust. Bul. N. P. 12 (see Post, 3 c.) To sustain an

Everyone is in duty bound to act fairly, honestly and without malice toward every other one. This is a moral duty, but becomes a legal and concrete one when the machinery of the law is called into use. And it is for the infraction of this duty that the action of malicious prosecution lies. So where naught but correct motive under probable cause exists, this action will not lie.¹

II. GENERAL PRINCIPLE ON WHICH ACTION DEPENDS.—As a rule, actions for malicious prosecutions cannot be maintained if the accusation complained of was not made in the ordinary and regular course of justice, and before a tribunal having power to as-action for malicious prosecution, the failure of the proceedings against the plaintiff must be averred and proved. Stewart v. Sonneborn, 93 U. S. 187; Gillespie v. Hudson, 11 Kas. 163.

1. An action will not lie for malicious prosecution where the proceedings instituted by the defendant were fairly justified by the apparent circumstances, and where his conduct shows a fair and legitimate purpose honestly to pursue a just claim against a debtor, whose conduct was such as to give rise to just suspicions of his honesty. Stansell v. Cleveland, 64 Tex. 660.

There having been probable cause for the prosecution, and it having been instituted in good faith, an action will not lie for malicious prosecution. Wasserman v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 28 Fed. Rep. 802. An action of malicious prosecution will not lie for making a charge of facts which are true, the magistrate erroneously believing them to constitute a crime, and issuing a warrant accordingly. Hahn v. Schmidt, 64 Cal. 924; Carter v. Sutherland, 52 Mich. 587; Teal v. Fissel, 28 Fed. Rep. 351.

Where the complaint did not charge the commission of any specific offence, and the facts stated did not impute any crime, but the justice of the peace, by mistake of judgment, and thinking a crime was charged, caused the arrest of the party, the law will not hold the person who made the complaint responsible, in an action for malicious prosecution, for the consequence of such error. Newman v. Davis, 58 Iowa 447.

But it is held that a party who maliciously, and without probable cause, prosecutes another upon a criminal charge, cannot in any degree avoid his liability by showing that the information or indictment was defective or insufficient either in substance or form. This must be so upon principle. The gist of the action is the criminal prosecution instituted with malice and without probable cause, resulting in damage to plaintiff by depriving him of his liberty, injuring his reputation or putting him to expense. These concur in a prosecution upon an insufficient information the same as upon a sufficient one. Shaul v. Brown, 28 Iowa 37; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 151; Sears v. Hathaway, 12 Cal. 277; Streight v. Bell, 37 Ind. 550; Forrest v. Collier, 20 Ala. 175; Stancliff v. Palmeto, 18 Ind. 321; 1 Hill on Torts (3d ed.) 426. Pearli v. Reed, 30 Kan. 534; Bell v. Keepers, 37 Kan. 64.

A bad indictment serves all the purposes of malice by putting the party to expense and exposing him. Humphry v. Case, 8 Conn. 101; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 95; Whipple v. Fuller, 11 Conn. 532; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 330; Stone v. Staples, 12 Conn. 219; s. c., 30 Am. Dec. 611.

However if the arrest is one for perjury, for having sworn falsely upon a point not material to the issue then on trial it is without probable cause, as false testimony is not perjury unless it is upon a point material to the issue. Plath v. Braunsdorff, 40 Wis. 107; Smith v. Deaver, 4 Jones L. (N. Car.) 513. And where a party, knowing that a certain act does not constitute a crime, procures another to be indicted for a crime, an action for malicious prosecution lies, Dennis v. Ryan, 65 N. Y. 385. This action will lie against a trial justice who suffered the plaintiff, whom he had sentenced to pay a fine and costs, to go at large and ten weeks afterward, the fine and costs remaining unpaid, committed him to jail upon a mittimus for the purpose of extorting money from him. Fisher v. Deans, 107 Mass. 118.

But an action brought in the name of another person, without his authority, is a groundless and unlawful suit, and for the damage done to the defendant certain the truth or falsity of the charge, and punish the supposed offender.¹ It can hardly be said, however, that the courts are in perfect accord on this proposition.² Neither can it be maintained, where one pursues his legal right, even though he does so maliciously, and without reasonable and probable cause; as, for instance, causes an execution to issue upon a judgment which he holds.³ Nor where the action complained of has been acquiesced in as by compromise.⁴

In such a suit he may recover against the person by whom it was brought. Forster v. Dow, 29 Me. 442.

The criminal law was not designed to assist in the collection of debts, and he who attempts to so use it must expect to smart for it. Kelley v. Sage, 12 Kan. 109. Instituting a criminal prosecution against another to recover one's property is, in a legal sense, from an improper motive and malicious, although the prosecutor had reasonable grounds for belief of the plaintiff's guilt. Gabel v. Welsensee, 49 Tex. 131.

1. The rule here stated is deduced from the holding of a majority of the courts. See Bidwell v. Osgood, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 379; s. c., 15 Am. Dec. 228; Bixby v. Brundage, 2 Gray (Mass.) 129; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 443; Castro v. DeUriarte, 16 Fed. Rep. 93; Whiting v. Johnson, 6 Gray (Mass.) 246; Marshall v. Betner, 17 Ala. 832; Painter v. Ives, 4 Neb. 122.

When the justice has by law no jurisdiction of the subject matter, or a total want of jurisdiction otherwise appears upon the face of the warrant, the proceedings cannot be properly called a prosecution. Sweet v. Negus, 30 Mich. 406.

2. Other cases, however, hold that an action on the case for malicious prosecution may be maintained where the court has no jurisdiction, if the proceedings are malicious and unfounded, and without probable cause, and occasion legal damages to the party accused. Stone v. Stevens, 12 Conn. 319; s. c., 30 Am. Dec. 611; Wood v. Sutor (Tex.), 8 S. W. Rep. 51. Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417; Boon v. Maul, 3 N. J. L. 863.

So an action for malicious prosecution will lie, if the malice and falsehood be put forward as the gravamen, and the arrest as the consequence. Morris v. Scott, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 281; s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 236. Same rule is laid down in Platt v. Niles, 1 Edm. (N. Y.) 432, but held not to apply where malice and falsehood are not the gravamen.

Where the want of jurisdiction does not appear upon the face of the warrant, and is only made to appear by evidence aliunde, the party arrested and prosecuted may maintain an action for malicious prosecution, upon showing that it was malicious, and in the absence of a probable cause. Sweet v. Negus, 30 Mich. 406.

If, however, the magistrate has jurisdiction of the subject matter, there is sufficient prosecution and acquittal, to furnish a foundation for the action. Notwithstanding any insufficiency of the complaint, or defect of process by which the plaintiff was brought before the court, or want of jurisdiction arising from such defect, where the plaintiff was required to plead to the complaint, to answer further thereto, at a subsequent day to give surety for her appearance, and in default of bail she was committed, and upon the day fixed for trial she was discharged, the magistrate finding and adjudging her to be not guilty of said charge. Gibbs v. Ames, 119 Mass. 60. This case is distinguished from Whiting v. Johnson, 6 Gray (Mass.) 129, and Bixby v. Brundage, 2 Gray (Mass.) 129; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 443; in that in them the magistrate had no jurisdiction of the subject matter.

3. Parker v. Francis, 1 Pa. St. 156; Davis v. Clough, 8 N. H. 157; Woodmanson v. Logan, 3 N. J. L. 93; Stone v. Swift, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 389; Pierce v. Thompson, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 193; Gorton v. De Angelis, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 418; 2 Addison on Torts (Wood's ed.) 78.

4. There having been two actions brought, one by A against B, and the other by B against A, and which were pending at the same time, were included in one settlement by the parties, by which A paid to B the difference between a portion of the sum sued for by B and the amount sought to be

III. ESSENTIALS TO MALICIOUS PROSECUTION—1. Criminal Actions.

—It is universally held that a criminal proceeding having been brought or prosecuted maliciously, and without probable cause, affords, when terminated, the basis of an action of malicious prosecution against the one so bringing or prosecuting such proceeding.¹

The varied character and phrases of such criminal proceedings are here noted.²

recovered by A; and judgment was entered for B in the action against him. Held, that B could not maintain an action against A for malicious prosecution in instituting that action. Sartwell v. Parker, 141 Mass. 405.

1. The general principle is laid down that an action lies for maliciously causing one to be indicted whereby he is damned either in person, reputation or property. 1 Hilliard on Torts 413.

2. If a person, maliciously and without probable cause, puts the criminal law in force and thereby another person is prejudiced or injured in property or person, there is such a conjunction of injury and loss as to lay the foundation for an action to recover the damages arising from the wrongful act. Churchill v. Stiggers, 3 El. & Bl. 937.

An action for malicious prosecution may be founded on an indictment upon which no acquittal could be had; as, for example, one rejected by the grand jury or coram non judice or insufficiently drawn. Stancliff v. Palmeter, 18 Ind. 321. Chambers v. Robinson, 2 Strange 691; Wicks v. Fentham, 4 Term R. 247; Pippet v. Hearn, 5 B. & Ald. 634.

So an action lies when a person, knowing that a certain act does not constitute a crime, procures the indictment of another for such an act as a crime. Dennis v. Ryan, 65 N. Y. 385.

Demanding excessive bail when the plaintiff has a good cause of action or holding to bail when there is no cause of action, if done vexatiously, entitles the party injured to an action for malicious prosecution. Ray v. Law, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 207.

And it is no defence to an action for malicious prosecution to show that the affidavit by the prosecutor was insufficient in law to authorize the arrest and prosecution which followed. Stocking v. Howard, 73 Mo. 25; Morris v. Scott, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 281; Stone v. Stevens, 12 Conn. 219.

But where A made an affidavit before a justice of the peace stating that he had lost certain goods which he believed were in the possession of B, B having been arrested under a warrant issued thereon, and, on examination, discharged, it was held, in an action for malicious prosecution by B against A, that A's affidavit contained no criminal charge, and that he was not therefore liable to B in an action for malicious prosecution. McNeely v. Driskill, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 259. See also Baird v. Householder, 32 Pa. St. 168; Bartlett v. Brown, 6 R. I. 37; Shaul v. Brown, 28 Iowa 37; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 151; Stancliff v. Palmeter, 18 Ind. 324; Dennis v. Ryan, 65 N. Y. 385; 1 Am. Lead. Cas. 281; Anderson v. Buchanan, Wright (Ohio) 725; Streight v. Bell, 37 Ind. 550; Collins v. Love, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 416; Barton v. Kavanaugh, 12 La. An. 332.

Nor is it material that the plaintiff was prosecuted by an insufficient process or before a court not having jurisdiction of the matter; for a bad indictment may serve all the purposes of malice as well as a good one. Greenleaf Evidence, vol. 2, § 449.

Where a person falsely prosecutes another for a crime before a court having no jurisdiction of the offence, an action for malicious prosecution lies. Morris v. Scott, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 281; Stone v. Stevens, 12 Conn. 219; Hays v. Younglove, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 545; Sweet v. Negus, 30 Mich. 406. Contra, see Painter v. Ives, 4 Neb. 122; Bodwell v. Osgood, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 379; Turpin v. Remy, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 210.

An action for malicious prosecution will lie after a criminal prosecution begun though no indictment has been preferred. Shock v. McChesney, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 473. It is sufficient if a charge of crime has been made to the proper officer with intent that it be entertained and acted upon as a charge of such crime. Weston v. Beerman, 27 L. J. Exch. 57. Contra, Heyward v. Cuthbert, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 354.

(a) Malice.—By the term “malice” is meant any indirect motive of wrong. It may be any motive other than that of simply instituting a prosecution for the purpose of bringing a person to justice.¹

In a legal sense, any unlawful act which is done wilfully and purposely to the injury of another is, as against that person, malicious.² It is an action based upon an improper motive, and

So if a warrant is sued out from a justice of the peace on an accusation of larceny, an action for malicious prosecution will lie, although the warrant is not placed in the officer's hands nor further proceeded on. Holmes v. Johnson, Busbee (N. Car.) L. 44.

However, the action will not lie if the accusation complained of was not made in the ordinary and regular course of justice and before a tribunal having power to ascertain the truth or falsity of the charge, and to punish the supposed offender. Bodwell v. Osgood, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 379; Turpin v. Remy, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 210. Nor if a complaint has been maliciously made and presented to a magistrate which results only in his sending a letter to the accused requesting him to call and explain the charge. Newfield v. Copperman, 47 How. (N. Y.) 87; s. c., 15 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. N. S. 360.

Search Warrant.—An action for malicious prosecution will lie against one who maliciously, and without probable cause, institutes and carries forward proceedings under a search warrant. Whitson v. May, 71 Ind. 269; Miller v. Brown, 3 Mo. 127. And this although the magistrate refuses to issue the warrant. Miller v. Brown, 3 Mo. 127. Otherwise if search has been made with plaintiff's consent. Carey v. Sheets, 60 Ind. 17.

Bastardy Proceedings.—A malicious and unfounded prosecution for bastardy, set on foot by procuring the necessary affidavit to be filed, gives a right of action to the party accused without probable cause, though the proceeding be ended by dismissal without any arrest having been made, and the injury in such case is completed by filing the affidavit before a justice of the peace, and the issue of the warrant is not essential. Coffey v. Myers, 84 Ind. 105; Green v. Cochran, 43 Iowa 544.

Lunacy Proceedings.—One who, maliciously and without probable cause, institutes or procures to be instituted against another an inquisition of lunacy, is liable to the latter in an action for malicious prosecution, for all damages suffered by him in excess of the taxable costs of such proceeding. Lockenour v. Sides, 57 Ind. 360. Wolcott v. Eagle Ins. Co., 4 Mass. 433.

An action of malicious prosecution will lie against a party who causes the arrest of a person for the purpose of ascertaining who perpetrated an offence. Johnson v. Ebberts, 11 Fed. Rep. 129.

The remedy for causing an arrest by maliciously bringing a suit upon false charges or maliciously making a false affidavit is an action on the case for malicious prosecution. Everett v. Henderson, 146 Mass. 93.

1. Addison on Torts (Wood's ed.), § 853; Stevens v. Midland Railway Co., 10 Exch. 356; 23 L. J. Exch. 328.

While the malice necessary to the right of recovery may not be deduced as a necessary legal conclusion from a mere act, irrespective of the motive with which the act was done, yet, any motive other than that of instituting the prosecution for the purpose of bringing the party to justice, is a malicious motive on the part of the person who acts under the influence of it. Jones v. Marsh, 52 Ind. 323.

By malice is meant not the act but the wrongful motive which prompts the act. Garvey v. Wayson, 42 Md. 178; Harpham v. Whitney, 77 Ill. 32.

2. Hilliard on Torts, vol. 1, p. 446; Griffin v. Chubb, 7 Tex. 603; Com. v. Snelling, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 337; Glasgow v. Owen, 69 Tex. 167; Southwestern R. Co. v. Mitchell, 80 Ga. 438; Johnson v. Ebberts, 11 Fed. Rep. 129.

Malice consists of a bad motive or such reckless disregard of the rights of others as to show evil intent. Biering v. First Nat. Bank, 69 Tex. 599.

Malice may lie only in its being wilful, wanton or reckless, or against the accuser's sense of duty, and for ends that he is bound to know are wrong and against public policy. Hamilton v. Smith, 39 Mich. 222.

does not necessarily presuppose personal hatred, ill will or revenge.¹

It may be a mere wanton or careless disregard for the rights of others, or the doing of the act complained of without that ordinary prudence and discretion which persons of sufficient age and sound mind are presumed to have.²

1. Haddrick v. Heslap, 12 Ad. & El., N. S. 267.

Any motive other than a bona fide purpose to bring a person to punishment as a violator of the criminal law, or associated with such bona fide purpose, is malicious; but, if a criminal offence has been committed, and there is probable cause for believing that the person accused was the perpetrator, the prosecutor may invoke the punitive power of the law, although he may have a private grievance to redress, or may cherish malice. Jordan v. Ala. Great So. R. Co., 81 Ala. 220.

Defendant must have honestly believed in the truth of the charge made by him and he is guilty of malice if he institutes the prosecution without probable cause or from an improper motive, although there is neither actual hatred nor ill will. Spear v. Hiles, 67 Wis. 350.

The term "malice" is not to be considered in the sense of spite or hatred against an individual, but of malus animus, and as denoting that the party is actuated by improper and indirect motives. The improper motive, or want of proper motive inferrible from a wrongful act, based upon no reasonable ground, constitutes of itself all the malice deemed essential in law to the maintenance of the action. Forbes v. Hagman, 75 Va. 168.

The malice necessary to be shown in order to maintain this action is not necessarily revenge or other base and malignant passion. Whatever is done wilfully and purposely, if it be at the same time wrong and unlawful, and that known to the party, is in legal contemplation malice. Wills v. Noyes, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 324; Page v. Cushing, 38 Me. 523; Humphries v. Parker, 52 Me. 502; Mitchell v. Wall, 111 Mass. 492; Pullen v. Glidden, 66 Me. 202.

The malice required has been defined with great accuracy and precision as consisting in an improper motive not necessarily any positive malignity or corruption, but a wilful disregard of the rights of others. Whether it be to compass some unlawful end or some unlawful end by unlawful means or to do a wrong and unlawful act knowing it to be such, as when an attachment is sued out by a person who knows he has no cause of action, he may be deemed to have intended thereby to vex, harass and injure the party sued; and this would be malice enough. Alexander v. Harrison, 38 Mo. 258; s. c., 90 Am. Dec. 431; Ives v. Bartholomew, 9 Conn. 313; Kirksey v. Jones, 7 Ala. 622.

So malice will be inferred when the object of the prosecution is to simply enforce the payment of a debt. Ross v. Langworthy, 13 Neb. 492. It may also be inferred from gross culpable negligence in making enquiries and from misstatements of facts. Wiggin v. Coffin, 3 Story (U. S.) 1. And legal malice may exist though the party making the oath for the arrest may not have wilfully sworn falsely. Forbes v. Hagman, 75 Va. 168.

But mere dislike or ill will does not constitute malice in the legal sense. There must be some act done with intent to injure the plaintiff, and such act must be wrongful and done without legal justification or excuse. Peck v. Chouteau, 91 Mo. 138.

2. A criminal intent is supplied by law where the wrong and injury result from the lack, on the part of the defendant, of that ordinary prudence and discretion which persons of sufficient age and sound mind are presumed in the law to have. Murphy v. Hobbs, 8 Colo. 17. So a prosecution is malicious if instituted without probable cause and from motives of private interest, although under advice of counsel. Grundy v. Crescent News & Hotel Co., 38 La. An. 974. Where the defendant caused the arrest of the plaintiff without probable cause, but not from any actual ill will toward him, but for the purpose of finding out who had forged a certain note in his name, in the plaintiff's possession and which he claimed to be valid and to have acquired in good faith, it was held that the arrest was malicious. Johnson v. Ebberts, 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 538; s. c., 11 Fed. Rep. 129. However, a prosecution begun in good faith by advice of

The motive, however, is immaterial if there was probable cause,¹ or if the accused was in fact guilty of the offence charged.²

(b) Want of Probable Cause.—As we have seen, in order that an action for malicious prosecution may be maintained, the plaintiff must show that the defendant had no probable cause for the commencement or continuation of the proceeding complained of. What then is “probable cause”?

Probable cause is the existence of such facts and circumstances as would excite the belief in a reasonable mind, acting on the facts within the knowledge of the prosecutor, that the person charged was guilty of the crime for which he was prosecuted.³

counsel is not malicious. Wright v. Hanna, 98 Ind. 217.

Malice does not necessarily mean alone that state of mind which must proceed from a spiteful, malignant or revengeful disposition, but includes as well that which proceeds from an ill regulated mind, not sufficiently cautious and recklessly bent on the attainment of some desired end although it may inflict wanton injury upon another. Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. Rep. 217. But one who uses another's name to prosecute a suit without authority is liable for damages sustained by the defendant in said suit, although there was no malice. Bond v. Chapin, 8 Met. (Mass.) 31.

1. Ames v. Schneider, 69 Ill. 376; Smith v. Austin, 49 Mich. 286; Emerson v. Cochran, 111 Pa. St. 619; Flickinger v. Wagner, 46 Md. 580; Miller v. Willigen, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 30.

2. Adams v. Lisher, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 241; Foshay v. Ferguson, 2 Denio (N. Y.) 617. And malice cannot be presumed in a prosecution where the defendant has incurred all the moral guilt of the charge, although he may have evaded the penalty of the law. Sears v. Hathaway, 12 Cal. 277.

3. Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. Rep. 217; Walker v. Camp, 63 Iowa 627; Wheeler v. Nesbitt, 24 How. (U. S.) 544; Barron v. Mason, 31 Vt. 189; Hays v. Blizzard, 30 Ind. 457; Lauda v. Obert, 45 Tex. 539; Mowry v. Whipple, 8 R. I. 360; Ames v. Snider, 69 Ill. 376; McGurn v. Brackett, 33 Me. 331; Wilmarth v. Mountford, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 79; Heyne v. Blair, 62 N. Y. 19; Bacon v. Towne, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 217; Ross v. Langworthy, 13 Neb. 492; Boyd v. Cross, 35 Md. 197; Cooper v. Utterbach, 37 Md. 282; Shafer v. Loucks, 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 426; Morey

v. Whipple, 8 R. I. 360; Center v. Spring, 2 Iowa 393; Munns v. Dupont, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 31; Sharpe v. Johnston, 76 Mo. 660; Ross v. Innis, 35 Ill. 487; s. c., 85 Am. Dec. 373; Paddock v. Watts, 116 Ind. 146; Glasgow v. Owen, 69 Texas 167.

Probable cause is such conduct on the part of the accused as may induce the court to infer that the prosecution was undertaken from public motives, Ulmer v. Leland, 1 Greenl. (Me.) 135; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 48. The prosecutor may act upon appearances; and if the apparent facts are such that a discrete and prudent man would be led to the belief that the accused had committed a crime, he will not be liable in the action although it may turn out that the accused was innocent. Carl v. Ayers, 53 N. Y. 15.

If there be an honest belief of guilt and if there exist reasonable grounds for such belief, the party will be justified. But however suspicious the appearances may be from existing circumstances, if the prosecutor has knowledge of facts which will explain the suspicious appearance and exonerate the accused from a criminal charge, he cannot justify a prosecution by putting forth the prima facie circumstances and excluding those within his knowledge which tend to prove innocence. Hampton v. Jorles, 58 Iowa 317. Mere suspicions, without reasonable grounds for believing them to be founded in fact, however, will not amount to a probable cause. Hirsch v. Feeney, 83 Ill. 548.

Probable cause is a reasonable ground of suspicion supported by circumstances sufficiently strong in themselves to warrant a cautious man in the belief that the person accused is guilty of the offence charged. Davie v. Wisher, 72

Ill. 262; Brown v. Willoughby, 5 Colo. 1. Probable cause, in the perspicuous and comprehensive language of Mr. Hilliard, is defined to be such a state of facts, known to and influencing the prosecutor, as would lead a man of ordinary caution and prudence, acting conscientiously, impartially, reasonably and without prejudice, upon facts within the party's knowledge, to believe, or entertain an honest and strong suspicion that the person accused is guilty. Hilliard on Torts, ch. 12, § 18.

Probable cause is such a state of facts and circumstances as would lead a man of ordinary caution and prudence, acting conscientiously, impartially, reasonably, and without prejudice, to believe that the person accused is guilty. Jordan v. Ala. Great So. R. Co., 81 Ala. 220..

Probable cause is a reasonable ground of suspicion supported by circumstances sufficiently strong in themselves to warrant a cautious man in the belief that the person accused is guilty of the offence with which he is charged. Cole v. Curtis, 16 Minn. 182; Casey v. Sevaton, 30 Minn. 516; Burton v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 33 Minn. 189.

In deciding upon the existence of probable cause, the prosecutor's belief in the guilt or innocence of the party cannot be considered, nor does the existence of such facts as might influence his judgment have any weight, but the test is the effect they might have upon the judgment of others. Ramsey v. Arrott, 64 Tex. 320.

Probable cause upon which to found a prosecution exists only where there is such a state of facts as would lead a man of ordinary caution and prudence to believe and entertain an honest and strong persuasion that the person is guilty. No mere suspicion nor even a strong belief arising from the character of the accused, his habits or countenance can be admitted as a justification. Holburn v. Neal, 4 Dana (Ky.) 120.

Probable cause is conduct of the accused tending to show that the prosecution was undertaken from public motives or such facts as would induce a reasonable man to commence a prosecution, or circumstances sufficient to warrant a prudent man in the belief that the party is guilty, or such a state of facts as would lead a man of ordinary caution and prudence to entertain a belief of the guilt, without facts to support it, does not show probable cause. Graeter v. Williams, 55 Ind. 461; Bit- ting v. TenEyck, 82 Ind. 421; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 505. But actual knowledge that a crime was committed is not necessary, nor is it essential that the prosecutor should know the facts and circumstances upon which he predicates his belief. He may act upon credible information or deceptive appearances of guilt, if he acts in good faith. Brown v. Willoughby, 5 Colo. 1.

The prosecution of a suit which has no foundation except in the assumption that the judgment of the highest State court is not law, is without probable cause. Butcher's Union Slaughter House Co. v. Crescent City Live Stock Co., 37 La. An. 874.

And in a case where it appears by the evidence in the case, that the plaintiff was arrested by the procurement of the defendants on a charge of larceny of certain oil; that when he was alleged to have stolen this oil, he was in the possession thereof as a tenant of oil wells, it being oil which he had himself produced;—that he was bound to deliver, whenever called on, one-third of the oil he produced as rent to his landlord; and that he by his contract was forbidden to remove any oil from the premises without notice to his landlord; that without such notice he did remove all the oil, which at a particular time he had on the premises, and appropriated it to his own use, claiming that there was no rent oil then due to his landlord, because more oil had been taken as rent on a previous occasion by the landlord than he was entitled to; and that this had been taken in the absence of the plaintiff. These facts and this claim of the plaintiff's was known to the prosecutors, the defendants; nevertheless, they had him arrested on a charge of stealing the rent oil claimed to be due and taken off under these circumstances, and appropriated by the plaintiff to his own use. Held, that there was no probable cause to justify the defendants in procuring this prosecution to be set on foot. Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1. Evidence warranting a finding that a railroad conductor who ordered plaintiff's arrest, did not believe that plaintiff was attempting to evade the payment of fare, justifies a finding that the arrest was made without probable cause. Krulevitz v. Eastern R. Co., 143 Mass. 228.

The plaintiff found the cows of the defendant in his garden, and sent a messenger to the defendant, requesting him to come and pay the damage done by the cows, and to take them away. The defendant thereupon went to an attorney and told him that he had heard that the plaintiff had his cows, and had secreted them, and that he could not find them; and the attorney advised the defendant to cause the arrest of the plaintiff for larceny, which was done. Held, that there was actual malice, and a want of probable cause for the arrest. Wild v. Odell, 56 Cal. 136.

Such facts and circumstances must not only exist, but the defendant must have believed in the guilt of the plaintiff.¹ It is upon the existence of such belief based upon such facts and circumstances that the question of probable cause rests, and not upon the actual guilt of the accused.² Mere belief is not enough, however sincerely entertained.³ The degree of caution

1. The honest belief of a person commencing a criminal prosecution against another, in the guilt of the accused is an essential element or fact for him in showing probable cause or in disproving the want of it; but he must also show such reasonable grounds of suspicion supported by circumstances sufficiently strong in themselves to warrant a cautious man in that belief before his belief can become his vindication or shield. If he should show such ground and circumstances and yet it was apparent that he did not himself believe in the guilt of the accused, they would not protect him. Shaul v. Brown, 28 Iowa 37; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 151; Lawrence v. Lanning, 4 Ind. 196; Jacks v. Stimpson, 13 Ill. 701; Wills v. Noyes, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 324; Wood v. Weir, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 544; Hall v. Hawkins, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 357; Farnam v. Feeley, 56 N. Y. 451. But the defendant need not be convinced of plaintiff's guilt of the crime for which he causes his arrest, in order to justify such arrest. It is sufficient if the facts be such as to produce a suspicion in the mind of a prudent man. Keep v. Griggs, 12 Ill. App. 511. The defendant should have honestly believed that the plaintiff was guilty of the offence charged. Spear v. Hiles, 67 Wis. 350.

2. Carl v. Ayers, 53 N. Y. 14; Baldwin v. Weed, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 224; Bacon v. Towne, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 218; Thompson v. Lumley, 50 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 105; Moore v. Sauborin, 42 Mo. 490; Callaway v. Burr, 32 Mich. 332; King v. Colvin, 11 R. I. 582; Foshay v. Ferguson, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 617; Burlingame v. Burlingame, 8 Cow. (N. Y.)

141; Scanlan v. Cowley, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 489; French v. Smith, 4 Vt. 363; Swaim v. Stafford, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) 289; Johnson v. Chambers, 10 Ired. (N. Car.) 287; Fagnan v. Knox, 66 N. Y. 525; Miller v. Milligan, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 30.

And although the facts known make out a prima facie case of guilt, yet if the circumstances are all consistent with the innocence of the party and the prosecutor knows the accused is not guilty or does not believe him to be guilty he cannot have reasonable cause for the prosecution. Townshend, Sland. & Lib., § 428, p. 715; Fagan v. Knox, 1 Abb. (N. Y.) 246; Woodworth v. Mills, 61 Wis. 44. The question of probable cause is entirely independent of plaintiff's actual guilt or innocence of the crime for which he was prosecuted. Lytton v. Baird, 95 Ind. 349.

It is not necessary that all the facts shall be true upon which the prosecutor acts. If he honestly believes them to be true and they are of such a character as would induce a reasonable and prudent man to believe them to be true, then there is probable cause. Bourne v. Stout, 62 Ill. 261; Forbes v. Hagman, 75 Va. 168.

The honest and reasonable belief of the one making the complaint is a necessary element in determining whether he acted without probable cause and maliciously. Krulovitz v. Eastern R. Co., 140 Mass. 573.

3. Ross v. Langworthy, 13 Neb. 492. Cooley on Torts 182. Conjecture or suspicion of guilt does not amount to probable cause and does not justify an arrest. Stone v. Stevens, 12 Conn. 219. The mere belief of a person making a criminal complaint, that it is true, does not alone justify a prosecution thereunder; it must rest on reasonable grounds and on such facts as would lead a person of ordinary caution to honestly suspect the accused of guilt. Spalding v. Lowe, 56 Mich. 366; Ramsey v. Arrott, 64 Tex. 320. Floating rumors are not adequate foundation for such a belief. Smith v. Edge, 52 Pa. St. 419.

and care required is that exercised by men ordinarily.¹ Such caution as this requires proper diligence and enquiry.² It matters not that there was probable cause for the arrest of an innocent plaintiff if the same was unknown to defendant at the time he caused the arrest.³ And a defendant is not liable for causing the arrest of a guilty person even though such arrest was made without probable cause.⁴

The expressions "reasonable cause" and "probable cause" have essentially the same meaning,⁵ but "just or proper cause" has not.⁶

To what extent the advice of counsel affects the question of probable cause, see section 8, DEFENCES.

Some instances of what facts do and do not constitute probable cause are cited in the notes.⁷

1. It is enough if the prosecutor acted with such a degree of impartiality, reasonableness and freedom from prejudice as can be fairly expected of a man of ordinary prudence and caution, acting without malice. Casey v. Severson, 30 Minn. 516; Cole v. Curtis, 16 Minn. 182; McGurn v. Brackett, 33 Me. 331.

2. Paddock v. Watts, 116 Ind. 146. In an action to recover damages for an alleged malicious prosecution the following instruction was given for the plaintiff: Reasonable and probable cause for a criminal prosecution depend very much upon the particular circumstances of each case; but the facts ought to show that the defendant exercised proper diligence and made honest and faithful enquiry into the facts and circumstances inducing belief in the guilt of the accused, and had knowledge of circumstances of his guilt sufficient to satisfy a reasonable mind that plaintiff was guilty and that his guilt could reasonably be expected to be established by a criminal prosecution; and if the jury believe that no such facts existed, and no such faithful and honest enquiry into the facts and circumstances of the guilt of the plaintiff was made by the defendant, then there was no reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution against the plaintiff." Planters' Insurance Co. v. Williams, 60 Miss. 916. But the apparently truthful statements of a child eleven years old who claimed to have seen the plaintiff commit the offence with which he was charged constitutes probable cause. Dwain v. Desalzo, 66 Cal. 415.

3. Galloway v. Stewart, 49 Ind. 156; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 677; Turner v. Ambler, 10 Q. B. 252. Probable cause may consist of such facts as lead to the inference that the party was actuated by a reasonable conviction of the justice of his suit, and it must appear that he became acquainted with those facts before bringing the suit. Stansell v. Cleveland, 64 Tex. 660.

Probable cause is to be determined by facts known to the defendant and which influenced him in instituting the proceedings not by those developed on the trial. Scott v. Shelor, 28 Grat. (Va.) 891. Evidence showing plaintiff's innocence is not admissible unless the facts were known to the defendant when he preferred the charge. King v. Colvin, 11 R. I. 582; Brennan v. Tracy, 2 Mo. App. 540.

4. Sears v. Hathaway, 12 Cal. 277.

5. Stacy v. Emery, 97 U. S. 642.

6. Van De Wiele v. Callanan, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 386.

7. A prosecution for felony will not be held to have been without probable cause if there was probable cause to believe the accused guilty as an accessory before the fact to such felony. Spear v. Hiles, 67 Wis. 350. One who can fortify his ejectment suit by the testimony of reliable experts and who is honestly advised by counsel that he has a case, cannot be charged with having instituted it without probable cause although it fails. Allen v. Codman, 139 Mass. 136.

One sued for malicious prosecution and false imprisonment of plaintiff, attempted to justify the alleged wrong by alleging ownership through a tax title of certain land, for cutting timber on which he had prosecuted and caused plaintiff's arrest. Held: (1.) That a charge instructing the jury that the tax title gave the defendant no right either to the land or the timber growing on it, and that its existence would not constitute probable cause in favor of defendant for believing that the land or the timber thereon had been his property, was error. (2.) The true question was, whether or not the tax deed tended to show the existence of probable cause for defendant to believe that he owned the land described in it, and the timber thereon, and this should have been left to the jury for the purpose of negating malice, and in mitigation of exemplary damages. McDaniel v. Needham, 61 Tex. 269. If a defendant acted upon the advice of counsel and upon such advice had an honest belief in the validity of the debt sued for and of his right to recover it; and in the institution of bankruptcy proceedings had acted likewise on such advice and under an honest belief that he was taking and using only such remedies as the law provided for the collection of what he believed to be a bona fide debt, he having first given a full statement of the facts to counsel, then such facts would constitute in law probable cause. Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187.

(c) Termination of Former Action.—It is a well recognized general rule that no action for malicious prosecution will lie until the proceeding complained of has been legally terminated in favor of the defendant therein.¹ If the action has been appealed the appeal must have been determined.² If for maliciously su-

M caused plaintiff to be arrested for larceny, the grand jury refused to indict and plaintiff sued for malicious prosecution. Plaintiff had ordered goods and upon their delivery to him offered a dishonored promissory note in payment for them, which was refused and the vender neither got money nor were the goods returned. Held, that if the jury thought plaintiff's conduct suspicious of a swindle, the prosecution of him would be justified although an actual case of larceny was not made out. Wilmarth v. Mountford, 4 Wash. (U. S. 79).

1. Hatch v. Cohen, 84 N. Car. 602; Lowe v. Wartman, 47 N. J. L. 413; Apgar v. Woolston, 43 N. J. L. 57; West v. Hayes, 104 Ind. 251; Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187; Swensgaard v. Davis, 33 Minn. 368; Casebeer v. Drahoble, 13 Neb. 465; Wood v. Laycock, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 192; O'Brien v. Barry, 106 Mass. 300; s. c., 8 Am. Rep. 329; Grant v. Moore, 29 Cal. 644; Gillespie v. Hudson, 11 Kan. 163; Hamilburgh v. Shepard, 119 Mass. 30; Gor- rell v. Snow, 31 Ind. 215; Wheeler v. Nesbitt, 24 How. (U. S.) 544; Hall v. Fisher, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 441; Steel v. Williams, 18 Ind. 161; Pratt v. Page, 18 Wis. 337; West v. Hayes, 104 Ind. 251; Thomason v. De Motte, 9 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 242; Monroe v. Maples, 1 Root (Conn.) 422; Spring v. Besore, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 551; Bacon v. Towne, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 217; Parker v. Farley, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 279; Bacon v. Waters, 2 Allen (Mass.) 400; Sayles v. Briggs, 4 Met. (Mass.) 421; Stone v. Crocker, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 87; Davis v. Clough, 8 N. H. 157; Cardinal v. Smith, 109 Mass. 158; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 682; Leever v. Hamill, 57 Ind. 423; Brown v. Randall, 36 Conn. 56; Glasgow v. Owen, 69 Tex. 167.

Where a magistrate has authority only to bind over or discharge and he discharges, the discharge is equivalent to an acquittal and will avail the accused as evidence to support the allegation of acquittal. Sayles v. Briggs, 4 Met. (Mass.) 421.

The reasons why an action should be terminated in favor of a defendant before the defendant can commence an action for a malicious prosecution would seem to be as follows: First, if the action is still pending the plaintiff therein may show in that action that he had probable cause for commencing the suit, by obtaining a judgment therein against the defendant, and he should not be called upon to show such fact in a second action until he has had this opportunity of showing it in the first; second, and if the action has terminated against the defendant then there is already an adjudication against him, showing conclusively that the plaintiff had probable cause for commencing the action. When neither of these reasons applies we suppose the action for malicious prosecution may be maintained, if the other necessary facts can be shown. Marbourg v. Smith, 11 Kan. 554.

2. Reynolds v. DeGeer, 13 Ill. App. 113; Nebenzahl v. Townsend, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 353; Howell v. Edwards, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) 516.

When a party has a final judgment on trial, the prosecution is so far terminated that he may sue for malicious

ing out an injunction, the injunction must have been finally disposed of.¹ This general rule, however, does not obtain where the proceedings have been ex parte, the defendant in such proceedings having had no opportunity to defend as in cases of attachment.²

So in peace cases the action will lie, even though the defendant in such case was required to and did give bond to keep the peace.³

And, generally, the rule is not applicable where the prosecution has terminated under such circumstances that the accused had no opportunity to controvert the facts alleged against him and to secure a determination thereon in his favor.⁴ Nor is it necessary that such termination be such as would bar any other prosecution for the same offence.⁵ If the prosecution terminated in a conviction the action will not lie,⁶ unless such conviction was procured by the fraud or perjury of the defendant.⁷ The prosecution may be said to be terminated (1) where there is a verdict of not guilty;⁸ (2) where the grand jury ignores a bill;⁹ (3) prosecution. If an appeal from the judgment be pending when he brings his action, he simply takes the risk of an adverse decision on the appeal, which will defeat such action. It seems that the appeal from the judgment may furnish a reason for staying the trial of the action for malicious prosecution until the decision of the appeal. Marks v. Townsend, 97 N. Y. 590.

After a criminal complaint has been entered in the superior court, upon appeal, the entry of a nolle prosequi by the prosecuting officer, by the procurement of the defendant's attorney, his discharge not being ordered by the court, is not such a termination of the prosecution as will enable him to maintain an action against the complainant for malicious prosecution. Langford v. B. & A. R. Co., 144 Mass. 431.

1. Tatum v. Morris, 18 Ala. 302.

2. An action for malicious prosecution may be maintained for maliciously, and without probable cause, suing out an attachment without either averring or proving that the attachment complained of had been discharged or otherwise terminated adversely to the claim of the party employing its aid. Fortman v. Rottier, 8 Ohio St. 548; Bump v. Betts, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 421.

3. Hyde v. Greuch, 62 Md. 577.

4. Swensgaard v. Davis, 33 Minn. 368; Olson v. Neal, 63 Iowa 214. As where the arrest was without jurisdiction. Steel v. Williams, 18 Ind. 161; Searll v. McCracken, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 262.

5. Clark v. Cleveland, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 344; Gilbert v. Emmons, 42 Ill. 143. As where the indictment is such that no acquittal could be had as if it be rejected by the grand jury or be coram non judice, or be insufficiently drawn. Stancliff v. Palmeter, 18 Ind. 321.

6. Hibbing v. Hyde, 50 Cal. 206; Cloon v. Gerry, 13 Gray (Mass.) 201; Monroe v. Maples, 1 Root (Conn.) 422; Miller v. Deere, 2 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 1.

7. Palmer v. Avery, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 290; Burt v. Place, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 591; Witham v. Gowen, 14 Me. 362; Payson v. Caswell, 22 Me. 212.

8. A judgment of acquittal is admissible to show that the prosecution has terminated. Winn v. Peckham, 42 Wis. 493. When the criminal prosecution is ended if it terminates in favor of the accused, he may then maintain his action for malicious prosecution. Apgar v. Woolston, 43 N. J. L. 57; Lowe v. Wartman, 47 N. J. L. 413.

9. The discharge, upon the failure to find an indictment, of an accused person, bound over on a complaint to await the action of the grand jury, is such a termination of the proceedings against him as is necessary to sustain an action for a malicious prosecution, without regard to the fact that a nolle prosequi is subsequently entered. Graves v. Dawson, 130 Mass. 78; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 429; Bacon v. Waters, 2 Allen (Mass.) 400; Cardinal v. Smith, 109 Mass. 158; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 682; Jones v. Givin, Gilb. 185; Morgan v. Hughes, 2 T. R. 225; Mitchel v. Will-

where a nolle prosequi is entered;¹ (4) where the accused has iams, 11 M. & W. 205; Lowe v. Wartman, 47 N. J. L. 413. In an action for malicious prosecution by causing plaintiff to be arrested upon a criminal charge, the failure of the grand jury to find an indictment and the discharge of the accused by the court constitute such a termination of the proceedings as is necessary to sustain the action. Hower v. Lewton, 18 Fla. 328.

1. The rule stated in the text is not invariably held. Indeed there are many cases holding otherwise. But it seems on reason and weight of authority to be the better rule. In Brown v. Randall, 36 Conn. 56; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 35. After saying that the question has never been adjudicated in that State, and therefore it may be determined upon principle, the court further discusses the case as follows:

"One reason given for this is, that no termination of the prosecution in favor of the accused short of an acquittal will discharge the crime or be a bar to a new indictment. This reasoning is not satisfactory. The possibility that the plaintiff may be again prosecuted for the same alleged offence is not inconsistent with an entire want of probable cause in the first prosecution. This reason seems to have been disregarded in Sayles v. Briggs, 4 Met. (Mass.) 421. The complainant abandoned the prosecution against the plaintiff, after a trial, and the magistrate, who could only bind over or discharge the person accused, discharged him. The court held that the action could be maintained. Yet such a charge could be no bar to a subsequent prosecution. Another reason given is, that the common law will not favor actions in behalf of a party criminally prosecuted against one who has acted as complainant in behalf of the public, and ostensibly for the public good; it therefore requires that the plaintiff in such an action shall begin by offering the verdict of a jury who have considered the cause on its merits. This may be a very proper caution to a jury, and a matter which ought to be considered by them in weighing evidence, but we see no sufficient reason for adopting it as an absolute rule of law. The effect of this is, in some cases at least, to shut out the truth. No such rule has been adopted in this State, and we think it is contrary to the prevailing notions of the profession. On the whole, we think it wise and safe, when a prosecution has been abandoned, as this was, without any arrangement with the accused, and without any request from him that it should be so abandoned, to leave the question of probable cause to the jury." Brown v. Randall, 36 Conn. 56; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 35; Lowe v. Wartman, 47 N. J. L. 413; Moulton v. Beecher, 15 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 100; Chapman v. Woods, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 504; Yocum v. Polly, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 358; Richter v. Koster, 45 Ind. 440; Graves v. Dawson, 133 Mass. 419; Rice v. Ponder, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) 390.

The entry of a nolle prosequi without a subsequent renewal of the prosecution is sufficient evidence of its termination to warrant the bringing of the action for malicious prosecution. Kennedy v. Holladay, 25 Mo. App. 503.

In an action for malicious prosecution the plaintiff must allege and prove a legal determination of the original action. And where a nolle prosequi was entered of record, and the defendant discharged, it is such a conclusion of the original action as will entitle the plaintiff to sue. Hatch v. Cohen, 84 N. Car. 602; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 630. The entry of a nolle prosequi for any reason other than some irregularity or informality in the information itself, is an end to the prosecution of that case, and, unless such nolle prosequi is vacated at the same term, the defendant can be further prosecuted for the same offence, if at all; only upon a new complaint, arrest, and examination. Woodworth v. Mills, 61 Wis. 44; Murphy v. Moore, (Pa.) 11 Atl. Rep. 665. But contra Bacon v. Towne, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 217; Parker v. Farley, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 279; Bacon v. Waters, 2 Allen (Mass.) 400; Gariny v. Fraser, 76 Me. 37; Driggs v. Barton, 44 Vt. 124; Brown v. Lakeman, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 482.

But it seems that it cannot be said as a matter of law that a nolle prosequi either is or is not a sufficient termination. While generally speaking it may be said to be a sufficient termination it is so because all the other facts make it so, rather than because of this one fact. The court in Graves v. Dawson, 130 Mass. 78; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 429, say: "Whether a prosecution has been so terminated as to authorize the party prosecuted to commence an action for malicious prosecution, is to be determined by the facts of the particular case, of which facts the entry of a nolle been discharged from bail or imprisonment.¹ All that is necessary is that the particular prosecution or proceeding shall have been disposed of in a manner that it cannot be revived, and that the prosecutor, if he intends to proceed further, must institute proceedings de novo.²

prosequi may be one of several, may be the only fact, may be a controlling fact, or may be an entirely unimportant one."

But a nolle prosequi entered by the procurement of the party prosecuted, or by his consent, or by way of compromise, is not such a determination of the prosecution alleged to have been malicious as will enable the party prosecuted to maintain the action. Langford v. Boston etc. R. Co., 144 Mass. 431; but see Gallagher v. Stoddard, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 102.

1. Schoonover v. Myers, 28 Ill. 308; McWilliams v. Hoban, 42 Md. 56; Gilbert v. Emmons, 42 Ill. 143; Fay v. O'Neill, 36 N. Y. 11; Hatch v. Cohen, 84 N. Car. 602. So if the indictment is quashed and the defendant discharged. Hays v. Blizzard, 30 Ind. 457.

2. If the action is commenced by complaint to a magistrate who has jurisdiction only to bind over or discharge, his record stating that the complainant withdrew his prosecution and it was thereupon ordered that the accused be discharged, is equivalent to an acquittal. Sayles v. Briggs, 4 Met. (Mass.) 421; Cardinal v. Smith, 109 Mass. 158; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 682.

In a case of malicious prosecution. Held, that the right of an action accrues "whenever the particular prosecution be disposed of in such a manner that this cannot be revived, and the prosecutor, if he proceeds further, will be put to a new one." Casebeer v. Drahoble, 13 Neb. 465. And the law requires only that the particular prosecution complained of shall have been terminated, and not that the liability of the plaintiff to prosecution for the same offence shall have been extinguished, before the action for malicious prosecution is brought. Consequently the refusal of the grand jury to find an indictment, a nolle prosequi, or any proceeding by which the particular prosecution is disposed of in such a manner that it cannot be revived, and that the prosecutor, if he intends to proceed further, must institute proceedings de novo, is a sufficient termination of the prosecution to enable the plaintiff to bring his action. Apgar v. Woolston, 43 N. J. L. 57.

It is a sufficient termination of the criminal proceeding if there was a dismissal before trial. A verdict and judgment on the merits is not essential. Kelley v. Sage, 12 Kan. 109; Bell v. Matthews, 37 Kan. 686. So where the action has been dismissed at plaintiff's costs and is not commenced again. Marbourg v. Smith, 11 Kan. 554.

A discharge by a magistrate of a person arrested on a complaint is a sufficient termination of the case to support an action for malicious prosecution, even if the magistrate has only power to bind over or discharge the accused. Moyle v. Drake, 141 Mass. 238.

And an action is not prematurely brought where the plaintiff has been discharged on preliminary examination by magistrate, although afterward an indictment is found for the same matter. Costello v. Knight, 4 Mackey (D. C.) 65.

And in a complaint in an action for malicious prosecution it was alleged that "on motion and request of the defendant made in person, said affidavit, prosecution and charges were dismissed, and plaintiff was not required to go to trial hereon," it was held to show sufficient termination of the prosecution. Clegg v. Waterbury, 88 Ind. 21. So, where the record of the criminal case upon which the suit for malicious prosecution was founded, was in evidence, and showed a judgment in these words: "The defendant moves to quash the indictment herein, which motion the court sustains, and said defendant is discharged." Held, that this, though informal, was a good judgment, ending the prosecution and discharging the defendant. Lytton v. Baird, 95 Ind. 349.

But striking the cause from the docket on motion of the State's attorney, with leave to reinstate the same, is not such a legal termination of the prosecution as will permit an action for malicious prosecution to lie. Blalock v. Randall, 76 Ill. 224. Where a criminal prosecution is commenced before a

In a civil suit where one settles by paying all that was claimed in such suit he cannot base an action for malicious prosecution thereon.¹

A discharge on habeas corpus is a sufficient termination.²

2. Civil Actions.—At common law, the defendant in an action maliciously brought without probable cause has a right of action against the plaintiff in such action after its termination in favor of such defendant, and this regardless of whether the plaintiff had interfered with either the person or property of the defendant.³ But after the enactment of the statute of Marlbridge in the fifty-second year of Henry III, giving costs to successful defendants by way of damage against the plaintiff pro falso clamore it came to be held that an action for malicious prosecution would not lie in civil actions unless in cases where there had been arrest of the person or seizure of property or other special injury which would not necessarily result in all suits prosecuted to recover for justice of the peace and is afterwards dismissed with the intention of commencing it again in the district court, held, that such criminal prosecution before the justice of the peace cannot constitute the basis of an action for a malicious prosecution while the criminal prosecution is still pending in the district court. Schippel v. Norton, 38 Kan. 567.

Where the evidence showed that owing to the failure of the defendant to appear as a witness in a case where he had caused the plaintiff to be arrested, the cause had been continued from time to time, till the plaintiff was finally allowed to go at liberty. It was held that this sufficiently showed an end of such prosecution. Leever v. Hamill, 57 Ind. 423. So, in a case where the evidence was that the complainant in a criminal proceeding failed to appear and prosecute before the justice after notice to do so, and that the justice discharged the present plaintiff, it was held that it showed a sufficient termination of the prosecution. Swensgaard v. Davis, 33 Minn. 368.

But if a person, having been committed in default of bail for his appearance at the next term of court, procures his discharge on a writ of habeas corpus, this is not such a termination of the prosecution as will support this action. Walker v. Martin, 43 Ill. 508; Swartwout v. Dickelmann, 12 Hun (N. Y.) 358.

Where a magistrate can neither convict nor commit, but only bind over or discharge, and does discharge the accused, the prosecution is at an end so far as to warrant an action for malicious prosecution. Driggs v. Barton. 44 Vt. 124.

The dismissal of an action by a stipulation providing that each party shall pay his own costs, is such a termination of the case in favor of the defendant as will enable him to maintain an action for malicious prosecution. Kinsey v. Wallace, 36 Ind. 462.

An arrest of judgment after conviction is not a proper termination. Kirkpatrick v. Kirkpatrick, 39 Pa. St. 288.

1. Sartwell v. Parker, 141 Mass. 405; Foster v. Orr (Oreg.), 21 Pac. Rep. 440.

2. Zebble v. Storey, 117 Pa. St. 478; Charles v. Abell, Bright. (Pa.) 131. Contra, Schoffel v. Kleintz, Bright. (Pa.) 132; Walker v. Martin, 43 Ill. 508.

3. Co. Litt. 161; Webster v. Haigh, 2 Lev. 210; Goslin v. Wilcock, 2 Wils. 302; 4 Mod. 13; Waleler v. Freeman, Hob. 205; 3 Chitt. Bla. 125.

General Doctrine.—It is the universal doctrine that if one maliciously and without probable cause, sue out a civil process and cause the defendant to be arrested or his property attached, such person is liable for the damages sustained thereby. Watkins v. Baird, 6 Mass. 506; Hayden v. Shed, 11 Mass. 500; Lindsay v. Larned, 17 Mass. 190; Stone v. Swift, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 389; Tomlinson v. Warner, 9 Ohio 103; McFadden v. Whitney et al. (N. J.), 18 Atl. Rep. 62.

And in such case the suit will lie, even though there may have been a like causes of action. And this is the rule adopted by some of the courts of this country.¹

valid cause of action, if in fact there was no probable cause for the attachment, and it was taken out maliciously. Fortman v. Rottier, 8 Ohio St. 548.

1. In Potts v. Imlay, 4 N. J. L. 330, the court said: "The courts of law are open to every citizen and he may sue folies quoties upon the penalty of lawful costs only. These are considered as sufficient for the mere expenses of the defendant in his defence. They are given to him for this purpose, and he cannot rise up in a court of justice and say the legislature have not given me enough. Merely for the expenses of a civil suit, however malicious and however groundless, this action does not lie nor ever did, so far as I can find, at any period of our judicial history. It must be attended, besides ordinary expenses, with other special grievances or damage, not necessarily incident to a defence but superadded to it by the malice and contrivance of the defendant; and of these, an arrest seems to be the only one spoken of in our books."

The rule laid down in Potts v. Imlay, is cited and approved in Bitz v. Meyer, 11 Vroom (N. J.) 252; s. c., 29 Am. Rep. 233; Woodmanse v. Logan, 2 N. J. L. 93; Parker v. Frambes, 2 N. J. L. 156.

The action of ejectment temporarily clouds the title to the property in controversy, and so may, for the time, prevent a sale or a mortgage upon it. But a damage of this kind is not more direct than that resulting from the expenses, loss of time, and often loss of credit, arising from the ordinary forms of legal controversy. All are troublesome, expensive, and often ruinous; and if for such damage the action of case could be maintained, there would be no end of litigation, for the conclusion of one suit would be but the beginning of another. It is, therefore, wisely determined that for the prosecution of a civil suit, however unfounded, where there has been no interference with either the person or property of the defendant, no action will lie. Muldoon v. Rickey, 103 Pa. St. 110; Mayer v. Walter, 64 Pa. St. 283; Kramer v. Stock, 10 Watts (Pa.) 115; Eberly v. Rupp, 90 Pa. St. 259.

It is true a party may be held liable for a false and malicious prosecution of either a criminal or civil proceeding; but when it has been attempted to hold a party liable for the prosecution of a civil proceeding, it has generally been in cases where there has been an alleged malicious arrest of the person, or a groundless and malicious seizure of property the false and malicious placing the plaintiff in bankruptcy, or the like.

Or where the plaintiff declares that he has been falsely and maliciously arrested, or that, by reason of a false claim, maliciously asserted by the defendant, he was required to give bail, and upon failure he was detained in custody or his property was attached, there the action lies; because of the special damage sustained by the plaintiff.

It is not enough, however, for the plaintiff to declare generally that the defendant brought an action against him ex malitia et sine causa per quod he put him to great charge; but he must allege and show the grievance especially. Otherwise parties would be constantly involved in litigation, trying over cases that may have failed, upon the mere allegation of false and malicious prosecution. McNamee v. Minke, 49 Md. 122.

We think the doctrine is well established by the great preponderance of authority, that no action will lie for the institution and prosecution of a civil action with malice and without probable cause, where there has been no arrest of the person or seizure of the property of the defendant, and no special injury sustained which would not necessarily result in all suits prosecuted to recover for like causes of action. This doctrine is supported by the following considerations: the courts are open and free to all who have grievances and seek redress, therefore, and there should be no restraint upon a suitor through fear of liability resulting from failure in the action which would keep him from the courts. He ought not, in ordinary cases, to be subject to a suit for bringing an action and be required to defend against the charge of malice and the want of probable cause. If an action may be maintained against a plaintiff for the malicious prosecution of a suit without probable cause, why should not a right of action accrue against a defendant who defends without probable cause and with malice? The doctrine surely tends to discourage vexatious litigation rather than to promote it. Wetmore v. Mellinger, 64 Iowa 741; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 465; Smith v. Hintrager, 67 Iowa 109.

The contrary rule adopted by courts equal in number and respectability is that an action can be maintained where neither the person nor the property was seized for damages accruing in suits brought maliciously and without probable cause.¹

In England, prior to the statute of 52 Henry III, 1267, where one sued another maliciously and without probable cause, he was liable to such person in damages in an action on the case; but since the passage of that statute, which gave costs to the defendant per falsum clamorem, the bringing of a civil suit maliciously and without probable cause was not a ground upon which an action could be maintained, unless the action was one whereby the person of the defendant was arrested or his property attached, or some special damage was done to him; and this it was necessary to set out specially. Such was the common law as adopted in this State by the act of 1784. Mitchell v. Southwestern R. Co., 75 Ga. 398.

An action in ejectment against one's tenant unaccompanied by any interference with person or property, forms no ground for claim of damages without clear proof of malice and want of probable cause. Johnson v. Meyer, 36 La. An. 333.

A suit for malicious prosecution of a civil action may be maintained though no process other than the summons was issued therein. Eastin v. Bank of Stockton, 66 Cal. 123; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 77.

1. It is too clear for discussion, that the costs which the law gives a successful party are no adequate compensation for the time, trouble and expense of defending a malicious and groundless civil action. The party sued must devote some time to the defence of the suit; he must look up his evidence and employ counsel. This waste of time and necessary expenditure of money, by its results, affects the property of the defendant. For these expenses, the costs, recovered in the action, are no compensation at all. In some of the States, reasonable attorney's fees for the successful party are included in the taxable costs. It is not so here. No good and sufficient reason can be given why he who has maliciously and without probable cause instituted a suit against another should not be required to pay the party so sued such sum as will make him entirely whole, and so a majority of the decided cases in this country hold. McCardle v. McGinley, 86 Ind. 538; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 343; Lockenour v. Sides, 57 Ind. 360; s. c., 26 Am. Rep. 58; Pangburn v. Bull, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 345.

We are of the opinion that where a civil suit is commenced and prosecuted maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause, and is terminated in favor of the defendant, the plaintiff in such suit is liable to the defendant in an action on the case for the damages sustained by him in the defence of that original suit in excess of the taxable costs obtained by him; and to maintain an action to recover such damages it is not material whether the malicious suit was commenced by process of attachment or by summons only. Closson v. Staples, 42 Vt. 209; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 316.

An action on the case at common law is sustainable for a vexatious civil suit in which there was no arrest or holding to bail. Whipple v. Fuller, 11 Conn. 582; Stone v. Stevens, 12 Conn. 219.

After the statute giving costs to the defendant, it was held by the common law courts that no action could be maintained on account of the institution and prosecution of a civil action without probable cause, and therefore no action could lie for a vexatious ejectment. In all such cases the plaintiff must have gone beyond the proper remedy for the enforcement of his claim, such as procuring an illegal order of arrest or requiring excessive bail before the action could be maintained. This entire doctrine is based on the idea that the plaintiff bringing the action is sufficiently punished and the defendant fully recompensed by the statute requiring the plaintiff to pay all the costs. We perceive no good reason for following this rule and denying to the defendant a remedy when his damages exceed the ordinary costs of the action. The fact that a plaintiff has been subjected to

But such action will not lie for damages sustained by being sued in an action not malicious and without probable cause.¹ Neither will the mere suing out of a process without probable cause and with malice without levy of the same authorize a recovery by the party against whom the process was issued.²

This action will lie against one for maliciously and without probable cause procuring another to be adjudged a bankrupt,³

the payment of costs per falso clamore is no recompense to the defendant, when the latter has, by reason of the malicious proceeding on the part of the plaintiff, sustained damage. In cases where the plaintiff has mistaken his action or been nonsuited, or where, by reason of some imaginary claim, he has seen proper to sue the defendant, it is not pretended that any action for damages can be maintained. But where the claim is not only false, but the action is prompted alone by malice and without any probable cause, the defendant's right of recovery for the expenses incurred and damages sustained, should be as fully recognized as if his property had been attached or his body had been taken charge of by the sheriff. While the damages may be less in the one case than in the other, the legal right exists and some remedy should be afforded. Following the doctrine of the common law that for every injury there is a remedy, we see no reason for denying a remedy to the plaintiff; and where a party seeks, a judicial tribunal for the purpose alone of gratifying his malice, he should be made to recompense the party injured for the damage actually sustained, and the court should see that a remedy is afforded for the purpose. Woods v. Finnell, 13 Bush (Ky.) 628.

Can an action for malicious prosecution be maintained in a case like the one at bar? where neither the person nor the property was seized nor bail nor security required, and the ordinary costs of defending the prosecution have already been allowed. We suppose that an action for malicious prosecution can be maintained in any case where a malicious prosecution without probable cause has in fact been had and terminated, and the defendant in such prosecution has sustained damages over and above his taxable costs in the case, etc. . . . At common law the defendant in such a case always had a remedy. Originally it was an action for malicious prosecution. Subsequently it was amercement of the plaintiff pro falso clamore. But now and in this State, as amercement is abolished, the defendant must return to his original remedy of malicious prosecution. Marbourg v. Smith, 11 Kan. 554.

An action will lie against one who maliciously and without probable cause, brings successive suits against another, returnable before a justice of the peace at a distant place, dismissing the suits upon their appearance, and causing trouble and expense. Payne v. Donegan, 9 Ill. App. 566.

Where a civil action is commenced and prosecuted maliciously without proper cause, and is terminated in favor of the defendant, the plaintiff is liable for damages in excess of taxable costs sustained in defending. Brown v. Cape Girardeau, 90 Mo. 377.

The cases on these two views are collected and revised by Mr. Lawson in an article in the American Law Register, vol. 21, p. 281.

1. White v. Dingley, 4 Mass. 433; Lindsay v. Larned, 17 Mass. 190.

2. Biering v. National Bank, 69 Tex. 599. But such action will lie where a judgment creditor knowingly, and with intent to oppress the defendant, caused to issue execution against him for a sum in excess of what was due on the judgment. Hall v. Leaming, 2 Vroom (N. J.) 321.

3. Bankruptcy.—An action for malicious prosecution will lie where the defendant falsely and maliciously procured the plaintiff to be adjudged a bankrupt upon affidavit which was not sufficient legally to warrant an adjudication. Farley v. Danks, 4 El. & Bl. 493; Oldfield v. Dodd, 8 Exch. 578.

Also where the defendant had maliciously procured another person who was a pauper to prosecute a groundless suit against the plaintiff, and the plaintiff by reason of such poverty had been unable to obtain satisfaction for the costs adjudged to him in that case. Pechell v. Watson, 8 M. & W. 691; McNamee v. Minke, 49 Md. 122. But where the plaintiff has reasonable cause to believe that the defendant is his or thus procuring an injunction,¹ or thus instituting an action for forcible entry and detainer;² or for procuring another to be attached for contempt of court. But not for filing a petition for the purpose of having the plaintiff declared in contempt.³

This action also lies against one who improperly causes a garnishee process to issue.⁴ Or for demanding or holding to excessive bail.⁵

While the suing out of an attachment maliciously and without probable cause entitles the party injured to maintain this action, the defendant, in the absence of a statute giving the right of action, cannot maintain an action except where an attachment bond has been given, where there is no malice, or where there is probable cause.⁶

debtor, and has committed an act of bankruptcy, he is justified in proceeding against him as a bankrupt. Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187.

1. Injunction.—Where a railroad company, through its superintendent, consented that a mill owner might erect a dam which would overflow a portion of its right of way, and upon a sale by the owner to another, the latter obtained a similar licence; and the dam having been broken in consequence of a flood, the company filed a bill and obtained an interlocutory injunction to prevent the owner from rebuilding the dam; and if, upon the final trial, the bill was dismissed, an action would lie for the malicious suing out of the injunction without probable cause, whereby the owner had sustained special damage in being deprived of the use of his property, and this principle is not altered by the fact that the case was in equity, and that the damages were consequent upon an injunction granted by the chancellor. Mitchell v. Southwestern R. Co., 75 Ga. 398.

Where a corporation maliciously sued a plaintiff, and on an ex parte application obtained an injunction restraining him from entering on certain coal lands, and a year thereafter dismissed its action. Held that he could maintain an action for malicious prosecution. Newark Coal Co. v. Upson, 40 Ohio St. 17.

2. Forcible Entry and Detainer.—An action may be maintained for maliciously and without probable cause instituting an action in forcible entry and detainer. Pope v. Pollock (Ohio St.), 21 N. E. Rep. 356.

So where a blaster lost his eyes while in the service of the owner of a rock quarry, or of his contractor or lessee, and that the owner of the quarry gave him a house and lot for life, as a compensation for the injury received, and to prevent any suit against himself or his lessee, furnished a good and valid consideration to support a conveyance so made, and the injured blaster having been in possession, under such a settlement, for more than seven years, and being unable to give security in order to resist by counter affidavit a warrant to dispossess him, if the feoffer caused him to be ejected under such a warrant, it was a tort for which a recovery could be had. Crusselle v. Pugh, 71 Ga. 744.

3. Proceedings for Contempt.—A declaration alleging that the defendant maliciously made use of the process of the court by causing a petition for the purpose of having the plaintiff declared in contempt of court and removed from the office of receiver, and to disgrace him in the eyes of another, and such allegations were false to the knowledge of the defendant, and that the plaintiff was greatly injured thereby states no cause of action in favor of the plaintiff. Bartlett v. Christliff, 69 Md. 219.

4. Garnishee.—One who has been improperly subjected to damages by means of a garnishee proceeding can maintain an action of malicious prosecution, other conditions existing. Noonan v. Orton, 30 Wis. 356.

5. Excessive Bail.—It is held that maliciously demanding excessive bail where there is good cause of action, or holding to bail where there is no cause of action, if done vexatiously, entitles the party injured to an action for a malicious prosecution. But if bail be not exacted, such action will not lie. Ray v. Law, Pet. (C. C.) 207; McNamee v. Minke, 49 Md. 122.

6. Where by statute no bond in attach-

IV. WHO MAY SUE.—The action for a malicious prosecution is one sounding in tort, and for injury not to the property but to the person of the plaintiff. The common law, as it exists in this country, coming to us by the statute of 3 Edward III, ch. 8, is that every kind of injury to a person by which his property has been rendered less beneficial, gives a right of action which may be assigned or survives to his personal representative.¹ Hence the rights of a person for merely personal injury, such as malicious prosecution, may not be assigned; and such right dies with the party.² Under the codes of most of the States the common law rule, so far as malicious prosecution is concerned, remains unchanged. So that in general only the person who has suffered the damage can maintain this action.³ This being the rule at common law. Where the injury is to the person it is usually several, although suffered by more than one and inflicted at the same time and by the same person; and when this is so, each one who has suffered an injury must bring his separate action.⁴ But where two had jointly incurred expense in procuring their discharge from a joint arrest of both, it was allowed that they might sue jointly.⁵ Except where the common law rule is changed by statute, where the malicious prosecution complained of has been committed upon the wife, either before or after her marriage, she must be joined in an action therefor with her husband.⁶ But this rule is very much changed in most of the States by the Married Women's acts. If by any means the malicious ment is required, and notice given, the defendant cannot maintain an action against the plaintiff in attachment by showing merely that the writ was wrongfully sued out, there being no debt due from him, but he must show malice, want of probable cause and damages, as required by the principles of common law in actions for malicious prosecution. Preston v. Cooper, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 589. A contrary rule prevails in Tennessee because of the provisions of the statute in that State. Jerman v. Stewart, 12 Fed. Rep. 266.

1. Chitty's Plead. 69; Zabriskie v. Smith, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 270; Hoyt v. Thompson, 1 Seld. (N. Y.) 347.

2. Boyd v. Blankman, 29 Cal. 10; Comegys v. Vasse, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 193; Lawrence v. Martin, 22 Cal. 173; Nettleton v. Dinehart, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 543.

3. A master, however, may maintain this action for the malicious prosecution of his slave. Locke v. Gibbs, 4 Ired. (N. C.) 42. And in Maine it seems that a father may maintain the action for a malicious prosecution of his minor son. Severance v. Judkins, 73

Me 376. In California it is held that a cause of action for malicious prosecution is not assignable. Lawrence v. Martin, 22 Cal. 174. And in Wisconsin it is held that an action for malicious prosecution is an action for personal injury, and, although special loss to plaintiff's business resulting therefrom may be alleged to aggravate damages, yet the right to maintain the action does not pass to an assignee in bankruptcy. Noonan v. Orton, 34 Wis. 259.

4. 1 Chitty's Plead. 64; McLeod v. McLeod, 73 Ala. 42.

5. 1 Chitty's Plead. 64; 10 Moore 446.

6. Beach v. Ranney, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 309; Johnson v. Dicken, 25 Mo. 580.

The code of Louisiana provided that a suit for malicious prosecution of the wife must be brought by her husband. In such an action the husband filed a paper stating that he comes "solely to assist her in prosecuting this suit, and as husband does not claim any share in said damages, but joins her to claim the same in her behalf." It was held that this was not a compliance with the statute, and that the fact that the parprosecution should result in the death of the party, then undoubtedly an action would lie for the benefit of the one authorized by the statute to sue; as the statute 9 and 10 Vict., ch. 93, known as LORD CAMPBELL'S act, has been substantially re-enacted in most of the States.

V. WHO MAY BE SUED—1. Generally.—The one who makes the charge or procures the prosecution is liable, and this whether he does it himself or procures another to do it.¹

ties were nonresidents of that State cannot make an exception. Meyerson v. Alter, 11 Fed. Rep. 688.

1. It is enough if the defendant instigated the prosecution, actively promoted it, or it was carried on with his countenance and approbation, and this whether there were others concerned in it or not. Stansbury v. Fogle, 37 Md. 369; Grant v. Deuel, 3 Rob. (La.) 17; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 228; Burnap v. Albert, Taney (U. S.) 244; Wells v. Parsons, 3 Har. (Del.) 505. And evidence that the defendant procured the warrant and wagered that he would convict the plaintiff sufficiently proves his connection with the prosecution. Kline v. Shuler, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) 484.

He need not participate in the execution of the process. It is enough if he makes out the affidavit maliciously, vexatiously and without probable cause, without proof of further intervention on his part. Walser v. Thies, 56 Mo. 89.

An action for malicious prosecution lies against several defendants and that without alleging a conspiracy. Dreux v. Domec, 18 Cal. 83.

A conductor ordering the arrest of a passenger for nonpayment of fare when he did not believe such passenger was attempting to evade such payment, is as liable as though he himself had made it. Krulevitz v. Eastern R. Co., 143 Mass. 228. And an attorney who advises, begins and conducts a criminal prosecution upon an understanding with his client that the charge against the accused is untrue, is liable for damages for malicious prosecution. Staley v. Turner, 21 Mo. App. 244.

But an attorney is not liable unless in conducting the litigation complained of he knew there was no cause of action, and knew also that his client was acting solely from illegal or malicious motives; and in forming his opinion upon these matters he has a right to act upon such information as his client imparts, and is not bound to inform himself elsewhere. Peck v. Chouteau, 91 Mo. 138; Bicknell v. Dorion, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 478.

And the person who maliciously makes an affidavit for the procurement of an attachment becomes liable for the resulting injury without further intervention on his part. Walser v. Thies, 56 Mo. 89. So if a person gives another general authority to use his name as he sees fit in prosecuting suits without informing himself of the facts and circumstances and shares the compensation, may properly be joined as a defendant with the person using his name in the prosecution of a malicious suit and cannot shield himself by a plea of ignorance. Kinsey v. Wallace, 36 Cal. 462.

In a case where F & A, partners, living in Baltimore, carried on a business near Richmond by their general agent, M, M brings an action in the name of F & A against H & G, partners, claiming they are indebted to the plaintiffs; and upon affidavit by M, under the statute, H & G are held to bail, and, not being able to give it, they are held in prison until the trial, when the plaintiffs are nonsuited. H and G then bring their separate actions against F and A for malicious arrest and imprisonment. It seems F & A had no knowledge of the arrest and imprisonment until the parties were in prison, when F, coming to Richmond, he was informed of the fact by M, when he made no enquiry as to the grounds of the arrest, and he gave no directions for their release. Held, This was a virtual ratification and adoption of what had been done by the agent; and the principals, F & A, are responsible for the consequences of the agent's acts. Forbes v. Hagman, 75 Va. 168.

It has been held, however, that it does not follow that because a person attends the hearing he adopts the proceeding or renders himself responsible for the motive or actions of the person

2. Partners.—A partner, however, cannot be held liable for the false imprisonment of a debtor of the copartnership by a copartner when he neither directs, participates in nor receives any benefit from such arrest.¹

3. Corporations.—In some of the earlier cases it is held that a corporation aggregate could not be made liable in an action of malicious prosecution for the institution of a malicious suit by one of its officers or agents on the ground that such action was ultra vires.² But yielding to the growth of ideas the later cases who instituted it, although that person may be his agent. Weston v. Beeman, 27 L. J. Exch. 57.

The agent or attorney who maliciously or illegally sues on the process is also liable and is a proper defendant. Warfield v. Campbell, 35 Ala. 349; Wood v. Weir, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 544; Stockley v. Hornidge, 8 C. & P. 16; Grove v. Bradenburg, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 234.

It is, however, held where a criminal prosecution was commenced by a railroad company, through its agents and attorneys, for malicious injury to its property, the person in its employ who gave the information which led to the investigation and made the affidavit on which the arrest was issued, is not in any sense the prosecutor. Jordan v. Ala. Great So. R. Co., 81 Ala. 220. The contrary doctrine is stated—and it would seem properly so—in Pierce on Railroads 292. The corporation and its servant, by whose act the injury was done, may be joined in an action of tort in the nature of trespass. Hussey v. Norfolk So. R. Co., 98 N. Car. 34; s. c., 2 Am. St. Rep. 312.

Neither can this action be maintained against an attorney at law for bringing an action, unless he commenced it without authority, or unless there was a conspiracy between him and his client to bring a groundless suit, knowing it to be such, and without intent or expectation of maintaining it. Bicknell v. Dorion, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 478.

Neither will proof of malice and want of probable cause on the part of a prosecuting witness sustain an action against a party conspiring with such witness to commence the prosecution. Malice and want of probable cause must also be proven against such party. Green v. Cochran, 43 Iowa 544.

And where there was a voluntary association for the prosecution of thieves that caused the plaintiff's prosecution, it was held that only the members participating therein were liable for malicious prosecution. Johnson v. Miller, 69 Iowa 562.

It is not, however, necessary in an action against two defendants that both should have signed the complaint on which the defendant was arrested. Casebeer v. Drahoble, 13 Neb. 465.

Advising persons not to become sureties for one who has been arrested, does not tend to show that those who give such advice have conspired with the person who caused the arrest, and are, therefore, liable with him to an action for malicious prosecution. Nor does their enmity toward the person arrested, nor their wish to drive him out of town. Labar v. Batt, 56 Mich. 589.

One is not liable for an arrest made by a policeman on information furnished by such person's clerk without his knowledge or authority. Hershey v. O'Neill, 36 Fed. Rep. 168.

1. Rosenkrans v. Barker, 115 Ill. 331; 1 Lindl. Partn., bk. 2, ch. 1, § 4; Arbuckle v. Taylor, 3 Dow. 160.

In Gilbert v. Emmons, 42 Ill. 143, it was held that the mere knowledge and consent of one partner that the other should have the person accused arrested would not render the partner so knowing and consenting liable to an action for malicious prosecution; it was necessary that the consent should be of such a character as to amount to advice and co-operation.

2. Gillett v. Mo. Valley R. Co., 55 Mo. 315; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 653; Childs v. Bank of Mo., 17 Mo. 213; Maynard v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 34 Cal. 48; Goodspeed v. East Haddam Bank, 22 Conn. 530. In this case the court divided evenly. Stevens v. Mid. R. Co., 10 Exch. 352; Owsley v. Montgomery R. Co., 37 Ala. 560; Addison on Torts, Wood's ed., vol. 2, p. 86. See also Abrath v. Northeastern R. Co., 11 App. Cas. 247. Compare CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 257, and generally, p. 250 et seq.

seem to be all taking the opposite view and hold that corporations are liable for this as well as for other torts of their officers and agents in the same manner and to the same extent that individuals are liable under like circumstances.¹ A municipal corporation may probably become liable to this action.²

1. Hussey v. Norfolk So. R. Co., 98 N. Car. 34; s. c., 2 Am. St. Rep. 312 and note; Vance v. Erie R. Co., 32 N. J. L. 334, s. c., 90 Am. Dec. 665; Fenton v. Wilson S. M. Co., 9 Phila. (Pa.) 189; Reed v. Home Savings Bank, 130 Mass. 443; Morton v. Metropolitan Ins. Co., 34 Hun (N. Y.) 366; affirmed 103 N. Y. 645; Wheless v. Second Nat. Bank, 1 Baxt. (Tenn.) 469; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 783; Boogher v. Life Assn., 75 Mo. 319; Woodward v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 85 Mo. 142; Copley v. G. & B. Sewing Machine Co., 2 Woods (U. S.) 494; Ricord v. Central Pac. R. Co., 15 Nev. 167; Williams v. Planter's Ins. Co., 57 Miss. 759; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 494; Carter v. Howe Machine Co., 51 Md. 290; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 311; National Bank v. Graham, 100 U. S. 699; Iron Mountain Bank v. Mercantile Bank, 4 Mo. App. 505; Edwards v. Midland R. Co., 2 B. Div. 43; L. T. 694; Cooley on Torts 121; Goodspeed v. East Haddam Bank, 22 Conn. 530 (decided by an evenly divided court); Pierce on Railroads 273; Denver etc. R. Co. v. Harris, 122 U. S. 597.

The leading case sustaining this view is that of Goodspeed v. East Haddam Bank, 22 Conn. 530, which, although decided by an evenly divided court, seems to have turned the tide in its direction. The argument of CHURCH, C. J., is as follows: "These institutions (corporations) have so multiplied and extended within a few years that they are connected with, and, in a great degree, influence all the business transactions of this country, and give tone and character, to some extent, to society itself. We do not complain of this, but we say that, as new relations from this cause are formed and new interests created, legal principles of a practical rather than of a technical or theoretical character must be applied. The views of the old lawyers regarding the real nature, power and responsibilities of corporations, to a great extent, are exploded in modern times, and it is believed that now these bodies are brought to the same civil liabilities as natural persons, so far as this can be done practically and consistently with their respective charters; and no good reason is discovered why this should not be so, or why it cannot be done in a case like this without violating any sensible or useful principle. But after all the objection to the remedy of this plaintiff against the bank in its corporate capacity is not so much that as a corporation it cannot be made responsible for torts committed by its directors, as that it cannot be subjected for that species of torts which essentially consist in motive and intention. The claim is, that as a corporation is ideal only, it cannot act from malice, and therefore cannot commence or prosecute a malicious or vexatious suit. This syllogism or reasoning might have been very satisfactory to the schoolmen of former days; more so, we think, than to the jurist who seeks to discover a reasonable and appropriate remedy for every wrong. To say that a corporation cannot have motives and act from motives, is to deny the evidence of our senses when we see them thus acting, and effecting thereby results of the greatest importance every day. And if they can have any motive they can have a bad one; they can intend to do evil as well as good. If the act done is a corporate one, so must the motive and intention be. In the present case, to say that the vexatious suit, as it is called, was instituted, prosecuted and subsequently sanctioned by the bank in the usual modes of its action, and still to claim that although the acts were those of the bank, the intention was only that of the individual directors, is a distinction too refined, we think, for practical application." And the corporation and its servant by whose act the injury was done may be joined in the action. Hussey v. Norfolk S. R. Co., 98 N. Car. 34; Gulf etc. R. Co. v. James (Tex.), 10 S. W. Rep. 744. See generally CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, pp. 250, 257.

2. A municipal corporation is liable for the acts of its agents injurious to others when the act is in its nature lawful and authorized, but is done in an unlawful manner or unauthorized place, but it is not liable for injurious and

4. Infants.—If one shall continue a prosecution brought by him while an infant, after he becomes of age he renders himself liable.¹ But an infant is not liable for the malicious prosecution of a suit during his infancy where it was brought in his name by his next friend and without his knowledge or authority, even though he expressly assented to the suit after he had knowledge of it.²

Neither is one liable who simply consents to the use of his name by a minor as his next friend in the prosecution of an action if such action was brought against his expectation and without his consent expressed or implied.³

5. Public Officers.—In the case of public officers who have been called upon to act officially, it would seem that they may be held liable in this action upon the same grounds as others. But malice and want of probable cause ought very clearly to appear in such case.

The presumptions being strongly in their favor;⁴ mere ignorance of the law or over persuasion by others not being sufficient.⁵

In an action against a district attorney and another for maliciously conspiring to have the plaintiff convicted on an indictment for perjury, it was held that the same cannot be maintained.⁶

A sheriff, however, is not liable for taking property under valid and regular writs of attachment, even though he knew that tortious acts which are in their nature unlawful or prohibited. In an action against a municipal corporation to recover damages for the malicious prosecution of a suit for taxes, the petition must contain facts sufficient to enable the court to determine whether or not the corporation had authority to levy, impose and collect the taxes involved in the suit, and it must also appear what the taxes were for and when or how imposed. If the municipal corporation had authority under the law and its valid ordinances to impose the taxes and authority to collect the same, its motives would be irrelevant and immaterial. Brown v. Cape Girardeau, 90 Mo. 377. See generally MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

1. Sterling v. Adams, 3 Day (Conn.) 411.

2. In an action to recover damages for an alleged malicious prosecution of a civil action against the plaintiff by defendant, while a minor, by his next friend, the answer set up minority as a defence. The jury found that the alleged malicious suit was commenced entirely without the knowledge or authority of the defendant, who was during its pendency an infant. It was prosecuted by the prochein ami, in theory at least receiving his appointment from the court and having sole control of the case, so long as he is allowed by the court to retain the place. The defendant had no power to prosecute or discontinue the suit during his minority. If the infant expressly assented to the suit after he had knowledge of it, yet he cannot become a trespasser by such assent, being liable only for his personal acts. The case of Sterling v. Adams, 3 Day (Conn.) 411, which bears some resemblance to this, differs in the fact that there the suit was prosecuted by the defendant after he became of age though commenced before. Burnham v. Seaverns, 101 Mass. 360; s. c., 100 Am. Dec. 123.

3. Soule v. Winslow, 66 Me. 447.

4. Muriel v. Tracy, 6 Mod. 170.

5. In Wheeler v. Nesbitt, 24 How. (U. S.) 544, where a justice of the peace was jointly sued with others for the malicious prosecution of the plaintiff, the case was decided for the defendants, but the question of the liability of the justice seems not to have been raised.

6. Parker v. Huntington, 2 Gray (Mass.) 124.

the plaintiff procuring the same had no cause of action and had taken out the writ with a malicious intent.¹

VI. PLEADING—1. Complaint.—The common law action for a malicious prosecution is case and not trespass.² Malice, want of probable cause and termination of former action in favor of the plaintiff being essential to the maintenance of this action, the complaint must aver that the proceeding complained of was malicious;³ that there was no probable cause therefor,⁴ and that

1. Rice v. Miller, 70 Tex. 613.

2. Chitty Pl. 136, 187; Plummer v. Dennett, 6 Greenl. (Me.) 421; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 316; Shaver v. White, 6 Munt' (Va.) 110; s. c., 8 Am. Dec. 730; Turner v. Walker, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 377; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 329; Mowry v. Miller, 3 Leigh (Va.) 561; s. c., 24 Am. Dec. 680; Lewin v. Uzuber, 65 Md. 341; Johnson v. Vonkettler, 84 Ill. 315. If the court in which the prosecution is made has no jurisdiction of the complaint, and the want of jurisdiction is the sole gravamen of the suit, trespass for false imprisonment is the proper action. If the prosecution be malicious and unfounded, and be instituted in a court having no jurisdiction, the party injured may sue either in case, making the malice and want of probable cause the gravamen of his complaint, or in trespass, founding his action on the want of jurisdiction in the court. If the court had jurisdiction, and the process was regular, trespass will not lie, however malicious the conduct of the defendant may have been in setting the prosecution on foot; and the only sustainable action under such circumstances is case for the malicious motive and want of probable cause in promoting the prosecution. Apgar v. Woolsto, 43 N. J. L. 57.

3. Hahn v. Schmidt, 64 Cal. 284; Thaule v. Krekeler, 81 N. Y. 428; Laird v. Taylor, 66 Barb. (N. Y.) 139; Fagan v. Knox, 66 N. Y. 525; Thompson v. Lumley, 50 How (U. S.) 50; Griffith v. Ogle, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 172.

The complaint, however, need not allege that the defendant falsely as well as maliciously and without probable cause made the accusation upon which the plaintiff was arrested and convicted. Zeigler v. Powell, 54 Ind. 172. But a complaint which fails to allege the falsity of the affidavit upon which the attachment complained of was issued, is sufficient as against an objection made at the trial that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Cochrane v. Quackenbush, 29 Minn. 376.

But a declaration alleging that the defendant, without reasonable or probable cause, falsely and maliciously caused and procured a writ of injunction to be issued, and falsely and maliciously caused the same to be served on the plaintiff, held bad on demurrer as not being sufficiently specific. Barry v. Salt Co., 14 Phila. (Pa.) 124. So where, in the complaint in an action for malicious prosecution, there are allegations of malice, want of probable cause and an unsuccessful prosecution, or allegations from which these material facts may be inferred, the complaint may be held good after verdict. Clegg v. Waterbury, 88 Ind. 21. Facts tending to show the defendant's motive, e. g. a malicious publication by him procured to be made concerning the prosecutor, are proper to be proven upon the trial as showing special injury. And such averments should not be stricken out on motion. Brockleman v. Brandt, 10 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 141. So if the municipal corporation had authority under the law and its valid ordinances to impose the taxes and authority to collect the same, its motives would be irrelevant and immaterial. Brown v. Cape Girardeau, 90 Mo. 377.

4. Turner v. Turner, 85 Tenn. 387; Hogg v. Pinckney, 16 S. Car. 387; Johnson v. Vonkettler, 84 Ill. 315; Moody v. Deutsch, 85 Mo. 237; Wall v. Toomey, 52 Conn. 35; King v. Montgomery, 50 Cal. 115; Wanser v. Wyckoff, 9 Hun (N. Y.) 178; Lavender v. Hudgens, 32 Ark. 763; Dennehey v. Woodsum, 100 Mass. 195; Scotten v. Longfellow, 40 Ind. 23.

But a statement of facts in narrative form, which if proved would necessarily establish want of probable cause is sufficient. Wall v. Toomey, 52 Conn. 35; Benson v. Bacon, 99 Ind. 156. It, however, is held that, in an action for malicious prosecution, the petition such proceeding had terminated in favor of the party bringing this action.¹ And must allege how it was ended.²

should state facts, and not the conclusion of the pleader upon the facts, and in an action against a municipal corporation to recover damages for the malicious prosecution of a suit for taxes, the petition must contain facts sufficient to enable the court to determine whether or not the corporation had authority to levy, impose and collect the taxes involved in the suit, and it must also appear what the taxes were for, and when and how imposed. Brown v. Cape Girardeau, 90 Mo. 377.

An allegation of the "falsity of the charge" is not equivalent to an allegation of "want of probable cause." Want of probable cause is the material allegation. Scotlen v. Longfellow, 40 Ind. 23. (see) Hays v. Blizzard, 30 Ind. 457. Neither is the averment "without just or probable cause" equivalent to an averment of "want of probable cause, but this objection must be raised in the trial court. Van De-Wiele v. Callanan, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 386. While a statement of the facts is a sufficient averment if probable cause appears therefrom, yet the proper allegation is the general one of want of probable cause. Benson v. Bacon, 99 Ind. 156. In an action to recover damages for the abuse of legal process it is unnecessary to allege or prove want of probable cause. Hazard v. Harding, 63 How (N. Y.) Pr. 326; Smith v. Smith, 20 Hun (N. Y.) 555.

1. Severence v. Judkins, 73 Me. 376; Lawler v. Levy, 33 La. An. 220; Rhoadabeck v. Blair Town Lot & Land Co., 62 Iowa 368; Johnson v. Finch, 93 N. Car. 205; Rothchild v. Meyer, 18 Ill. App. 284; McWilliams v. Hoban, 42 Md. 57; Fortman v. Rot-tier, 8 Ohio St. 548; Hall v. Fisher, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 441; Davis v. Clough, 8 N. H. 157; Heyward v. Cuthbert, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 354; Moulton v. Beecher, 1 Abb. (N. Y.) N. Cas. 193; Clark v. Cleveland, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 344; Woodworth v. Mills, 61 Wis. 44; O'Brien v. Barry, 106 Mass. 300; Swartwout v. Dickelman, 12 Hun (N. Y.) 358; Laird v. Taylor, 66 Barb. (N. Y.) 139; Foster v. Orr (Oreg.), 21 Pac. Rep. 440; Barrell v. Simonton, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 657; Garrison v. Pearce, 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 255; Merriman v. Morgan, 7 Oreg. 68. But omission is cured by verdict. Cardinal v. Smith, 109 Mass. 158.

A complaint in such action, averring that "on motion and request of the defendant, made in person, said affidavit, prosecution and charges were dismissed and plaintiff was not required to go to trial thereon," sufficiently shows that the prosecution has ended. Clegg v. Waterbury, 88 Ind. 21.

In an action to recover damages for the abuse of legal process it is necessary to allege or prove the termination of the prosecution. Bebinger v. Sweet, 1 Abb. (N. Y.) N. C. 263; s. c., 6 Hun (N. Y.) 478. While the plaintiff should allege in his complaint that the order of arrest had been vacated before the commencement of his action, it was not necessary that he should also allege that the action itself, in which the arrest was made, had been ended. Hogg v. Pinckney, 16 S. Car. 387. It is not sufficient to allege that the prosecuting officer has determined never to bring the indictment to trial for the reason that he deems the charge entirely unsupported. Grant v. Moore, 29 Cal. 644.

The allegation that plaintiff has been discharged is not an allegation of acquittal. Morgan v. Hughes, 2 T. R. 225; Bacon v. Townsend, 2 Code R. 51. Neither is it sufficient to aver that the prosecuting attorney declared the complaint frivolous and refused to try it. Thomason v. DeMotte, 9 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 242.

In an action by F against O for having maliciously caused the arrest of F in a civil action-brought against him by O, the proceedings connected with the arrest having been regular on their face, the failure of the complaint to show that the writ of arrest had been vacated or set aside by the court in the action in which it was issued is a fatal defect. And an allegation in the answer that the plaintiff after being arrested paid the defendant's demand on account of which he was arrested and the disbursements accrued in the proceedings against him, does not aid the complaint in respect to such defect, but on the contrary showed that the arrest was acquiesced in by the plaintiff; and the plaintiff not having denied in his reply the said allegation in the answer, held, that under the pleadings he had no cause of action. Foster v. Orr (Oreg.), 21 Pac. Rep. 440.

2. Coles v. Hanks, 3 T. B. Mon.

In an action against more than one, the allegation that "defendants contriving and maliciously intending to injure the plaintiff, falsely, maliciously and without probable cause procured him to be indicted for murder," sufficiently avers a joint liability on the part of the defendants,¹ and it is not necessary to aver previous combination in order to be permitted to prove such combination for a joint wrong done by two or more persons sued together.² But where the plaintiff expects to prove a fraudulent conspiracy, the same should be distinctly averred,³ although great latitude is allowed in setting out the particular acts from which such conspiracy is to be inferred.⁴ Facts should be stated and not conclusions.⁵

If it shall appear in the complaint that the former action terminated in a conviction, such complaint is demurrable unless such other facts be averred as will show that such conviction was obtained by means of the fraud of the defendant which prevented the plaintiff from setting up his defence in the former action. And in such case it is proper to plead matter showing the defendant's motive.⁶ The reversal of a case for error of law is no exception to this rule.

Where the plaintiff attached a copy of the indictment under which he was arrested he was not estopped thereby from showing the falsity of the statements contained therein.⁷ If the complaint charge malice and want of probable cause in filing the affidavit charging the plaintiff with a criminal offence, such allegations need not be repeated in connection with the averments relative to the issuance of the warrant, the arrest and imprisonment.⁸ A general allegation of damage warrants the recovery of all damage naturally resulting from the wrongful act. But in order to recover them the plaintiff must plead his special damages, setting out with particularity the causes which produced them.⁹

(Ky.) 208; Teague v. Wilkes, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 461.

1. Dreux v. Domec, 18 Cal. 83; but in Alabama it is held that the right of action is several and not joint; and hence, where three parties join as co-plaintiffs in such action, there is a misjoinder of parties plaintiff. McLeod v. McLeod, 73 Ala. 42.

2. Herron v. Hughes, 25 Cal. 560.

The damage is the gist of the action and not the conspiracy. Jenner v. Carson, 111 Ind. 522.

3. McHenry v. Hazard, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 657.

4. Mussina v. Clark, 17 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 188.

5. In an action for malicious prosecution the petition should state facts and not the conclusion of the pleader upon the facts. Brown v. Cape Girardeau, 90 Mo. 377; Dreux v. Domec, 18 Cal. 83.

6. Brockleman v. Brandt, 10 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 141; Miller v. Deere, 2 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 1; Phillips v. Kalamazoo, 53 Mich. 33.

7. Hampton v. Jones, 58 Iowa 317.

8. Ruston v. Bidde, 43 Ind. 515.

The law implies such damages and proof only is necessary to show their extent. Moehring v. Hall, 66 Tex. 240.

9. Stanfield v. Phillips, 78 Pa. St. 73; Donnell v. Jones, 13 Ala. 490; Miles v. Weston, 60 Ill. 361. As the kind of food that was furnished the plaintiff and the character of the prison in which he was confined and the treatment he received. Miles v. Weston, 60 Ill. 361. So the expenses of the plaintiff for costs and counsel fees in defending himself

2. Answer.—It is superfluous to set forth the facts showing probable cause, as the same may be shown under the general denial.¹ This being so, it is not error to sustain a demurrer to a special answer alleging the existence of probable cause.² And if the allegation of want of probable cause be denied, it is redundant to allege probable cause as a separate defence.³ The guilt of the plaintiff may also be shown under the general denial.⁴ The defendant may also show under the general denial that he acted in good faith upon the advice of competent counsel.⁵ But under a general denial the defendant will not be permitted to prove that plaintiff's reputation as a thief gave him reasonable grounds to suspect plaintiff of larceny.⁶ A plea that the action for malicious prosecution is itself malicious is not allowable.⁷

VII. PRACTICE.—Suits for malicious prosecution must be commenced in courts of general jurisdiction, unless otherwise specially provided, and where jurisdiction of the defendant can be personally acquired.⁸ And within the time limited by statute dating from the former action.⁹

must be specially alleged. Thompson v. Lumley, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 74; Strang v. Whitehead, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 64. And damages arising from the loss of boarders growing out of the party's arrest must be specially pleaded. Horne v. Sullivan, 83 Ill. 30.

But in an action for malicious prosecution the plaintiff cannot recover for a conversion of the goods attached in the original action. Burton v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 33 Minn. 189. But in New York where the statute gives the defendant a right to demand of the plaintiff a bill of particulars of his claim in gross, he may not demand a bill of particulars in an action for malicious prosecution where damages are alleged to plaintiff's credit and business. Lane v. Williams, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 388.

The plaintiff should allege specifically what actual and also what exemplary damages he claims, and if he fails to do so a special demurrer will be sustained, but a verdict cures. Moehring v. Hall, 66 Tex. 240.

1. Raddle v. Ruckgaber, 3 Duer (N. Y.) 684; Trogden v. Deckard, 45 Ind. 572; Benedict v. Seymour, 6 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 208. See contra, Brown v. Connelly, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 390; Scheer v. Keown, 34 Wis. 349; Wilson v. Ferrari, 1 Dis. 579. However, under a code providing that contradictory defences may be united if a general denial and a plea of justification, as for instance probable cause, are united, a verdict for the defendant on the general issue should be set aside, as the plea of justification admits the facts negatived by the verdict. Rigdon v. Jordan, 81 Ga. 668.

2. Trogden v. Deckard, 45 Ind. 572.

3. Rost v. Harris, 12 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 446.

4. Bruley v. Rose, 57 Iowa 651.

5. Folger v. Washburn, 137 Mass. 60; Griffin v. Chubb, 7 Tex. 603; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 85; Sparling v. Conway, 6 Mo. App. 283; Smith v. Davis, 3 Mont. 109; Levy v. Brannan, 39 Cal. 485; Hall v. Suydam, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 83; White v. Tucker, 16 Ohio St. 468; Wright v. Hanna, 98 Ind. 217. But an averment in the answer that the defendant acted upon the advice of counsel is insufficient to show probable cause and may be stricken out if there is not also an averment that such advice was upon a full presentation of the facts. Smith v. Davis, 3 Mont. 109.

6. Scheer v. Krown, 34 Wis. 349; Spear v. Hiles, 67 Wis. 350.

7. Noonan v. Orton, 30 Wis. 356.

8. Though in Texas it seems that such suits must be brought in the county where the process of law was unjustly and maliciously sued out. Hillard v. Wilson, 65 Tex. 286.

9. A variance between the day laid as the one on which plaintiff was acquitted and the day of his acquittal as shown by the record is not material if the declaration alleges that the acquittal took place before suit was brought. Mowry v. Miller, 3 Leigh (Va.) 561.

The burden of proof is upon the plaintiff, and he must show by competent evidence that the defendant had no probable cause for the prosecution.¹ Although it is held where the defendant pleads in detail the truth of the matters involved in the prosecution that he thereby assumes the burden of their proof.² The question of malice is one of fact for the jury.³ The law of implied malice has no application.⁴ While the jury may find the

1. Hurd v. Shaw, 20 Ill. 354; Jacks v. Stimpson, 13 Ill. 701; Richey v. McBean, 17 Ill. 63; Israel v. Brooks, 23 Ill. 526; Pangburn v. Bull, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 345; Sutton v. Anderson, 103 Pa. St. 151; McFarland v. Washburn, 14 Ill. App. 369; Jordan v. Ala. Great So. R. Co., 81 Ala. 220; Thaule v. Krekeler, 81 N. Y. 428; Workman v. Shelly, 79 Ind. 442; Lagaltee v. Blaisdell, 134 Mass. 473; Marks v. Townsend, 97 N. Y. 590.

To support an action for a malicious criminal prosecution the plaintiff must prove in the first place the fact of prosecution and that the defendant was himself the prosecutor or that he instigated its commencement and that it finally terminated in his acquittal. He must also prove that the charge preferred against him was unfounded and that it was made without reasonable or probable cause, and that the defendant in making or instigating it was actuated by malice. Proof of these several facts is indispensable to support the declaration; and clearly the burden of proof in the first instance is upon the plaintiff to make out his case, and if he fails to do so in any one of these particulars the defendant has no occasion to offer any evidence in his defence. Wheeler v. Nesbitt, 24 How. (U. S.) 544.

2. Morris v. Corson, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 281.

3. Wagstaff v. Schippel, 27 Kan. 450; Gee v. Culver, 12 Oreg. 228; Forbes v. Hagman, 75 Va. 168; Strickler v. Greer, 95 Ind. 596; Stansell v. Cleveland, 64 Tex. 660; Roy v. Goings, 112 Ill. 656; Hirschi v. Mettelman, 7 Ill. App. 112; Comsky v. Breen, 7 Ill. App. 369; Ventress v. Rosser, 73 Ga. 534; Oliver v. Pate, 43 Ind. 132; Anderson v. Keller, 67 Ga. 58; Center v. Spring, 2 Iowa 393; Newell v. Downs, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 523; Page v. Cushing, 38 Me. 523; Boyd v. Cross, 35 Md. 194; Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187; Hamilton v. Smith, 39 Mich. 222; Ritchey v. Davis, 11 Iowa 124; Von Latham v. Libby, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 339; Moody v. Dentsch, 85 Mo. 237; Holliday v. Sterling, 62

Mo. 321; Humphries v. Parker, 52 Me 502; Schofield v. Ferrers, 47 Pa. St. 194; Munns v. Dupont, 3 Wash. (C. C.) 37; Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187, 193.

But it is error to make the conduct of the jury under like circumstances a criterion as to whether defendant acted with malice and upon probable cause. Coleman v. Allen, 79 Ga. 637.

4. But the term "malice" has in law a twofold signification. There is what is known as "malice in law" or "implied malice" and "malice in fact" or "actual malice." "Malice in law" denotes a legal inference of malice from certain facts proved. It is a presumption of malice which the law raises from an act unlawful in itself which is injurious to another, and is declared by the court. "Malice in fact" or "actual malice" relates to the actual state or condition of the mind of the person who did the act, and is a question of fact, upon the circumstances of each particular case, to be found by the jury. In actions for malicious prosecutions there is no such thing as malice in law, but malice in fact must be proved, and its existence is purely a question of fact for the jury. Ritchey v. Davis, 11 Iowa 124.

But in this form of action malice is not considered in the sense of spite or hatred against an individual, but of malice animus, and as denoting that the party is actuated by improper and indirect motives. Mitchell v. Jenkins, 5 Barn. & Adol. 594.

To prove actual malice it is not necessary, therefore, that the prosecution complained of should proceed from hatred or ill will to the plaintiff, but it may be inferred from any improper and unjustifiable motive which the facts disclose influenced the conduct of the defendant in instituting the prosecution. "But it is well established," said LIBBEY, J., "that the plaintiff is not required to prove 'express malice,' in the popular signification of the term; as that defendant was prompted by malevolence, or acted from motives of ill will, resentment or hatred towards the plaintiff. It is sufficient if he proves it in its

fact of malice from the facts that establish want of probable cause,¹ enlarged sense. "In a legal sense, any act done wilfully and purposely, to the prejudice and injury of another, which is unlawful, is, as against that person, malicious." Com. v. Snelling, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 327.

"The malice necessary to be shown in order to maintain this action is not necessarily revenge, or other base and malignant passion. Whatever is done wilfully and purposely, if it be at the same time wrong and unlawful, and that known to the party, is, in legal contemplation, malicious." Willis v. Noves, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 324; Pullen v. Glidden, 66 Me. 202. See also Page v. Cushing, 38 Me. 523; Humphries v. Parker, 52 Me. 502; Mitchell v. Wall, 111 Mass. 492.

While it is true that express or actual malice refers or relates to the mental state or purpose of the party who committed the act, and its existence must be proved, the law does not require direct evidence of such mental state or purpose; but the character of the act itself with all its surrounding facts and circumstances, may be enquired into for the purpose of ascertaining the motive or purpose which influenced the mind of the party in committing the act; and if, upon a full consideration of these, that motive is found to be improper and unjustifiable, the law authorizes the jury to find it was malicious. If, for instance, an officer should arrest a party, not out of spite or any spirit of hatred or revenge, but for the purpose of increasing his fees, or magnifying his importance and administering to his vanity, the motive which prompted such conduct would be improper and wrongful, and, in a legal sense, malicious. In this form of action, therefore, malice has reference to the mind and judgment of the defendant in the particular act charged, and is one of intent, and open to the jury. Barron v. Mason, 31 Vt. 189. It is not the guilt of the prosecuted, but the intention of the prosecutor, which is the subject of examination in this action. McMahan v. Armstrong, 2 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 154. And what that intention was, whether malicious or justifiable, is for the jury, and not for the court, to infer from the facts and circumstances of the case. In a word, whether the defendant acted with malice is never a legal presumption, whatever may be the facts, but is always a question for the consideration of the jury.

Without proof of malice, an action for malicious prosecution cannot be maintained, nor does the law infer malice from the want of probable cause. Strickler v. Greer, 95 Ind. 596.

1. Malice is not inferred as a conclusion of law, but may be inferred as a fact from want of probable cause. It is for the jury to determine whether they will so infer it or not. Oliver v. Pati, 43 Ind. 132. Malice may be inferred from a total want of probable cause, and the inference arising from a total want of probable cause may be rebutted by proof. This want is a question for the jury. Ventreux v. Rosser, 73 Ga. 534. Malice is not implied from an unfounded prosecution, but it may be inferred from a want of probable cause for it. Carson v. Edgeworth, 43 Mich. 241; Dietz v. Langfitt, 63 Pa. St. 234. Malice may be inferred from want of probable cause for arrest of debtor, and need not be otherwise proved though the presumption is subject to rebuttal. Block v. Meyers, 33 La. An. 776.

The malice necessary to be shown can be inferred from want of probable cause. Hogg v. Pinckney, 16 S. Car. 387; Caldwell v. Bennett, 22 S. Car. 1; Murphy v. Hobbs, 7 Colo. 541; Carson v. Edgeworth, 43 Mich. 241; Strans v. Young, 36 Md. 246; Brown v. Willoughby, 5 Colo. 1; Wood v. Weir, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 544; Mowry v. Whipple, 8 R. I. 360; Levy v. Brannan, 39 Cal. 485; Pullen v. Glidden, 66 Me. 202; Paddock v. Watts, 116 Ind. 146; Pennsylvania Co. v. Weddle, 100 Ind. 138; Crawford v. Ryan (Pa. St.), 7 Atl. Rep. 745. This inference, however, is one of fact, and not of law. Greer v. Whitfield, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 85. In an action for malicious prosecution, malice cannot be inferred from want of probable cause, but it may be inferred from the same facts which go to establish want of probable cause. Sharpe v. Johnston, 76 Mo. 660.

In an action for malicious prosecution, the jury may infer malice from the want of probable cause; and where there is evidence from which it could be found that the prosecution was instituted without probable cause, the verdict will not, on the evidence, be disturbed on appeal. Heap v. Parrish, 104 Ind. 36. In an action for malicious they cannot find malice if probable cause exists.¹ It is, therefore, error to instruct the jury that they must find malice if they fail to find probable cause.² There seems to be one exception to the rule that malice cannot be implied, viz., where criminal prosecutions are instituted not to vindicate the law and punish crime but to coerce the payment of a debt or restitution of property; in such case the law conclusively implies malice.³ This exception, after all, is seeming rather than real, as it is the absolute want of probable cause and the use of the criminal law for an unauthorized purpose that impels the belief that there was malice. The jury, however, are never warranted in finding want of probable cause from the existence of even express malice.⁴ If the facts are undisputed, then the question of probable cause is one of law for the court.⁵ If the facts are disputed the jury prosecution, when all the facts and circumstances proven show a want of probable cause for the arrest and imprisonment of the plaintiff on a charge of crime, the jury may take this fact into consideration, and from it infer malice, not as a matter of law, but as a conclusion of fact. Roy v. Goings, 112 Ill. 656. Malice may be inferred by the jury from the want of probable cause. It is no inference of law, but can be repelled by facts and circumstances indicating a fair and legitimate purpose, and an honest pursuit of a claim believed to be just. Stansell v. Cleveland, 64 Tex. 66. In this action malice may be inferred from want of probable cause, though it is said it is not a necessary inference. It is always a question for the jury under all the circumstances of the case. Forbes v. Hagman, 75 Va. 168.

Whether malice exists or not is a pure question of fact for the jury, and should not be passed upon by the court, except to define to the jury clearly what is meant by malice. Whether particular facts admitted, undisputed or assumed, do or do not constitute malice, or are such that malice may be inferred from, is a mere question of fact for the jury. The court can draw no inference from any state of facts that malice does or does not exist. Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1. Malice may be inferred from the total want of probable cause, and the fact that the defendant is an upright and honest man, incapable of swearing falsely, is not inconsistent with malice. Decoux v. Lieux, 33 La. An. 392.

1. Kaufman v. Wicks, 62 Tex. 234.

2. Ritchey v. Davis, 11 Iowa 124; Schofield v. Ferrers, 47 Pa. St. 194.

3. Ross v. Langworthy, 13 Neb. 492; Brooks v. Warwick, 2 Stark 393; McDonald v. Rook, 2 Bing. (N. Car.) 219. That evil quality of the heart which prompts a man to make a false charge against another for the purpose of private gain or advantage is legal malice. Kimball v. Bates, 50 Me. 308. If a criminal prosecution is instituted for some collateral purpose and as a means of coercing another to surrender some right or claim which he makes regardless of whether or not the person against whom it is commenced has committed a criminal offence, the prosecution so begun is without probable cause. Peden v. Mail, Ind. March 1889; Paddock v. Watts, 116 Ind. 146; Kimball v. Bates, 50 Me. 308.

4. Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187; Ross v. Innis, 35 Ill. 487; s. c., 85 Am. Dec. 373; Griffin v. Chubb, 7 Tex. 603; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 85; Mitchinson v. Cross, 58 Ill. 366; Wade v. Walden, 23 Ill. 425; Center v. Spring, 2 Iowa 393; Israel v. Brooks, 23 Ill. 526; Grant v. Moore, 29 Cal. 644; Pangburn v. Bull, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 343; Sharpe v. Johnston, 76 Mo. 660; Jordan v. Ala. Great So. R. Co., 81 Ala. 220; Vantrees v. Rosser, 73 Ga. 534.

A man, from a malicious motive, may take up a prosecution for real guilt, or he may, from circumstances which he really believes, proceed upon apparent guilt; in neither case is he liable to this kind of action. Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 544. So an instruction that if the prosecution alleged was not set on foot for a public purpose, then there was no probable cause, is erroneous. Benson v. Bacon, 99 Ind. 156.

5. Ramsey v. Arrott, 64 Tex. 320; Burton v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 33 must find the same specially or render a general verdict under proper instructions from the court.¹ In the sense that it is the Minn. 189; Johns v. Marsh, 52 Md. 323; Moore v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 37 Minn. 147; Pauton v. Williams, 2 Ad. & El. (N. S.) 169; Turner v. Ambler, 10 Ad. & El. (N. S.) 252; Israel v. Brooks, 23 Ill. 526; Grant v. Moore, 29 Cal. 644; Stevens v. Fassett, 27 Me. 266; Marks v. Gray, 27 Me. 266; Besson v. Southard, 10 N. Y. 240; Ash v. Marlow, 20 Ohio 119; Parli v. Reed, 30 Kan. 534; Eastin v. Stockton Bank, 66 Cal. 123; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 77; Fulton v. Ouesti, 66 Cal. 575; Lytton v. Baird, 95 Ind. 349; McNulty v. Walker, 64 Miss. 198; Lacy v. Mitchell, 23 Ind. 67; Cloon v. Garry, 13 Gray (Mass.) 201; Masten v. Deyo, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 424; Von Latham v. Libby, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 339; Page v. Cushing, 38 Me. 523; Laughlin v. Clawson, 27 Pa. St. 328; Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. Rep. 217; Sartwell v. Parker, 141 Mass. 405; Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187.

The courts have not wholly agreed upon the application of this rule, especially where the facts are many and complicated. TINDAL, C. J., says: "Such being the rule of law, where the facts are few and the case simple, we cannot hold it to be otherwise where the facts are more numerous and complicated. It is undoubtedly attended with greater difficulty in the latter case, to bring before the jury all the combinations of which numerous facts are susceptible, and to place in, distinct point of view the application of the rule of law, according as all or some only of the facts and inferences from facts are made out to their satisfaction. But it is equally certain that the task is not impracticable; and it rarely happens but that there are some leading facts in each case which present a broad distinction to their view, without having recourse to the less important circumstances that have been brought before them. Pantoq v. Williams, 2 Ald. & El. (N. S.) 169.

The question of probable cause is primarily one for the court, but if the facts tending to establish the existence or want of probable cause are in dispute, then it is a question for the jury; in which case it is the duty of the court to submit the evidence to the jury with instructions to determine its credibility, and that the facts amount to probable cause, or that they do not. Atchison etc.

R. Co. v. Watson, 37 Kan. 773; Bell v. Matthews, 37 Kan. 686. On the other hand, it is held that the law does not, and could not, prescribe a definite rule as to what particular facts shall constitute this reasonable ground of belief. The only rule which it can or does prescribe is, that the facts in each particular case must be such as would reasonably produce such belief in the minds of ordinary men, but in such case it is for the jury to say, not only what specific facts are established, but to determine their effect as a fact within the rule mentioned, and only upon such finding does the law pronounce its conclusion. Cochran v. Toher, 14 Minn. 385. So it is held that, at least under some circumstances, it is a question to be submitted to the jury. Anderson v. Keller, 67 Ga. 58. The want of probable cause is a question of fact for the jury. Heldt v. Webster, 60 Tex. 207. And if the facts on the question of probable cause are undisputed, their legal sufficiency should be submitted to the jury without any hypothetical instructions. Medcalf v. Brooklyn Ins. Co., 45 Md. 198.

1. If conflicting testimony is to be weighed, or if the credibility of witnesses is to be passed upon, the question of probable cause should go to the jury with proper instructions as to the law. But where there is no dispute about the facts it is the duty of the court on the trial to apply the law to them. Besson v. Southard, 10 N. Y. 236. In an action for malicious prosecution probable cause is a mixed question of law and fact, in the sense that the jury are to determine the facts and the court to decide whether or not they constitute probable cause. Walbridge v. Pruden, 102 Pa. St. 1. It is error to leave the jury to determine whether the facts do or do not establish the want of probable cause. Emerson v. Skaggs, 52 Cal. 246. What facts exist in a particular case where there is a dispute in reference to them is a question exclusively for the jury. Burton v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 33 Minn. 189. But it is for the court to determine whether upon the facts found probable cause for the prosecution did or did not exist. Coleman v. Henrich, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 189. In actions for malicious prosecution, the jury should be instructed, as matter of law, as to what constitutes probable cause, and then it is for them to say, from a review of all the facts, and circumstances proved to have been present to the mind of the prosecutor, at the time he commenced his prosecution, or the plaintiff, when he instituted his civil action, whether there was or was not probable cause for such a proceeding. Caldwell v. Bennett, 22 S. Car. 1.

The question as to what amounts to probable cause is one of law in a very important sense.¹ It is, therefore, generally the duty of the court, where evidence has been given to prove or disprove the existence of probable cause, to submit to the jury its credibility and what facts it proves, with instructions that the facts found amount to probable cause, or that they do not. What was the defendant's belief is, however, always a question for the jury. Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187. Where the evidence is conflicting the court properly charged that if the facts were as testified to by plaintiff, stating them, there was no probable cause; but if the facts were as stated by witness for defendant, stating them, there was probable cause. Acker v. Gundy (Pa.), 12 Atl. Rep. 595.

While the jury are required to find whether the facts alleged in support of the presence or absence of probable cause, and the inferences to be derived therefrom, really exist, it is for the court to determine whether, upon the facts so found, there be probable cause, or the want of it. Jones v. Marsh, 52 Ind. 323. And it is error for the court to leave the jury to determine whether certain facts did exist, and if so, whether they justified the defendant. Bulkley v. Smith, 2 Duer (N. Y.) 704.

Where there is a substantial dispute about the facts constituting the existence or want of probable cause, it is for the jury to determine what facts are proved, and for the court to say whether or not they amount to probable cause. It is, therefore, generally the duty of the court in such a case, when evidence is given to disprove the existence of probable cause, to submit to the jury its credibility and what facts it proves, with instructions that the facts found amount to proof of probable cause, or that they do not. The court should group the facts in the instructions which the evidence tends to prove, and then instruct the jury that if they find such facts have been established, they must find that there was or was not probable cause. Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Watson, 37 Kan. 773; Sweeney v. Perney, 40 Kan. 102; Johnson v. Miller, 69 Iowa 562; Shaul v. Brown, 28 Iowa 37; Gee v. Culver, 12 Oreg. 228. This rule must not be made a pretext by which a question, primarily for the court, is transferred to the jury. There must be a substantial dispute about the existence of probable cause before it can properly go to the jury; and if about the facts that are claimed to prove or disprove probable cause there can fairly be said to be a dispute, a conflict of testimony, irreconcilable statements of witnesses, a strong flavor of improbability, then the jury are the sole judges of these as of every other material fact in the case; but if the evidence on this question, fairly considered and impartially weighed, produces on the mind of the court a reasonable conviction of the existence or want of probable cause, then it is the clear duty of the court to instruct the jury accordingly. The dispute must be of such character as to compel the court to weigh evidence, and determine the credibility of witnesses before it ceases to be a question of law for the court and becomes an issue of fact for the jury. Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Watson, 37 Kan. 773.

It is often said in the books that, in actions for malicious prosecution, the question whether there was probable cause for instituting the prosecution is a question of law for the court. This proposition does not mean that it is the province of the court to decide upon conflicting evidence whether there was or was not such probable cause, but that, where the evidence is not conflicting, or where the facts are conceded, it is the province of the court to tell the jury whether the facts do or do not afford such probable cause. Whereas, in this case the evidence as to the facts is conflicting, it is the duty of the court to tell the jury whether the hypothetical state of facts which the evidence of each party tends to prove does or does not, if found by them to exist, afford such probable cause. As a general rule, it is error for the court, in instructing the jury, to submit a question of law to them for determination; and hence, in an action for malicious prosecution, it is error for the court to submit to the jury, generally, the question whether there was or was not probable jury's province to find the facts and the court's to say whether or not those ascertained or admitted facts constitute probable cause, it is frequently said that probable cause is a mixed question of law and facts.¹ It would seem, therefore, that the better practice would be to set out the facts relied upon to show want of probable cause in the complaint, that their sufficiency might be tested by demurrer.² And if, upon the trial, the undisputed evidence of the plaintiff fails as a matter of law to show want of probable cause, the court should direct a verdict for the defendant.³ An action for malicious prosecution must abate if it appear that a prior action is pending for the same cause of action, even though it also appear that such former action was prematurely brought because commenced before the prosecution complained of had terminated.⁴

VIII. DEFENCES—1. Generally.—It is a good defence to the action of malicious prosecution if the defendant show either that he neither was the prosecutor nor instigated the prosecution.⁵

cause for the prosecution. Meysenberg v. Engelke, 18 Mo. App. 346; Driggs v. Barton, 44 Vt. 124. To the same effect Cloon v. Gerry, 13 Gray (Mass.) 201; Kidder v. Parkhurst, 3 Allen (Mass.) 393; Ulmer v. Leland, 1 Me. 135; Stone v. Crocker, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 81; Comms. v. Clark, 94 U. S. 278; Hill v. Palm, 38 Mo. 13; Vantrees v. Rosser, 73 Ga. 534.

1. The question of probable cause is a mixed proposition of law and fact. Whether the circumstances alleged to show it probable or not probable are true and existed is a matter of fact, but whether, supposing them to be true, they amount to a probable cause is a question of law. LORD MANSFIELD in Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 545; Humphries v. Parker, 52 Me. 502; Ash v. Marlow, 20 Ohio 119; Ramsey v. Arrott, 64 Tex. 320; Moody v. Deutsch, 85 Mo. 237; Lytton v. Baird, 95 Ind. 349; Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187; Heyne v. Blair, 62 N. Y. 19; Moore v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 37 Minn. 147; Sartwell v. Parker, 141 Mass. 405; McNulty v. Walker, 64 Miss. 198; Glassgow v. Owen, 69 Tex. 167; Munns v. Dupont, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 31.

2. Brown v. Connelly, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 390; Morris v. Corson, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 281.

3. Grant v. Moore, 29 Cal. 644.

4. Foster v. Napier, 73 Ala. 593.

5. Wheeler v. Nesbitt, 24 How. (U. S.) 544. One is not liable for stating facts going to show an offence has been committed if he makes no request for the arrest. Larke v. Bande, 4 Mo. App. 186. A caused B's arrest upon a warrant for larceny. The justice of his own motion changed the charge to one of disorderly conduct and fined and committed B. Held, that A was not liable for anything done after the charge had been changed. Frankfurter v. Bryan, 12 Ill. App. 549.

One who makes before a committing magistrate an affidavit of facts conceded to be true, which the magistrate erroneously believes constitute a crime, and issues a warrant of arrest accordingly, is not liable in damages to the person arrested. Hahn v. Schmidt, 64 Cal. 284. Defendant called plaintiff a thief and liar and a justice of the peace thinking a crime was charged caused the arrest of the plaintiff. Held, the defendant was not liable for the mistake of the justice. Newman v. Davis, 58 Iowa 447. But where a party files a complaint upon which he causes the arrest of another for an alleged crime, it is no defence to an action for malicious prosecution that the complaint was technically defective; so long as it was treated by the justice and officer as sufficient, and the defendant was in fact arrested thereon, the party filing it is estopped from questioning its sufficiency. Parli v. Reed, 30 Kan. 534.

So if the defendant acted without probable cause it is no defence that the person who, at the defendant's instigation, made the complaint had probable cause for believing it to be well founded.

That the prosecution is not terminated or that it terminated in the conviction of plaintiff¹ (with exceptions hereinbefore noted). That the charge preferred against the plaintiff was well founded.² That it was made with probable cause³—

Woodworth v. Mills, 61 Wis. 44. And it is no defence that the arrest was made on an alias warrant instead of the original, it being the duty of the officer to issue such alias upon the return of the original not executed. McLeod v. McLeod, 75 Ala. 483.

1. See III, 1, c.

2. The guilt of plaintiff is a good defence even though the same was not known to the defendant at the time. Adams v. Lisher, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 241; s. c., 25 Am. Dec. 102; Ulmer v. Leland, 1 Greenl. (Me.) 135; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 48; Plummer v. Gheen, 3 Hawks. (N. Car.) 66; s. c., 14 Am. Dec. 572.

The action for malicious prosecution is given in favor of an innocent plaintiff, not of a guilty one. Hence, when A brought trover against B and B after a verdict in his favor sued A for malicious prosecution, held, that evidence of facts tending to show B's guilt, which facts were not known to A when he brought the action of trover, although inadmissible to show probable cause on the part of A, should be admitted as bearing on the actual guilt of B.

In the suit for malicious prosecution A requested the presiding judge to charge the jury that if in the action of trover the question of fact whether B had been guilty of acts amounting to trover and conversion was submitted to the jury and deliberated upon, then a verdict for the defendant should be given in the suit for malicious prosecution. Held, that this request was properly refused. Newton v. Weaver, 13 R. I. 616.

In an action for malicious prosecution, if the defendant can satisfy the jury that the plaintiff, notwithstanding his acquittal, was in fact guilty, no recovery can be had. Parkhurst v. Masteller, 57 Iowa 474.

In an action for malicious prosecution the defendant may show the guilt of the plaintiff, under the general issue, especially when the guilt consisted of facts known to the prosecutor at the time; and where there was evidence from which the jury might have believed the plaintiff was guilty, though discharged by the examining magistrate, and instruction that the plaintiff was not guilty of the crime charged was erroneous. Bruley v. Rose, 57 Iowa 651. And in a case where the defence was that by mistake of the magistrate in drawing the affidavit the defendant was made to charge a different crime from that intended; the defendant may prove that the crime intended to be charged was true according to his belief. O'Brien v. Frasier, 47 N. J. L., 347; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 170.

3. In suit for malicious prosecution it is not necessary that the prosecutor should have had actual knowledge that the crime charged had been committed. Nor is it essential that he should have known the facts and circumstances upon which he predicated his belief. He may act upon credible information or deceptive appearances of guilt, if he acts in good faith. And if in such case defendant can show that he had probable cause for his conduct in instituting the prosecution he is not liable. Brown v. Willoughby, 5 Colo. 1. One is not liable for malicious prosecution if there was probable cause for the prosecution and arrest instituted by him although he was actuated by feelings of hatred and revenge. Leyenberger v. Paul, 12 Ill. App. 635. An action for malicious prosecution is not maintainable where probable cause is shown irrespective of the motive of the prosecutor. Mysenberg v. Engelke, 18 Mo. App. 346. The action cannot be maintained even though expressed malice be shown if the defendant had good reason to believe and did believe that the plaintiff committed the offence charged. Murphy v. Martin, 58 Wis. 276. If the belief in the party's guilt is induced by facts and circumstances sufficient to cause a suspicion of guilt in the mind of a reasonably cautious person it is a justification for commencing a criminal prosecution. Angelo v. Paul, 85 Ill. 106; Anderson v. Friend, 85 Ill. 135. But in order to justify himself a defendant must have acted upon all the facts within his knowledge; he cannot justify the prosecution by putting forth the prima facie circumstances of guilt and excluding those within his knowledge tending to prove innocence. Fagnan v. Knox, 66 N. Y. 525. Neither is the mere fact that defendant had honestly suspected or believed the plaintiff to be guilty of the crime for which he had caused the latter to be prosecuted, a defence. Graeter v. Williams, 55 Ind. 461.

That it was made without malice.¹

2. Advice of Counsel.—It is stated broadly, in many cases, that a plaintiff who, after consulting counsel in good standing and fully disclosing the facts of his case within his knowledge, acts upon the advice of such counsel, is not liable in a suit for malicious prosecution for bringing such action.² This is so because it dis-

And it is no defence that the information on which plaintiff was arrested contained an accusation for which probable cause may have existed with groundless charges, even though plaintiff is unable to adjust the damages between the two. Boogher v. Bryant, 86 Mo. 42.

1. If the defendant in the action for malicious prosecution was not the prosecutor in fact, and is sought to be made so by construction for having given false information, which led to a subsequent arrest, the motive is material and proof that the information was given in good faith is a defence to the action. Farnham v. Feeley, 56 N. Y. 451.

And in any case, although the defendant is unable to justify by proof of probable cause, he may still rebut the presumption of malice by showing facts and circumstances calculated to produce at the time on the mind of a reasonable and prudent man a well grounded belief or suspicion of the guilt of the person accused. Harpham v. Whitney, 77 Ill. 32.

2. Professors of law are proper advisers of men in doubtful circumstances, and their advice when fairly obtained exempts the party who acts upon it from the imputation of proceeding maliciously and without probable cause. It may be erroneous but the client is not responsible for the error. He is not the insurer of his lawyer. Where the fact of probable cause is in the very question submitted to counsel in such cases, and when the client is instructed that there is probable cause he has taken all the precaution demanded of a good citizen. To manifest the good faith of the party it is important that he resort to a professional adviser of competency and integrity. He is not, in the language of JUDGE ROYES, "to make such resort a mere cover for the prosecution, but when he has done his whole duty in the premises he is not to be made liable because the facts did not clearly warrant the advice and prosecution.

Suppression, evasions or falsehood would make him liable; but if fairly submitted and if the advice obtained was followed in good faith he has a defence to the action." Walter v. Sample, 25 Pa. St. 275; Burmis v. North, 64 Mo. 426; Ames v. Rathbun, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 194; Fisher v. Forrester, 33 Pa. St. 501; Potter v. Seale, 8 Cal. 217; Thelin v. Dorsey, 59 Md. 539; Sharpe v. Johnston, 59 Mo. 557; Ross v. Innis, 35 Ill. 487; s. c., 85 Am. Dec. 373; Alexander v. Harrison, 38 Mo. 258; s. c., 90 Am. Dec. 431; Moore v. No. Pac. R. Co., 37 Minn. 147; Gilbertson v. Fuller, 40 Minn. 413; Blunt v. Little, 3 Mason (U. S.) 102; Stone v. Swift, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 393; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 349; Wills v. Noyes, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 327; Wilder v. Holden, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 8; Newton v. Weaver, 13 R. I. 616; Jordan v. Ala. Great So. R. Co., 81 Ala. 220; Smith v. Austin, 49 Mich. 286; Anderson v. Friend, 71 Ill. 475; Wicker v. Hotchkiss, 62 Ill. 107; s. c., 14 Am. Rep. 75; Stanton v. Hart, 27 Mich. 539; Ricord v. Central Pac. R. Co., 15 Nev. 167; White v. Carr, 71 Me. 555; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 353; Découx v. Lieux, 33 La. An. 392; Clark v. Baldwin, 25 Kan. 120; Davie v. Wisher, 72 Ill. 262; Ash v. Marlow, 20 Ohio 119; Eastman v. Keasor, 44 N. H. 519; Hill v. Palm, 38 Mo. 13.

A party, in order to shield himself from a prosecution for an alleged malicious arrest, etc., by the advice of counsel, must make a full statement of all the material facts to the attorney advising him. The person seeking such advice will not be protected if he makes a garbled statement of the facts and circumstances bearing upon the question of the guilt or innocence of the person proposed to be arrested. In this case, a mortgagee of crops grown by him, before the maturity of the debt, gathered a load of beans from the land on which they were grown, and took them to his residence, about two miles distant, to thresh them. The mortgagee, on learning this, posted notices for a foreclosure of the mortgage, and forbade the mortgageor from removing any more of the crops, and threatened to have him arrested if he did. The latter, claiming he had the right to gather the beans, and denying the mortgagee's right to foreclose, gathered another load of beans, in open day, under claim of right, when the mortgagee had him arrested and imprisoned on a charge of larceny. In an action for malicious prosecution, by the mortgageor, against the mortgagee, the latter sought to justify under the advice of the State's attorney: Held, that he should have disclosed to the attorney, whose advice he sought, that the plaintiff took the property openly, in daylight, as any one would his own property, and that plaintiff had insisted that the mortgagee had no right to foreclose, and that he had claimed the right to gather and preserve the beans, in order to protect himself, as he had been advised he might do. Roy v. Goings, 112 Ill. 656.

It is true that a party in some cases may act on the advice of counsel bona fide sought and obtained, without incurring liability for damages as for a tort, even though the counsel may have been mistaken in the law. But to justify him, something more than the mere advice must be made to appear. The facts must be shown on which the advice was given; and it must be a full, correct and honest statement by the defendants of all the material facts known to them, without reference to their understanding of the case. Forbes v. Hagman, 75 Va. 168.

Where it does not appear by a preponderance of the evidence that defendant before commencing the prosecution truly, fully, fairly, and in good faith, stated to counsel all of the facts of the case known to him, or which with reasonable diligence he could ascertain or discover, and was afterward unconditionally advised by such counsel to institute such prosecution and that defendant instituted the same in good faith and without malice, believing plaintiff to be guilty of the offence charged, plaintiff may recover. Manning v. Finn, 23 Neb. 511. But contra the defendant may set up this defence although he did not submit to his counsel facts which he might have ascertained by reasonable diligence. Johnson v. Miller, 69 Iowa 562. But the fact that defendant acted upon the advice of counsel is not in itself a defence, but is a circumstance to be considered by the jury. Hobb v. Pinckney, 16 S. Car. 387; Jacobs v. Crum, 62 Tex. 411; Ramsey v. Arrott, 64 Tex. 322; Glasgow v. Owen, 69 Tex. 167; Fox v. Davis, 55 Ga. 208 (the last case was so decided because of the provision of the code). If a person has consulted counsel who has advised prosecution, but nevertheless the client believes it will fail and is actuated by angry feelings he cannot excuse himself. Sharpe v. Johnson, 76 Mo. 660.

A sued B for a malicious prosecution; it was held that it was for the jury to say whether the fact that the attorney under whose advice B acted was also his attorney in a civil action against A, to recover the money charged to have been embezzled made the attorney an improper adviser. Watt v. Corey, 76 Me. 87.

And when a person desirous of bringing an action against another goes to an attorney at law for counsel, and the attorney is directly interested in the subject matter of the suit, and this interest is known to the client, if he takes the opinion of the attorney, so interested, that he has good cause of action, and acts upon it, and it turns out to be erroneous, in an action for malicious prosecution such opinion will not be sufficient to show probable cause though honestly given by the attorney. White v. Carr, 71 Me. 555; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 353.

Where the proof showed that the criminal prosecution was instituted on the advice of the State's attorney, and also that such attorney was habitually intemperate, the jury were instructed that to entitle the defendant to protect himself on the advice of an attorney, he must have communicated the facts within his knowledge, etc., to a respectable attorney in good standing, and have acted in good faith on his advice. Held, there was no error in the instructions in requiring the communication to have been made to an attorney in good standing, this court not being prepared to hold an attorney is in good standing merely because of his holding a commission as State's attorney. Roy v. Goings, 112 Ill. 656. It seems, too, that the advice must have been given honestly and in good faith by the attorney. Sherburne v. Rodman, 51 Wis. 474; Plath v. Braunsdorff, 40 Wis. 107. To make the advice of counsel a defence to such action, it is not necessary that the prosecutor should have made a full and fair proves malice and shows probable cause.¹ A plaintiff is held disclosure of all the facts in the case, but only of all the facts known to him, or which he could have ascertained by reasonable diligence. Motes v. Bates, 80 Ala. 382. And action cannot be maintained if complainant, after fully and fairly disclosing to the prosecuting officer everything within his knowledge which would tend to cause or to exclude belief in plaintiff's criminality, left him to determine on his sole responsibility whether the proceeding should be instituted, even though the case were not a proper one for prosecution. Smith v. Austin, 49 Mich. 286. And defendant acting upon the advice of a licenced attorney need not show that he was learned in his profession. Horne v. Sullivan, 83 Ill. 30; or that the facts stated to him warranted the opinion given bona fide. Walter v. Sample, 25 Pa. St. 275. But the facts upon which the opinion is founded are admissible to show the good faith of the defendant. Cooper v. Utterback, 37 Md. 282; Watt v. Corey, 76 Me. 87; Peck v. Chouteau, 91 Mo. 14b.

He must, however, show good faith in the selection of counsel and the counsel selected must be a regularly licenced attorney and counsellor reputable in character and considered in the community competent to give legal advice on all matters pertaining to the law. Murphy v. Larson, 77 Ill. 172. And all the facts known to the defendant relative to the case must have been stated. Donnelly v. Daggett, 145 Mass. 314; Paddock v. Watts, 116 Ind. 146. But the advice of a lawyer who is a pettifogger is not a defence. Stanton v. Hart, 27 Mich. 539.

It is sufficient to rebut the inference of malice, arising from the want of probable cause, that an honest statement of the facts were submitted to an attorney at law, who advised that they were sufficient to sustain an action and that the action was brought on that advice. Emerson v. Cochran, 111 Pa. St. 619; Brewer v. Jacob, 22 Fed. Rep. 217.

That defendant acted under advice of counsel is competent to show want of malice, though not conclusive. Lemay v. Williams, 32 Ark. 116; Gulf etc. R. Co. v. James (Tex.), 10 S. W. Rep. 744. And if the jury can see from all the facts that the suit was malicious notwithstanding the advice of counsel, that fact affords no protection. Brewer v. Jacob, 22 Fed. Rep. 217; Davenport v. Lynch, 6 Jones Law (N. Car.) 545; Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1; Sharpe v. Johnston, 76 Mo. 660. Evidence of the advice of a deputy prosecuting attorney to commence a prosecution is competent as tending to rebut malice. Wright v. Hanna, 98 Ind. 217. Evidence that an action was begun and carried on in good faith and in consequence of the advice of competent counsel upon all the facts in the prosecutor's knowledge, and all which he might by reasonable diligence have learned, is competent to rebut the presumption of malice arising from the want of probable cause; but it does not tend to establish the existence of probable cause, and is not admissible on that ground. Sparlinger v. Conway, 12 Mo. App. 510.

1. Ricord v. Central Pac. R. Co., 15 Nev. 167; White v. Carr, 71 Me. 555; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 353. The fact that the defendant sought, received and acted upon the advice of counsel affords strong evidence that there was probable cause and that the prosecution was entered into in good faith and without malice. Skidmore v. Bricker, 77 Ill. 164; Murphy v. Larson, 77 Ill. 172.

The following authorities hold that the advice of counsel upon which the defendant acted is evidence both of absence of malice and of probable cause. Wilkinson v. Arnold, 11 Ind. 45; Galloway v. Stewart, 49 Ind. 156; Gould v. Gardiner, 8 La. An. 12; Phillips v. Bonham, 16 La. An. 387; Bartlett v. Brown, 6 R. I. 37; Newton v. Weaver, 13 R. I. 616; Soule v. Winslow, 66 Me. 447; Emerson v. Cochran, 111 Pa. St. 619; Wilder v. Hulden, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 8; Stanton v. Hart, 27 Mich. 539; Lemay v. Williams, 32 Ark. 166; Chandler v. McPherson, 11 Ala. 916; Ames v. Rathbun, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 194; Smith v. Walter (Pa. St.), 17 Atl. Rep. 466.

It is a good defence that the defendant, before commencing the alleged malicious prosecution, it being a criminal prosecution, presented the matter to the county attorney fairly stating to him all the facts and then in good faith following the advice of the county attorney. Such a thing completely rebuts the allegation of the plaintiff that there was a want of probable cause for commencing the prosecution, and of itself shows probable cause. Schippel v. Norton, 38 Kan. 567; Ross v. Innis, 35 Ill. 487; s. c., 85 Am. Dec. 373; Richardson v. Virtue, 47 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 441.

to know all such facts as he could by proper diligence have ascertained.¹

The advice of counsel must have been sought and followed in good faith and not as a subterfuge.²

1. Jordon v. Ala. Great So. R. Co., 81 Ala. 220; Anderson v. Friend, 71 Ill. 475; Wicker v. Hotchkiss, 62 Ill. 107; Pipkin v. Haucke, 15 Mo. App. 373. In order that defendant may shield himself on the ground that he obtained the advice of counsel, all the facts bearing on the guilt or innocence of defendant which he knew, or by reasonable diligence could have found out, must have been laid before such counsel. Sappington v. Watson, 50 Mo. 83; Cooper v. Utterback, 37 Md. 282. Even though the defendant supposed that some of the facts were not material. Hill v. Palm, 38 Mo. 13; Sharpe v. Johnston, 59 Mo. 557; Thompson v. Lumley, 50 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 105; Ross v. Innis, 26 Ill. 259.

2. Griffin v. Chubb, 7 Tex. 603; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 85; Prough v. Entriiken, 11 Pa. St. 81; Schmidt v. Weidman, 63 Pa. St. 173; Brown v. Randall, 36 Conn. 56; Kimball v. Bates, 50 Me. 308; Ames v. Rathbun, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 104; Chapman v. Dodd, 10 Minn. 350. Legal advice, if used only as a cover and not acted upon in good faith, if it does not induce an honest belief that the party has probable cause, will not screen him from prosecuting an entirely groundless suit. Wills v. Noyes, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 324. Before the defendant in an action for malicious prosecution can shield himself under the advice of counsel he must show that in good faith he stated the facts fully to his attorney. Logan v. Maytag, 57 Iowa 107. So when plaintiff before the prosecution requested the defendant to examine the supposed stolen property in his possession, which defendant refused to do. Defendant did not state this fact when he sought legal advice as to the prosecution. Held, that he was not exempt from liability. Norrel v. Vogel, 39 Minn. 107.

It is only when there exists probable cause and the arrest is effected under the advice of learned counsel, consulted in good faith and on correct information of the facts, that a party can be exonerated from liability on the plea that he acted under legal advice. Block v. Meyers, 33 La. An. 776. In order to enable the defendant to base a defence upon the advice of counsel given, he should in perfect good faith obtain the advice of a competent and reliable attorney upon a full and accurate statement of all the facts. Davie v. Wisher, 72 Ill. 662. Palmer v. Richardson, 70 Ill. 544; Soule v. Winslow, 66 Me. 447; Cuthbert v. Galloway, 35 Fed. Rep. 466; Paddock v. Watts, 116 Ind. 146; Donnelly v. Daggett, 145 Mass. 314; Smith v. Walter (Pa. St.), 17 Atl. Rep. 466; Walker v. Camp, 69 Iowa 741.

Good faith in acting under advice of counsel is necessary in order to protect a party. And if after receiving such advice he is informed of other facts which satisfy him that the accused is not guilty he cannot shield himself behind the advice received. Cole v. Curtis, 16 Minn. 182.

The advice of counsel is entitled to more or less weight, or no weight at all; according to all the circumstances attending it, all of which should be considered by the jury. The circumstances referred to are such as these: whether the advice of counsel was sought bona fide or was sought only as a mode of protecting the defendants in a contemplated wrong; whether it was followed in good faith or not; whether it was really believed to be good counsel by the defendant; whether the attorney giving the advice was an attorney of character and standing or otherwise; whether he was or was not candid and disinterested in the opinion of the defendant in giving the advice; whether all the facts and circumstances as known to the defendant were frankly communicated to the attorney, or a portion of them suppressed or misstated; whether the defendant had or had not made a careful investigation of the facts before consulting counsel. Under such circumstances this advice of counsel ought to be entitled to great weight with the jury as tending to show that the de-defendant was not actuated by legal malice; under other circumstances it would be entitled to very little or no weight, or might even tend to show that the defendant was actuated by malice. The jury alone should determine the character and effect of such advice. Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1. Although counsel may have advised that plaintiff was liable to a criminal charge, and although the defendant may have communicated to counsel learned in the law all the facts and circumstances bearing upon the guilt or innocence of the plaintiff which he knew or by reasonable diligence could have ascertained, yet if notwithstanding the advice of counsel he believed that the prosecutor must fail and was actuated in commencing the prosecution, not simply by angry passions or hostile feelings, but by a desire to injure and wrong the plaintiff, then most certainly he could not be said to have consulted counsel in good faith, and the jury would have been warranted in finding that the prosecution was malicious. Sharpe v. Johnston, 76 Mo. 660.

It, however, is sufficient that counsel advised that the plaintiff was liable without advising his prosecution.¹

A defendant, however, cannot justify a prosecution by showing that he acted under the advice of a justice of the peace.²

If defendant entertained angry feelings when he consulted counsel, he is not thereby deprived of this defence, provided such feelings were not inconsistent with good faith. Sharpe v. Johnston, 4 Mo. App. 575.

The law requires that one in instituting a criminal prosecution shall act in good faith, or under an honest belief of the guilt of the party arrested, and this notwithstanding he has taken legal advice. Roy v. Goings, 112 Ill. 656. So if he acted from motives of private interest the advice of counsel will not exempt him from liability. Glascocock v. Bridges, 15 La. An. 672. A defendant relied upon the advice of counsel for his defence. The district attorney testified that he told the defendant that he did not think he could convict, and that he had not a very good case. And this witness said to the defendant that he could not do anything with the plaintiff, to which the defendant replied that plaintiff had taken sides against him, and that he would "set him up for his meanness." Defendant testified that other lawyers whom he consulted advised him that he could maintain the prosecution, but none of them were produced as witness. Held, sufficient to sustain a verdict for plaintiff. Vann v. McCreary, 77 Cal. 434. If the jury can see from all the facts that the suit was malicious notwithstanding the advice of counsel, that fact affords no protection to the plaintiff in an attachment suit, and if the court can see that notwithstanding the advice it was unreasonable to believe that a ground of attachment existed, that fact of itself does not constitute cause. Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. Rep. 217. And where an attorney and client conspire to institute a malicious prosecution the latter cannot justify himself by the other's advice. Hamilton v. Smith, 39 Mich. 222.

1. Sharpe v. Johnston, 59 Mo. 557.

2. When the prosecution fully and fairly submits to his counsel learned in the law all the facts which he knows are capable of proof, and is advised that they are sufficient to sustain a prosecution, although the opinion be erroneous, shall the advice of a committing magistrate have the same effect? We think not. Justices of the peace are not required to be learned in the law, in fact generally through the State they are not. They are not qualified by a course of study to give advice on questions of law. They do not pursue it as a profession. They are not charged with the duty of advising any person to commence a prosecution. They ought not to act as attorney or agent for one in regard to a prosecution he is about to institute before them. Their duties are judicial; they may in the discharge thereof reduce the substance of the complaint to writing in the form of an information of the prosecutor, then they judicially determine whether the facts therein averred be sufficient to justify the issuing of a warrant. An educated business man may be much better qualified than many inexperienced justices of the peace to advise as to the law; yet I am not aware that the advice of such a person has ever been held to protect against damages for a malicious prosecution. Brobst v. Ruff, 100 Pa. St. 91; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 358; Gee v.

Whether or not the defendant made a full and fair statement of all the facts to his counsel is a question for the jury.¹

3. Miscellaneous.—It is no defence to show that the affidavit made by the prosecutor was insufficient in law to authorize the prosecution.² Nor that the prosecution was before a court having no jurisdiction.³

IX. EVIDENCE—1. Strict Rules of Evidence.—In action for malicious prosecution the strict rules of evidence should be enforced.⁴ The fact of the prosecution must be proven, and this by the best evidence, to wit, the record or properly authenticated copies.⁵

Culver, 12 Oreg. 288; Burgett v. Burgett, 43 Ind. 78; Coleman v. Henrich, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 189; Straus v. Young, 37 Md. 282; Olmstead v. Partridge, 16 Gray (Mass.) 381; Murphy v. Larson, 77 Ill. 172; Stanton v. Hart, 27 Mich. 539; Williams v. Van Meter, 8 Mo. 339; Sutton v. McConnel, 45 Wis. 269. The advice of a detective is not sufficient. Breitmesser v. Stier, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 80. Nor of a police officer. Coleman v. Henrich, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 189.

Nor where a road overseer caused the arrest of one charged with stealing certain property belonging to the township, can he show that he was advised by certain property owners of the road district to commence such action. Sweeney v. Perney, 40 Kan. 102.

But it is held that this action cannot be maintained against the person for having made an arrest in pursuance of the advice of an alderman after an honest and unreserved statement of the facts. Thomas v. Painter, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 409. This seems to have been overruled in Brobst v. Ruff, 100 Pa. St. 91; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 358.

It is error to allow proof that defendants were advised by a justice of the peace that on the facts in the case the plaintiff was guilty of the offence charged, as legal advice in such case, to be a justification, must be given by counsel learned in the law. Rigdon v. Jordan, 81 Ga. 668.

1. McLeod v. McLeod, 73 Ala. 42.

2. A void process procured through malice and without probable cause is even more reprehensible, if possible, than if it charges a criminal offence. The wrong is not in the charge alone, but more in the object and purpose to be gained and the intention and motive in procuring the complaint and arrest. The contents of the complaint when maliciously made, and without good cause, are of but little consequence and can give no protection. Bell v. Keep- ers, 37 Kan. 64; Stocking v. Howard, 73 Mo. 25. See Anse 1.

3. Stone v. Stevens, 12 Conn. 219.

4. Brown v. Smith, 83 Ill. 291.

5. If the prosecution was in a foreign country a copy of the record is not indispensably necessary, but other evidence of the facts may be received. Young v. Gregory, 3 Call (Va.) 446.

The record of the judgment of acquittal is the best evidence of the determination of the prosecution. Comisky v. Breen, 7 Ill. App. 369.

To sustain an action for malicious prosecution the plaintiff must prove by the record, or a copy thereof, the proceedings in the prosecution against him and his acquittal. Sayles v. Briggs, 4 Met. (Mass.) 421. A copy is admissible. Fant v. McDaniel, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 173; s. c., 2 Am. Dec. 660.

In a suit for malicious prosecution, the record of the arrest, trial and discharge before the committing court, which, from the basis of the suit, is admissible, but the reasons given by the magistrate for granting the discharge are not admissible in evidence. Anderson v. Heller, 67 Ga. 58. If the record contain improper matter it is not to be excluded on that ground. But the defendant may ask the court to instruct the jury to disregard such matter. Granger v. Warrington, 8 Ill. 299.

If the final record has not been made up an indictment may be proved by producing the original and calling the clerk to prove that it is a record of his court. Watts v. Clegg, 48 Ala. 561.

A slight variance between the allegation and proof of the former proceeding will not be regarded. Leidig v. Rawson, 2 Ill. 272; Forbes v. Hagman, 75 Va. 168. The record of the police court in which the complaint was tried may be used by the plaintiff in evidence. Brainerd v. Brackett, 33 Me. 580. The record of the magistrate is competent evidence at least to show the facts of the acquittal and discharge of the plaintiffs. John v. Bridgman, 27 Ohio St. 22.

And the defendant must be connected with such prosecution.¹

2. End of Prosecution.—It must also appear in evidence that the prosecution is at an end.²

3. Character.—Evidence of the general character and reputation of the plaintiff is admissible, this both as affecting the question of damages and probably, too, as affecting the question of probable cause.³

The affidavit and warrant in the alleged malicious prosecution are competent evidence in an action therefor. Cooper v. Turrentine, 17 Ala. 13; Collins v. Love, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 416.

The information and record in the criminal proceeding are admissible. Mass v. Meire, 37 Iowa 97; Hogg v. Pinckney, 16 S. Car. 387. It is not competent to show by the testimony of a grand juror that the evidence of the defendant, then the prosecuting witness, was taken into consideration by the grand jury in finding the indictment. Parkhurst v. Masteller, 57 Iowa 474. And the defendant may prove by the magistrate what the testimony before him was on the part of the government in order to show probable cause, and disprove malice. Stevens v. Lacour, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 63. But the return of the officer on an attachment may be contradicted by parol. Mott v. Smith, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 33.

1. This may be done by any competent evidence, as by the testimony of a grand juror, by showing that the defendant employed counsel or other persons to assist in the prosecution; or that he gave instructions, paid expenses, procured witnesses, or was otherwise active in forwarding it. Greenleaf Ev. (Redfield's ed.), vol. 3, § 450.

In an action against two defendants it is error to reject the record of the alleged prosecution because the complaint was not signed by both. Casebeer v. Drahoble, 13 Neb. 465. Slight evidence that the defendant was the instigator is sufficient to go to the jury. Miller v. Milligan, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 30.

The general authority of an officer or agent may be inferred from the nature of the employment and the usual course of business. Walker v. Eastern Co. R. Co., L. R., 5 C. P. 640.

But acts and declarations of one defendant in the absence of another cannot be received in evidence against such other in the absence of independent proof of a conspiracy. Carpenter v. Sheldon, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 77; Snyder v. Brosse, 51 Ill. 357.

Evidence that the defendant procured the warrant and wagered that he would convict the plaintiff, sufficiently connects him with the prosecution. Kline v. Shuler, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) 484.

To show that the defendant instigated the prosecution it may be shown that he employed counsel therefor, or gave instructions, or paid expenses, or procured witnesses, or stated that he had put the plaintiff in the penitentiary or that the defendant was in any way active in forwarding the suit. Bitting v. Ten Eyck, 82 Ind. 421; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 505. But that defendant was a member of the grand jury that indicted the plaintiff and employed counsel to prosecute him is not sufficient to show a prosecution by him. Barrett v. Chouteau, 94 Mo. 13.

2. What is a sufficient termination see ante, III, 2. For this purpose a record showing the acquittal is proper and sufficient. Mills v. McCoy, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 406; Watts v. Clegg, 48 Ala. 51. Greenleaf Ev. (Redf. ed.), vol. 26, § 452. John v. Bridgman, 27 Ohio St. 22; Williams v. Woodhouse, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) 257. A memorandum made by the justice of the peace at the time of a trial of a prosecution before him showing the judgment which he rendered is admissible to show the termination of the prosecution. Long v. Rodgers, 18 Ala. 321.

The judgment in the attachment suit in favor of the defendant to that suit is the only competent proof of the fact that the attachment was ended in favor of the plaintiff in the suit for malicious prosecution. Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. Rep. 217.

3. Israel v. Brooks, 23 Ill. 526; Wade v. Walden, 23 Ill. 425; Miller v. Brown, 43 Me. 127; Gregory v. Chambers, 78 Mo. 294; Gee v. Culver, 13 Ore. 598; Fitzgibbon v. Brown, 43 Me. 169; Bacon v. Towne, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 217.

In actions for malicious prosecu-

So, on the question of damages, evidence is admissible to show hostility and unfriendly feeling entertained by defendant towards plaintiff prior to the alleged prosecution.¹

tion, where the question for the jury is whether the defendant upon all the information he had, whether it was true or false, acted as a cautious, reasonable man not influenced by malice would act, the general reputation of the plaintiff is a proper subject of enquiry upon the question of probable cause. And since malice in fact may be inferred from the want of probable cause, it follows that it is pertinent also upon the question of malice. Pullen v. Glidden, 68 Me. 559. Proof of the plaintiff's bad character is always admissible in actions for malicious prosecution. Hickman v. Jones, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 197.

In an action for a malicious arrest of a debtor by his creditor evidence of plaintiff's general bad reputation for honesty and fair business dealing is admissible. Rosenkrans v. Barker, 115 Ill. 331.

Where injury to the character is charged as an element of damage the defendant may show the plaintiff's bad character in mitigation; evidence of particular criminal acts are not, however, admissible. O'Brien v. Frasier, 47 N. J. L. 349; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 170.

In an action for the malicious prosecution of a criminal action, evidence of the previous good character of the plaintiff is admissible as tending to show that such prosecution was without probable cause. And it may also be shown that the defendant had known the plaintiff for several years before the criminal prosecution was commenced. This raises a presumption that he knew his reputation. Woodworth v. Mills, 61 Wis. 44; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 135.

In an action for malicious prosecution, the defendant may prove the general bad reputation of the plaintiff at the place where he resided at the time of his arrest, for honesty and fair dealing in business, to rebut the proof of want of probable cause, and also in mitigation of damages. Rosenkrans v. Barker, 115 Ill. 331; Gregory v. Chambers, 78 Mo. 294; Fitzgibbon v. Brown, 43 Me. 169.

The good character of the accused goes far to disprove probable cause. Ross v. Innis, 35 Ill. 487; s. c., 85 Am. Dec. 373; Greenl. Ev., § 458. See contra Oliver v. Pate, 43 Ind. 132; Blizzard v. Hays, 46 Ind. 166.

It is held that if the plaintiff disclaims any special damages for injury to his character, the defendant cannot attack such character either to rebut the evidence of malice or in mitigation of damages. Smith v. Hyndman, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 554.

Where the fact of the defendant's sobriety was in issue, persons long and intimately acquainted with him were admitted to testify as to his habits of temperance. Beal v. Robeson, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) 276.

The defendant may show that the plaintiff's only occupation was horse-racing and gambling. Martin v. Hardesty, 27 Ala. 458. Or that he was of notoriously bad character. Rodriguez v. Tadmire, 2 Esp. 721.

But where after a warrant against two defendants for larceny one of them brought his action for malicious prosecution, it was held that this defendant could not be allowed to prove the bad character of the other defendant. Armstrong v. Grogan, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 108. The plaintiff's reputation, however, is presumed to be good. He cannot prove it. Kennedy v. Holladay, 25 Mo. App. 503.

It is competent for plaintiff to introduce evidence to show that before and at the time of the prosecution complained of he was a man of good moral character and reputation in the community in which he lived, and that the defendant had knowledge of this as tending to show a want of probable cause. Blizzard v. Hays, 46 Ind. 166.

The plaintiff, in order to prove that the prosecution was without probable cause, may show his good reputation, known to the defendant when the prosecution was commenced. McIntire v. Levering, 148 Mass. 546.

But evidence of defendant's reputation for peaceableness at the time of the encounter out of which the prosecution grew, is inadmissible as evidence in chief. Walker v. Pittman, 108 Ind. 341. And it is incompetent to show defendant's social position. Renfro v. Prior, 22 Mo. App. 403. But particular instances of bad conduct cannot be shown. McIntire v. Levering, 148 Mass. 546.

1. Bruington v. Wingate, 55 Iowa 140.

4. Malice must be proven as like the other essential facts, and while, as we have already seen, it is in but few instances presumed as a matter of law, it may be taken as proven or not as the jury shall determine from the facts that go to establish want of probable cause. It may be proven from direct evidence or it may be inferred from circumstances.¹

1. Stansell v. Cleveland, 64 Tex. 660; Lyon v. Hancock, 35 Cal. 372.

The legal malice may exist, though the party making the oath may not have wilfully sworn falsely. Forbes & Allers v. Hagman, 75 Va. 168.

The charge upon which a proceeding, civil or criminal, is based must have been wilfully false to establish that want of probable cause from which malice will be inferred. Dorendinger v. Tschechtelin, 12 Daly (N. Y.) 34. Or wanton and reckless. Wheeler v. Nesbitt, 24 How. (U. S.) 544.

Whatever tends to show evil intent on the part of the prosecutor in instigating the indictment is properly admissible in evidence. The intent of the prosecutor is the controlling enquiry when there is want of probable cause. And actual malice may be proved by the acts and declarations of the party. Brown v. Willoughby, 5 Colo. 1.

In an action for malicious prosecution, it is competent for the plaintiff to show any acts, conduct or words of the defendant on the day of the plaintiff's arrest, and while he was in custody, tending to establish malice or other improper motives in the prosecution, or a purpose to vex or oppress the plaintiff; but, the defendant not being liable for any acts or declarations of the sheriff, beyond the usual and proper mode of executing the process, unless he instigated, authorized or participated in them, the declarations of the sheriff to the plaintiff, not made in the presence of the defendant, are not competent evidence for the plaintiff. Motes v. Bates, 80 Ala. 382.

A malicious motive must be proven by the acts, declarations or general conduct of the defendant. Walker v. Pittman, 108 Ind. 341.

But malice may be inferred (i. e., considered proven) from the activity and zeal displayed by the defendant in conducting the prosecution against the plaintiff. Straus v. Young, 36 Md. 246; Flickinger v. Wagner, 46 Md. 581; Dietz v. Langfit, 63 Pa. St. 234; Ammerman v. Crosby, 264 Ind. 451; Blass v. Gregor, 15 La. An. 421; McKown v.

Hunter, 30 N. Y. 625; Mowry v. Whipple, 8 R. I. 360; Bozeman v. Shaw, 37 Ark. 161.

Want of probable cause is evidence of malice, and, in cases where there is no evidence to the contrary, is sufficient to justify a verdict for the plaintiff. Johnson v. Ebberts, 11 Fed. Rep. 129; Savage v. Brewer, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 455; Wilder v. Holden, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 11; Bond v. Chapin, 8 Met. (Mass.) 33; Parker v. Farley, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 281.

While malice is to be proved, the jury may infer it from evidence of the wantonness of the seizure in attachment and oppressive conduct on the part of the defendant. Tibbler v. Alford, 12 Fed. Rep. 264.

So where one unlawfully invading another's close, causes the occupant's arrest for forcibly defending his possession, malice may be presumed. Casebeer v. Rice, 18 Neb. 203.

And where an officer attached goods in A's store and locked up the store, A and B broke into the store in the night time and refused to leave, whereupon the officer complained of them for breaking and entering with intent to steal, held, that a jury might find that the prosecution was malicious. Robsin v. Kingsbury, 138 Mass. 538.

So where B, knowing, or having good reason to believe from the embarrassed condition of M, that M was insolvent, made an affidavit to that effect in an action in which M had become security for costs, M caused the arrest of B for perjury, held this was sufficient to show that M acted not only without probable cause, but with malice. Montross v. Bradshy, 68 Ill. 185. And in an action for the malicious prosecution of a replevin suit, evidence of the commencement of successive suits by the defendant upon the same groundless claim, is admissible to show malice. Magner v. Renk, 65 Wis. 364. So in an action for a malicious prosecution wherein plaintiff was charged with wilful trespass in taking timber, the value of the timber alleged to have been taken was material to show the animus of plaintiff in taking it, and of

In States where the defendant may testify for himself, he may be asked concerning his motive in the prosecution and his feelings toward the plaintiff.¹ But the plaintiff may not testify that he acted in good faith and without intent to commit the crime for which he had been prosecuted by the defendant.² Evidence of insult, oppression and duress to which plaintiff was subjected the defendant in prosecuting him for so doing. Olson v. Neal, 63 Iowa 214. Where the offence charged in the criminal complaint having been the larceny of a water wheel of the value of $300, evidence that such wheel was in fact worth only from $2 to $5 was admissible in the action for malicious prosecution as tending to show malice. Woodworth v. Mills, 61 Wis. 44; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 135.

But the fact that plaintiff was a minor when he committed an assault and battery for which he was subsequently arrested, does not tend to show malice in his arrest. Motes v. Bates, 74 Ala. 374. Neither is a rejected offer to drop the prosecution for malicious mischief upon payment of costs evidence to show malice in the prosecution of that action, or of an action of larceny arising from the same transaction. Gilliford v. Windel, 108 Pa. St. 142. Nor is the offer to compromise a civil suit evidence either of the want of probable cause or of malice. Emerson v. Cochran, 111 Pa. St. 619. The failure of the proceeding against the plaintiff is not evidence of defendant's malice or want of probable cause in instituting such proceedings. Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187. The inference that may be drawn from the verdict of plaintiff's acquittal is not sufficient evidence of malice to authorize defendant's conviction. Ullman v. Abrams, 9 Bush (Ky.) 738; Garrard v. Willet, 4 J. J. Marsh (Ky.) 628.

And the docket entry of the justice certifying that the complaint was malicious is not admissible against the defendant. Casey v. Sevaton, 30 Minn. 516; Sweeny v. Perney, 40 Kan. 102. An action for malicious prosecution cannot be sustained without showing malice on the part of the prosecutor. Want of probable cause alone is not sufficient. Malice is not an inference of law from want of probable cause. Van Sickle v. Brown, 68 Mo. 627; Sharpe v. Johnson, 59 Mo. 557. Acts of the prosecutor and circumstances connected with the transaction affirmatively showing actual evil intent may always be given in evidence. Murphy v. Hobbs, 8 Colo. 17.

Malice may be inferred from circumstances, such as the defendant's conduct and his declarations and his forwardness and activity in publishing the proceedings. Proof that the defendant never sincerely believed the plaintiff guilty of the charge for which he was prosecuted tends to show malice in the defendant, and malice may be inferred by the jury from the want of probable cause. Bitting v. Ten Eyck, 82 Ind. 421; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 505; Southwestern R. Co. v. Mitchell, 80 Ga. 438.

1. Where the character of a transaction, as in case of malicious prosecution, depends upon the intent of a party, he may testify as to what his intent really was. Heap v. Parrish, 104 Ind. 36.

Where intent or motive is involved in the issue, the person to whom such intent or motive is imputed is a competent witness unless rendered incompetent by some statutory inability. Spalding v. Lowe, 56 Mich. 366; Watkins v. Wallace, 19 Mich. 57.

In an action for malicious prosecution, defendant, being permitted in this State to testify in his own behalf, may be asked on direct examination whether he made the complaint in such prosecution in good faith, believing the other party was guilty as therein charged, or was actuated by malice in making it. Sherburne v. Rodman, 51 Wis. 474. The defendant will be allowed to show by his own testimony that from his knowledge of the case and upon the advice of counsel, he really believed that plaintiff was guilty of the crime for which he was prosecuted. Sparling v. Conway, 12 Mo. App. 510; McCormick v. Woodworth, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 71; Greer v. Whitfield, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 85; Coleman v. Henrich, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 189; Turner v. O'Brien, 5 Neb. 542; Van Sickle v. Brown, 68 Mo. 627. Contra, Goodman v. Stroheim, 36 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 216.

2. Turner v. O'Brien, 11 Neb. 108.

by defendant may be given as bearing on the question of intent.¹ To prosecute for the purpose of making an example is not evidence of malice.²

Some instances of what facts will and what will not tend to prove malice are cited.³

5. Want of Probable Cause.—Though want of probable cause is a negative averment, the burden of proving it by a preponderance of the evidence falls upon the plaintiff.⁴ But because this is a

1. Murphy v. Hobbs, 8 Colo. 17. But in an action for vexatious suit and malicious holding to bail, held that the records of other actions brought by the same defendant against the plaintiff could not be given in evidence. Ray v. Law, Pet. (U. S.) 207.

2. The most elevated motive that can possibly be entertained for prosecuting anybody is to make an example for the benefit of the public. The motive of the prosecution testified in this case was a proper one, being the desire to deter others from committing crimes by making an example of the alleged criminal, but no one has a right to make any person an example unless he is guilty, and it will not do to proceed against him for an example or anything else unless you believe him to be guilty and have good and probable grounds upon which to base the opinion. The motive of the prosecutor, who does not want to hurt the accused, but simply wants to make him an example to deter others, is the attitude of the law itself toward offenders. Coleman v. Allen, 79 Ga. 637.

3. The mere fact that a creditor examined the records and was satisfied with the condition of a firm, and a short time afterwards attached its property, there being only one mortgage on the firm property when the records were examined, but several when the attachment was issued, does not prove malice. Stansel v. Cleveland, 64 Tex. 660.

On the issue of malice the defendant may show that the assault complained of in the prosecution was committed upon his servant and not upon himself as the complaint alleged through the mistake of the person drawing it. Ripley v. McBarron, 125 Mass. 272. It is proper to instruct the jury that they might take into consideration the excitement of the prosecutor in an action for assault as bearing upon the question of his malice. Carter v. Sutherland, 52 Mich. 597.

And the defendant may show that information had been communicated to him by others and what that information was relative to the conduct of the plaintiff in connection with the crime for which he was prosecuted, upon which information the defendant in part acted. Anderson v. Friend, 71 Ill. 475. But malice cannot be disproved by transactions of the party arrested of which the person making the affidavit had no knowledge or information when he made it. Neither can it be disproved by showing additional facts having no bearing on the facts set forth in the affidavit as grounds of arrest nor by matters ex post facto. Josselyn v. McAllister, 25 Mich. 45.

Neither can an unfounded prosecution be justified, or the prosecutor's malice be disproved by evidence of offenses committed by the plaintiff other than those for which he was prosecuted by the defendant. Carson v. Edgeworth, 43 Mich. 241.

Evidence that defendant endeavored to find out plaintiff's domicile to inform him of the attachment and prevent sacrifice of goods on sale in attachment does not disprove malice. Scovill v. Glasner, 79 Mo. 449. Evidence that unusual and excessive bail was required does not show defendant's malice unless it is also shown that defendant had some agency in fixing the amount of the bond. Montgomery v. Sutton, 58 Iowa 697.

4. Morton v. Young, 55 Me. 24; s. c., 92 Am. Dec. 565; Palmer v. Richardson, 70 Ill. 544; Davie v. Wisher, 72 Ill. 262; Calef v. Thomas, 81 Ill. 478; Scott v. Shelor, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 891; Legallee v. Blaisdell, 134 Mass. 473; Hamilton v. Smith, 39 Mich. 222; Stone v. Crocker, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 84; Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1; John v. Bridgman, 27 Ohio St. 22; Abrath v. N. E. R. Co., 4 Q. B. D. 440; Wheeler v. Nesbitt, 24 How. (U. S.) 544. Though it seems if the defendant plead singly the truth of the facts involved in the prosecution he thereby assumes the burden. Morris v. Corson, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 281.

negative proposition it requires but little evidence to prove it.¹ Want of probable cause may be shown by the character of the evidence introduced on the trial of the criminal action.²

And on this issue evidence of the suspicious behavior of plaintiff is admissible.³

While juries may find malice from the facts that establish want of probable cause, the most express malice is not evidence of want of probable cause.⁴

As to the value of the discharge of a defendant upon preliminary examination by a committing magistrate or grand jury as evidence of want of probable cause, there seems to be some disagreement, it being generally held that such discharge is prima facie evidence of want of probable cause.⁵ The holding of some

1. Grant v. Deuell, 3 Rob. (La.) 17; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 228; Williams v. Van Meter, 8 Mo. 339; s. c., 41 Am. Dec. 644; Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1; John v. Bridgman, 27 Ohio St. 22; McCormic v. Sisson, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 715; Stone v. Crocker, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 81; Smith v. Ege, 52 Pa. St. 419; Sutton v. Anderson, 103 Pa. St. 151; Straus v. Young, 36 Md. 246.

2. A witness who was present and heard the evidence upon the hearing of the charge complained of, may testify that no evidence was given in support of the criminal charge. John v. Bridgman, 27 Ohio St. 22. But persons who heard the evidence before the examining magistrate may not rehearse what that evidence was, because such evidence would be secondary and hearsay. The witnesses themselves should be called to testify what their evidence was before such magistrate. Richards v. Foulke, 3 Ohio 52. Contra, Goodrich v. Warner, 21 Conn. 432. However, the official stenographer of the court may read from his notes the testimony of a witness taken at the trial of an indictment and who was beyond the jurisdiction of the trial court for the purpose of showing want of probable cause. Brown v. Willoughy, 5 Colo. 1. But it is not incumbent upon the plaintiff to give in evidence all the testimony introduced before the magistrate, in order that the court may determine whether there was or was not probable cause. Bacon v. Towne, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 217.

3. McRea v. Oneal, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) 166.

4. The want of probable cause is the essential ground of this action. Other things may be inferred from this, but this cannot be inferred from anything else, it must be established by positive and express proof; it is not enough to show that the plaintiff was acquitted of the charge preferred against him, or that the defendant abandoned the prosecution. But the "onus probandi" is upon the plaintiff to show affirmatively, by circumstances or otherwise, as he may be able, that the defendant had no ground for commencing the prosecution. Stone v. Crocker, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 81; Bitting v. Ten Eyck, 82 Ind. 421; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 505; Heyne v. Blair, 62 N. Y. 19; Forshay v. Ferguson, 2 Denio (N. Y.) 617; Skidmore v. Bricker, 77 Ill. 164; Krug v. Ward, 77 Ill. 603; Caperson v. Sproule, 39 Mo. 39; Sharpe v. Johnston, 76 Mo. 660; Hall v. Hawkins, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 357; Cloon v. Gerry, 13 Gray (Mass.) 201; Kidder v. Parkhurst, 3 Allen (Mass.) 393; Travis v. Smith, 1 Pa. St. 234; Marable v. Mayer, 78 Ga. 710; Good v. French, 115 Mass. 201; Levi v. Brannan, 39 Cal. 485; Wheeler v. Nesbit, 24 How. (U. S.) 544; Hurd v. Shaw, 20 Ill. 354; Wade v. Walden, 23 Ill. 425; Chapman v. Cawrey, 50 Ill. 512; Malone v. Murphy, 2 Kan. 250; Bell v. Percy, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 83.

Want of probable cause cannot be inferred from the existence of malice. Marable v. Mayer, 78 Ga. 710.

5. The refusal of the committing magistrate to bind the defendant over is very persuasive evidence that the prosecution was without probable cause. Sharpe v. Johnson, 76 Mo. 660; Sharpe v. Johnson, 59 Mo. 557; Sappington v. Watson, 50 Mo. 83; Casperon v. Sproule, 39 Mo. 39.

The verdict of a jury upon the trial of a civil action is essentially different from the discharge of a supposed criminal by the examining magistrate, or courts to the contrary is probably based upon the facts of the case or that under the particular proceeding the examination partook largely of the nature of a trial.¹ For the acquittal of a defendant upon the trial of a criminal charge affords no evidence that such charge was preferred without probable cause.² Though upon a bill of indictment ignored by a grand jury. Even in a criminal proceeding the final acquittal of the accused can have but little weight as evidence of probable cause compared with an acquittal or discharge before the magistrate or grand jury. The magistrate and grand jury have the very question of probable cause to try; and the evidence on the side of the prosecution is alone examined and the proceeding is entirely "ex parte." Under such circumstances the refusal of the examining tribunal to hold the accused over till trial, must necessarily be very persuasive evidence that the prosecution is groundless. Brant v. Higgins, 10 Mo. 728.

The discharge of one charged with crime by the magistrate after a full investigation is prima facie evidence of want of probable cause, and throws upon the defendant the burden of proving that there was probable cause. Josselyn v. McAllister, 25 Mich. 45.

The discharge by a justice of the plaintiff who has been arrested and brought before him for examination, and the refusal of the grand jury to indict him, is prima facie evidence of a want of probable cause, but it is liable to be rebutted by proof. Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1.

In an action for malicious prosecution, proof that the plaintiff was discharged by the examining magistrate for want of probable cause to believe him guilty makes a prima facie case for the plaintiff upon the question of want of probable cause. Frost v. Holland, 75 Me. 108.

It is settled in this State that a discharge by the examining magistrate imports that the accusation was groundless. Griffin v. Sellars, 2 Dev. & B. L. (N. Car.) 492; s. c., 31 Am. Dec. 422.

The discharge of the plaintiff by the examining magistrate is prima facie evidence of the want of probable cause sufficient to throw upon the defendant the burden of proving the contrary. 2 Greenl. Ev., § 455; 2 Stark. Ev. 494; 3 Phil. Ev. 256; Secor v. Babcock, 2

Johns. (N. Y.) 203; Johnson v. Marlin, 2 Murphy (N. Car.) 248; Mitchinson v. Cross, 58 Ill. 366; Cooper v. Utterbach, 37 Md. 282; Israel v. Brooks, 23 Ill. 575; Jones v. Finch, 84 Va. 204; Gould v. Sherman, 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 411.

Upon the averment of the servant of a relative of deceased that B had stolen certain articles of the deceased, caused B's arrest, held, that B's discharge by the examining magistrate established a want of probable cause. Boonholdt v. Sonillard, 36 La. An. 103.

So the discharge of one brought before a United States commissioner, after examination by such commissioner, is prima facie evidence of want of probable cause for the arrest. Jones v. Finch, 84 Va. 204.

1. Genea v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 51 Cal. 140; Apger v. Woolson, 43 N. J. L. 57; Heldt v. Webster, 60 Tex. 207; Israel v. Brooks, 25 Ill. 526; Stone v. Crocker, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 81.

2. The defendant's acquittal did not raise the presumption of the want of probable cause. Griffin v. Chubb, 7 Tex. 603; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 85.

A verdict and judgment of acquittal certainly do not imply a want of probable cause, because such verdict may be given notwithstanding a strong suspicion, because there is not proof of full guilt. Griffin v. Sellars, 2 Dev. & B. L. (N. Car.) 492; s. c., 31 Am. Dec. 422.

An acquittal of a criminal charge is not evidence of the want of probable cause for the prosecution, and it is not error in a suit for malicious prosecution to refuse to instruct that a verdict acquitting the plaintiff of a criminal charge is prima facie evidence of his innocence. Bitting v. Ten Eyck, 82 Ind. 421; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 505. The discharge of the defendant in a criminal prosecution does not raise a presumption of want of probable cause. Heldt v. Webster, 60 Tex. 207; Williams v. Van Meter, 8 Mo. 339; Stone v. Crocker, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 8; Thompson v. Beacon Valley R. Co. (Conn.), 16 Atl. Rep. 554.

some courts hold that to show such acquittal is competent but not sufficient evidence to prove want of probable cause.¹

So an acquittal by reason of the dismissal of the charge,² or the nonappearance of the prosecutor,³ or that the defendant, after instituting a prosecution, did not proceed with it;⁴ or of a technicality;⁵ or the offer to compromise,⁶ is not sufficient evidence of want of probable cause.

The conviction of the plaintiff is always evidence of probable cause, and is generally conclusive evidence of it.⁷ It may be shown, however, to overcome the conclusive character of such evidence, that such conviction was obtained wholly or chiefly by the false testimony of the defendant.⁸ The discharge of an at-

1. It is not sufficient on the part of the plaintiff to show that he was acquitted of the charge; he must prove that there was no reasonable ground for it. It is not every verdict of not guilty nor even subsequent proof of complete innocence that shows a want of probable cause in the incipient stages of a prosecution. A man's conduct may, from his folly, his neglect, or his ignorance, be such as to justify a suspicion of guilt and produce a prosecution in the course of which it may be made to appear that he is clearly innocent; but this will not authorize an action for malicious prosecution. Grant v. Denel, 3 Rob. (La.) 17; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 228.

An acquittal is evidence of want of probable cause to go to the jury, but of itself and unaccompanied with any circumstances would not be sufficient. Williams v. Van Meter, 8 Mo. 336; s. c., 41 Am. Dec. 644.

2. The fact that the defendant had dismissed the criminal charge on which he had caused the plaintiff to be arrested is not sufficient to prove that he had not probable cause for instituting prosecution. Flickinger v. Wagner, 46 Md. 580.

The discharge of one who had been prosecuted for libel does not prove want of probable cause nor malice. Staub v. Van Benthuyzen, 36 La. An. 467. Want of probable cause does not appear from the fact of dismissal for want of prosecution or from the fact that the order of arrest was vacated. Dorendenger v. Tschechtelin, 12 Daly (N. Y.) 34. Nor from the entry of a nolle prosequi. Hall v. Fisher, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 441; Brown v. Lakeman, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 482. But contra, Wetmore v. Melliger, 64 Iowa 741; Green v. Cochran, 43 Iowa 544; Burhans v. Sanford, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 417; Yocum v. Polley, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 358.

3. Purcell v. MacNamara, 1 Campb. 199.

4. Wallace v. Alpine, 1 Campb. 207; Burhans v. Sanford, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 417; Whetmore v. Mellinger, 64 Iowa 741; contra Palmer v. Avery, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 290.

5. Marks v. Townsend, 97 N. Y. 590.

6. Gilliford v. Windel, 108 Pa. St. 142; Emerson v. Cochran, 111 Pa. St. 619.

7. Parker v. Farley, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 279; Parker v. Huntington, 2 Gray (Mass.) 124; Bitting v. Ten Eyck, 82 Ind. 421; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 505; Olson v. Neal, 63 Iowa 214; Moffatt v. Fisher, 47 Iowa 473; Whitney v. Peckham, 15 Mass. 243; Witham v. Gowen, 14 Me. 362; Cloon v. Gerry, 13 Gray (Mass.) 203; Dennehey v. Woodsum, 100 Mass. 197; Clements v. Odorless Excavating Apparatus Co., 67 Md. 461; s. c., 1 Am. St. Rep. 409. And this although the judgment of such conviction be afterward reversed upon appeal. Kaye v. Kean, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 839; Parker v. Farley, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 279; Palmer v. Avery, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 290; Whitney v. Peckham, 15 Mass. 243; Welch v. Boston etc. R. Co., 14 R. I. 609; Phillips v. Kallamazoo, 53 Mich. 33.

Where the defendant in a criminal prosecution was found guilty but upon a new trial, a nolle prosequi being entered, the defendant was discharged, it was held that the action could be maintained and the first verdict was no evidence of probable cause. Richter v. Koster, 45 Ind. 440. Contra, Goodrich v. Warner, 21 Conn. 432; Ash v. Marlow, 20 Ohio 119; Ewing v. Sanford, 19 Ala. 605.

8. Womack v. Circle, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 192; Olson v. Neal, 63 Iowa 214; Cloon v. Gerry, 13 Gray (Mass.) 201; Whitney v. Peckham, 15 Mass. 143; Peck v. Chouteau, 91 Mo. 138; Bowman v.

tachment on its merits is conclusive as to its being issued without good cause.¹

It is prima facie evidence of probable cause that an indictment was found.² That a preliminary examination was waived.³ That upon the trial the jury disagreed or hesitated in the acquittal.⁴ That upon a preliminary examination the plaintiff was required to enter into recognizance.⁵ It is not evidence of probable

Brown, 52 Iowa 437; Palmer v. Avery, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 290; Richey v. McBean, 17 Ill. 63. The verdict of guilty is strong prima facie evidence of probable cause but is capable of being rebutted. Payson v. Caswell, 22 Me. 212; Herman v. Brookerhoff, 8 Watts (Pa.) 240; Jones v. Kirksey, 10 Ala. 839.

1. Mitchell v. Mattingly, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 237.

Where the judgment of the magistrate by whom the plaintiff has been bound over is relied upon as evidence of probable cause, it cannot be impeached by evidence that he acted unfairly and improperly in the examination. Bacon v. Towne, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 217.

2. Peck v. Chouteau, 91 Mo. 138; Sharpe v. Johnson, 76 Mo. 660; Garrard v. Willet, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 628; Zantinger v. Weightman, 2 Cr. Ct. Ct. 478. See contra Motes v. Bates, 80 Ala. 382; Crescent City Live Stock Co. v. Butchers' Union etc., 120 U. S. 141.

3. Van Sickle v. Brown, 68 Mo. 627.

4. In the case at bar the jury were unable to agree as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant. It followed, of course, that the jury or some of them must have believed the plaintiff to have been guilty. The fact that he was acquitted by another jury cannot affect the result which must necessarily follow because the first jury failed to convict. We think the evidence offered was admissible because it tended to show probable cause. It was not conclusive, but, like any other prima facie evidence, was subject to be explained. The question was not whether the plaintiff was guilty, but whether the defendant had reasonable cause to so believe. If the finding of an indictment is evidence of probable cause, or the evidence on the trial of a criminal charge is such as to cause the jury to hesitate as to an acquittal, it is evidence of probable cause. It seems to us that the inability of the jury to agree must have the same effect. Johnson v. Miller, 63 Iowa 529;

s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 758. But it cannot be shown for the purpose of proving probable cause that the grand jury deliberated some time before agreeing to return no bill and that eight of the jury were in favor of finding an indictment. Scotten v. Longfellow, 40 Ind. 23.

5. The decision of a magistrate that there is sufficient evidence to warrant requiring the accused to enter into recognizance is at least prima facie evidence of probable cause unless such decision has been procured by evidence known to the complainant to be false. Womack v. Circle, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 192. Such prima facie showing may be rebutted by other evidence. Diemer v. Herber, 75 Cal. 287.

In an action for malicious prosecution the weak presumption that exists in every case, that every public prosecution is founded on probable cause, is strengthened by the proof that the plaintiff had, after an examination by a justice, been committed to jail to answer an indictment when found, but it may be rebutted by other testimony showing that there was no probable cause for the prosecution. Hale v. Boylen, 22 W. Va. 234. The fact that the district judge held the plaintiff to bail and refused to discharge him on the accusation made by defendants and former conspirators, or that plaintiff was indicted by a grand jury for the offence they charged against him, were not conclusive evidence of probable cause. Raleigh v. Cook, 60 Tex. 438; Ricord v. Central Pac. R. Co. 15 Nev. 167; Graham v. Noble, 13 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 233; Bacon v. Towne, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 217.

Plaintiff won money from the defendant on a wager, and because he did not return such money he was arrested at defendant's instance and committed on a charge of larceny; an information charging plaintiff with such crime was dismissed for want of evidence. Held, that the commitment was only prima facie evidence of probable cause and was fully rebutted by other evidence. Diemer v. Herber, 75 Cal. 287.

cause that the accused was generally suspected or generally believed to be guilty of the crime charged.¹

It is doubted if an action for malicious prosecution will lie where there was a conviction before a lower court, even though such conviction was reversed on appeal.²

As to probable cause for the institution of a civil action, it is held that facts and circumstances which lead to the inference

1. Hilliard on Torts, vol. 1, p. 434; Brainard v. Brackett, 33 Me. 580. Neither will the character, habits, and appearance of a man and the public opinion about him, though coupled with the fact that the crime was committed where he was, amount to probable cause. Holburn v. Neal, 4 Dana (Ky.) 120. Evidence that certain persons had told the defendant that they believed that plaintiff had committed the crime does not tend to justify the prosecution. Norvel v. Vogel, 39 Minn. 107; s. c., 38 N. W. Rep. 705.

2. After a conviction by verdict, followed by sentence, it ceases to be a matter of conjecture, of argument, and of reasoning, whether guilt could rationally be inferred from the facts admitted or proved; for such a state of things cannot occur, but after full defence by the accused, with deliberation by the jury, aided by the court, upon all the evidence, as well explanatory as negative, offered by the accused; and, after all that, guilt was in fact inferred by a numerous body of men of competent understanding and integrity, and the court was also satisfied with it. As evidence of probable cause, a conviction by verdict and judgment is as convincing, and therefore ought in law to be as high and conclusive, although vacated by appeal, as if it stood unreversed and in full force. It sanctions the prosecution in its origin and progress through that court, and is the highest evidence, namely, a judicial sentence of record, that apparently the accused was guilty. It is true that the law, in its benignity, allows the convict to show, on appeal to another court, that he is really not guilty. But that does not show, nor can it be shown against the facts of the first verdict and judgment, that there was no just and probable cause of accusation. Griffis v. Sellars, 2 Deav. & Bat. L. (N. Car.) 492; s. c., 31 Am. Dec. 422.

An action for malicious prosecution will not lie if plaintiff was convicted before a justice of the peace, but was discharged on appeal, unless the conviction was procured by fraud, perjury or subornation, or was otherwise exceptional. Phillips v. Kalamazoo, 53 Mich. 33. In an action for malicious prosecution brought by A against B, held, that a judicial finding in the former action in favor of B and against A by the court of original jurisdiction is conclusive of probable cause, when such finding is not procured by unfair means, even if such finding is reversed on appeal. Welch v. Boston etc. R. Co., 14 R. I. 609. But where an accusation of felony is withdrawn, and respondent is convicted of misdemeanor included in it, but is acquitted on appeal, the conviction is not such evidence of probable cause as will defeat an action for malicious prosecution based on the charge of felony. Labar v. Crane, 49 Mich. 561. See also Whitney v. Peckham, 15 Mass. 243; Cloon v. Gerry, 13 Gray (Mass.) 203; Dennehey v. Woodsum, 100 Mass. 197; Crescent City Live Stock Co. v. Butchers' Union etc., 120 U. S. 141. And in a civil action, if A brings an action upon a promissory note against B, who sets up in defence that he has paid the note, and that he has a claim in set-off against A larger than the amount of the note, and the jury returned a verdict for B under his declaration in set-off, the verdict is conclusive that A had a cause of action against B, and the latter cannot maintain an action against A for malicious prosecution founded upon such cause of action. Dolan v. Thompson et al., 129 Mass. 205.

It is no defence to an action for causing plaintiff's arrest that the general term of the city court reversed the order vacating the order of arrest, that order being reversed on appeal to the court of common pleas; and that on the trial of the action in which the order was issued, verdict was directed for plaintiff therein and then set aside by the trial judge, the plaintiff thereupon dismissing his action. Cuthbert v. Galloway, 35 Fed. Rep. 466.

that a party instituting a suit was actuated by an honest and reasonable conviction of its justice are sufficient evidence of probable cause.¹

As illustrative of what facts may be held to show probable cause, some cases are cited in the notes.²

1. Hilliard on Torts, vol. 1, p. 435; Cloon v. Gerry, 13 Gray (Mass.) 201. Justifiable probable cause for an attachment is a belief by the attaching creditor of the existence of facts essential to the prosecution of his attachment founded on such circumstances as supposing him to be a man of ordinary caution, prudence and judgment, were sufficient to induce such belief. Spengler v. Davy, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 381.

2. In an action against the mortgagee for maliciously prosecuting the mortgagor for selling the chattels, the mortgagor may show the mortgagee's parol consent. And this being shown, the mortgagor's intent to appropriate the proceeds to his own use is immaterial. Walker v. Camp, 69 Iowa 741.

The removal from Kentucky to Indiana for the purpose of enabling the defendant to bring suit in the United States district court for Kentucky against a resident of Kentucky, is no evidence of want of probable cause; a party has the right to select his forum. Woods v. Finnell, 13 Bush (Ky.) 628. On trial of an action for malicious prosecution, in procuring the indictment of the plaintiff for perjury in making an affidavit for the removal of a cause from a justice of the peace to the circuit court, evidence that the defendants were before the grand jury not of their own motion, but in obedience to legal process, that the deputy prosecutor was attorney for one of the defendants in the civil case, and was familiar with it, and advised them that, if the facts were true as they stated them to him, there was good cause for a prosecution, was insufficient to show a want of probable cause, and a demurrer thereto was rightly sustained. Workman v. Shelly, 79 Ind. 442.

An officer of a railroad company having reasonable grounds for supposing a person had in his possession fraudulent tickets of the company, is justified in proceeding by search warrant to ascertain that fact; and the failure to find such tickets does not show that he had not sufficient ground to justify him in instituting the search; nor would the failure to find any such tickets be necessarily sufficient to convince a reasonably prudent and cautious man that the suspected person had not fraudulently issued a ticket which prior to the search he was suspected of issuing; or even might not still have others in his possession, though none were found in the place which was searched. Thelin v. Dorsey, 59 Md. 539. The owner of a boat which had been taken from its moorings several times and brought back, caused the party taking it to be arrested for grand larceny. Held, that there was an entire want of probable cause, and that malice might be inferred. Wanser v. Wycoff, 16 N. Y. Supr. Ct. 187.

Proof of an arrest of a wife for rushing to the assistance of her husband in a contest with a neighbor, compelling her to answer before a magistrate in a distant town, held to warrant a finding that the prosecution was without probable cause and malicious. Thompson v. Force, 65 Ill. 370. In an action for malicious prosecution it was shown that the defendant filed with a justice of the peace an affidavit for a search warrant to search the plaintiff's house, which affidavit stated that certain goods had previously been feloniously taken, stolen and carried away by the plaintiff and that they were then concealed in the plaintiff's house; and there was ample evidence introduced on the trial tending to show that the plaintiff had reasonable and probable cause for believing that these statements were true; and the defendant himself testified on the trial, among other things, as follows: "I thought that the facts set forth in the affidavit were necessary to procure the search warrant. I believed the facts therein stated to be true at that time, and I believe so yet." And there was no evidence introduced in the case tending to show that the defendant did not have reasonable and probable cause for believing that the statements made in the affidavit were true, and nothing to show that he did not have reasonable and probable cause for commencing the supposed malicious prosecution. Held, that a verdict in the action for malicious prosecution in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant is against the law and the evidence; and further held, that, although it was not necessary to state in the affidavit that the plaintiff stole the property, or to state who in fact did steal it, yet that the allegation contained in the affidavit that the property was feloniously stolen, taken and carried away by the plaintiff cannot constitute the basis for an action of slander or libel. Bailey v. Dodge, 28 Kan. 72.

In an action against a railroad corporation for malicious prosecution, the plaintiff's evidence tended to show that he entered the defendant's train at L, intending to go to S; that he had previously ridden in the same train with the same conductor a great number of times within a year or two; that, on this occasion, when the conductor asked him for his ticket, he offered a ticket of the defendant corporation which read, "L. to S. and return," on which he had already ridden from L. to S. on a previous day; that the conductor refused to accept the ticket, and demanded of the plaintiff payment of his fare; that the plaintiff replied that he had taken no money with him because he thought the ticket was good, and asked the conductor why it was not good, to which the conductor said that it was not good for a passage in that direction, and said the plaintiff must pay his fare or get off; that the plaintiff said that he did not want to walk either to L. or S., and that he would pay the fare at night, to which the conductor retorted that that was what all tramps said; that the plaintiff then offered to allow the conductor to keep the ticket as security; that the conductor refused the offer, and told the plaintiff that he would fix him when they got to S.; that the conductor, who was a railroad police officer, after informing the plaintiff that if he did not pay his fare he should arrest him, or have him arrested on arrival at S.; allowed the plaintiff to retain his position in the train until he arrived at S.; that when the train arrived at S., a police officer, who had been previously notified by the conductor, entered the train, and at the conductor's request arrested the plaintiff, before he left or attempted to leave the car; that the conductor afterwards made a complaint against the plaintiff for evading the payment of fare by leaving the car without having paid his fare; and that the plaintiff was tried on this complaint, the conductor being a witness, and was acquitted. Held, that there was evidence that the complaint was made without probable cause. Kruevitz v. Eastern R. Co., 143 Mass. 228.

Evidence given at the trial under one complaint is inadmissible in justification of another complaint. Falvey v. Faxon, 143 Mass. 284; Sutton v. McConnel, 45 Wis. 269. As mere conversion of property is not larceny, proof of facts amounting only to conversion cannot establish probable cause. Turner v. O'Brien, 5 Neb. 542. The defendant having possession of cattle, as he supposed rightfully, he was accosted in the highway and the cattle wrested from his possession by violence and tumult; this was held sufficient probable cause for him to cause the arrest of the plaintiff. Murphy v. Martin, 58 Wis. 276.

In a suit for malicious prosecution by B against D, the magistrate before whom a complaint against B had been made was called by B and testified: "D was at my office with C; the latter said he had seen the stolen property in possession of B; my recollection is that C said they were D's property; I then recommended the complaint be made." This evidence was uncontradicted. Held, that there was sufficient evidence of probable cause to justify the court in ordering a nonsuit. Bernar v. Dunlap, 94 Pa. St. 329. An officer attached all the goods in a store occupied by A on a writ against him, and A delivered the key of the store to the officer, who closed and locked it. A few days after the store was closed A and B broke and entered it in the night time, and were found there by the officer; and they refused to leave when requested by the officer and resisted his attempt to expel them, claiming a right to remain there. The officer thereupon procured their arrest and made a complaint against them for breaking and entering his store with intent to steal. A, who was the owner of the goods attached and a lessee of the store and lived in a tenement over it, was known to the officer. B was not known to the officer, but offered to him a writing as evidence of his right to be in the store. Held, in an action by A and B against the attaching officer for malicious prosecution, that the evidence would warrant a finding that the prosecution was without probable cause and malicious. Bobsin v. Kingsbury, 138 Mass. 538.

In an action for malicious prosecution the following facts appeared: The plaintiff was the tenant of the defendant under a lease which gave the lessee the right to make such alterations "as do not injure the existing buildings, or impair their strength, or affect any insurance thereon, but no others," and the lessee covenanted not to use the building in any manner that shall be "liable to endanger or affect any insurance on said building, or to increase the premium thereof. The lessee removed a rear wall of the leased building. The lessor was notified by his insurer that the insurance was thereby terminated, and he paid an additional premium to have it continue; and, acting under the advice of counsel, brought an action of ejectment against the lessee (which was the alleged malicious prosecution), and judgment was entered for the lessee. There was conflicting evidence of experts, put in by each side, without objection on the question whether the risk was injuriously affected by the change. Held, that there was no evidence to be submitted to the jury of want of probable cause in bringing the ejectment suit. Allen v. Codman, 139 Mass. 136.

X. DAMAGES.—In actions for malicious prosecution, the plaintiff may recover for injury to his reputation, injury to his body and his mental distress, and injury to his property.¹

It being an action analogous to that of slander, the rule in estimating damages to the reputation is the same as in actions for slander or libel.²

The plaintiff may recover for any hurt to his person, for loss of his liberty, for the risk he may have been exposed to in life or health; and also for the mental strain, anxiety, injury to his feelings and the annoyance he has undergone.³

In a suit for damages for wrongfully and maliciously suing out an attachment, the fact that defendant had, before applying for the writ, heard that some other creditor was about to attach the property, constitutes of itself no ground of defence. Carothers v. McIlhenny, 63 Tex. 138.

Where a person was arrested on the charge of malicious mischief for cutting a hedge, and was acquitted, the evidence not showing that the prosecutor had reason to believe that the defendant acted with malice in cutting the hedge, the jury was justified in finding that the arrest was procured without probable cause. Gale v. Bohanan, 73 Iowa 501; s. c., 35 N. W. Rep. 599.

Plaintiff's son stole coal and deposited it where plaintiff kept his coal and where it was found soon after. Plaintiff informed defendant that he knew nothing of the crime and was innocent thereof, but defendant caused his arrest. It was ascertained that plaintiff was innocent and knew nothing of the theft. Defendant being sued for malicious prosecution, it was held that plaintiff could not recover, as his possession of recently stolen property was probable cause for believing him guilty of the larceny. McDonald v. Atlantic etc. R. Co. (Ariz.), 21 Pac. Rep. 338.

1. Sutherland on Damages, vol. 3, p. 703. The elements of damages are the expenses of the plaintiff, if any, in and about the prosecution complained of to protect himself; his loss of time; his deprivation of liberty, and the loss of the society of his family; the injury to his fame; personal mortification, and the smart and injury of the malicious arts and acts and oppression of the parties. Hamilton v. Smith, 39 Mich. 222.

2. Sheldon v. Carpenter, 4 N. Y. 578; Fagnan v. Knox, 40 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 41. But if the plaintiff disclaims any special damages for injury to his character, the defendant cannot attack such character either to rebut the evidence of malice or in mitigation of damages. Smith v. Hyndman, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 554.

Where the defendants were arrested for larceny, one of them brought his action for malicious prosecution. Held, the defendant could not be allowed to prove the bad character of the other defendant. Armstrong v. Grogan, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 108.

3. In an action of malicious prosecution, mental suffering, not arising directly from bodily suffering and injury to the feelings, constitute elements of actual or compensatory damages. Parkhurst v. Masteller, 57 Iowa 474.

It is not necessary in an action like this to prove actual damages to the party arrested; deprivation of liberty and injury to reputation, feelings and person, will support a verdict for the

He may also recover all damages suffered which may be more properly called pecuniary damages and which are the direct and actual results of the wrongful act or the consequential damages naturally flowing therefrom.¹

Upon the question of punitive damages there is the same difference of opinion as to damages arising in this class of cases as plaintiff. Hogg v. Pnickety, 16 S. Car. 387.

Where both the plaintiff and his wife were arrested, the fact that while in jail the plaintiff was kept separate from his wife (it being lawful for the jailor so to keep him) may be considered by the jury in assessing compensatory damages. Spear v. Hiles, 67 Wis. 350. But the fact that plaintiff's wife was made sick by the prosecution complained of is too remote for special damages. Hampton v. Jones, 58 Iowa 317. Where a female was maliciously prosecuted for perjury, and suffered in her health in consequence, and was rendered insane, an increased recovery was on that account sustained. Plath v. Braunsdorff, 40 Wis. 107.

But where partners sue for torts committed on them as a firm, no damages can be given for any injury to the private feelings of the plaintiffs. The act complained of must affect the joint business or trade of the copartnership. Donnell v. Jones, 13 Ala. 490. So, too, compensation is to be given to the plaintiff for indignity which has been put upon him. McWilliams v. Hoban, 42 Md. 56. And such indignity may consist simply in being arraigned in court as a criminal. Fagnan v. Knox, 40 N. Y. Supr. Ct. 41.

1. The amount of money actually paid out in and about the defence of the suit, and the depreciation of the value of the stock on which the wrongful levy is alleged to have been made, are not the only damages sustained, if the appellant wrongfully, unjustly and maliciously, and without probable cause, sued out the writ of attachment and caused the same to be levied in the manner charged. The business of the appellant had been hitherto prosperous, his credit and financial reputation good, and all were destroyed by the malicious acts of the appellant, if it be conceded that he was guilty as alleged. It cannot be said that the law will afford no redress for the destruction of the financial credit and reputation or mete out no measure of punishment to the guilty party, who wantonly and maliciously destroys them. The reputation and credit of a man in business is of great value, and is as much within the protection of the law as property or other valuable rights. And if it be true that the appellant has maliciously, by his wrongful act, destroyed the business credit reputation of the appellant, the law will require him to make good the loss sustained. Chapman v. Kirby, 49 Ill. 211; Lawrence v. Hagerman, 56 Ill. 68; s. c., 8 Am. Rep. 674; Rice v. Miller, 70 Tex. 613; Krug v. Ward, 77 Ill. 603.

The plaintiff is entitled to recover not only the costs and expenses attending the defence of the groundless suit, without reference to taxable costs, including counsel fees, but also consequential damages, which naturally and approximately result therefrom. Closson v. Staples, 42 Vt. 209; Woods v. Finnell, 13 Bush (Ky.) 628; Smith v. Smith, 20 Hun (N. Y.) 559.

Where a defendant was kept out of the use of a mine by an action of forcible entry and detainer, maliciously instituted by the plaintiff, it was held that the measure of damages was the reasonable use of the premises for the time the plaintiff had been out of the possession, and for any permanent injury to his leasehold interest sustained by reason of the mine caving in, or otherwise getting out of repair through the failure of the party to use ordinary care during the time he held possession. Moffatt v. Fisher, 47 Iowa 473.

Where a merchant was maliciously procured to be adjudged a bankrupt, he was permitted to recover the value of his stock of goods, of which he was deprived, damages for the breaking up of his business, and the destruction of his credit, and the value of his own time, was also held to be a fair charge, as he had been obliged to give his attention to the proceedings instituted against him, and thus not able to pursue his business. Sonneborn v. Stewart, 2 Woods (N. S.) 599; Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187.

A merchant may recover damages for loss of credit consequent upon an in others of the same nature, the majority of courts holding that such damages may be awarded,¹ while others hold that they are attachment suit. Kennedy v. Meacham, 18 Fed. Rep. 312. If the unlawful seizure by attachment was made in good faith, the jury should find for the plaintiff actual damages only, but if they should find that the seizure was made in bad faith and maliciously, they may assess proper punitive damages in addition to actual damages proved. Tibbler v. Alford, 12 Fed. Rep. 262.

Attorney's Fees.—The plaintiff is entitled to recover his attorney's fees expended in defending the groundless suit, but not the expenses of prosecuting the action of malicious prosecution, those expenses not being deemed the natural and proximate consequence of the wrong complained of. Krug v. Ward, 77 Ill. 603; Stopp v. Smith, 71 Pa. St. 285; Marshall v. Betner, 17 Ala. 832; Lawrence v. Hagerman, 56 Ill. 68; s. c., 8 Am. Rep. 674; Hicks v. Foster, 13 Barb. N. Y. 663. And the plaintiff may prove as an element of damages, the amount of expense incurred for attorney's fees, in defending the criminal charge, without showing that the same has been actually paid. Walker v. Pittman, 108 Ind. 341; Pennsylvania Co. v. Marion, 104 Ind. 239; Ziegler v. Powell, 54 Ind. 173; Coleman v. Allen, 79 Ga. 637. Contra, as to attorney's fees, see Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187; Kennedy v. Meacham, 18 Fed. Rep. 312.

Defendant on ex parte application had by means of an injunction, kept plaintiff out of certain coal lands for a year, the measure of damages held to be the value of the use of the property for business. Newark Coal Co. v. Upson, 40 Ohio St. 17.

While the jury may allow the plaintiff counsel fees which he has expended in freeing himself from the malicious action, they are not bound to do so. Gregory v. Chambers, 78 Mo. 294.

Plaintiff may recover his costs in defending the criminal prosecution. Wanfle v. McLellan, 51 Wis. 484.

The plaintiff may recover so much of his expenditures made in defending the action held to be malicious, as were reasonably laid out and expended. Eastin v. Bank of Stockton, 66 Cal. 123; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 77.

But he cannot recover for a loss in the sale of goods caused by an assignment which he was driven to make by such prosecution. Donnell v. Jones, 13 Ala. 490.

And generally for this wrong the injured party is entitled to adequate compensation covering all the elements of the particular injury. Therefore the jury, in considering the amount, will consider the nature of the prosecution, and its natural effects on reputation, credit and private feelings; the incidental consequences of arrest, holding to bail, or of interference with property; the consequential loss of time, and any other loss, as the expense of defending. Malice is of the gist of the action, and the damages for other than pecuniary items may be greatly increased or diminished by the evidence on that subject. Sutherland on Damages, vol. 3, p. 707. McWilliams v. Hoban, 42 Md. 56.

The plaintiff, however, may not show his surroundings and treatment while in prison, as the defendant is not liable for the conduct of public officials, over whom he has no control. Zebley v. Storey (Pa.), 12 Atl. Rep. 569.

Plaintiff may recover his expense in protecting himself, his loss of time, deprivation of liberty and the society of his family, the injury to his fame and his personal mortification. Hamilton v. Smith, 39 Mich. 222.

1. Exemplary Damages.—Exemplary damages may be given in an action for malicious prosecution. Lytton v. Baird, 95 Ind. 349; Jerman v. Stewart, 12 Fed. Rep. 266; Brown v. Evans, 17 Fed. Rep. 912.

In addition to damages for injury to the feelings, exemplary damages may be allowed in a proper case, strictly by way of punishment. Parkhurst v. Masteller, 57 Iowa 474.

Punitive damages may be assessed in an action for malicious prosecution, if the actual malice is shown, or a design to injure plaintiff, or fraud, or oppression. Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1.

In fixing exemplary damages for malicious prosecution, the jury should exercise a fair and reasonable discretion, keeping in view the nature of the wrong committed and the enormity or otherwise of such aggravating circumstances as may be shown, rather than the measure of compensation to the plaintiff. Frankfurter v. Bryan, 12 Ill. App. 549.

improper.¹ One, however, is not liable for vindictive damages if he merely approves of an unlawful arrest made by one acting in his behalf, after he has learned of such arrest.²

It is proper to enquire concerning the financial condition of the defendant for the purpose of enabling the jury to measure the punishment in the way of damages.³

Where no actual damage has been sustained, no exemplary damages can be recovered.⁴

The measure of damages for the malicious prosecution of an attachment suit is not necessarily the measure awarded in an action of trover for the conversion of the goods attached.⁵

The jury may take into consideration all the circumstances of the case, and award such damages as will not only be a compensation for the wrong and indignity sustained in consequence of the wrongful act, but may also award exemplary or punitive damages as a punishment for such act. McWilliams v. Hoban, 42 Md. 56; Stewart v. Cole, 46 Ala. 646.

An employer is liable to exemplary damages for the acts of his agent. Malloy v. Bennet, 15 Fed. Rep. 371.

A plaintiff may recover actual and exemplary damages against a defendant who has maliciously sued out and levied writs of attachment. Rice v. Miller, 70 Tex. 613.

Plaintiff may show express malice in aggravation of damages. Chapman v. Dodd, 10 Minn. 350; Ives v. Bartholomew, 9 Conn. 309. Exemplary damages may be awarded against a corporation. International etc. R. Co. v. Telephone etc. Co., 69 Tex. 277.

1. In an action for malicious prosecution, damages may be awarded for actual pecuniary loss sustained, the peril occasioned in regard to personal liberty, the injury to plaintiff's person and liberty, and the injury to his feelings and reputation; but punitive damages are not consistent with reason and justice, and should not be allowed. But if a want of probable cause appears, the jury, in estimating the damages, may properly consider the degree of malignity displayed by the prosecutor. Murphy v. Hobbs, 8 Col. 130.

It is not the province of the jury, after full damages have been found for the plaintiff, so that he is fully compensated for the wrong committed by the defendant, to mulct the defendant in an additional sum as a punishment for the wrong. Wilson v. Bowen, 64 Mich. 133. See generally EXEMPLARY DAMAGES, vol. 7, p. 448.

2. Rosenkrans v. Barker, 115 Ill. 331; Grund v. Van Vleck, 69 Ill. 478.

3. Renfro v. Prior, 22 Mo. App. 402; Peck v. Small, 35 Minn. 465; Spear v. Hiles, 67 Wis. 350; Brown v. Evans, 17 Fed. Rep. 912; Whitfield v. Westbrook, 40 Miss. 311; Weaver v. Page, 6 Cal. 681; Coleman v. Allen, 79 Ga. 637.

4. Where no actual damage is suffered, surely no exemplary damages can be allowed. Exemplary damages can never constitute the basis of a cause of action for real or substantial damages suffered by the plaintiff; and, when given, they are given only in addition to the real and actual damages suffered and recovered by him; and when given they are not given upon any theory that the plaintiff has any just right to recover them, but only upon the theory that the defendant deserves punishment for his wrongful acts, and that it is proper for the public to impose them upon the defendant as punishment for such wrongful acts, in the private action brought by the plaintiff, for the recovery of the real damages suffered by him. No right of action for exemplary damages, however, is ever given to any private individual who has suffered no real or actual damages. He has no right to maintain an action merely to inflict punishment upon some supposed wrongdoer. If he has no cause of action independent of a supposed right to recover exemplary damages, he has no cause of action at all. Schippel v. Norton, 38 Kan. 567. But it is held that in an action for malicious arrest or civil process neither express malice nor actual damages need be proved. Hogg v. Pinckney, 16 S. Car. 387.

5. Burton v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 33 Minn. 189. Consequential damages may be recovered for the injury to the business credit of the plaintiff, and

When an action is founded upon the malicious prosecution of a part of a number of counts in an information, the plaintiff, in order to recover his actual damages, is not required to distinguish by his evidence the damages arising from the prosecution of such part from those incident to the other counts.¹

The defendant may show, by way of mitigation, that what he did was done without malice, and that he had a right to suppose there was reasonable cause for his action.²

But the fact that the plaintiff might have shortened the time of his imprisonment by availing himself of a preliminary examination which he had waived, need not be considered in mitigation unless it appear by affirmative proof that his motive in thus waiving such examination and exposing himself to continued imprisonment was to enhance damages.³

It is well settled that the plaintiff's bad character may be shown in mitigation.⁴

Damages arising out of the malicious prosecution of a suit cannot be pleaded as a set off to an action or contract, nor vice versa.⁵

As to what amount of verdict may be allowed to stand, of course, must depend upon the circumstances and surroundings of each case.⁶

expenses incident to the former suit Lawrence v. Hagerman, 56 Ill. 68; Woods v. Fennell, 13 Bush. (Ky.) 628; Kennedy v. Meacham, 18 Fed. Rep. 312.

In an action for damages for wrongful attachment, the fact that the goods attached were subsequently returned to the debtor must be considered in mitigation. McFadden v. Whitney et al. (N. J.), 18 Atl. Rep. 62.

In an action for maliciously suing out and levying a writ of attachment, when exemplary damages are sought, plaintiff can show his loss of credit and prospective profits. Kaufman v. Armstrong (Tex.), 11 S. W. Rep. 1048.

1. The defendant cannot by uniting in the information groundless accusations with those for which probable cause might exist, escape liability because of the plaintiff's inability to adjust the damages between the two. Boogher v. Bryant et al., 86 Mo. 42.

2. Bradner v. Faulkner, 93 N. Y. 515; Heyne v. Blair, 62 N. Y. 19; Galloway v. Burr, 32 Mich. 332; Pullen v. Glidden, 68 Me. 559; Lamb v. Galland, 44 Cal. 609. But while proof of defendant's good faith is admissible to mitigate punitive damages, it cannot be considered to mitigate compensatory damages, including those allowed for injury to the feelings. Fenelon v. Butts, 53 Wis. 344.

3. King v. Colvin, 11 R. I. 582.

4. Fitzgibbon v. Brown, 44 Me. 167; Sears v. Hathaway, 12 Cal. 277; Chambers v. Upton, 34 Fed. Rep. 473; Blizard v. Hays, 46 Ind. 166; Israel v. Brooks, 23 Ill. 526; Obrien v. Frasier, 47 N. J. L. 349; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 170; Rosenkrans v. Barker, 115 Ill. 331.

5. West v. Hayes, 104 Ind. 251.

6. In an action for causing arrest and detention from Friday till Monday, a verdict for $3,500 will not be set aside as excessive. Cuthbert v. Galloway, 35 Fed. Rep. 466. Where plaintiff, a respectable woman, was arrested for forcible entry into a house of defendant, an alleged assault, and was committed to jail with disorderly women, and required to give sureties of the peace without trial, and the arrest was proved without probable or reasonable cause, in order to keep her away from the house until defendant could put her things out and tear down the house, a verdict of $4,000 is not manifestly excessive. Clarke v. American Dock & Impr. Co., 35 Fed. Rep. 478.

MALPRACTICE.—(See ABORTION.)

- | | |
|--|---|
| I. Definition, 76. II. Care, Skill and Diligence, 76. (a) Duty to Exercise Reasonable and Ordinary Care, Skill and Diligence, 76. (b) What Constitutes Reasonable and Ordinary Care, Skill and Diligence, 78. (c) Effect of Locality Upon Standard of Care and Skill, 79. (d) Different Schools, 79. (e) Adoption of Latest Methods and Appliances, 79. (f) Duration of Attendance, 79. III. Errors of Judgment, 80. IV. No Implied Warranty to Cure, 80. V. Consultation with Others, 81. VI. Gratuitous Services, 81. VII. Contributory Negligence of Patient or Attendant, 81. VIII. Partnership Liability, 82. | IX. Action Barred by Recovery for Services, 83. X. Malpractice as a Defence to a Suit for Services, 83. XI. Pleading, 83. XII. Evidence, 83. (a) General Skilfulness, 83. (b) Failure to Effect a Cure, 83. (c) Medical Works as Evidence, 84. (d) Expert Evidence, 84. (e) Hypothetical Questions, 84. (f) Exhibition of Injured Limb to Jury, 84. XIII. Damages, 84. (a) Who May Recover, 84. (b) For What Damages May be Recovered, 84. (c) Amount of Damages, 85. (d) Compromise Verdicts, 85. XIV. Survival of Actions, 85. XV. Criminal Liability, 85. |
|--|---|

I. Definition.—Malpractice (Mala Praxis) is bad or unskilful practice in a physician or other professional person whereby the health of the patient is injured.

Wilful malpractice takes place when the physician purposely administers medicines or performs an operation which he knows and expects will result in damage or death to the individual under his care, as in the case of criminal abortion.

Negligent malpractice comprehends those cases where there is no criminal or dishonest object, but gross negligence of that attention which the situation of the patient requires, as if a physician should administer medicines while in a state of intoxication, from which injury would arise to his patient.

Ignorant malpractice is the administration of medicines calculated to do injury, which do harm, which a well educated and scientific medical man would know were not proper in the case.¹

II. Care, Skill and Diligence.—(a) Duty to Exercise Reasonable and Ordinary Care, Skill and Diligence.—Physicians, surgeons and dentists, by holding themselves out to the world as such, impliedly contract that they possess the reasonable and ordinary qualifications of their profession, and are under a duty to exercise reasonable and ordinary care, skill and diligence, but that is the extent of their liability.²

1. 2 Bouv. L. Dict. 139; Elwell Malpractice, 198 and 243.

2. Landon v. Humphrey, 9 Conn. 209; Ritchey v. West, 23 Ill. 385; McNevins v. Lowe, 40 Ill. 209; Kendall v. Brown, 74 Ill. 232; Barnes v. Means, 82 Ill. 379; Holtzman v. Hoy, 19 Ill. App.

459; Utley v. Burns, 70 Ill. 162; Fisher v. Niccolls, 2 Ill. App. 484; Quinn v. Donovan, 85 Ill. 194; Long v. Morrison, 14 Ind. 595; Peck v. Martin, 17 Ind. 115; Gramm v. Boener, 56 Ind. 497; Jones v. Angell, 95 Ind. 376; Tefft v. Wilcox, 6 Kan. 46; Branner v. Stormont, 9 Kan. 51; Small v. Howard, 128 Mass. 131; 35 Am. Rep. 363; Hitchcock v. Burget, 38 Mich. 501; Hesse v. Knippel, 1 Mich. N. P. 109; Getchell v. Hill, 21 Minn. 464; Getchell v. Lindley, 24 Minn. 265; Howard v. Grover, 28 Me. 97; Simonds v. Henry, 39 Me. 155; Patten v. Wiggin, 51 Me. 594; Ballou v. Prescott, 64 Me. 305; Leighton v. Sargent, 31 N. H. 119; Ely v. Wilbur, 49 N. J. L. 685; Carpenter v. Blake, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 488; 50 N. Y. 696; 10 Hun (N. Y.) 358; 75 N. Y. 12; Bellinger v. Craigue, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 534; Carpenter v. Blake, 17 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 358; Barton v. Govan, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 655; Gallaher v. Thompson, Wright (Ohio) 466; Craig v. Chambers, 17 Ohio St. 253; Boydston v. Giltner, 3 Oreg. 118; Heath v. Glisan, 3 Oreg. 64; McCandless v. McWha, 22 Pa. St. 261; Potter v. Warner, 91 Pa. St. 362; Haire v. Reese, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 138; Fowler v. Sergeant, 1 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 355; Braunberger v. Cless (Pa.), 4 Am. Law Reg. (N. S.) 587; Wood v. Clapp, 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 65; Alder v. Buckley, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 69; Graham v. Gautier, 21 Tex. 111; Hathorn v. Richmond, 48 Vt. 557; Briggs v. Taylor, 28 Vt. 180; Reynolds v. Graves, 3 Wis. 416; Gates v. Fleischer, 67 Wis. 504; Perivnowsky v. Freeman, 4 F. & F. 977; Jones v. Fay, 4 F. & F. 525; Rich v. Pierpont, 3 F. & F. 35; Seare v. Prentice, 8 East 48; Slater v. Baker, 2 Wils. 359; Lamphier v. Phipos, 8 C. & P. 475.

Negligence in Examination of Alleged Lunatic.—Physicians, in making a statutory examination of a person alleged to be insane, with a view to his confinement if they decide it necessary, do not act in a judicial capacity, and are liable for a lack of ordinary care and prudence in making their examination. A judge approving a certificate given under such circumstances is not liable to prosecution, as his duty is purely judicial. Ayers v. Russel, 3 N. Y. Supp. 338.

Physicians cannot be made liable for the insufficiency of methods pursued in reaching their conclusion as to sanity, but only for their falsehood; and defendants may show precisely the circumstances under which they acted, and such evidence is admissible in mitigation of damages, even if it fail to justify their action. Pennell v. Cummings, 75 Me. 163.

Deceit—Intrusion in Case of Confinement.—A physician took an unprofessional, unmarried man to attend a woman in confinement when there was no real need of his services. The patient and her husband made no objection to his presence because they believed him to be a medical associate of the doctor. Held, that the physician and the intruder were both liable in damages for the deceit practiced. De May v. Roberts, 46 Mich. 160; 41 Am. Rep. 154.

Consent to Operation.—Two surgeons performed an operation on a woman apparently with her consent. The patient died and her husband brought an action for malpractice, alleging that there was no consent to the operation. Held, that the burden of proof was upon the plaintiff, as the party who allows a surgical operation to be performed is presumed to have consented to it. If the surgeons performed the operation with due care and skill, they are not responsible for the result. State v. Housekeeper, 70 Md. 162.

Physicians Attending Cases of Infectious Disease.—A physician who is attending cases of infectious disease is bound to take such precaution as experience may have shown to be necessary to prevent the communication of the infection, and where a physician was told that if he was attending cases of smallpox his services would be dispensed with, and he promised not to attend such cases, but did so, and communicated the disease, it was held proper to admit evidence of such statement to the physician, to reduce the amount claimed in an action by him for treatment during the illness. Piper v. Menifee, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 465.

Skill Required of One Not a Physician.—"A person who, without special qualifications, volunteers to attend the sick, can at most be only required to exercise the skill and diligence usually bestowed by persons of like qualifications under like circumstances." Higgins v. McCabe, 126 Mass. 13.

Evidence.—Under an allegation that "the defendant wrongfully, negligently, and unskillfully performed said amputation," evidence is admissible showing that "the point of amputation was too high, and that the danger of death was somewhat increased by the selection of that point." Wright v. Hardy, 22 Wis. 348.

Limitation of Action.—An action against a physician for negligence in his treatment of a patient is within the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. N. Y.,

The burden of proof is upon the plaintiff in an action for malpractice to show that there was a want of due care, skill and diligence,¹ and also that the injury was the result of such want of care, skill and diligence.²

(b) What Constitutes Reasonable and Ordinary Care, Skill and Diligence.—The reasonable and ordinary care, skill and diligence which the law requires of physicians and surgeons is such as physicians and surgeons in the same general neighborhood, in the same general line of practice, ordinarily have and exercise in like cases.³

§ 383, requiring "an action to recover damages for a personal injury resulting from negligence" to be brought within three years, and this although the physician was treating the patient under a contract. Burrell v. Preston, 7 N. Y. Supp. 177. Compare Staley v. Jameson, 46 Ind. 159; Burns v. Barenfield, 84 Ind. 43.

1. Holtzman v. Hoy, 19 Ill. App. 459; Baird v. Morford, 29 Iowa 531; Vanhooover v. Berghoff, 90 Mo. 487; Craig v. Chambers, 17 Ohio St. 253; State v. Housekeeper, 70 Md. 162; Leighton v. Sargent, 31 N. H. 119.

2. Getchell v. Hill, 21 Minn. 464.

3. Hathorn v. Richmond, 48 Vt. 557; Wilnot v. Howard, 39 Vt. 447; Uteley v. Burns, 70 Ill. 162; Ritchie v. West, 23 Ill. 385; Almond v. Nugent, 34 Iowa 300; Tefft v. Wilcox, 6 Kan. 46; Small v. Howard, 128 Mass. 131; 35 Am. Rep. 363; Patten v. Wiggin, 51 Me. 594; West v. Martin, 31 Mo. 375; Leighton v. Sargent, 31 N. H. 119; Heath v. Glisan, 3 Oreg. 64; Graham v. Gautier, 21 Tex. 111.

"The true measure is that ordinarily exercised in the profession by the members thereof as a body; that is, the average of the reasonable skill and diligence ordinarily exercised by the profession as a whole; not that exercised by the thoroughly educated, nor yet that exercised by the moderately educated, nor merely of the well educated, but the average of the thorough, the well and the moderate—all, in education, skill, diligence, etc." Smothers v. Hanks, 34 Iowa 286. See also Hitchcock v. Burgett, 38 Mich. 501.

In McCandless v. McWha, 22 Pa. St. 261, the court said that the degree of skill required was that "which ordinarily characterizes the profession," but in a preceding portion of the opinion it was said that it was such skill "as thoroughly educated surgeons ordinarily employ," and the language of the opinion as a whole would seem to indicate that the latter statement is the test which the court intended to prescribe. See also Haire v. Reese, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 138.

Failure to Give Instructions.—A patient who had been properly treated for a broken leg was discharged before it had regained its strength without giving him proper instructions as to its care. The surgeons were held liable for negligence in not giving the instructions, the patient having subsequently lost his leg because he used it improperly. Beck v. German Klinik (Iowa), 43 N. W. Rep. 617. See also Carpenter v. Blake, 60 Barb. 485; 50 N. Y. 696; 10 Hun (N. Y.) 358; 75 N. Y. 12.

Dentist Using Chloroform.—A dentist in using chloroform is only bound to look to its natural and probable effects. Bogle v. Winslow, 5 Phila. (Pa.) 136.

"Reasonable and Ordinary"—Equivalent Words.—The following expressions have been held equivalent to the expression reasonable and ordinary as applied to the care, skill and diligence to be exercised by a physician or surgeon; "average skill" in Carpenter v. Blake, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 488; "fair knowledge and skill" in Jones v. Angell, 95 Ind. 376. "Ordinary care and skill are used in their common acceptance." Heath v. Glisan, 3 Oreg. 64.

Evidence.—In an action for malpractice in surgery, defendant may show by experts that the treatment he gave was such as a surgeon of ordinary knowledge and skill would have given. Quinn v. Higgins, 63 Wis. 664.

Upon a question made as to the degree of professional skill possessed by a surgeon, as compared with that ordinarily possessed by the profession in general, the opinion of the physician with whom such surgeon studied his profession is not competent evidence. Leighton v. Sargent, 31 N. H. 119.

(c) Effect of Locality Upon Standard of Care and Skill.—The locality in which a physician or surgeon practices is to be taken into account. One practicing in a small town or sparsely settled country district is not to be expected to exercise the care and skill of one residing in and having the opportunities afforded by a large city. He is bound to exercise the average degree of skill possessed by the profession in such localities generally.¹

(d) Different Schools.—The law does not favor any particular school of medicine and the treatment of a physician is to be tested by the principles of that school to which he belongs.²

(e) Adoption of Latest Methods and Appliances.—Physicians and surgeons should keep abreast of the times and make use of the latest and most improved methods and appliances, having regard to the locality and general practice of the profession, and it is for the jury to decide from the particular circumstances of each case whether the physician or surgeon has fulfilled his duty in this respect.³ A departure from approved methods of practice resulting in injury to the patient will render the medical practitioner liable, however honest the intention and expectation of benefit to the patient may be.⁴

(f) Duration of Attendance.—If a physician or surgeon be sent for to attend a patient, the effect of his responding to the

1. In Gramm v. Boener, 56 Ind. 497; WORDEN, J., said: "It seems to us that physicians or surgeons practicing in small towns, or rural or sparsely populated districts, are bound to possess and exercise at least the average degree of skill possessed and exercised by the profession in such localities generally. It will not do, as we think, to say that if a physician or surgeon has exercised such a degree of skill as is ordinarily exercised in the particular locality in which he practices, it will be sufficient. There might be but few practicing in the given locality, all of whom might be quacks, ignorant pretenders to knowledge not possessed by them, and it would not do to say that because one possessed and exercised as much skill as the other, he could not be chargeable with the want of reasonable skill." Kelsey v. Hay, 84 Ind. 189.

In addition to the above regard must also be had to the advanced state of the profession at the time of the treatment. Small v. Howard, 128 Mass. 131; Gates v. Fleischer, 67 Wis. 504; Smothers v. Hanks, 34 Iowa 286; Almond v. Nugent, 34 Iowa 300; Haire v. Reese, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 138; Nelson v. Harrington, 72 Wis. 591.

2. Bowman v. Woods, 1 Greene

(Iowa) 441; Patten v. Wiggin, 51 Me. 594; Heese v. Knippel, 1 Mich. N. P. 109; Corsi v. Maretzek, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 1; Williams v. Poppleton, 3 Oreg. 139.

Clairvoyants do not constitute a school, since they have no fixed principles or formulated rules for the treatment of disease. They are under a duty to treat their patients with the ordinary skill and knowledge of physicians in good standing practicing in their vicinity. Nelson v. Harrington, 72 Wis. 591.

Skill Required of Empirics.—One not a regular physician, holding himself out as capable of treating particular maladies, is bound to exercise the skill and care usually possessed and employed by the general physician in the treatment of such maladies. Musser v. Chase, 29 Ohio St. 577. See also Rudock v. Lowe, 4 F. & F. (Eng.) 519.

3. McCandless v. McWha, 22 Pa. St. 261; Vanhooser v. Berghoff, 90 Mo. 487.

4. Carpenter v. Blake, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 488; 50 N. Y. 696; 10 Hun (N. Y.) 358; 75 N. Y. 12; Lamphier v. Phipor, 8 C. & P. 475; Seare v. Prentice, 8 East 348; Slater v. Baker, 2 Wils. 359.

call, in the absence of any special agreement, will be an engagement to attend to the case as long as it requires attention, unless he gives notice of his intention to discontinue his visits, or is dismissed by the patient, and he is bound to exercise reasonable and ordinary care and skill in determining when his attendance should cease.¹

III. Errors of Judgment.—Physicians and surgeons are bound to give their patients the benefit of their best judgment, but they are not liable for a mere error of judgment.² An error of judgment may be so gross, however, as to be inconsistent with reasonable care, skill and diligence.³

IV. No Implied Warranty to Cure.—There is no implied warranty on the part of a physician that he will effect a cure,⁴ and he can be held as a guarantor of success only in virtue of an express agreement.⁵

1. Dale v. Donaldson, 48 Ark. 188; Ritchey v. West, 23 Ill. 385; Ballou v. Prescott, 64 Me. 305; Potter v. Virgil, 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 578; Barber v. Martin, 62 Me. 536; Bemus v. Howard, 3 Watts (Pa.) 255.

Duty of Veterinary Surgeon—Evidence.—In an action to recover damages caused by the alleged negligence and unskillfulness of a veterinary surgeon in gelding a colt, held that instructions to the jury that it was the duty of the defendant to give the colt such continued further attention, after the operation, as the necessity of the case required, in the absence of special agreement or reasonable notice to the contrary, were correct, though the declaration only alleged a want of care and skill with reference to the operation itself. Evidence that other colts, gelded by defendant at the same time, had died, having been received, it was error not to allow defendant to testify as to the cause of death. Williams v. Gilman, 71 Me. 21.

2. Tefft v. Wilcox, 6 Kan. 46; Patten v. Wiggin, 51 Me. 594; Vanhooser v. Berghoff, 90 Mo. 487; Leighton v. Sargent, 27 N. H. 460; Carpenter v. Blake, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 488; 50 N. Y. 696; 10 Hun (N. Y.) 358; 75 N. Y. 12; Wells v. World's Disp. M. Assoc., 45 Hun (N. Y.) 588; Williams v. Poppleton, 3 Oreg. 139.

On the trial the appellants asked the court to instruct the jury "that if they believe the defendants used ordinary skill and care in the treatment of plaintiff's hand, and made a mistake in judgment, then the defendants are not liable for the result of such mistake under the law." This instruction the court refused to give as asked, but gave it with the following modification: "Provided, the defendants in making up their judgment did not disregard the well settled rules and principles of medical science." Fisher v. Nicolls, 2 Ill. App. 484.

Physician Advising Sanitary Precautions.—Paper may be removed from the walls of rooms in which smallpox patients have been sick, if in the opinion of the attending physician it has become so soiled and besmeared with small pox virus as to make its removal necessary; and an action of trespass will not lie by the owner of the building against a physician for advising or directing such removal. 1874. Seavey v. Preble, 64 Me. 120.

Advice as to Extent of Injury.—A surgeon having been employed by a railway company to examine a passenger who had sustained an injury in a collision on their line, and he having, so far as he could see or judge, on his own statement of his injuries, told him that they were so slight that he accepted a small sum in compensation, held, even assuming that his injuries were greater, there was no ground of action. Pimm v. Roper, 2 F. & F. 783.

3. West v. Martin, 31 Mo. 375; Howard v. Grover, 28 Me. 97.

4. Tefft v. Wilcox, 6 Kan. 466; Heese v. Knippel, 1 Mich. N. P. 109; Getchell v. Hill, 21 Minn. 464; O'Hara v. Wells, 14 Neb. 403; Leighton v. Sargent, 27 N. H. 460; Craig v. Chambers, 17 Ohio St. 253; Bliss v. Long, Wright (Ohio) 351; Grindle v. Rush, 7 Ohio, pt. 2, 123; Haire v. Reese, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 138; Lamphier v. Phiposs, 8 C. & P. (Eng.) 475.

5. Ely v. Wilbur, 49 N. J. L. 685;

V. Consultation with Others.—If a physician or surgeon is not competent or feels that he is not competent to treat a case, it is his duty to recommend the employment of another, but if he is competent and so considers himself, and is in doubt concerning the case, he should use his best judgment as to consultation with other physicians or surgeons.¹

The refusal to accept the assistance of another in the treatment of a case imposes no higher duty upon a physician or a surgeon.²

VI. Gratuitous Services.—The fact that a physician or surgeon renders services gratuitously does not affect his duty to exercise reasonable and ordinary care, skill and diligence.³

VII. Contributory Negligence of Patient or Attendant.—If the fault or negligence of a patient or his attendant contribute to the patient's injury, he cannot recover for malpractice by the physician or surgeon,⁴ and this is true in a case where the natural tempera-

Grindle v. Rush, 7 Ohio, pt. 2, 123; Gallaher v. Thompson, Wright (Ohio) 466; Smith v. Hyde, 19 Vt. 54.

An allegation that a surgeon was engaged "to set and reduce the said fracture . . . and to tend it, and cure and heal the same for a fee, and the said defendant entered upon such retainer and employment," implies no more than that the surgeon would bring to bear a reasonable degree of care and skill as a surgeon in the undertaking. Hoopingarner v. Levy, 77 Ind. 455. See also Vanhoozer v. Berghoff, 90 Mo. 487; Reynolds v. Graves, 3 Wis. 416.

1. Mallen v. Boynton, 132 Mass. 443.
Evidence.—In an action for malpractice it is competent for the defendant to show that he employed another skillful surgeon to assist him. Jones v. Angell, 95 Ind. 376.

2. Potter v. Warner, 91 Pa. St. 362; 36 Am. Rep. 668.

3. McNevin v. Lowe, 40 Ill. 209 (limiting Ritchey v. West, 23 Ill. 385).

The fact that for eighteen months a physician had forborne to assert a claim for compensation for his attendance and treatment might, in an action for malpractice, and especially in a doubtful or balanced case, be urged with great force as in the nature of an admission of neglect or want of skill; as evidence of a consciousness on the part of the physician that he was not entitled to pay for his services and that they were worthless. It makes a collateral issue, upon which the defendant is called upon to give explanatory or contradictory evidence, and by which the jury may be embarrassed in their deliberations. Baird v. Gillett, 47 N. Y. 186.

4. Lower v. Franks, 115 Ind. 334; Chamberlain v. Porter, 9 Minn. 260; West v. Martin, 31 Mo. 375; Potter v. Warner, 91 Pa. St. 362; 36 Am. Rep. 668; McCandless v. McWha, 22 Pa. St. 261; Reber v. Herring, 115 Pa. St. 599; Haire v. Reese, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 138.

Disobedience of Instructions.—“If the patient, by refusing to adopt the remedies or comply with the directions of the physicians, frustrates or defeats the endeavors of the physician, or if he aggravates the case by his misconduct, he cannot charge to the physician the consequences due distinctly to himself. Jones v. Angell, 95 Ind. 376. See also O'Hara v. Wells, 14 Neb. 403.

Information Given Patient by Surgeon About Injury.—“The information which a surgeon may give to a patient concerning the nature of his malady is a circumstance that should be considered by the jury in determining the question whether the patient, in disobeying the instructions of the surgeon, was guilty of contributory negligence or not. Geiselman v. Scott, 25 Ohio St. 86.

Refusal to Allow Experiment to Remedy Surgeon's Mistake.—A surgeon had been called to treat a dislocated arm, which he failed to do in a proper manner. Other surgeons were consulted, and one of them proposed placing the patient under the influence of an anæsthetic and attempting to reduce the dislocation. This the patient's father refused to allow. Held, that he was not bound to do so, and that evidence of his ment or physical weakness of the patient are the contributing causes of injury.¹

Where the injury attributable to the fault of the patient can be separated from that of the physician, the former may recover for so much of the injury as is due to the fault of the latter.²

When a patient, relying on his own judgment, gives directions as to his treatment he cannot claim damages of the physician for the consequences.³

The burden of proof to show contributory negligence is upon the defendant in an action for malpractice.⁴

VIII. Partnership Liability.—Where physicians or surgeons engage in practice as partners all are liable for malpractice by any member of the firm.⁵

refusal could have no effect to mitigate the damages. Chamberlin v. Morgan, 68 Pa. St. 168. See also Fowler v. Sergeant, 1 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 355.

Pleading.—The allegations were "that the appellants were practicing physicians and surgeons, and as such undertook to set a broken arm of the infant son of the appellee; that by reason of their unskillfulness, negligence and want of care in treating the broken arm it became inflamed and mortified and had to be amputated." Held, that the averments were sufficient to show that the appellee and his injured son were without fault, and that their negligence did not contribute to the result. Scudder v. Crossan, 43 Ind. 343.

Case Treated by Another Physician.—Where a surgeon treated a fractured limb improperly and injury resulted, held, that he was liable notwithstanding that another surgeon who subsequently attended the case might have discovered the error and relieved the patient. Hathorn v. Richmond, 48 Vt. 557.

1. Simonds v. Henry, 39 Me. 155; Haire v. Reese, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 138; Bogle v. Winslow, 5 Phila. (Pa.) 136.

Ill Health Due Only in Part to Malpractice.—Where the ill health of a patient was due partly to malpractice and partly to a disease from which the patient was suffering at the time of treatment and for which she was not being treated, held, that the patient could recover for the malpractice, and in awarding the damages the jury must distinguish the effects of the different causes. Gates v. Fleischer, 67 Wis. 504.

Insanity of Patient.—"As most of the insane are under compulsory medical treatment, they cannot be assumed to occupy the same moral and fiduciary relations to their medical attendants as do the sane. They are not bound to co-operate with their medical attendants in securing a cure in their own persons, as sane patients are, and their neglect or unwillingness to do so cannot be imputed to them as contributory negligence in an action for malpractice, any more than to a child. And yet, since insanity at law is a term of variable significance, covering very different shades of mental unsoundness, I am not prepared to say that there could not be a phase of it in which a patient might be capable of such negligence as would amount to contributory wrong on his part." People ex rel. Norton v. N. Y. Hospital, 3 Abb. N. C. 229, 259.

Evidence.—In an action against a surgeon for alleged malpractice, there being no allegation under which the testimony became material, evidence "as to the weakness of the bones of the plaintiff's family" was held to be inadmissible. West v. Martin, 31 Mo. 375.

2. Hibbard v. Thompson, 109 Mass. 286; Wilmot v. Howard, 39 Vt. 447.

3. Gramm v. Boener, 56 Ind. 497; Hancke v. Hooper, 7 Car. & P. (Eng.) 8.

4. Gramm v. Boener, 56 Ind. 497. A contrary rule is adopted in Iowa. Baird v. Morford, 29 Iowa 531.

5. Hyrne v. Erwin, 23 S. Car. 226; 55 Am. Rep. 15; Whittaker v. Collins, 34 Minn. 209.

Declarations by a Partner After Employment Ceases.—If one partner had administered an improper prescription or neglected to do something proper, the other would have been answerable for his acts or omissions. But for

IX. Action Barred by Recovery for Services.—A recovery by a physician or surgeon for his services will bar a future action for malpractice,¹ but in some of the States it is held that if the recovery be by confession or default it is not a bar.²

X. Malpractice as a Defence to a Suit for Services.—See PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

XI. Pleading.—It is a sufficient allegation in a pleading to allege that a person was retained as a physician or surgeon and entered upon the cure.³ It is not a misjoinder to join a count in the declaration that the defendant "maliciously" pretended that he could effect a cure with intent to defraud.⁴ A counter claim for malpractice may be set up to defeat an action or reduce a claim for services by a physician in a suit in justice's court.⁵

XII. Evidence.—(a) General Skilfulness.—In an action for malpractice alleging want of skill and neglect it is competent to show the skilfulness and learning of the defendant.⁶

(b) Failure to Effect a Cure.—The mere failure to effect a cure raises no presumption of a want of proper care, skill and diligence.⁷

opinions expressed by the one in the absence of the other, after the employment was at an end, as to the propriety of the treatment or the results attained, the absent partner is not responsible. Boor v. Lowery, 103 Ind. 468.

Recommendation of Another Physician.—A surgeon for a railroad company being about to leave town recommended another surgeon in case the latter's services were needed during the former's absence. Held, that the regular surgeon did not, by his recommendation, render himself liable for the acts of the one recommended by him. Hitchcock v. Burgett, 38 Mich. 501.

1. Bellinger v. Craigie, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 534; Blair v. Bartlett, 75 N. Y. 150; Gates v. Preston, 41 N. Y. 113.

2. Resseque v. Byers, 52 Wis. 650; 38 Am. Rep. 775; Skyles v. Bonner, 1 Cin. Super. Ct. 464; Goble v. Dillon, 86 Ind. 327; 44 Am. Rep. 308.

3. Hanselman v. Carstens, 60 Mich. 187; Peppin v. Shepherd, 11 Price (Eng.) 400.

In action for malpractice rendering amputation of plaintiff's leg necessary, the judge instructed the jury "that if the jury believe from the evidence that the defendants were guilty of negligence, carelessness or inattention in their treatment of the plaintiff's wounds, by which the plaintiff was caused great bodily pain and suffering, the plaintiff is entitled to a verdict." In giving this instruction the court erred. The defendants are not sued for causing bodily pain and suffering by their negligence and carelessness. They are sued for alleged malpractice by which amputation became necessary. Moor v. Teed, 3 Cal. 190.

4. Cadwell v. Farrell, 28 Ill. 438.

5. Howell v. Goodrich, 69 Ill. 556.

6. Leighton v. Sargent, 27 N. H. 460. Where the plaintiff introduces evidence of the skill and reputation of an expert who has been called to show improper treatment by the defendant, the same witnesses may be asked as to the skilfulness and reputation of the defendant. Vanhooser v. Berghoff, 90 Mo. 487.

Where the defendant has introduced evidence of his general skilfulness the plaintiff may produce evidence to show that he was not a regularly educated physician and surgeon. Grannis v. Branden, 5 Day (Conn.) 260; 5 Am. Dec. 143.

It is not improper to ask a witness, in order to rebut the charge of negligence, if in treating the case he exercised the best judgment and skill of which he was capable. Fisher v. Nicolls, 2 Ill. App. 484.

A number of the courts have refused to allow evidence of general skilfulness as a defence to an action for malpractice. Holtzman v. Hoy, 19 Ill. App. 459; Carpenter v. Blake, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 488; 50 N. Y. 606; 10 Hun (N. Y.) 358; 75 N. Y. 12; Williams v. Poppleton, 3 Oreg. 139; Mertz v. Detweiler, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 376.

7. Tefft v. Wilcox, 6 Kan. 46; Haire v. Reese, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 138.

(c) Medical Works as Evidence.—See vol. 2, 467m.

(d) Expert Evidence.—See PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

(e) Hypothetical Questions.—The plaintiff may put to a witness a hypothetical case founded upon the facts constituting the alleged malpractice and ask him whether they indicate proper care, skill or diligence,¹ but it is improper to include any supposition not borne out by the evidence.²

(f) Exhibition of Injured Limb to Jury.—In an action against a surgeon for malpractice in the treatment of an injured limb it is proper to allow the plaintiff to exhibit the limb to the jury.³

XIII. Damages—(a) Who May Recover.—A patient who has suffered injury on account of a physician's malpractice may recover though the physician was summoned and paid by another.⁴

A husband may recover damages against a surgeon for causing the death of his wife through unskillfulness in performing an operation.⁵

(b) For What Damages May be Recovered.—In an action for malpractice damages may be recovered for pain and suffering produced by the negligence or want of skill of the physician,⁶ and also for the loss of time and expense incurred on account of the improper treatment.⁷ Regard is also to be had to the nature of the injury, whether it be temporary or permanent, and also to the situation and condition of the injured party.⁸

Success as a Criterion of Skill.—The fact that a fractured limb is shorter after the recovery of the patient is not prima facie evidence of a want of skill in the surgeon who attended the case. Piles v. Hughes, 10 Iowa 579.

The success that attends a surgical operation, though not conclusive, is a circumstance from which the skill may be inferred. Alder v. Buckley, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 69.

1. Olmsted v. Gere, 100 Pa. St. 127; Mayo v. Wright, 63 Mich. 32. There is no objection to asking an expert witness what, assuming the testimony to be true without summarizing it in the question, his opinion is as to the treatment. Wright v. Hardy, 22 Wis. 348; Gates v. Fleischer, 67 Wis. 504.

2. Reber v. Herring, 115 Pa. St. 599; Mayo v. Wright, 63 Mich. 32.

3. Fowler v. Sergeant, 1 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 355. Where a suit was brought a number of years after the injury it was held proper to refuse to allow the plaintiff to exhibit the injured limb to the jury. Carstens v. Hanselman, 61 Mich. 426.

4. Nugent v. Boston etc. R. Co., 80 Me. 62; Gladwell v. Steggall, 5 Bing. N. C. 733; 35 E. C. L. 392.

Under the Indiana acts 1879, p. 160, a married woman may sue alone for injury caused by malpractice. Barnett v. Leonard, 66 Ind. 422.

5. Cross v. Guthery, 2 Root (Conn.) 90; 1 Am. Dec. 61.

6. Tefft v. Wilcox, 6 Kan. 46; Wenger v. Calder, 78 Ill. 275; Chamberlain v. Porter, 9 Minn. 260. When the action is by husband, master or parent of the patient for individual loss the suffering of the patient cannot be taken into consideration. Gaston v. Bd. Coms. Marion Co., 3 Ind. 497.

7. Stone v. Evans, 32 Minn. 243; Tefft v. Wilcox, 6 Kan. 46.

Evidence of Loss of Support.—In an action by a husband and wife for improper treatment of a felon where there was no allegation of loss of services of the wife, evidence that the husband was an invalid depending on his wife for support cannot be introduced. Twombly v. Leach, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 397.

Expense of Doctoring a Horse.—In a suit to recover for an injury done to a horse, through the unskillfulness of the defendant, the expense of doctoring and taking care of it cannot be recovered, unless declared for as special damage. Patten v. Libbey, 32 Me. 378.

8. Chamberlain v. Porter, 9 Minn. 260; Tefft v. Wilcox, 6 Kan. 46. For

(c) Amount of Damages.—It is not competent, in an action for malpractice, to show declarations of the physician indicating ignorance for the purpose of increasing the damages.¹

An instruction to a jury, in a case where no wilful negligence has been shown, that they may find a verdict for any sum they see fit, up to the amount claimed in the complaint, if they believe that the defendant was wilfully negligent, is improper.²

(d) Compromise Verdicts.—What are termed compromise verdicts are not looked upon with favor in malpractice cases. Each party has a right to insist that the jury, and each juror, shall render a verdict, if at all, literally "according to the law and the evidence as given on the trial."³

XIV. Survival of Actions.—An action for malpractice does not survive the death of either party unless there be some special injury to property involved.⁴

XV. Criminal Liability.—See ABORTION.—A physician or surgeon may be held criminally responsible for his malpractice, but only in case of the grossest ignorance or criminal inattention.⁵

If a medical man, through gross ignorance or inattention, cause the death of a patient he is guilty of manslaughter,⁶ or if death a peculiar case involving exemplary damages, see Brooke v. Clark, 57 Tex. 105.

1. Grannis v. Branden, 5 Day (Conn.) 260; 5 Am. Dec. 143.

Excessive Damages.—The question as to amount of damages belongs to the jury. In relation thereto they have a very broad discretion. The general rule has been that a new trial will not be granted in an action of this kind for excessive damages, unless they are so clearly excessive as to indicate that the jury acted from prejudice, partiality or corruption, or were misled as to the measure of damages. That the jury assessed higher damages than the court would have assessed is no reason why the verdict should be set aside. Kelsey v. Hay, 84 Ind. 189.

2. Wenger v. Calder, 78 Ill. 275.

3. Boydston v. Giltner, 3 Oreg. 118.

"It is the duty of each juror carefully and patiently to canvass and consider the evidence, in all its bearings, with an honest and conscientious effort to reconcile any difference that may exist between him and his fellow jurors, as to the truth of the matters put in issue, and with a willingness to adopt the views of his fellow jurors, when he can see that they accord with the law and the evidence. But it would be a gross wrong to one or the other of these parties to carry the spirit of compromise to the extent of yielding to that which you do not believe to be true, and to render a verdict merely for the sake of compromise, that you do not believe to be in accordance with the truth." Heath v. Glisan, 3 Oreg. 64.

4. Boor v. Lowrey, 103 Ind. 468; Vittum v. Gilman, 48 N. H. 416; Jenkins v. French, 58 N. H. 532; Wolf v. Wall, 40 Ohio St. 111; Lattimore v. Simmons, 13 Serg. & R. 183; Chamberlain v. Williams, 2 M. & S. 408. Compare Long v. Morrison, 14 Ind. 595.

5. State v. Hardister, 38 Ark. 605; Rex v. Van Butchell, 3 Car. & P. 629; Rex v. Williamson, 3 Car. & P. 635; Rex v. Long, 4 Car. & P. 308.

6. Com. v. Pierce, 138 Mass. 165; State v. Hardister, 38 Ark. 605; Tessymond's Case, 1 Lewin 169; Ferguson's Case, 1 Lewin 181; Rex v. Simpson, Willcock Med. Prof., pt. 2, ccxxvii; Webb's Case, 2 Lewin 106, 211; Rex v. Senior, 1 Moody 346; Rex v. Williamson, 3 C. & P. 635; Rex v. Long, 4 C. & P. 308, 423; Rex v. Spiller, 5 C. & P. 333; Queen v. Spilling, 2 Moo. & R. 107; Reg. v. Whitehead, 3 C. & K. 202; Reg. v. Crick, 1 F. & F. 519; Reg. v. Crook, 1 F. & F. 521; Reg. v. Markus, 4 F. & F. 356; Reg. v. Chamberlain, 10 Cox C. C. 486; Reg. v. McLeod, 12 Cox C. C. 534; Reg. v. Spencer, 10 Cox C. C. 525.

MALPRACTICE—MALTREATMENT—MAN.

does not follow but the patient be injured, he is guilty of a misdemeanor.¹

Some of the State courts have held that if a physician treats a patient in good faith and to the best of his ability, and death or injury ensues, he is not criminally liable.²

MALT.—See INTOXICATING LIQUORS, vol. 11, p. 567.

MALTREATMENT.—Synonymous with bad treatment.³

MAN.—1. Includes all human beings or any human being, whether male or female, as in the expressions "offences against man, manslaughter, material man, remainderman, warehouseman, and, perhaps, bondsman."

2. Restricted to males, adults, as in alderman, assemblyman, congressman, jurymen.

3. In feudal law, a vassal.⁴

1. Greenvelt's Case, 1 Ld. Raym. 213; Rex v. Long, 4 C. & P. 398.

2. State v. Schultz, 55 Iowa 628; Rice v. State, 8 Mo. 561; Com. v. Thompson, 6 Mass. 134 (dis. in 138 Mass. 165).

3. Com. v. Hackett, 2 Allen (Mass.) 142. Maltreatment does not imply, necessarily, conduct that is either wilfully or grossly careless. Results from ignorance, negligence or wilfulness. This, at least, is the meaning as applied to the treatment of a wound by a surgeon.

4. Anderson's L. Dict.

Word "Man" Includes a Woman.—In Silver v. Ladd, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 219, in construing a benevolent statute of the government, made for the benefit of its citizens, and inviting and encouraging them to settle on its distant public lands, the words "single man" and "married man" may, especially if aided by the context and other parts of the statute, be taken in a generic sense. It was held, accordingly, that the fourth section of the act of congress of 27th September, 1850, granting, by way of donation, lands in Oregon Territory to "every white settler or occupant—American half breed Indians included," embraced within the term single man an unmarried woman.

In Smith v. Allen, 31 Ark. 271, ENGLISH, C. J., observes: "Section 7, Gantt's Digest, provides that: 'When any man shall die, leaving minor children and no widow, and his estate shall not be above the value of $300, his entire estate shall pass to and vest in his minor children for their support and education, and the (probate) court shall not be required to appoint an administrator on such estate.' In this case a woman died leaving a minor child and no husband, and her estate was not above $300. By statutory rule of construction, the word man in the above section includes a woman, and the word children includes a child.

When It Does Not Include Woman.—The representation of the People act, 1867, giving the franchise to every "man" possessed of a certain qualification, does not enfranchise women, because, although (by 13 and 14 Vict., ch. 21) "in all acts words importing the masculine gender shall be deemed and taken to include 'females,' the word 'man,' in the ordinary and popular sense of words, is used in contradistinction to the word 'woman.'" Wilberf. Stat. Law 123, citing Chorlton v. Lings, L. R., 4 C. P. 374.

In its most extended sense the term includes not only the adult male sex of the human species, but women and children. Examples: "Of offences against man, some are more immediately against the king, others more immediately against the subject." 1 Hawk. Pl. Cr., ch. 2, § 1.

"Offences against the life of 'man' come under the general name of homicide, which, in our law, signifies the killing of a man by a man." 1 Hawk. Pl. Cr., ch. 8, § 2.

It was considered in the civil or Roman law that although man and person are synonymous in grammar, they had a different acceptation in law; all persons were men, but all men—for example, slaves—were not persons, but things. Bouv. L. Dict.

"Man, Dog or Cat in a Statute."—In 3 Edw. 1, ch. 4, the words "man, dog or cat" include all animals escaping alive from a wreck. 2 Inst. 167.

"Man and Wife" Same as "Husband

MANAGE.—To direct; control; govern; administer; oversee.¹

MANAGER.—A person appointed or elected to manage the affairs of another. A term applied to those officers of a corporation who are authorized to manage its affairs.²

and Wife.—In Clancy v. Clancy, 33 N. W. (Mich.) 889-892, plaintiff and defendant entered into the following agreement: "An article of agreement made and entered into by and between Mrs. Mary McCarthy, of Chicago, Ill., and Dennis Clancy, of Detroit, Mich. We mutually and jointly from now henceforth and forever, agree to live as man and wife, but each party retains the right to buy, sell or transfer their respective properties without question of the other party. Mrs. Mary McCarthy, Dennis Clancy. Witness H M, E M." The court held that this was not an agreement for marriage. MORSE, J., (dissenting) observes: "My brethren would make this contract an agreement of concubinage, against the consent of the woman, simply because the word man is used instead of 'husband.' This is the gist of the opinion of Mr. JUSTICE SHERWOOD: 'I cannot so regard it in its language or its intent; and even if I thought either party so intended when it was made. I should consider it, in the absence of any fraud upon the part of the other party, my duty under the law, and in the interest of purity and justice, to hold them as legally married,' etc. I can see no material difference between the use of the word 'man' in this contract and the word 'husband.' The counsel for defendant attempted to make a distinction between the meaning of the two words, and my brother Sherwood seems to have followed this play upon words in his opinion. I find the common acceptance of the term 'man and wife' in every day life, and even in our best literature to be the same as 'husband and wife.' And its use is by all odds the most common. Webster gives as one of his definitions of 'man,' 'a married man, a husband,' quoting a line from Addison, 'Every wife ought to answer for her man.' The intent of this contract was one of marriage; and, although that word is not used, the essence of it is there."

1. Anderson's L. Dict.

Under the Laws of Connecticut, 1885, ch. 110, providing (section 81) that conservators "shall have the charge of," and (section 84) that they "shall manage" the estates of their wards, such conservators have power by virtue of their appointment, and without first obtaining authority from the court of probate, to lease the premises of their wards, for what, in view of all the circumstances, is a reasonable time. Palmer v. Cheseboro, 10 Atl. Rep. (Conn.) 508.

Manage an Estate.—The words "to manage an estate" in a will give, in common parlance, as well as legal acceptance, no authority to part with the entire interest. Roosevelt v. Heirs of Fulton, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 81.

"Manage and Superintend".—The words "managed" and "superintended" as used in the Sole Traders' act (1 Comp. L. 223) are synonymous. The husband cannot direct, conduct or control the business in which the wife is engaged, or any part of it. Youngworth v. Jewell, 15 Nev. 45.

Managed Carelessly and Negligently.—In Smith v. Old Colony and Newport R. R. Co., 10 R. I. 22, DUFFEE, J., observes in the opinion of the court: "In regard to the sufficiency of the declaration, with some variation of phraseology in the different counts, it alleges, in effect, that the defendants, while using their locomotive engine and other rolling stock on their road, so carelessly and negligently managed the same that the plaintiff's cotton mill was set on fire by sparks from said locomotive engine. The point made is, that the injury complained of is occasioned by careless management, not of the engine, but of the fire in the engine. We think, however, that the same meaning is conveyed by the language used as would be conveyed by the language suggested. The management of an engine consists in part of the management of the fire which generates the motive force of the engine."

2. Bouv. L. Dict. Also one of the persons appointed on the part of the house of representatives to prosecute impeachments before the senate.

In banking corporations these officers are commonly called directors, and the power to conduct the affairs of the company is vested in a board of direc-

MANAGING AGENT of a foreign corporation, upon whom service of process can be made, see 8 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, p. 386.

MANDAMUS.I. Definition, 91.*II. Origin and Nature of the Remedy, 92.

1. Mandamus and Injunction Distinguished, 93.
2. What Courts May Issue Mandamus, 93.
3. When Issued, 94.
 - (a) Issued in the Discretion of the Court, 97.
 - (b) When Duties Are not Discretionary, 98.
 - (c) When Duties Are Purely Ministerial, 99.
4. Statutory Remedy, 101.
5. Statutory Rights, 102.
6. Equitable Relief, 102.
7. Remedy by Indictment, 103.
8. Enforcement of Contracts, 104.
9. Unliquidated Damages, 104.
10. Useless and Unlawful Acts, 104.
11. Omissions of Duty, 105.
12. Demand and Refusal, 106.
13. Laches, 107.

14. Notice, 107.III. Against Inferior Courts, 108.

1. Generally, 108.
2. Discretion of Inferior Courts, 108.
 - (a) Exercise of Jurisdiction, 112.
 - (b) Pleading, 112.
 - (c) Judgments, 112.
 - (1) Enforcing Judgments, 113.
 - (d) Continuance, 114.
 - (e) Supersedeas, 114.
 - (f) Change of Venue, 115.
 - (g) Dismissal of Causes, 116.
 - (h) Removing Cause from Docket, 116.
 - (i) Reinstating Attachment, 117.
 - (j) Setting Aside Summons, 117.
 - (k) Granting or Dissolving Injunctions, 117.
 - (l) Granting Licence, 118.
 - (m) Other Remedies, 118.

tors. In other private corporations, such as railroad companies, canal and coal companies, etc., these officers are called "managers." Being agents, when their authority is limited they have no power to bind their principal beyond such authority. Bouv. L. Dict.; Salem Bank v. Gloucester Bank, 17 Mass. 29.

An ambiguous word, since it may mean either a person retained generally to represent the principal in his absence, or one who has the superintendence of a particular contract or job, in which latter case he is like a fellow workman. Murphy v. Smith, 19 C. B., N. S. 366.

Managing Owner of Ship.—The managing owner of a ship is one of several co-owners, to whom the others, or those of them who join in the adventure, have delegated the management of the ship. He has authority to do all things usual and necessary in the management of the ship and the delivery of the cargo, to enable her to prosecute her voyage and earn freight, with the right to appoint an agent for the purpose. It seems that it is a question to be decided in each case, whether a managing owner has been appointed by all his co-owners or only by some of them, and consequently whether he has power to bind all of them or only some of them." He binds those whose agent he is; he binds nobody besides. Per BOWEN, J., in Frazer v. Cuthbertson, 6 Q. B. Div. 93. See also Coulthurst v. Sweet, L. R., 1 C. P. 649; Rap. & La. Law Dict.

Managing Agent.—An agent having general supervision over the affairs of a corporation. Upper Mississippi Trans. Co. v. Whittaker, 16 Wis. 235; Reddington v. Mariposa Land etc. Co., 19 Hun (N. Y.) 408; Palmer v. Pennsylvania Co., 35 Hun (N. Y.) 371; where it was held that such agent need not have charge of the whole business of the corporation. Hat-Sweat Mfg. Co. v. Davis Sewing Mach. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 295; Emerson v. Auburn & Owasco Lake R. Co., 13 Hun (N. Y.) 151; Brewster v. Mich. Central R. Co., 5 How. (N. Y.) 183; Flynn v. Hudson R. Co., 6 How. (N. Y.) 308; Doty v. Mich. Central R. Co., 8 Abb. (N. Y.) 427; R. H. & L. R. Co. v. N. Y. L. E. & W. R. Co., 48 Hun (N. Y.) 190; Tuchband v. C. & A. R. Co., 115 N. Y. 437.

- (n) Ordering Special Term, 120.
- (o) Courts Acting Under a Special Commission, 120.
- (p) Refusal to Award Costs, 120.
- (q) Stipulation to Settle, 120.
- 3. Appeal, 120.
 - (a) Appeal Bond, 121.
 - (b) Correcting Appeal, 121.
 - (c) Dismissing Appeal, 122.
 - (d) Reinstating Appeal, 122.
- 4. Bill of Exceptions, 122.
 - (a) Correction of Bill, 123.
 - (b) Demand and Refusal, 124.
 - (c) Laches, 124.
 - (d) Writ Granted to Judge Who Tried Cause, 125.
 - (e) Answer, 126.
 - (f) Charge to the Jury, 127.
 - (g) Chancery Courts, 127.
 - (h) Justice Courts, 127.
 - (i) When Granted to Referee, 127.
- IV. Judicial Officers, 127.
 - 1. Generally, 127.
 - 2. Judges, 127.
 - (a) Power of Judges at Chambers, 130.
 - (b) Awarding Mandamus in Vacation, 130.
 - 3. Attorneys, 130.
 - 4. Clerks of Courts, 132.
 - (a) Approval of Bond, 133.
 - (b) Issuing Certificate of Election, 133.
 - (c) Clerk Ousted from Office, 133.
 - 5. Justices of the Peace, 133.
 - (a) Issuing Execution, 135.
 - (b) Filing Transcript, 135.
 - (c) Dismissing Writ of Habeas Corpus, 135.
 - (d) Correction of Errors, 136.
 - 6. Sheriff, 136.
- V. Courts, 137.
 - 1. Federal Courts, 137.
 - 2. Circuit Courts, 137.
 - 3. State Courts, 138.
 - 4. Appellate Courts, 138.
 - 5. County Courts, 139.
- VI. Public Officers, 139.
 - 1. Generally, 139.
 - 2. Federal Officers, 142.
 - 3. State Officers, 143.
 - (a) Governor, 143.
 - (1) To Issue Commission, 144.
 - (2) To Declare Person Elected, 145.

- (3) To Deposit Bill with Secretary of State, 145.
- 4. State Officers Generally, 145.
 - (a) State Representatives, 146.
 - (b) Commissioners, 146.
 - (c) Title to Office, 146.
 - (d) Books, Papers, Muniments, etc., 147.
- 5. State Boards, 147.
- 6. Auditing Officers, 147.
 - (a) Issuing Warrant for Salary, etc., 149.
 - (b) Materials Furnished the State Under Contract, 150.
 - (c) Awarding Public Contracts, 150.
 - (d) Conveying Title, 151.
 - (e) Affixing Seal to Warrant, 151.
 - (f) Distribution of Funds, 151.
 - (g) Payment of State Taxes, 151.
- VII. Private Corporations, 152.
 - 1. Affixing Seal, 153.
 - 2. Religious Corporations, 153.
 - 3. Reinstatement of Member, 153.
 - 4. Admission to Society, 154.
 - 5. Election of Officers, 155.
 - 6. Corporation Books and Records, 155.
 - (a) Books of Trading Corporations, 156.
 - (b) Inspection of Books, 156.
 - (c) Demand and Refusal, 156.
 - (d) To Whom the Writ Should be Directed, 157.
 - 7. Transfer of Stock, 157.
 - 8. To Issue Certificates of Stock, 158.
 - 9. Railway Companies, 158.
 - (a) Generally, 158.
 - (b) Abandonment of Road, 162.
 - (c) Erection of Depot, 162.
 - (d) Commutation Tickets, 162.
 - (e) Discrimination, 162.
 - (f) Damages for Land Taken, 162.
 - (g) Highways, 163.
 - 10. Canals, 163.
 - 11. Telephone Corporations, 163.
- VIII. Private Persons, 165.
 - 1. Infants, 165.
 - 2. Guardian, 165.
- IX. Municipal Corporations, 165.
 - 1. Generally, 165.
 - 2. Demand of Performance, 167.

3. To Do an Unlawful Act, 168.
4. Approval of Bond, 168.
5. Liquor Bond, 169.
6. Issuing of Bonds, 169.
7. Payment of Bonds, 169.
8. Granting Licence, 170.
9. Inspection of Public Records, 171.
10. Inspection of Pool Books, 173.
11. To Correct Records, 173.
12. Custody of Municipal Books, 173.
13. Distribution of Public Funds, 173.
14. School Boards, 174.
 - (a) Adoption of Text Books, 176.
15. Overseers of the Poor, 176.
- X. Auditing and Payment of Claims, 176.
 1. Generally, 176.
 2. Auditing Claim, 178.
 3. Exercise of Jurisdiction, 179.
 4. To Sign Warrant, 179.
 5. Payment of Warrants, 180.
 6. Payment of Salary, 180.
 7. Payment of Judgments and Other Liabilities, 182.
 8. Exceptions to General Rule, 183.
 9. Discretion of Auditing Boards, 183.
 10. Misappropriation, 184.
 11. Want of Funds, 184.
 12. Laches, 186.
 13. Statute of Limitations, 186.
- XI. Municipal Taxation, 186.
 1. The Levy of a Tax to Pay Judgment, 188.
 2. The Levy of Tax to Pay Bond Debts, 190.
 3. Taxation for School Purposes, 191.
 4. Payment of Taxes, 191.
 5. Refunding Taxes Illegally Collected, 192.
 6. Erroneous Assessments, 192.
- XII. Municipal Aid Bonds, 192.
 1. Subscriptions, 194.
 2. Issue of Bonds, 194.
 3. Another Action Pending, 195.
 4. Judgment Upon Municipal Aid Bonds, 195.
 5. Corporation Concluded by Judgment, 196.
 6. Surrender of Illegal Bonds, 196.
- XIII. Municipal Officers and Elections, 196.
 1. Generally, 196.
 2. Mandamus to Admit to Municipal Office, 201.
 3. Commissioners, 203.
 - (a) Opening Highway, 204.
 - (b) Bridges and Highways, 205.
 - (c) Obstructions in Streets and Highways, 206.
 - (d) Allowance of Fees, 206.
 4. Supervisors, 206.
 5. De Facto Officers, 207.
 6. To Compel Delivery of Books, Records, etc., 207.
 7. Public Records, 208.
 8. Removal of County Seat and County Offices, 208.
- XIV. Municipal Improvements, 209.
 1. Generally, 209.
 2. Erection of Public Buildings, 209.
 3. Contracts of Municipalities, 209.
 4. Estimates, 210.
 5. Discretion of Municipal Authorities, 210.
 6. Payment and Assessment of Damages, 210.
- XV. Form of the Writ, 211.
 1. Alternative and Peremptory Writs Defined, 211.
 2. Alternative Writ, 212.
 3. Refusal to Allow, 213.
 4. Peremptory Writ, 213.
 5. Must Conform to the Alternative Writ, 214.
 6. When Granted, 215.
 7. Legal Duty of Respondent, 215.
 8. Ex Parte Application, 216.
 9. Refusal to Award Mandamus, 216.
 10. Certainty Required, 216.
 11. Peremptory Writ Cannot be Stayed by Injunction, 217.
- XVI. Parties, 217.
 1. Relators, 217.
 - (a) Who Proper Relator, 218.
 - (b) Degree of Interest, 218.
 - (c) Distinct Interests Not to be Joined, 219.
 - (d) Death of Relator, 219.
 2. Respondents, 219.
 - (a) Successors in Office, 220.
 - (b) Corporations, 220.
 3. Who May Intervene, 221.
- XVII. Pleading, 221.
 1. Requisites of Petition, 222.
 2. Verification, 223.
 3. Abatement, 223.
 4. Statutes, 223.
 5. Amendment, 224.

6. Reply to the Answer, 224.
7. Demurrer, 224.
8. Joinder of Different Causes, 225.
9. Right of Trial by Jury in Proceedings in Mandamus, 225.
10. Jurisdiction, 225.
11. Appeal, 226.
12. Variance, 226.
13. Another Action Pending, 226.
14. Nonsuit, 226.
- XVIII. Practice, 226.
 1. Generally, 226.
 2. Notice, 228.
 3. Service, 229.
 4. Return, 230.
 - (a) Sufficiency of Return, 231.
 - (b) How Sufficiency Questioned, 232.
 - (1) Demurrer, 232.

- (2) Motion to Quash, 233.
- (c) Defences by Return, 234.
- (d) Of the Manner and Time of Making Return, 236.
- (e) Neglect to Make Return, 237.
- (f) Evasive Return, 237.
- (g) Damages for False Return, 237.
- (h) Amending or Withdrawing Return, 237.
- (i) Answer to Return, 238.
- (j) Motion for Peremptory Mandamus, 238.
- (k) Return to Peremptory Mandamus, 238.
5. Discharging Rule to Show Cause, 238.
6. Judgment, 238.
- XIX. Costs, 239.
- XX. Violation, 239.
 1. Attachment for Contempt, 240.

I. DEFINITION.—A writ of mandamus is a command issuing from a court of law of competent jurisdiction in the name of the State or sovereign directed to some inferior court, officer, corporation or person requiring them to do some particular thing therein specified, and which appertains to their office or duty.¹

1. 3 Blacks. Com., 110; 4 Bacon Abr. 495; Page v. Clopton, 2 Va. Law J. 560.

Mandamus is a writ commanding the performance of some act or duty therein specified, in the performance of which the applicant for the writ is interested, or by the nonperformance of which he is aggrieved or injured. As a preventive remedy simply, it is never used. Its use is confined to those occasions where the law has established no specific remedy, and where, in justice and good government, there ought to be one. Legg v. Mayor of Annapolis, 42 Md. 203.

CAMPBELL, J.: Mandamus is a prerogative writ designed to afford a summary and specific remedy in those cases where without it the party will be subjected to serious injustice. It is from its very nature a remedy that cannot be hampered by any narrow or technical bounds. The right coupled with the necessity of such a vindication of it supports the jurisdiction, and the court, in using its discretion, while careful not to use this writ when it is not essential, will apply it where it is. Twas etc. R. Co. v. Judge, 44

Mich. 479; s. c., 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 584.

HOLT, J.: Ordinarily, however, the use of the writ of mandamus is to compel an executive or ministerial officer to perform an act or omit to do an act, the performance or omission of which is enjoined by law. Com. v. Boone County Court, 82 Ky. 632.

MARSHALL, C. J.: A mandamus is a suit within the meaning of the constitution, for it is a litigation of a right in a court of justice seeking a decision. Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 449; Homes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 540.

It is the supplementary remedy when the party has a clear right and no other appropriate redress in order to prevent a failure of justice. 12 Peters d. Abr. 438 (309); Rex v. Baker, Burr. 1267; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 9; Lewis v. Whittle, 77 Va. 415; Ottawa v. People, 48 Ill. 233; School Inspectors of Peoria v. People, 20 Ill. 525.

In England, the writ of mandamus is defined to be a command issuing in the king's name from the court of king's bench and directed to any persons, corporation or inferior court of judicature

II. ORIGIN AND NATURE OF THE REMEDY.—The origin of mandamus was to prevent disorder from a failure of justice and defect of police. It was formerly a common law prerogative writ, issued only from the king's bench, where the sovereign was considered to be personally present to prevent a failure of justice and where there was no other adequate legal remedy to enforce the performance of a duty in which the complaining party was interested.¹

Although it still retains in England, and even in this country, some of the characteristic features of the original prerogative writ,² it is no longer regarded as a criminal procedure, but is strictly civil in its character,³ and there seems to be a growing tendency to divest it of its prerogative features and to treat it in the nature of a writ of right.⁴

In most of the States the writ is now regarded in the nature of an ordinary action between the parties, and as being a writ of right to the extent to which the party applying for it shows himself entitled to this particular kind of relief.⁵

within the king's dominions, requiring them to do some particular thing therein specified which appertains to their office and duty, and which the court of king's bench has previously determined, or at least supposes to be consonant to right and justice. Ex parte Crane, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 190.

1. State v. Williams, 69 Ala. 311; King v. University, 1 W. Black. 552; Rex v. Baker, 3 Burr. 1265; Donklyn Co. v. District Co. Court, 23 Mo. 449; Rex v. Severn etc. R. Co., 2 B. & Ald. 646; Rex v. Windham, 1 Cowp. 377.

Originally a mandamus was a mandate issued directly by the king of England to his subject, ordering the performance of some specified act. It was in no sense a judicial writ. Such mandates have long since become obsolete. Any such mandate was called originally a mandamus; but gradually a mandate ceased to be called a mandamus, and this name was applied to a judicial writ issued by the king's bench in the name of the king. In this court the king originally sat in person, and when he ceased to do so, yet by a fiction of the law he was still presumed to be present. At first these writs were issued by the king's bench only in cases in which the king or the public at large was interested, and for these reasons this writ was called a prerogative writ and was regarded as not issued of strict right, but only at the will of the sovereign. But in modern times even in England there is a tendency to treat this writ, a writ of right, and to strip it of its prerogative character. In this country it has lost its prerogative nature and is regarded very much as a writ of right and in the nature of an ordinary suit between parties, when the aggrieved party shows himself entitled to this kind of relief. See Gilman v. Bassett, 33 Conn. 298; Asberry v. Bearers, 6 Tex. 457; Com. v. Dennison, 24 How. (U. S.) 66.

2. People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 134; People v. Board of Met. Police, 26 N. Y. (12 Smith) 316; Chamberlain v. Warburton, 1 Utah 267; School Inspectors of Peoria v. People, 20 Ill. 525; Moody v. Fleming, 4 Ga. 115; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 210; State v. Gracey, 11 Nev. 223.

3. Com. v. Dennison, 24 How. (U. S.) 66; Brown v. Crego, 29 Iowa 321; People v. Board of Supervisors, 27 Cal. 656; State v. Williams, 69 Ala. 311; McBane v. People, 50 Ill. 503; State v. Bailey, 7 Iowa 390; Judd v. Driver, 1 Kan. 455; Chamberlain v. Warburton, 1 Utah 267; State v. Jennings, 56 Wis. 113; Williamsport v. Com., 90 Pa. St. 498. Compare State v. Bruce, 1 Treadw. Const. (S. Car.) 165. Mandamus is a civil remedy. State v. Williams, 69 Ala. 311.

4. Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595; Kendall v. U. S., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 524.

5. Kendall v. U. S., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 524; Com. v. Dennison, 24 How. (U. S.) 66; Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595; Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. (U. S.) 66; People v. Lewis, 28 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 159; Asberry v. Bearers, 6

1. Mandamus and Injunction Distinguished.—A writ of mandamus in name and nature and at common law is something of a mandatory nature.¹ It is a writ requiring the person, court or officer to do some particular thing therein specified which pertains to their office or duty. Injunction is wholly a preventive remedy. If the injury be already done, the writ can have no operation, for it cannot be applied correctly so as to remove it. It is not used for the purpose of punishment or to compel persons to do right, but simply to prevent them from doing wrong.² Mandamus is a writ of a moving nature, the proper writ to enforce obedience to an act of the legislature, and hence only proper to compel quiescence when an act is itself mandatory of something negative where it specially directs the not doing of a thing which might be natural or otherwise proper.³

2. What Courts May Issue Mandamus.—The power to issue the writ of mandamus is a branch of the common law, and any court on which common law jurisdiction has been conferred is authorized to issue the writ.⁴ In some of the States this power is exercised by the courts of last resort, sometimes as part of their original jurisdiction fixed by the organic law of the State, and in other cases only in aid of their appellate powers.⁵ The federal

Tex. 457; Gilman v. Bassett, 33 Conn. 298; State v. Commrs. of Jefferson Co., 11 Kan. 66; Haymore v. Yadkin Co. Commrs., 85 N. Car. 268. See contra, School Inspectors of Peoria v. People, 20 Ill. 525; Mayor etc. of Savannah v. State, 4 Ga. 26; Moody v. Fleming, 4 Ga. 115; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 210; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 9; People v. Ferris, 76 N. Y. 326; People v. Board of Police, 26 N. Y. 316; People v. Judge of Super. Court, 41 Mich. 31; Ottawa v. People, 48 Ill. 233.

In Com. v. Dennison, 24 How. (U. S.) 66, TANY, C. J., said: "It is equally well settled that a mandamus in modern practice is nothing more than an action at law between the parties, and it is not now regarded as a prerogative writ. It undoubtedly came into use by virtue of the prerogative power of the English crown and was subject to regulations and rules which have long since been disused. But the right to the writ and the power to issue it have ceased to depend upon any prerogative power, and it is now regarded as an ordinary process in cases to which it is applicable."

1. Crawford v. Carson, 35 Ark. 577.

2. Sherman v. Clark, 4 Nev. 138.

3. People v. Inspectors of State Prison, 4 Mich. 187; Washington University v. Green, 1 Md. Ch. 97; Crawford v. Carson, 35 Ark. 565; Blake- more v. Glamorganshire R. Co., 1 Myl. & K. 154; Atty. Gen. v. New Jersey R. & T. Co., 2 Green Ch. 136. See Legg v. Mayor of Annapolis, 42 Md. 203.

A mandamus can only be issued to compel a party to act when it was his duty to act without it. People v. Gilmore, 5 Gilm. (Ill.) 242.

The writ of mandamus cannot take the place of an injunction. It is no ground of demurrer that plaintiff mistakes his remedy, in adopting proceedings by mandamus to effect the purpose of an injunction; but in such case the court should, of its own motion, dismiss the petition, unless it be reformed and transferred to the equity docket. Crawford v. Carson, 35 Ark. 565.

4. Chumasero v. Potts, 2 Mont. 242; see State v. Pierce county (Wis.), 37 N. W. Rep. 231; State v. Minneapolis E. R. Co. (Minn.), 41 N. W. Rep. 465; Jacks v. Day, 15 Cal. 91; Jack v. Moore, 66 Ala. 184. Compare Shields v. State (Ala.), 6 So. Rep. 271; Shepard v. Second District Court, 1 Utah 340. Equity has nothing to do with the writ. Gay v. Gilmore, 76 Ga. 725.

5. McCreary v. Rogers, 35 Ala. 298; U. S. v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378; Chumasero v. Potts, 2 Mont. 242; Maxwell v. Burton, 2 Utah 595; State v. Tracy, 94 Mo. 217; see Com. v. Raroux, 36 Pa. St. 262; People v. County Commrs.

courts may issue writs of mandamus when necessary to the exercise of their jurisdiction, but they have no authority to issue them as original writs in any case.¹

3. When Issued.—To entitle a party to a writ of mandamus he must be dispossessed of a clear legal right to have exercised an office or a franchise or to have a service performed by the party to whom he seeks to have the writ directed,² and no legal specific (Colo.), 19 Pac. Rep. 892; State v. McCullough, 3 Nev. 202.

The supreme court of the District of Columbia is authorized to issue the writ of mandamus as an original process in cases where, by the principles of the common law, the petitioner is entitled to it. U. S. v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378.

Minn. Laws 1881, ch. 40, amending Gen. St. 1878, ch. 80, § 13, takes from the supreme court original jurisdiction in mandamus, except in cases then pending, and in cases where the writ is to be directed to a district court, or a judge thereof in his official capacity. State v. Burr, 28 Minn. 40.

In Arkansas, the supreme court has general superintending control over all inferior courts of law or equity; in aid of which it can issue, hear and determine writs of mandamus. McCreary v. Rogers, 35 Ark. 298; see Howell v. Crutchfield, Hempst. 99.

In California, an application for a writ of mandate to the surveyor general should be made in the superior court. Johnson v. Reichart (Cal.), 18 Pac. Rep. 858.

In Kentucky, a mandamus is of original and not appellate jurisdiction, unless it is for the revision and correction of a judicial decision, and cannot be awarded by the court of appeals except for such revision, etc. Morgan v. The Register, Hard. (Ky.) 609; Daniel v. Warren County Court, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 496; Hard. (Ky.) 610; Craig v. Adair, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 310, 311; Hardin v. Register, 6 Litt. (Ky.) 28. To the contrary, Simpson v. Thomas, Sneed (Ky.) 254.

In Louisiana, the supreme court issues a procedendo or mandamus only to courts acting judicially, and where an appeal lies from a final judgment. State v. Judge, 14 La. An. 483.

It issues only as auxiliary to its appellate jurisdiction. State v. Judge of the Sixth District, 12 La. An. 405; State v. Judge of the Fifth District, 12 La. An. 513.

In Missouri, the jurisdiction of the supreme court to issue an original mandamus is not dependent on its appellate jurisdiction in the same matter. State v. Tracy, 94 Mo. 217.

In Texas, the constitution does not confer upon the supreme court original jurisdiction in cases of mandamus. International R. R. Co. v. Comptroller, 36 Tex. 641.

1. McIntyre v. Wood, 7 Cranch 504; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch 49; Gràham v. Norton, 15 Wall. 427; Bath County v. Amy, 4 Chicago Legal News 209.

2. State v. Kavanaugh, 24 Neb. 506; Bayard v. U. S., 126 U. S. 246; Shim v. Kentucky C. R. Co., 85 Ky. 177; Tarver v. Commrs. Court of Tallapoosa, 17 Ala. 527; Lewis v. Whittle, 77 Va. 415; Union Church v. Sanders, 1 Houst. (Del.) 100; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 187; Peck v. Booth, 42 Conn. 271; People v. Mayor of Chicago, 51 Ill. 17; People v. Salomon, 46 Ill. 415; People v. Glaun, 70 Ill. 232; People v. Johnson, 100 Ill. 537; People v. Masonic etc. Assoc., 98 Ill. 635; State v. Herron, 29 La. An. 848; Pack v. Supervisors of Presque Isle Co., 36 Mich. 377; Houghton Co. v. Auditor General, 36 Mich. 271; Loomis v. Rogers Township, 53 Mich. 135; People v. Supervisors of Greene Co., 64 N. Y. 600; People v. Brooklyn, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 318; s. c., 19 Am. Dec. 502; People v. Hoyt, 66 N. Y. 606; Dutton v. Hanover, 42 Ohio St. 215; State v. Supervisors of Washington, 2 Chand. (Wis.) 250; Cook v. Peacham, 50 Vt. 231. Ex parte Barnwell, 8 S. Car. 264; Com. v. Mitchell, 82 Pa. St. 343; State v. Gruber v. County Commrs. (S. Car.), 9 S. E. Rep. 692; Free Press Association v. Nichols, 45 Vt. 7; Commrs. v. People, 66 Ill. 339; Springfield etc. R. Co. v. County Court Clerk, 74 Ill. 27; People v. Trustees of Schools, 86 Ill. 613; People v. Oldtown, 88 Ill. 202; State v. New Haven etc. Co., 45 Conn. 331; State Board of Education v. West Point, 50 Miss. 638; Sabine v. Rounds, 50 Vt. 74; Taylor v. Taylor, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 765; Milliner's Admr. v. Harrison, 32 Gratt. (Va.) 422; Townes v.

remedy to which he can resort to compel the performance of this duty.¹

Nichols, 73 Me. 515; Borough of Easton v. Lehigh Water Co., 97 Pa. St. 554; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 9; People v. Lieb, 85 Ill. 484; People v. Klokke, 92 Ill. 134; Butler v. Supervisors of Saginaw Co., 26 Mich. 22; Elizabeth v. Essex Co. Court, 49 N. J. L. 626; State v. Douglas County Commrs., 18 Neb. 506; Hulse v. Marshall, 9 Mo. App. 148. Ex parte Hughes, 114 U. S. 147; Leavitt v. Detroit Superior Judge, 52 Mich. 595. Ex parte Shandies, 66 Ala. 134; People v. Chicago, 51 Ill. 17; Atty. Gen. v. New Bedford, 128 Mass. 312; Burnsville Turnpike Co. v. State (Ind.), 20 N. E. Rep. 421; James v. Commrs. of Bucks, 13 Pa. St. 72; Com. v. Cuncannon, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 344; Com. v. Thompson, 1 Leg. Chron. (Pa.) 137; Hulse v. Marshall, 9 Mo. App. 148; State v. Garesché, 3 Mo. App. 526; People v. Dubois, 33 Ill. 9; Menard v. Hood, 68 Ill. 121; People v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 55 Ill. 95; People v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 62 Ill. 510; Universal Church v. Trustees, 6 Ohio 446; State v. Hershisher v. Kinkaid, 23 Neb. 641; State v. Nicholson Pavement Co., 35 N. J. L. 396; People v. Supervisors of New York, 18 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 8; State v. Jacobus, 26 N. J. L. (2 Dutch.) 135; State v. Warren etc. Co., 32 N. J. L. 439; People v. Board of Apportionment, 5 Thom. & C. (N. Y.) 382; State v. Justices, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 430; Williams v. Judge etc., 27 Mo. 225; U. S. v. Bank of Alexandria, 1 Cranch C. C. 7; Silverthorne v. Warren R. Co., 33 N. J. L. (4 Vroom) 372. Ex parte Good, 19 Ark. 410; People v. Easton, 13 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. N. S. 159; City of Elizabeth v. Court of Common Pleas (N. J.), 9 Atl. Rep. 752; People v. Corporation, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 318; Parker v. Anderson, 2 Patt. & H. (Va.) 38. Ex parte Conway, 4 Ark. 302; Fitch v. Diarmid, 26 Ark. 482; Weavel v. Loshier, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) Cas. 241; Price v. Shelby Circuit Court, Hard. (Ky.) 254; White v. U. S., 1 Black 500; Alexander v. Saunders, 23 Ark. 630; State v. Harper, 30 S. Car. 586; State v. Whitesides, 30 S. Car. 579. It will not be granted to settle a mere fancy question. People v. Masonic etc., 98 Ill. 635.

In State v. Supervisors of Washington, 2 Chand. (Wis.) 250, JACKSON, J., said: "A writ of mandamus is the highest judicial writ known to our constitution and laws, and according to the long approved and well established authorities, only issues in cases where there is a specific legal right to be enforced, or where there is a positive duty to be and which can be performed, and where there is no other specific legal remedy. Where the legal right is doubtful, or where the performance of the duty rests in discretion, a writ of mandamus cannot rightfully issue."

Mandamus will lie against the board of directors of a chamber of commerce to restrain them from depriving a member of the association of his franchise. State v. Chamber of Commerce, 20 Wis. 63.

1. Basham v. Carroll, 44 Ark. 284; State v. Nicholson Pavement Co., 35 N. J. L. 396; People v. Olds, 3 Cal. 167; People v. Supervisors of Greene, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 217; Napier v. Poe, 12 Ga. 170; People v. Thompson, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 73; Trustees v. State, 11 Ind. 205; Cincinnati R. Co. v. Clinton, 1 Ohio St. 77; Reading v. Com., 11 Pa. St. 196; Parker v. Anderson, 2 Patt. & H. (Va.) 38; People v. Brooklyn, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 318; Spraggins v. Co. Court Cooke (Tenn.), 160; Tarver v. Commrs. Court of Tallapoosa, 17 Ala. 527; Peck v. Booth, 42 Conn. 271; State v. Herron, 29 La An. 848; People v. Solomon, 46 Ill. 415; People v. Mayor of Chicago, 51 Ill. 17; People v. Glann, 70 Ill. 232; People v. Masonic etc. Soc., 98 Ill. 635; People v. Johnson, 100 Ill. 537; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 63; Morgan v. Monmouth etc. R. Co., 26 N. J. L. (2 Dutch.) 99; Green v. Wood, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 653; Clark v. Miller, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 38; Com. v. Clark, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 408; Cullem v. Latimer, 4 Tex. 329; Matter of White River Bank, 23 Vt. 478; Ex parte Williamson, 8 Ark. 424; Ex parte Nelson, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 417; Mayor etc. of Savannah v. State, 4 Ga. 26; U. S. v. Bank of Alexandria, 1 Cranch C. Ct. 7; People v. Judges, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 319; Williams v. Judge etc., 27 Mo. 225; State v. Justices, Dudley (Ga.) 37; State v. Board of Commrs., 25 Ind. 210; Ex parte Barnes (Ala.), 4 So. Rep. 769; Ex parte Cheatham, 6 Ark. 531; Ex parte South etc. R. Co., 65 Ala. 599; Queen v. Hull etc. R. Co., 6 Ad. & E. N. S. 70; Queen v. Derby, 7 Ad. & E. 419; King v. Mayor of Colchester, 2 Term Rep. 260; King v.

- Bishop of Durham, Burr. 567; Wilkins v. Mitchell, 3 Salk. 229; King v. Bank of England, Doug. 524; Ex parte Williamson, 8 Ark. 424; Peratta v. Adams, 2 Cal. 504; Flagley v. Hubbard, 22 Cal. 34; Early v. Mannix, 15 Cal. 149; Ex parte Lynch, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 45; Boyce v. Russell, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 444; American Asylum v. Phoenix Bank, 4 Conn. 172; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 112; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 9; Excelsior etc. Assoc., v. Riddle, 91 Ind. 84; Fogle v. Gregg, 26 Ind. 245; People v. Hawkins, 46 N. Y. 9; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. State, 25 Ind. 177; Shelby v. Hoffman, 7 Ohio St. 450; State v. County Judge, 5 Iowa 380; Marshall v. Sloan, 35 Iowa 445; State v. Police Jury, 29 La. An. 146; State v. Judge of Sixth District, 9 La. An. 288; State v. Judge of Fourth District, 8 La. An. 92; People v. Starr, 55 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 388; People v. Chenango Co., 11 N. Y. 563; Succession of Macarty, 2 La. An. 979; People v. Wood, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 653; People v. Booth, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 31; St. Louis County Court, v. Sparks, 10 Mo. 118; Lexington v. Mullikin, 7 Gray (Mass.) 280; Olson v. Muskegon Circuit Court, 49 Mich. 85; Smith v. Burton, 48 Mich. 643; People v. New York, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 393; Ward v. County Court, 50 Mo. 401; Mansfield v. Fuller, 50 Mo. 338; State v. Engleman, 45 Mo. 27; Com. v. Commrs. of Allegheny, 16 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 317; James v. Commrs. of Bucks, 13 Pa. St. 72; Heffner v. Com., 28 Pa. St. 108; Justices v. Munday, 2 Leigh (Va.) 165; s. c., 21 Am. Dec. 604; State v. Supervisors of Sheboygan, 29 Wis. 79; State v. Fuller, 18 S. Car. 246; Smith v. Judge, 17 Cal. 547; Ludlum v. Fourth District Court, 9 Cal. 8; Goodwin v. Glazer, 10 Cal. 333; Cowell v. Buckelew, 14 Cal. 640; Smith v. Judge Twelfth Dist., 17 Cal. 548; Cradall v. Amador Co., 20 Cal. 72; People v. Moore, 29 Cal. 428; Clark v. Crane, 57 Cal. 634; People v. McLane, 62 Cal. 616; People v. Bartlett, 40 Cal. 143; Kimball v. Union Water Co., 44 Cal. 173; Clark v. Minnis, 50 Cal. 509; Ex parte Jones, 1 Ala. 15; State v. Taylor, 19 Wis. 566; Marshall v. State, 1 Ired. 72; State v. Judge of Sixth District Court, 12 La. An. 342; State v. Judge of Second District Court, 10 La. An. 204; Leland v. Rose, 19 La. An. 415; State v. Morgan, 12 La. 118; Ex parte Hutt, 14 Ark. 368; State v. McAuliffe, 48 Mo. 112; Byrne v. Harbinson, 1 Mo. 225 (2nd ed., 160); Ex parte Goolsby, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 575; Ex parte Bostwick, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 143; Jansen v. Davison, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Cas. 72; People v. Judge of Superior Court, 32 Mich. 190; Davidson v. Washburn, 56 Ala. 596; Ex parte Grant, 53 Ala. 16; Clark v. Minnis, 50 Cal. 509; Mayberry v. Bowker, 14 Nev. 336; State v. Curler, 4 Nev. 445; Ex parte Garlington, 26 Ala. 170; Ex parte Rowland, 26 Ala. 133; Ex parte Small, 25 Ala. 74; Ex parte Elston, 25 Ala. 72; People v. Sexton, 24 Cal. 78; State v. McCrillus, 4 Kan. 250; Poindexter v. Greenlow, 84 Va. 441; State, Charleston C. & C. R. Co. v. Whitesides, 30 S. Car. 579; State v. Trenton Board of Health, 49 N. J. L. 349; Lewis v. Whittle, 77 Va. 415; Cleveland v. Board of Finance of Jersey City, 39 N. J. L. 629; People v. Easton, 13 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. N. S. 159; People v. State Ins. Co., 19 Mich. 392; People v. Corporation, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 318; Parker v. Anderson, 2 Patt. & H. (Va.) 38; Ex parte Stickney, 48 Ala. 160; Fitch v. Diarmid, 26 Ark. 482; Mansfield v. Fuller, 50 Mo. 338; People v. Hawkins, 46 N. Y. 9; People v. Wood, 2 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 90; Williams v. Clayton (Utah), 21 Pac. Rep. 398; Arrington v. Van Houton, 44 Ala. 284.
- Union Church v. Saunders, 1 Houst. (Del.) 100; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 187; State v. Supervisors of Washington, 2 Chand. (Wis.) 250; Cook v. Peacham, 50 Vt. 231; Ex parte Barnwell, 8 S. Car. 264; Com. v. Mitchell, 82 Pa. St. 343; Dutten v. Hanover, 42 Ohio St. 215; People v. Hayt, 66 N. Y. 606; People v. Supervisors of Greene Co., 64 N. Y. 600; People v. Brooklyn, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 318; s. c., 19 Am. Dec. 502; Board of Police v. Grant, 9 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 77; s. c., 47 Am. Dec. 102; Loomis v. Rogers Township, 53 Mich. 135; People v. Supervisors of Presque Isle Co., 36 Mich. 377; Houghton Co. v. Auditor Gen., 36 Mich. 271; King v. Water Works Co., 6 Ad. & El 355; Ex parte Trapnall, 6 Ark. 9; s. c., 42 Am. Dec. 676; Territory v. Shearer, 2 Dak. 332; Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488; Moody v. Fleming, 4 Ga. 115; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 210; Ex parte Virginia Commrs., 112 U. S. 177; Justices v. Munday, 2 Leigh (Va.) 165; s. c., 21 Am. Dec. 604; Taylor v. Salt Lake Co. Court, 2 Utah 405; Arberry v. Bearers, 6 Tex. 457; s. c., 55 Am. Dec. 791; Com. v. Rosseter, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 360; s. c., 4 Am. Dec. 451; People v. Thompson, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 73; State v. Graves, 19

a. Issued in the Discretion of the Court.—Mandamus is issued or withheld in the discretion of the court, and the court, in issuing it, will be governed by what seems to be necessary and proper to be done in the premises for the purposes of justice.¹ The dis-

Md. 351; s. c., 81 Am. Dec. 639; State v. Rightor, 36 La. An. 112; James v. Bucks, 13 Pa. St. 72; Mobile etc. R. Co. v. Wisdom, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 125; Reading v. Com., 11 Pa. St. 196.

The court will not award a mandamus, when full relief can be had by appeal, writ of error or otherwise. Ex parte South etc. R. Co., 65 Ala. 599; State v. Megown, 89 Mo. 156; Ex parte South etc. R. Co., 65 Ala. 599; People v. Lott, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 408; Hemphill v. Collins, 117 Ill. 396; State v. Justices of Moore, 2 Ired. 430; State v. Justices, Dudley (Ga.) 37; Goings v. Mills, 1 Pike 11; Ex parte Jones, 1 Ala. 15; Spraggins v. County Court, Cooke (Tenn.) 160; People v. Brooklyn, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 318; State v. McGrath, 92 Mo. 355; authorities cited in United States v. Bayard, 5 Mackey (D. C.) 428; Aspen v. Aspen etc. Co., 10 Colo. 191; People v. New York Police Commrs., 107 N. Y. 235; Excelsior Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Riddle, 91 Ind. 84; People v. McLane, 62 Cal. 616; McDaniel v. King, 89 N. Car. 29; Levy v. Yoto County Superior Court, 66 Cal. 292; Moon's Admr. v. Wenford (Va.), 4 S. E. 572; Commrs. Boone County v. State, 38 Ind. 193; Ex parte Clements, 50 Ala. 459; State v. Common Pleas, 38 N. J. L. 182.

Mandamus does not lie to enforce a disputed stipulation to settle a case even though money has been paid thereunder. The parties to the stipulation are entitled to have the fact as to the settlement tried on a regular issue before a jury; and if the validity of the stipulation is contested it should be brought into the case by plea and not by motion. Leavitt v. Judge of Superior Court, 52 Mich. 595.

The wife has a right to a support out of her husband's estate, pending a suit for divorce against him, and also to such sum as is necessary to procure solicitors to conduct the suit for her, and when this right is denied by the chancellor, at any time before final alimony is set apart to her, a mandamus will be awarded from the supreme court, to compel him to make the necessary order as there is no other adequate and specific remedy. Ex parte King, 27 Ala. 387.

In mandamus the relator who seeks to compel a board of education to award him the contract for erecting a school building must show a clear legal right in himself. It is not enough to show defects in the title of another to whom the contract has been awarded. Ross v. Board of Education, 42 Ohio St. 374.

Mandamus will not lie to compel the issue of an execution, on the ground that an appeal has not been properly perfected, where the appeal from the judgment has been allowed, and the appeal bond approved by order of the trial court, as the jurisdiction of the supreme court has thereby attached, and a defect in the appeal can be reached by a motion to strike from the docket and files. People v. Adams (Colo.), 22 Pac. Rep. 826.

Mandamus is not to be denied merely because the relator may have a remedy by action for damages. People v. Taylor, 1 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 200; 30 How. Pr. 78.

Quo Warranto.—It is a decisive answer to an application for a mandamus that there was another remedy by information in the virtue of a quo warranto. People v. Supervisors of Greene, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 217; People v. Corporation of New York, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 79; Anderson v. Colson, 1 Neb. 172; Bonner v. State of Georgia, 7 Ga. 473; State v. Rodman, 43 Mo. 256; St. Louis County Court v. Sparks, 10 Mo. 118; Underwood v. White, 27 Ark. 382; State v. Gasconade County Court, 25 Mo. App. 446; R. v. Bankes, 2 Bun. 1454; R. v. Mayor of Colchester, 2 T. R. 259; R. v. Budle, 3 A. & E. 467; R. v. Mayor of Oxford, 6 A. & E. 349; R. v. Mayor of Winchester, 7 A. & E. 215; R. v. Mayor of Chester, 1 M. & S. 102; R. v. Atwood, 4 B. & Ad. 481; R. v. Derby, 7 A. & E. 419; R. v. Phippen, 7 A. & E. 966; Ex parte Mowry, 3 E. & B. 718; Anderson v. Colson, 1 Neb. 172.

Trover or detinue, or an action of trover or detinue. R. v. Hull & Selby R. Co., 6 Q. B. 70.

1. Sherburne v. Horn, 45 Mich. 160; Lamphere v. Grand Lodge of United Workmen, 47 Mich. 429; People v. Sucretion, however, of the court to grant or refuse the writ is not absolute, but governed by legal rules, and its exercise is subject to review.¹

b. When Duties Are Not Discretionary.—The writ will issue to compel the exercise of official discretion or judgment, but the mandate will contain no direction as to the manner in which the duty shall be performed. The proper function of the writ is merely to set in motion. It will, therefore, in a proper case, be allowed to command action, but never to control discretion.²

supervisors of Westchester, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 607; People v. Perry, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 206; Com. v. Commrs. of Phila., 1 Whart. (Pa.) 1; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 134; Com. v. Commrs. of Allegheny, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 317; People v. Curyea, 16 Ill. 547; People v. Ketchum, 72 Ill. 212; People v. Ill. Cent. R. Co., 62 Ill. 510; People v. Forquer, Breese (Ill.) 104; Free Press Assoc. v. Nichols, 45 Vt. 7; Belcher v. Treat, 61 Me. 577; Davis v. County Commrs., 63 Me. 396; State v. Commrs. of Phillips Co., 26 Kan. 419; Dennison v. Genesee Circuit Judge, 37 Mich. 281; People v. Dowling, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 197; s. c., 37 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 394; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 134; Ex parte Stickney, 48 Ala. 160; McMillen v. Smith, 26 Ark. 613; Ex parte Hayes, 26 Ark. 510; Black v. Auditor, 26 Ark. 237; Woodman v. Somerset, 24 Me. 151; Goings v. Mills, 1 Ark. 11; People v. Supervisors of Richmond, 22 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 275; Water Commrs. v. Common Council of East Saginaw, 33 Mich. 164; State v. Anderson Co., 28 Kan. 67; Drew v. Russell, 47 Vt. 250.

Cases may arise where the applicant for relief has an undoubted legal right, for which mandamus is the appropriate remedy, but where the court may, in the exercise of a wise judicial discretion, still refuse the relief. Oakes v. Hill, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 47; Commrs. of Highways v. People, 99 Ill. 587.

"Courts are not bound to grant writs of mandamus in all cases where it may seem proper; but may exercise a discretionary power, as well in granting as refusing, as where the end of it is merely a private right." SMITH, J., in People v. Forquer, Breese (Ill.) 104.

So, where an action is pending in which the same questions might be tried, and that a determination on the summary process might affect the rights of persons who have no opportunity to be heard, mandamus will not be granted. Oakes v. Hill, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 46.

A final order laying out a road was made by three supervisors on an appeal from an order of commissioners of highways determining not to lay out the road. Thereupon the damages from the laying out and opening of the road were assessed by a jury before a justice of the peace. Subsequently, a judge of the circuit court awarded the common law writ of certiorari to bring in review before the circuit court all these proceedings concerning the proposed road, and the writ was duly issued and served. Pending the certiorari proceeding it was sought to compel by mandamus the highway commissioners to levy and certify a tax to pay the damages so assessed for opening the road, and to open the road. It was held that all proceedings under the assessment of damages, or the order laying out the road, were stayed by the service of the writ of certiorari, so there was no clear duty on the part of the highway commissioners pending the certiorari proceeding to do the act sought to be coerced. It was therefore a very proper exercise of a sound discretion to deny the writ of mandamus. Commrs. of Highways v. People, 99 Ill. 587.

1. People v. Common Council, 78 N. Y. 56.

2. Fowler v. Peirce, 2 Cal. 167; McDougall v. Bell, 4 Cal. 177; Price v. Sacramento Co., 6 Cal. 255; People v. Santa Barbara Co., 14 Cal. 102; McCauley v. Brooks, 16 Cal. 35; Bowers v. Sonoma Co., 32 Cal. 66; People v. Lake Co., 33 Cal. 487; Lewis v. Barclay, 35 Cal. 213; Francis Co. Co. v. Manhattan Ins. Co., 36 Cal. 283; Ex parte Cage, 45 Cal. 248; Spinger v. Green, 46 Cal. 73; People v. Sexton, 37 Cal. 532; Tilden v. Sacramento Co., 41 Cal. 68; People v. Pratt, 28 Cal. 166; Cariaga v. Dryden, 29 Cal. 307;

If a discretion is abused and made to work injustice, it may be controlled by mandamus.¹

c. When Duties Are Purely Ministerial.—Mandamus lies to compel performance of duties purely ministerial in their nature, and so clear and specific as not to call for the exercise of any discretion in their performance.² It is specially applicable to subordi-

Sprague v. Fawcett, 53 Cal. 408; Berryman v. Perkins, 55 Cal. 483; Cosner v. Colusa Co., 58 Cal. 274; Magee v. Sup. Calaveras Co., 10 Cal. 376; San Francisco Gas Co. v. Supervisors, 11 Cal. 43; Draper v. Noteware, 7 Cal. 278; Union Colony v. Elliott, 5 Cal. 371; Com. v. Park, 32 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 412; s. c., 2 W. N. C. (Pa.) 124; Com. v. Pittsburgh, 22 Pitts. L. J. (Pa.) 149; Ex parte School Directors of Manheim, 5 Clark (Pa.) 400; Miller v. Canal Commrs., 21 Pa. St. 23; Com. v. Mitchell, 2 P. & W. (Pa.) 517; Republica v. Guardians of the Poor, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 224; s. c., 1 Yeates (Pa.) 476.

1. Village of Glencoe v. People, 78 Ill. 382; Moody v. Fleming, 4 Ga. 115; s. c. 48 Am. Dec. 210; Com. v. Boone Co. Court, 82 Ky. 632; State v. Megown, 89 Mo. 156; People v. Perry, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 206; Gray v. Bridge, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 189.

Mandamus will not lie to control the judgment or discretion of an inferior court; for this in effect would be to substitute the opinion of the superior for that of the inferior court. Barksdale v. Cobb, 16 Ga. 13; High on Extr. Leg. Rem., §§ 171, 176, 156; Randall, Petitioner, 11 Allen (Mass.) 474; People v. Montgomery, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 633; People v. Onondaga Common Pleas, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 509; Gilbert v. Judges of Niagara, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 59; Ex parte Basset, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 458; Ex parte Johnson, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 371; Ex parte Bacon, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 392; Ex parte Benson, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 363; Ex parte Koon, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 644; People v. Supervisors of New York, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 362; Hutchinson v. Commrs. of the Canal Fund, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 692; People v. Superior Court, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 701; People v. New York Common Pleas, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 113; People v. Judges of Chautauque, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 73.

In State v. Kendall, 15 Neb. 262, LAKE, Ch. J., said: "Though courts may require inferior tribunals to exercise judgment given them, or to proceed to the discharge of any of their functions, they cannot control judicial discretion."

The supreme court will not control the discretion of the court below only in cases where there is a refusal to exercise it or a flagrant abuse of it. Moody v. Fleming, 4 Ga. 115; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 210; Harwell v. Armstrong, 11 Ga. 329; Loyless v. Howell, 15 Ga. 556.

A subordinate body can be directed to act, but not how to act, in a matter as to which it has the right to exercise its judgment; and where it is vested with power to determine a question of fact, the duty is judicial, and however erroneous its decision may be, it cannot be compelled by mandamus to alter its determination. Hoole v. Kinkead, 16 Nev. 217.

Mandamus will not lie to control the discretion vested in a public board. Com. v. Mitchell, 2 P. & W. (Pa.) 517; Republica v. Guardians of the Poor, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 224; s. c., 1 Yeates (Pa.) 476; Miller v. Canal Commrs., 21 Pa. St. 23; Com. v. Park, 32 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 412; s. c., 2 W. N. C. (Pa.) 124; Com. v. Pittsburgh, 22 Pitts. L. J. (Pa.) 149; Ex parte School Directors of Manheim, 5 Clark (Pa.) 400.

2. Secretary v. McGarrahan, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 208; U. S. v. Lawrence, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 42; U. S. v. Spurz, 102 U. S. 407; Kendall v. United States, 12 U. S. 54; Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 497; Kendall v. Stokes, 3 How. (U. S.) 87; Commrs. of Patents v. Whiteley, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 522; Ex parte Davenport, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 661; Poultney v. Lafayette, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 472; Ex parte Many, 14 How. (U. S.) 24; U. S. v. Boutwell, 3 McArthur (U. S.) 172; U. S. v. Key, 3 McArthur (U. S.) 337; Ex parte Selma etc. R. Co., 46 Ala. 423; Ex parte Banks, 28 Ala. 28; Hamilton v. Tutt, 65 Cal. 57; Union Colony v. Elliott, 5 Colo. 371; Mayor v. Morgan, 7 Mart., N. S. (La.) 1; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 232; State Board of Liquidators, 23 La. An. 388; State v. Shaw, 23 La. An. 790; State v. Police Jury, 29 La. An. 146;

nate judicial tribunals requiring them to exercise their judicial functions by rendering some judgment in cases legally before them, where there would be a failure of justice from a delay or refusal to act.¹

Mandamus should not be issued, as a general rule, in cases where the right of the relator depends upon holding an act of the

Braconier v. Packard, 136 Mass. 50; Burns v. Bender, 36 Mich. 195; Buchoz v. Pray, 37 Mich. 512; Martin v. Ingham, 38 Kan. 641; State v. Judges of Salem Pleas, 4 Halst. (N. Y.) 246; Dawson v. Thurston, 2 Hen. & M. (Va.) 132; Manus v. Given, 7 Leigh (Va.) 689. Re Woffenden, 1 Ariz. 237; State v. Burgoyne, 7 Ohio St. 153; State v. Lafayette County Court, 41 Mo. 222; s. c., 41 Mo. 545; State v. Howard Co. Court, 41 Mo. 247; State v. Texas Co. Court, 44 Mo. 230; Chicago R. Co. v. Wilson, 17 Ill. 128; Com. v. Court of Sessions, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 414; Beck v. Johnson, 43 Mo. 117; Boone Co. v. Todd, 3 Mo. 140 (2nd ed. 103); Houghton Co. v. Attorney General, 36 Mich. 271; Randolph v. Stanaker, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 533; State v. Ames, 31 Minn. 440; State v. Secretary of State, 33 Mo. 293; Swan v. Gray, 44 Miss. 393; State v. Hudson, 13 Mo. App. 61; Judges of Oneida C. P. v. People, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 79; People v. Judges, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 20; People v. New York C. P., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 113; Ex parte Bacon, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 392; Ex parte Benson, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 263; Howland v. Eldredge, 43 N. Y. 457; People v. Board of Police, 19 N. Y. 188; s. c., 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 481; Ex parte Black, 1 Ohio St. 30; Runkle v. Com., 97 Pa. St. 328; Citizens' Bank of Steubenville v. Wright, 6 Ohio St. 318; Johnson v. Campbell, 39 Tex. 83; Morley v. Power, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 691; Queen v. Old Hall, 10 Ad. & E. 248; Queen v. Harland, 8 Ad. & E. 826; King v. Justices of Cambridge, 1 Dowl. & R. 325; Madison Co. Court v. Alexander, 1 Miss. 523; Cuthbert v. Lewis, 6 Ala. 262; Manor v. McCall, 5 Ga. 522; Com. v. Bunn, 71 Pa. St. 405; Com. v. Justices, 2 Va. Cas. 499; D'Arcy v. Judge of Fourth District Ct. of Orleans, 25 La. An. 622; State v. Bordelon, 6 La. An. 68; Hommerich v. Hunter, 14 La. An. 225; Ney v. Richard, 15 La. An. 603; Dubordieu v. Butler, 49 Cal. 522; Attorney General v. City Council of Lawrence, 111 Mass. 90; School District v. McKenzie, 30 Mich. 353; Commonwealth v. Justices of Fairfax Co., 2 Va. Cas. 9; Madison

Co. Court v. Alexander, 1 Miss. 523; State v. Texas Co. Court, 44 Mo. 230; State v. Robinson, 1 Kan. 188; State v. Demaree, 80 Ind. 519; Ottawa v. People, 48 Ill. 233; Barksdale v. Cobb, 16 Ga. 13; Freeman v. Selectmen of New Haven, 34 Conn. 406; People v. Sexton, 37 Cal. 532; School Directors v. Anderson, 45 Pa. St. 388; People v. Grand Co. Commrs., 6 Colo. 202; Danville v. Blackwell, 80 Va. 38; Williams v. Saunders, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 60; State v. County Judge, 7 Clarke (Iowa) 186; State v. Bailey, 7 Clarke (Iowa) 390; Magruder v. Swann, 25 Md. 173; United States v. Guthrie, 17 How. (U. S.) 284; Postmaster Gen. v. Trigg, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 173; Jack v. Moore, 66 Ala. 184.

In State v. Kendall, 15 Neb. 262, LAKE, Ch. J., said: "The only acts which courts can rightfully control by this writ are such as are purely ministerial, and with which nothing like judgment or discretion is connected," citing U. S. v. Seaman, 17 How. (U. S.) 225; U. S. v. Guthrie, 17 How. (U. S.) 284; State v. Governor, 22 Wis. 110; People v. Contracting Board, 27 N. Y. 378.

Ministerial Duty Defined.—A ministerial duty on the part of a public officer, the discharge of which may be compelled by mandamus is some duty imposed expressly by law, not by contract, or which arises necessarily as an incident to the office, involving no discretion in its exercise, but mandatory and imperative. State, Charleston C. & C. R. Co. v. Whitesides, 30 S. Car. 579.

1. Kleiber v. McManus, 66 Tex. 48; People v. Swift, 59 Mich. 529; Morgan v. Fleming, 24 W. Va. 186; Pettigrew v. Washington Co., 43 Ark. 33; Fredrick v. Mecosta Co. Circuit Judge, 52 Mich. 529; State v. Whittett, 61 Wis. 351; Com. v. Hampden, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 414; Springfield v. Hampden, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 68; Strong v. Petitioner, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 484; Johnson v. Randall, 7 Mass. 340; Nelson v. Justices, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 207; State v. Justice, Dudley (Ga.) 37; Carpenter v. Bristol Commrs., 21 Pick. Mass.) 258; People v. Judge, 1 Mich. 359.

legislature unconstitutional.¹ Or where the facts are of a character to establish a want of jurisdiction.² Nor will it lie to compel a person to undo an act which the law has compelled him to do, and he has done.³ So it will not issue to compel one to do that which he has been enjoined from doing.⁴ Nor will it issue to compel the performance of a mere service.⁵

The writ contemplates the necessity of indicating the precise thing to be done; it is not adapted to cases calling for continuous action, varying according to circumstances.⁶ And it may issue in all actions when it is a proper remedy, except in replevin, detinue, and actions for the recovery of real property.⁷ But it cannot be made to answer the office of a plea to a pending suit, nor of an action at law to recover specific property, or for the abuse of process.⁸ So mandamus should never be issued on the mere consent of the parties. Consent in such cases creates the presumption of fraud, and, when unsupported by evidence, cannot form the basis of a valid judgment.⁹

4. Statutory Remedy.—Where the statute provides a plain, speedy and adequate remedy, mandamus will not be awarded.¹⁰

1. People v. Stephens, 2 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. N. S. 348; Hall v. Supervisors, 20 Cal. 591.

On a summary hearing, on a petition for a mandamus, the court will not decide the constitutionality of a law involving the interests of third persons. Smyth v. Titcomb, 31 Me. 272.

2. People v. Commrs. etc. of Seward, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 94.

3. Maxwell v. Burton, 2 Utah 595; Rice, Barton etc. Machine Co. v. Worcester, 130 Mass. 575; Deane v. Greene County Supervisors, 66 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 461; State v. Matley, 17 Neb. 564. See State v. Hanna, 97 Ind. 469; State v. Internal Improvement Fund Trustees, 20 Fla. 402; Smithee v. Mosely, 31 Ark. 425.

Mandamus will not lie to compel the division and allotment of a fund already divided and allotted. Spiritual Atheneum Society v. Randolph, 58 Vt. 192.

4. People v. Ulster County Supervisors, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 146. Compare Clews v. County of Lee, 2 Woods 474; Smith v. Commrs. etc., 2 Woods 596.

5. Bailey v. Oviatt, 46 Vt. 627.

6. Diamond Match Co. v. Powers, 51 Mich. 145.

No relief will be given save that asked for specifically. School District v. Lauderbaugh, 80 Mo. 190.

A writ of mandamus ordering town authorities to pay certain warrants, or levy a tax for that purpose, is improper. The command should be limited to one of the requirements. State v. Trustees etc., 61 Mo. 155.

7. Brown v. Crego, 29 Iowa 322.

8. Murphy v. State, 59 Ala. 639.

9. State v. Burbank, 22 La. An. 379.

10. Fogle v. Gregg, 26 Ind. 345; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. State, 25 Ind. 177; State v. Supervisors of Sheboygan, 29 Wis. 79; Com. v. Mifflintown, 2 Leg. Gaz. (Pa.) 75; Com. v. Clark, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 498; Yuengling v. County Commrs., 2 Leg. Chron. (Pa.) 350; Justices v. Munday, 2 Leigh (Va.) 165; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. State, 25 Ind. 177; Marshall v. Sloan, 35 Iowa 445; State v. Baltimore Co. Commrs., 46 Md. 621; Ex parte Mackey, 15 S. Car. 322; Board of Commrs. v. Hicks, 2 Ind. 527; Pickell v. Owen, 66 Iowa 485; State v. Rightor, 36 La. An. 200; Territory v. Cavanaugh, 3 Dak. 325; People v. State Ins. Co., 19 Mich. 392. Compare Winters v. Burford, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 328.

Certain territory, which geographically belonged to the district township of P, having been attached to the independent district of E by the concurrent action of the two boards, two-thirds of the electors residing therein united in a petition for its restoration. The board of P granted and that of E refused the prayer of the petition. Code Iowa, § 1798, provides that such territory shall, upon such petition, be restored to the township to which it geographically belongs by the concurrent action of the boards of directors of the respective

The mere fact that the statute provides a remedy does not, however, supersede the remedy by mandamus. The relator must not only have a specific, adequate and legal remedy, but it must be one competent to afford relief upon the very subject matter of his application; and if it be doubtful whether such statutory remedy will afford him a complete remedy, the writ should issue.¹

5. Statutory Rights.—Mandamus lies to enforce rights given by statute.² But not to compel a ministerial officer to perform an act in execution of a statute which is void.³

6. Equitable Relief.—Where the right is clear and specific and public officers or tribunals refuse to comply with their duty, a writ of mandamus issues for the very purpose of enforcing specific relief. It is the inadequacy and not the mere absence of all other legal remedies and the danger of a failure of justice without it that must usually determine the propriety of this writ, and it is not excluded by other legal remedies which are not adequate to secure the specific relief needed nor by the existence of a specific remedy in equity.⁴

But where the relators have resorted to a court of chancery in such a manner as gives to that court full jurisdiction to adjust and enforce the rights of all the parties interested in the controversy it will be improper for the appellate court, on an application districts. Held, that the remedy of the petitioners was fixed by Code Iowa, § 1829, and was by appeal to the county superintendent, and not by mandamus. Barnett v. Independent Dist. of Earlham, 73 Iowa 134.

1. Freemont v. Crippen, 10 Cal. 211; State v. Wright, 10 Nev. 167; Etheridge v. Hall, 7 Port. (Ala.) 47; In re Trustees of Williamsburgh, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 34; Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488; People v. State Treasurer, 24 Mich. 469.

By a remedy at law such as will operate as a bar to mandamus is understood such a remedy as will enforce a right or the performance of a duty, and unless it reaches the end intended and actually compels a performance of the duty in question, it is not an adequate remedy within the meaning of the rule. High on Extraordinary L. Rem., § 17; Overseers of Porter Twp. v. Overseers of Jersey Shore, 82 Pa. St. 275.

Mandamus will not lie to compel a public officer to do an act not clearly commanded by law. Puckett v. White, 22 Tex. 559. Or against an officer where the object is not to compel him to do what the statute orders him to do, but to compel him to do what it is claimed the statute ought to order him to do, in pursuance of a previous contract with the State, as that would be to sue the State on its contracts. Marshall v. Clark, 22 Tex. 23.

2. Golden Canal Co. v. Bright, 6 Colo. 144; People v. Westford, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 555. See Morse v. Williamson, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 472.

When a statute imposes a specific duty, either in express terms or by a fair and reasonable implication, and there is no other specific and adequate remedy, a mandamus may be awarded to compel the performance of the duty. People v. State Ins. Co., 19 Mich. 392. Compare Winters v. Burford, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 328.

A mandamus, sought against an officer on the ground of a statutory duty, must be to compel the very duty enjoined by the statute. Under a statute requiring a board to provide a dwelling for servants, a mandamus does not lie to compel them to repay a servant rent he has paid during their neglect to provide a dwelling. People v. Commrs. of Emigration, 22 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 291.

3. State v. Tappan, 29 Wis. 664; State v. Mayor etc., 43 N. J. L. 542.

4. La Grange v. State Treasurer, 24 Mich. 469; People v. New York, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 395; People v. State for mandamus, to undertake to settle the questions involved in that suit in the mode desired.¹ The proceeding in equity must, however, afford as effectual a remedy as that by mandamus.²

But a chancery decree will not be set aside on a mere motion, and if so set aside mandamus lies to vacate the action, but without prejudice to the right which any party may have had to proceed in a regular way.³

7. Remedy by Indictment.—A remedy by criminal prosecution or an action on the case for neglect of duty will not supersede that by mandamus, since it cannot compel a specific act to be done, and is, therefore, not equally convenient, beneficial and effectual.⁴

Treasurer, 23 Mich. 499; Klokke v. Stanley, 109 Ill. 192; Tawas etc. R. Co. v. Iosco Circuit Judge, 44 Mich. 479.

In People v. New York, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 375, NELSON, J., said: "The proposition is, I believe, universally true that the writ of mandamus will not lie in any case where another legal remedy exists, and it is used only to prevent a failure of justice. By legal remedy is meant a remedy at law, and though the party might seek redress in chancery, that, of itself, is not a conclusive objection to the application. That may and should influence the court in the exercise of the discretion which they possess granting the writ under the facts and circumstances of the particular case, but does not affect its right or jurisdiction. Nor does the fact that the party is liable to indictment and punishment of his omission to do the act, to compel a performance of which this writ is sought, constitute any objection to the granting of the writ. The principle which seems to lie at the foundation of applications for this writ and the use of it is that, whenever a legal right exists, the party is entitled to a legal remedy, and when all others fail the aid of this may be invoked." And see Com. v. Commrs. of Allegheny, 32 Pa. St. 218.

1. People v. Warfield, 20 Ill. 164; School Inspectors of Peoria v. People, 20 Ill. 531; People v. Salomon, 46 Ill. 419; People v. Wiant, 48 Ill. 264; Queen v. Pitt, 10 Ad. & E. 272; Hardcastle v. Maryland etc. R. Co., 32 Md. 32; King v. Wheeler, Lee's Ca. temp. H. 99.

Where a bill in chancery has been filed and is still pending, on the trial of which the question whether fraudulent votes were cast and carried, the question of removal of a county seat is necessarily involved, and the court has competent jurisdiction to correct the vote and settle the question; the supreme court of Illinois will not determine the question as to which point is the county seat on an application for a writ of mandamus, but will leave the circuit court to determine the question in the chancery suit. People v. Wiant, 48 Ill. 264.

2. Upon the application of the commissioners of the South Park in Chicago for a mandamus to compel the county clerk of Cook county to receive and file an estimate made by the commissioners of the amount of money required for park purposes, and to place that amount in the proper tax warrants to be collected from the payers of the district as provided in an act of the legislature on that subject, it was held that the writ of mandamus ought to be awarded, notwithstanding the pendency of a suit in chancery, by which the county clerk and the commissioners were sought to be enjoined at the instance of a property owner interested from doing the same act which it was sought by the writ of mandamus to have done. The chancery suit would be final only as between the immediate parties to it, and a decree would not bar a suit of the same nature by each property owner, and thus the commissioners might be delayed indefinitely in the performance of their duties. So it was considered more complete justice could be done by means of the writ of mandamus, and it was awarded. People v. Salomon, 51 Ill. 37.

3. York v. Ingham, 57 Mich. 421.

4. Fremont v. Crippen, 10 Cal. 215; In re Trenton Water Power Co., Spen. (N. J.) 659; King v. Severn & Wye R. Co., 2 Barn. & Ald. 644; Queen v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 10 Ad. & E.

8. Enforcement of Contracts.—The superior court has no jurisdiction by mandamus to compel the performance of executory contracts.¹ It is an appropriate remedy to compel public officers to perform specific duties imposed by law; but the duties to be coerced arising out of a contract require time for its performance, and must of necessity involve in some degree the exercise of discretion, or, what is the same thing, judgment in the management of the business to which the contract refers.² It is only practicable by mandamus to compel the performance of specific acts where the duty to discharge them is clear and well defined, and when no element of discretion is involved in the performance.³

9 Unliquidated Damages.—Mandamus will not lie to compel the payment of unliquidated damages.⁴

10. Useless and Unlawful Acts.—It is a fundamental principle of the law of mandamus that the writ will never be granted in cases where, if issued, it will prove unavailing. And whenever it is apparent to the court that the object sought is impossible of attainment, either through want of power on the part of the persons against whom the extraordinary jurisdiction of the court is invoked, or for other sufficient cause, or that the granting of the writ would necessarily be, fruitless, the court will refuse to interfere. It must, in other words, be fatal to every such application, where the uncontested facts show, satisfactorily and clearly, that it is practically not within the power of the respondent to perform the act required. The solemn mandate of a court of justice should never be invoked to an end that is obviously useless.⁵

531; R. v. Rayn, 6 A. & E. 400. Compare R. v. Commrs. of Dean Enclosure, 2 M. & S. 85; R. v. Severn & Wye R. Co., 2 B. & Ald. 646. See R. v. Bristol, 6 T. R. 168.

A mandamus lies where there is no other remedy at law, and it is no objection to the granting of it that the party asking the aid of such process may resort to a court of equity, or that the adversary may be punished criminally for omitting to do the act to compel the performance of which the mandamus is asked for. People v. New York, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 393.

1. State v. New Orleans & Carrollton R. Co., 37 La. An. 589; People v. Dulaney, 96 Ill. 504; Benson v. Paull 6 El. & Bl. 273; Parrott v. Bridgeport 44 Conn. 180; Bailey v. Oviatt, 46 Vt 627; State v. Zanesville etc. Turnpike Co., 16 Ohio St. 308; State v. Howard Co. Court, 39 Mo. 375; State v. Republican River Bridge Co., 20 Kan. 404; State v. New Orleans etc. R. Co., 37 La. An. 589; State v. Republican River Bridge Co., 20 Kan. 404; Wyckoff v. Farlee, 13 N. J. L. (1 Green) 261.

A mandamus proceeding being an action at law in Illinois, when it is made to appear that the petitioners seeking thereby to enforce a contract are only a part of the firm with which the contract is made, relief will be denied. Dement v. Rokker (Ill.), 19 N. East. Rep. 33.

2. People v. Dulaney, 96 Ill. 504.

3. People v. Ketchum, 72 Ill. 212; Belcher v. Treat, 61 Me. 577; Sherburne v. Horn, 45 Mich. 160; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 134; People v. Guryea, 16 Ill. 547.

4. Governor v. Justices etc., 19 Ga. 97.

5. Cook v. Candee, 52 Ala. 109; Clark v. Crane, 57 Cal. 629; Lamar v. Wilkins, 28 Ark. 34; Roberts v. Smith, 63 Ga. 213; People v. Dulaney, 96 Ill. 503; Cristman v. Peck, 90 Ill. 150; People v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 55 Ill. 95; Price v. Walker, 44 Iowa 458; Bassett v. School Directors, 9 La. An. 513; Williams v. County Commrs., 35 Me. 345; Woodbury v. County Commrs., 40 Me. 304; State v. Vanarsdale, 42 N. J. L. 536; State v. Hoboken, 40 N. J. L.

Thus it will not issue to command an act restrained by an injunctive order.¹ Nor will it issue to compel the performance of an act which respondent has expressed his willingness to do.²

11. Omissions of Duty.—To justify the issuance of the writ to enforce the performance of an act by a public officer, two things must concur; the act must be one the performance of which the law specially enjoins as a duty resulting from an office and an actual omission on the part of the respondent to perform it. It is incumbent on the relator to show not only that the respondent has failed to perform the required duty, but that the performance thereof is actually due from him at the time of the application.³

152; People v. Supervisors of Westchester, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 607; Colonial etc. Co. v. Supervisors of N. Y., 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 166; People v. Tremain, 17 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 142; People v. Dutchess etc. R. Co., 58 N. Y. 153; Universalist Church v. Trustees, 6 Ohio 445; s. c., 27 Am. Dec. 267; Lacoste v. Duffy, 49 Tex. 767; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 122; State v. Perrine, 5 Vroom (N. J.) 254; People v. Hayt, 66 N. Y. 666; Milwaukee Malt Extract Co. v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 73 Iowa 98; People v. Tremain, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 96; Com. v. Supervisors, 29 Pa. St. 121; State v. Comptroller General, 4 Rich. N. S. 185; O'Hara v. Powell, 80 N. Car. 103; In re Bristol & N. S. R. Co., 3 Q. B. D. 10; Queen v. Norwich Savings Bank, 9 Ad. & E. 729. See State v. City of New Orleans, 34 La. An. 469; State v. Bowden, 18 Fla. 17; Ex parte Shandies, 66 Ala. 134; Ex parte Du Bose, 54 Ala. 278; State v. Hoboken, N. J. L. 152; Bail v. Lappins, 3 Oreg. 55; People v. Commrs. of Emigration, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 562; De Haas v. Newaygo Circuit Judge, 46 Mich. 12; Gruener v. Moore County Judge, 6 Colo. 526; State v. Kispert, 21 Wis. 387; People v. Miller, 39 Hun (N. Y.) 557; Ackerman v. Desha County, 27 Ark. 457; State v. Perrine, 34 N. J. L. 254; Springfield v. Highway Commrs. of Hampden, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 501; Gillespie v. Wood, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 437.

A writ of mandamus will not be awarded for the performance of an act which for any reason has become unlawful to be performed. So the writ will not be allowed to compel the village authorities to make special assessments to pay judgments of condemnation when more than five years have elapsed after dismissal of the proceedings. People v. Hyde Park, 117 Ill. 462.

Where a collector is required by law to pay all taxes collected by him into the state or a county treasury, an order of an inferior tribunal requiring him to pay taxes over to a particular person not the treasurer is without authority of law, and a mandamus will not be awarded to enforce it, although itself final until reversed. Ross v. Lane, 3 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 695.

1. State v. Kispert, 21 Wis. 387; Ohio & Indiana R. Co. v. Commrs., 7 Ohio St. 278; Ex parte Fleming, 4 Hill. 581. Compare State v. Dubuclet, 26 La. An. 127.

2. People v. Dulaney, 96 Ill. 503.

3. State v. Gracey, 11 Nev. 233; State v. Carney, 3 Kan. 88; State v. Dubuclet, 24 La. An. 16; State v. Burbank, 22 La. An. 298; Commrs. of Pub. Sch. v. Co. Commrs. of A Co., 20 Md. 449.

It is contrary to the policy of the law that mandamus should issue, where its sole purpose and effect is to relieve the party seeking it from the consequences of his own mistakes or omissions. Klokke v. Stanley, 109 Ill. 192.

When it is shown, prima facie, that from error or omission of duty the judge of an inferior tribunal has denied an order essential to a speedy execution of its decrees or judgments, a rule nisi will be awarded, and, on the return of the rule, if no good cause is shown why it was refused, a peremptory mandamus will be awarded. Ex parte Sebert, 67 Ala. 349.

Mandamus will not be granted in anticipation of a defect of duty or error in conduct. Commrs. of Pub. Sch. v. Co. Commrs. of A County, 20 Md. 449; State v. Rising, 15 Nev. 164.

But in Atty. Gen. v. Boston, 123 Mass. 460, it is held that when the officers against whom the writ is sought have clearly manifested a determina-

12. Demand and Refusal.—The general rule is admitted to be that a demand and refusal is necessary.¹ Previous to the making of the application to the court for the writ to command the performance of a particular act, an express and distinct command or request to perform it must be made by the prosecutor to the defendant, who must have refused to comply with such demand, either in direct terms or by conduct from which a refusal can be conclusively implied, it being due to the defendant to have the option of either doing or refusing to do that which is required of him before an application shall be made to the court for the purpose of compelling him.² This is true as a general rule, and it is more especially true where the proceeding has relation to private rights or interests. But it is manifest that there are cases affecting public officers or duties when the idea of a literal demand and refusal does not have place, there being no one particularly empowered to demand, as it does not affect individual interests, but the law—the official duty—is in the place of it, and omission or neglect is refusal.³ And especially is this true when tion to disregard their duty by refusing to perform the act in question, the court is not obliged to wait until the evil is done before granting relief. See also Brunswick v. Duve, 59 Ga. 803.

1. State v. Adams, 19 Nev. 370; Crandall v. Amador Co., 20 Cal. 72; Jefferson Co. v. Arrghi, 51 Miss. 667; R. v. Bristol R. Co., 4 Q. B. 162; R. v. Frost, 8 A. & E. 822; R. v. Brecknock Canal Navigation, 3 A. & E. 217; R. v. Stoke Damarel, 5 A. & E. 584; R. v. Wilts & Berks Canal Nav., 3 A. & E. 477; R. v. Priors Ditton Inclosure Co., 4 Jur. 103; R. v. Trustees of Cheadle Highway, 7 Jur. 373; Ex parte Winfield, 3 A. & E. 614; State Bd. of Education v. West Point, 50 Miss. 646; State v. Schaack, 28 Minn. 358; State v. Slick, 86 Ind. 501; Coit v. Elliott, 28 Ark. 294; State v. York Co. School District, 8 Neb. 92; State v. Ramsey, 8 Neb. 286; Le Roux v. Bay Circuit Judge, 45 Mich. 416; In re Whitney, 3 N. Y. Supp. 838; State v. Gibbs, 13 Fla. 55; Payne v. Perkerson, 56 Ga. 672.

The writ will not be granted to compel the corporate authorities of a village or other body to do an act it has never been asked to do. The petition should show a demand for performance of the act and a refusal. People v. Hyde Park, 117 Ill. 462. See State v. Cheraw etc. R. Co., 16 S. Car. 524; Welsh v. Wayne Circuit Judge (Mich.), 43 N. W. Rep. 573. Compare State v. Cordozo, 5 S. Car. 297; Alexander v. McDowell, 67 N. Car. 330; State v. Hull, 17 Minn. 429; Bryson v. Spauld- ing, 20 Kan. 427; Leonard v. House, 15 Ga. 473; Lewis v. Henley, 2 Ind. 332.

A demand and a refusal to act must precede a request for a writ of mandamus. People v. Hyde Park, 117 Ill. 462.

2. Tap. on Mand. 382; Chance v. Temple, 1 Iowa 189; Oroville etc. R. Co. v. Plumas Co., 37 Cal. 354; Crandall v. Amador Co., 20 Cal. 72; People v. Romero, 18 Cal. 90; Jefferson Co. v. Arrghi, 51 Miss. 667; Lee Co. v. State, 36 Ark. 276; State v. Schaack, 28 Minn. 358. But see Com. v. Commrs. of Allegheny, 37 Pa. St. 237.

Where a town, when authorized by the legislature, refused to aid in the construction of a railroad, and the prosecutors sought to compel them by mandamus, but omitted to aver that the selectmen of the town had been requested to perform this duty or had refused to perform it, held, that a failure to allege the refusal was fatal to the application. Douglas v. Chatham, 41 Conn. 211.

3. State v. County Judge, 7 Iowa 186; Com. v. Commrs. of Allegheny, 37 Pa. St. 237; Atty. Gen. v. Boston, 123 Mass. 460; State v. Bailey, 7 Iowa 390; Chumaseo v. Potts, 2 Mont. 242.

In a proceeding by mandamus to compel defendants to levy a tax for the payment of a judgment against the town of Algona, no demand was shown to have been made upon defendants to levy the tax, but the record clearly showed an intention upon their

the respondent has done an act which he calls a performance but which the law says is not such.¹

And where the duty may be performed by either of two individuals it must be shown that there has been a refusal on the part of each.² The refusal must be either in direct terms or by conduct from which a refusal can be conclusively implied. It is not necessary that the word refuse or any equivalent of it should be used, but there should be enough from the whole of the facts to show to the court that for some improper reason compliance is withheld, and a distinct determination not to do what is required.³

13. Laches.—When the demands for which mandamus is sought have become stale, public policy is against extending the remedy to such cases.⁴ The writ will not issue after an action is barred by statute, where the delay is unexplained.⁵

14. Notice.—Mandamus will not issue without notice in some form to the defendant or a waiver of notice by appeal.⁶ So a judgment rendered against a party in his absence without legal notice will be set aside by mandamus.⁷

part not to levy the tax. Held, that where the record clearly discloses an intention upon the part of the respondents not to perform the act required it was not necessary that a demand should be made. Palmer v. Stacy, 44 Iowa 340.

1. State v. County Judge, 7 Iowa 186.

2. R. v. Bishop of London, 13 East 419.

3. State v. County Judge, 7 Iowa 186.

4. State v. Paterson, Newark etc. R. Co., 43 N. J. L. 505; Walcott v. Mayor, 51 Mich. 249; Smith v. Eaton Co., 56 Mich. 217; Chinn v. Trustees etc., 82 Ill. 236. See State v. Jennings, 48 Wis. 549; People v. French, 12 Abb. (N. Y.) N. Cas. 156; Gray v. Saginaw Circuit Judge, 49 Mich. 628; True v. Melvin, 43 N. H. 503; State v. Parish Judge of Iberville, 29 La. An. 809; Mitchell v. Boardman (Me.), 10 Atl. Rep. 452.

An applicant for mandamus should exercise due diligence. Territory v. Potts, 3 Mont. 364; Coit v. Elliott, 28 Ark. 294.

Mandamus to compel the amendment of a judgment for the defendant in replevin so as to require return of the property, was denied where the application was not made until several terms of court after execution had been satisfied, nor until a new judge was elected. Gray v. Saginaw Circuit

Judge, 49 Mich. 628. Compare State v. Cordoza, 5 S. Car. 297.

In People v. Seneca Com. Pleas, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 264, the delay was only for a year, the supreme court refused the writ. They said: "Here has been a delay of a year since the happening of the errors complained of, and the fact of the party's having been advised that his remedy was by writ of error furnishes no excuse. This court will not by mandamus disturb proceedings in which parties have so long acquiesced."

Mandamus was not allowed to enforce the payment of a claim for salary where the relator first elect to sue in assumpsit but left the action undetermined and, after ten years had passed from the date of his claim, sought his remedy by mandamus from the appellate court. Walcott v. Mayor, 51 Mich. 249.

5. People v. Chapin, 104 N. Y. 96.

6. Fairbanks v. Amoskeag Nat. Bank, 30 Fed. Rep. 602; Waterworks v. Albany Mayor's Court, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 292; Brosius v. Reuter, 1 Hir. & J. (Md.) 480; Crumley v. McKinney (Tex.), 9 S. W. Rep. 157.

An alternative writ of mandamus may, under Code Civil Proc. N. Y., § 2068, be granted without notice. People v. Board of Supervisors, 3 N. Y. Supp. 751.

7. People v. Bacon, 18 Mich. 247.

III. AGAINST INFERIOR COURTS—1. Generally.—Superior courts have the general superintending control over all inferior courts of law or equity, in aid of which it can issue, hear and determine writs of mandamus; and this writ may always be issued in the sound legal discretion of the court whenever the failure or refusal of the inferior tribunal to act, in a matter in which its duty to do so is plain, may deprive or bar anyone of a legal or equitable right.¹

2. Discretion of Inferior Courts.—If an inferior tribunal has a discretion and proceeds to exercise it, then its discretion should not be controlled by mandamus,² but if the subordinate public agent,

1. McCreary v. Rogers, 35 Ark. 298. Ex parte King, 27 Ala. 387; Ex parte Banks, 28 Ala. 28; San Francisco Gas Co. v. Supervisors, 11 Cal. 43; Martin v. Ingham, 38 Kan. 641; Draper v. Noteware, 7 Cal. 278; Fowler v. Pierce, 2 Cal. 167; McDougall v. Bell, 4 Cal. 177; People v. Sexton, 24 Cal. 78; Price v. Sacramento Co., 6 Cal. 255; McCauley v. Brooks, 16 Cal. 35; People v. Lake Co., 33 Cal. 487; Lewis v. Barclay, 35 Cal. 213; Spinger v. Green, 46 Cal. 73; People v. Pratt, 28 Cal. 166; Sprague v. Fawcett, 53 Cal. 408; Berryman v. Perkins, 55 Cal. 483; United States v. Seaman, 17 How. (U. S.) 225; Secretary v. McGarrahan, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 298; Castello v. St. Louis Circuit Court, 28 Mo. 259.

Mandamus is the appropriate remedy to set the machinery of the courts to which it is addressed in motion, but it will not direct the performance of any particular judicial act. People v. Judge of Wayne Co., 1 Mich. 359; State v. St. Louis Court of Appeals, 87 Mo. 374; Roberts v. Holsworth, 5 Hals. (N. J.) 57; Queen v. Justices of Middlesex, 9 Ad. & E. 540; Sturgis v. Joy, 2 El. & Bl. 739; King v. Hewes, 3 Ad. & E. 725. Ex parte Chamberlain, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 49; King v. Justices of Suffolk, 5 Nev. & Mon. 139; Miltenberger v. St. Louis Co. Court, 50 Mo. 172; People v. Russell, 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 27; Dickson v. Judge of Second Circuit, 4 Mo. 286; Gunn's Admr. v. Pulaski Co., 3 Ark. 427; Beebe v. Judge of Sixth District Court, 28 La. An. 905; State v. Judge of Third District Court, 32 La. An. 800; Ex parte Loring, 94 U. S. 418; Ex parte Flippin, 94 U. S. 348; Ex parte Sawyer, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 235; Sprague v. Fawcett, 53 Cal. 408; State v. Judges of Civil District Court, 34 La. An. 1114; Kleiber v. McManus, 66 Tex. 48; Union Colony v. Elliott, 5 Col. 371; Barksdale v. Cobb, 16 Ga. 13; U. S. v. Commrs., 5

Wall. (U. S.) 563; United States v. Shurz, 102 U. S. 407; Heilbron v. Tulare County Superior Court, 72 Cal. 96; Ex parte Chambers, 10 Mo. App. 240; People v. McRoberts, 100 Ill. 458; People v. Sexton, 37 Cal. 532; Mogan v. Fleming, 24 W. Va. 186; Brem v. Arkansas County Court, 9 Ark. 240. Compare People v. Pearson, 1 Scam. (Ill.) 458.

Thus, if the judge of an inferior court captiously refuses to hold a court, he may be compelled to do so; and the rule applies equally to all officers, whether strictly judicial or not, if invested with a discretion. Warren Co. Court v. Daniel, 2 Bibb. (Ky.) 573; Ohio Co. Court v. Newton, 79 Ky. 267; Hull v. Supervisors of Oneida, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 259; Com. v. Boone Co. Court, 82 Ky. 632; State v. Negowan, 89 Mo. 156. But mandamus will not lie to command an inferior tribunal to do that which it could not legally do without such mandate. State v. Judge, 15 Ala. 740.

2. Union Colony v. Elliott, 5 Col. 371; Freeman v. Selectman of New Haven, 34 Conn. 406; Barksdale v. Cobb, 16 Ga. 13; Ottawa v. People, 48 Ill. 233; State v. Demaree, 80 Ind. 519; State v. Robinson, 1 Kan. 188; State v. Board of Liquidators, 23 La. An. 388; State v. Rightor, 32 La. An. 1305; State v. Second District Judge, 32 La. An. 1306; State v. Ames, 31 Minn. 440; Burns v. Bender, 36 Mich. 195; Swan v. Gray, 44 Miss. 393; Bracoonier v. Packard, 136 Mass. 50; Gilbert v. Judges of Niagara, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 59. Ex parte Bassett, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 458; Ex parte Johnson, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 371; Ex parte Bacon, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 392; People v. Judges, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 73; Ex parte Benson, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 363; People v. Onondaga Common Pleas, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 509; People v. Montgomery Common Pleas, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 633; People v. New whether it be invested with both judicial and ministerial functions, or only with the former, refuses to act in any way or entertain a question as to which it has a discretion, and which the law has enjoined upon its consideration, then obedience to the law should be enforced by mandamus and the agent compelled to act, if there is no other legal remedy; but in such a case its discretion or judgment must be left free to act and cannot be controlled in a particular direction.¹

York Common Pleas, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 113; Ex parte Koon, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 644; People v. Supervisors of New York, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 362; Hutchinson v. Commrs. of the Canal Fund, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 692; People v. Superior Court, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 701; Ex parte Black, 1 Ohio St. 30; Runkle v. Com., 97 Pa. St. 318; Morley v. Power, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 691; State v. Webber (Minn.) 949; Judges v. People, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 79; overruling People v. Superior, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 114; Ex parte Bailly, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 429; Ex parte Nelson, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 417; Gilbert v. Judges of Niagara Co., 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 59; Ex parte Davenport, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 661; U. S. v. Lawrence, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 42; Poultny v. Lafayette, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 472; Postmaster General v. Trigg, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 173; Ex parte Railway Co., 101 U. S. 711; Ex parte Burtis, 103 U. S. 238; Ex parte Many, 14 How. (U. S.) 24; Ex parte Taylor, 14 How. (U. S.) 3; Ex parte Roberts, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 216; Ex parte Montgomery, 24 Ala. 98; Ex parte Opdyke, 62 Ala. 68; Ex parte Hays, 26 Ark. 510; Gunn's Admr. v. Pulaski Co., 3 Ark. 427; Ex parte Henry, 24 Ala. 638; State v. Van Ness, 15 Fla. 317; State v. Norton, 20 Kan. 506; State v. Court of Common Pleas, 38 N. J. L. 182; Ex parte Johnson, 25 Ark. 614; People v. Judge, 41 Mich. 5; People v. Judge of Superior Court, 40 Mich. 169; People v. St. Joseph Circuit Judge, 39 Mich. 21; People v. Marquette Circuit Judge, 38 Mich. 244; Taylor v. Osceola Circuit Judge, 30 Mich. 99; People v. Judge of Probate, 16 Mich. 204; People v. Williams, 55 Ill. 178; People v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 41 Mich. 551; People v. Montcalm Circuit Judge, 41 Mich. 550; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Genesee Circuit Judge, 40 Mich. 168.

The subordinate tribunal will be left free to give its best judgment. State v. St. Louis Court, 87 Mo. 374; State v. Lafayette Co. Court, 41 Mo. 222; Trainer v. Porter, 45 Mo. 338. Ex parte

Nelson, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 417; People v. Ulster Judges, Coleman 117; Ex parte Bostwick, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 143; Bank of Columbia v. Sweeny, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 567; Moody v. Fleming, 4 Ga. 115.

And where an inferior jurisdiction, having a discretion, has exercised it, the superior court will not interfere by mandamus. Ex parte Bassett, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 458; Ex parte Nelson, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 417; Gray v. Bridge, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 189; Ex parte Bailey, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 479; Ex parte Benson, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 363. Unless it be clearly shown that such discretion has been abused. Commrs. v. Lynah, 2 McCord, (S. Car.) 170.

1. McCreary v. Rogers, 35 Ark. 298; Taylor v. Salt Lake County Court, 2 Utah 405; Doolittle v. Cabell County Court, 28 W. Va. 158; Ex parte Shandies, 66 Ala. 134; Ex parte Mahone, 30 Ala. 49; Ex parte Echols, 39 Ala. 698; Ex parte Harris, 52 Ala. 87; Ex parte Selma etc. R. Co., 46 Ala. 423; State v. Secretary of State, 33 Mo. 293; People v. Collins, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 549; Ex parte Davenport, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 661; Citizens' Bank of Steubenville v. Wright, 6 Ohio St. 318; People v. Judges, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 20; People v. New York Common Pleas, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 113; Kendall v. U. S., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 534; Ex parte Benson, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 363; Queen v. Old Hall, 10 Ad. & E. 248; Queen v. Harland, 8 Ad. & E. 826; Ex parte Bacon, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 392; King v. Justices of Cambridgeshire, 1 Dow. & Ry. 325; Ex parte Banks, 28 Ala. 28; Howland v. Eldredge, 43 N. Y. 457; Barksdale v. Cobb, 16 Ga. 13; People v. Sexton, 37 Cal. 532; People v. Adam, 3 Mich. 427; Swan v. Gray (Mass.), 44 Miss. 393; State v. Robinson, 1 Kan. 188; Freeman v. Selectman of New Haven, 34 Conn. 406; Humboldt Co. v. Churchill Co., 6 Nev. 30; Ex parte Black, 1 Ohio St. 30; Ottawa v. People, 48 Ill. 240; U. S. v. Seaman, 17 How. (U. S.) 225; St. Albans v. National Car. Co., 57 Vt. 68; Devine v. Harvie, 7 T. B. Mon.

The performance of a plain, positive duty may be compelled by mandamus, but where there is a discretion as to the result that may be arrived at, it cannot be controlled.¹ But the discretion of the court, however, to grant or refuse a writ of mandamus is not absolute, but is governed by legal rules, and its exercise is subject to review.² The scope and province of the writ is to prevent a failure of justice from delay or refusal to act when addressed to a court acting judicially.³

Mandamus will not lie to correct the errors of inferior tribunals

(Ky.) 439; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137; Page v. Hardin, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 648, 651. Stout v. Hopping, 17 N. J. L. (2 Harr.) 471; Ferris v. Munn, 22 N. J. L. (2 Zab.) 161; City of Louisville v. Kean, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 161; Allen v. Calhoun, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 32; People v. Russel, 1 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. (N. S.) 230; People v. Judges, 2 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 59.

The office of the writ of mandamus is in general to compel the performance of mere ministerial acts prescribed by law. It lies, however, also to subordinate judicial tribunals, to compel them to act where it is their duty to act, but never to require them to decide in a particular manner. It is not, like a writ of error or appeal, a remedy for erroneous decisions. People ex rel v. Dental Examiners, 110 Ill. 180; State v. Rightor, 32 La. An. 1305; State v. Second District Judge, 32 La. An. 1306.

Removal of County Seat.—Mandamus lies to compel the county court to permit the filing of the petition for the removal of a county seat, and to make the necessary order thereon, it being a ministerial duty. Doolittle v. Cabell County Court, 28 W. Va. 158.

Granting Habeas Corpus.—The city judge of New York has power to allow a writ of habeas corpus; but if he refuses to do so, it being discretionary with him whether to allow it or not, the remedy is not by mandamus. People v. Russel, 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 27.

Obedience to habeas corpus. issued by lower court, will not be enforced by mandamus. People v. Edwards, 66 Ill. 59.

To Levy a Tax.—Mandamus lies to compel a county court to levy a tax for payment of county bonds. Shelley v. St. Charles County, 30 Fed. Rep. 603.

1. Ex parte Morgan, 114 U. S. 174; State v. Williams, 69 Ala. 311; Ex parte Redd, 73 Ala. 548; People v. Knickerbocker, 114 Ill. 539; s. c., 55

Am. Rep. 879; State v. Marshall, 82 Mo. 484; Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313; People v. Detroit Superior Court Judge, 41 Mich. 31; Ex parte South etc. R. Co., 44 Ala. 654; People v. Detroit Superior Court Judge, 40 Mich. 169; Ex parte Denver & Rio Grande R. Co., 101 U. S. 711; Appling v. Bailey, 44 Ala. 333; Ex parte Newman, 14 Wall. 152; Gunn v. Pulaski County, 3 Ark. 427; Ex parte Hutt, 14 Ark. 368; Com. v. Judges etc., 3 Binn. (Pa.) 273; Roberts v. Hallsworth, 10 N. J. L. (5 Halst.) 57; Lamar v. Marshall, 21 Ala. 772; Matter of Pickett, 20 N. J. L. (1 Spen.) 134; Pudney v. Burkhardt, 62 Ind. 179; Jackson v. Justices of Harrison, 1 Va. Cas. 314; Dawson v. Thurston, 2 Hen. & M. Va. 132; Manns v. Givens, 7 Leigh (Va.) 689; Delaney v. Goddin, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 266; People v. Judges of Jackson Circuit Court, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 302; Sedden v. Templeton, 7 La. An. 126; Barnet v. Warren Circuit Court, Hard. (Ky.) 172; Ex parte Putnam, 20 Ala. 592; Platte County Court v. McFarland, 12 Mo. 166; Colston v. Dorchester County Court, 4 Har. & M. (Md.) 283; Hickman County Court v. Moore, 2 Bush. (Ky.) 108; Anonymous, 7 N. J. L. (2 Halst.) 160; Ellicott v. Levy Court, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 359; Mallory v. Matlock, 10 Ala. 595; Giboney v. Rogers, 32 Ark. 462; State v. Seventh District Judge, 38 La. An. 499.

It is an elementary rule that a writ of mandamus may be used to require an inferior court to decide a matter within its jurisdiction and pending before it for judicial determination, but not to control the decision. Ex parte Flippin, 94 U. S. 350; Ex parte Railway Co., 101 U. S. 720; Ex parte Burtis, 103 U. S. 238.

2. People v. Chapin, 104 N. Y. 96. See State v. Doyle, 40 Wis. 220.

3. State St. Louis Court, 87 Mo. 374; State v. Judge of Second District Court, 13 La. An. 89.

by annulling what they have done erroneously.¹ Nor has the court jurisdiction by mandamus to review the decisions of a subordinate court in a matter of which such subordinate court had judicial cognizance.² So if a court has lost jurisdiction by granting an appeal, mandamus does not lie.³ But it lies to compel an inferior court to entertain and try indictments erroneously quashed for want of jurisdiction.⁴ And to hear a proceeding for contempt dismissed for the same cause.⁵

1. Com. v. Boone Co. Court, 82 Ky. 632; State v. Megown, 89 Mo. 156; Chase v. Blackstone Canal Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 244; Judges v. People, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 79; Ex parte Hoyt, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 279; Herrington v. Sawyer, 36 Cal. 289; King v. Hewes, 3 Ad. & E. 725; King v. Justices of Suffolk, 5 Nev. & Man. 139; People v. Judges of Dutchess C. P., 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 658; Ex parte Nelson, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 417; Jansen v. Davison, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) Cas. 72; People v. Superior Court, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 575; State v. St. Louis, 87 Mo. 374; Ex parte Loring, 94 U. S. 418; Ex parte Perry, 102 U. S. 183; Potter v. Todd, 73 Mo. 101; Young v. Harrison, 6 Ga. 130. See People v. Judges of Calhoun Circuit Court, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 417.

The United States supreme court will not, by mandamus, compel an inferior court to reverse a decision made in the exercise of its jurisdiction. Ex parte Perry, 102 U. S. 183; Squier v. Gale, 1 Halst. (N. J.) 157. Compare Rand v. Townshend, 29 Vt. 670.

It will not issue commanding a subordinate tribunal to reverse their decision, when they have acted in a judicial capacity upon a question properly brought before them. Chase v. Blackstone Canal, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 244; Gray v. Bridge, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 189; Morse, Petitioner, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 443.

Where a court of common pleas, in New York, authorized a defendant to enter a judgment nunc pro tunc, where the plaintiff had died after a report of referees made, in a case where the supreme court would have denied the application for such rule on account of the delay in making it, it was held that a mandamus would not be granted to compel the common pleas to vacate the rule. Ex parte Koon, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 644.

On an affidavit, on a motion for a new trial, where there is something upon which the circuit judge is called to exercise his judgment, the question whether a new trial should be granted is one addressed to his discretion, and the supreme court has no authority to review his conclusion and compel him by mandamus to rescind his order. People v. Circuit Judge of Branch County, 17 Mich. 67.

2. State v. Megown, 89 Mo. 156; Com. v. Boone, 82 Ky. 632; Manor v. McCall, 5 Ga. 522; State v. Williams, 69 Ala. 311; Kleiber v. McManus, 66 Tex. 48; Strong, Petitioner, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 484; Carr v. Bristol Commrs., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 258; State v. Justices, Dudley (Ga.), 37; Satterlee v. Strider, 31 W. Va. 781; Ramagnano v. Crook, 85 Ala. 226; Shine v. Kentucky C. R. Co., 85 Ky. 177; Com. v. McLaughlin, 120 Pa. St. 518; State v. Board of Commrs. (Ind.), 21 N. E. Rep. 1097; State, Johnson v. Rightor, 40 La. An. 852; State v. Cramer, 96 Mo. 75; Crittenden County Court v. Shanks (Ky.), 11 S. W. Rep. 468; State, Mooney v. Edwards (N. J.), 17 Atl. Rep. 973; Ex parte Trapnell, 6 Ark. 9; State v. Judges of the Court of Appeals (La.), 6 So. Rep. 804; State v. King (La.), 6 So. Rep. 721; Chase v. Blackstone Canal Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 244; County Court v. Round Prairie Township, 10 Mo. 679.

A writ of mandamus cannot be used to bring up for review a judgment of the United States circuit court on a plea to the jurisdiction. Held, accordingly, where the circuit court quashed and vacated a writ of replevin on a plea to the jurisdiction, that as the question might be re-examined by the supreme court on writ of error a petition for mandamus to compel the circuit court to take jurisdiction should be dismissed. Ex parte Baltimore etc. R. Co., 108 U. S. 566.

3. State v. Lubke, 15 Mo. App. 152. See State v. Livsey (Neb.), 42 N. W. Rep. 762.

4. People v. Swift, 59 Mich. 529.

5. Temple v. Superior Court, 70 Cal. 211.

(a) EXERCISE OF JURISDICTION.—By mandamus, inferior courts or magistrates, when they fail or refuse to do so, will be compelled to entertain and exercise jurisdiction. They will not be controlled in the manner of its exercise, nor directed as to what judgment they will render.¹

(b) PLEADING.—The discretion of inferior courts over questions of pleading cannot be interfered with by mandamus.²

(c) JUDGMENTS.—Where a court refuses to make a final disposition of a cause, and insists upon dropping it from the docket, a peremptory writ of mandamus may be had from the supreme court.³ So where in the trial of a cause a verdict is agreed upon by the jury and reduced to writing in due form and brought into court by the jury, it is the duty of the court to receive the verdict and enter judgment, and for a refusal so to do the writ of mandamus is an appropriate remedy, and the only one that affords adequate relief.⁴ So if a judgment has been erroneously entered mandamus will lie upon a seasonable application to change the journal entry thereof accordingly, unless such change will preju-

1. Ex parte Graves, 61 Ala. 381; Floral Springs Water Co. v. Rives, 14 Nev. 431; People v. Troy Common Council, 78 N. Y. 33.

The question whether a court rightfully refused to entertain jurisdiction of a cause may be reviewed in proceedings for a mandamus. * Beguhl v. Swan, 39 Cal. 411.

2. Ex parte Coster, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 523; People v. Judges of Chautauque, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 73. See Arno v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 42 Mich. 362; Nederlander v. Jennison, Judge, 55 Mich. 411.

3. State v. Cape Girardeau Court, 72 Mo. 560; State v. Horner, 10 Mo. App. 307; Blackerby v. People, 10 Ill. (5 Gilm.) 266; Ex parte Thornton, 46 Ala. 384.

A mandamus will issue to direct the trial of a case in which the judge has refused to go into the merits of the action on an erroneous construction of same question of practice preliminary to the whole case. State v. Ellis (La.), 6 So. Rep. 55.

4. Munkens v. Watson, 9 Kan. 669; Smith v. Moore, 38 Conn. 105; State v. Judge Fourth Dis. Ct., 28 La. An. 451; Brooke v. Ewers, Stra. 113; Williams v. Saunders, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 60; State v. Knight, 46 Mo. 83; State v. Kinkaid (Neb.), 37 N. W. Rep. 612; Fairbanks v. Amoskeag Nat. Bank, 32 Fed. Rep. 572; Haight v. Turner, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 371; State v. Williams, 69 Ala. 311; Ex parte Bostwick, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 143; People v. Woodman, 4 N. Y. Supp. 554; Branford v. Erant, 1 New Mex. 579; Blake v. Boggs, 1 Mo. 116; Kerr v. Rector, 1 Mo. 117.

Mandamus is the proper remedy to procure an entry of judgment on the verdict, where the court has granted a new trial without having the power to do so. State v. Adams, 12 Mo. App. 436.

But not where the proceedings in the case were irregular. Meacham v. Austin, 5 Day (Conn.) 233.

In Territory v. Ortiz, 1 N. Mex. 5, it was held that some damage or inconvenience must appear to have resulted from the failure, and that it was wilful and without excuse, or the writ will be denied.

A peremptory writ of mandamus will not issue to compel a trial judge to enter judgment upon a verdict which he is satisfied, from affidavits, was obtained by the perjury of a party in interest, though there have been two trials upon the same issues, and findings for the relator. State v. Edwards, 11 Mo. App. 152.

Mandamus will not lie to compel a judge to enter judgment on a verdict for $4,000, rendered in favor of the sheriff, in an action of replevin for attached property, where the amount of the attachments was about $3,517, and the court had, in the exercise of its discretion, required a remittitur of $1,000, or that petitioner submit to a new trial. The petitioner has an adequate remedy at law. State v. Kinkaid (Neb.), 37 N. W. Rep. 612.

dice the rights of strangers.¹ But mandamus does not lie to direct what particular judgment shall be rendered in a pending cause, nor is it the proper function of such remedial writ to re-examine or correct errors in any judgment or decree so rendered. The rule applies to judicial as well as to ministerial acts, but it does not apply at all to a judicial act to correct an error, as where the act has been erroneously performed. If the duty is unperformed and it be judicial in its character, the mandate will be to the judge directing him to exercise his judicial discretion or judgment, without any direction as to the manner in which it shall be done; or if it be ministerial the mandamus will direct the specific act to be performed.²

Mandamus does not lie where the remedy sought is the revision of a final judgment on matters of record, and where everything necessary to a determination may be returned on writ of error.³ So a mandamus could not be used to revise a judgment of an inferior court dismissing an appeal for want of a sufficient appeal bond.⁴

(1) Enforcing Judgment.—Mandamus will issue in a proper case to enforce a judgment.⁵ So where a court refuses, after an ineffectual appeal from its judgment, to issue execution thereon, mandamus will lie to compel it to do so.⁶

It will not lie to compel the circuit court to enter judgment declaring personal property levied on and claimed as exempt subject to the process, on the failure of the defendant to file an inventory as provided by section 2837 of the Alabama code. Ex parte Redd, 73 Ala. 548.

Report of Referee.—A mandamus lies to compel the judge of a district court to enter judgment on the report of a referee. Russell v. Elliott, 2 Cal. 245. Compare Ludlum v. Fourth Dis. Ct., 9 Cal. 7.

1. Frederick v. Circuit Judge, 52 Mich. 529.

2. Ottawa v. People, 48 Ill. 233; State v. Demaree, 80 Ind. 519; State v. Robinson, 1 Kan. 188; Price v. Sacramento Co., 6 Cal. 255; Macauley v. Brooks, 16 Cal. 35; People v. Lake Co., 33 Cal. 487; Springer v. Green, 46 Cal. 73; People v. Sexton, 24 Cal. 78; Berryman v. Perkins, 55 Cal. 483; Com. v. Boone Co. Court, 82 Ky. 632; People v. Superior Court, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 701; Miller v. Canal Commrs., 21 Pa. St. 23; Com. v. Park, 32 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 412; People v. Sexton, 37 Cal. 532; Foster v. Redfield, 50 Vt. 285. Compare State v. Norton, 20 Kan. 506.

3. Olson v. Muskegon Circuit Judge, 49 Mich. 85; Warren Co. Court v.

Daniel, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 573; State v. Monroe, 2 So. Rep. 215; Ex parte Koon, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 44; School District v. Circuit Judge for Ingham Co., 49 Mich. 432; Com. v. Huetz, 6 Pa. St. 469; Com. v. McLaughlin (Pa.), 14 Atl. Rep. 377; Hemphill v. Collin, 117 Ill. 396; Ex parte Parker, 120 U. S. 737; People v. Gale, 16 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 199; Ex parte Morgan, 114 U. S. 174; Ewing v. Cohen, 63 Tex. 482; In re Burdett, 8 S. Ct. Rep. 1394; see State v. Bowen, 6 Ala. 511; State v. Monroe (La.), 1 So. Rep. 300; Little v. Morris, 10 Tex. 263.

4. Ewing v. Cohen, 63 Tex. 482, Ex parte Perry, 102 U. S. 183; State v. Orleans Appeals Judges, 37 La. An. 111.

A mandamus will not be granted to the superior court the reverse its ruling as to the admissibility of offered evidence, especially after the cause has been tried and judgment rendered. Scott v. Superior Court (Cal.), 16 Pac. Rep. 547.

5. State v. Beloit, 20 Wis. 79; see U. S. v. Addison; Harriman v. Woldo County, 53 Me. 83; see Ex parte French, 100 U. S. 1.

6. State v. District Court (N. J.), 13 Atl. Rep. 43; Gartner v. Cohen, 16 Atl. Rep. (N. J.) 684; see Mansfield v.

(d) CONTINUANCE.—The principle has long been settled that the action of the primary courts on an application for a continuance, whether granting or refusing it, is matter of discretion, and neither revisable on appeal nor to be controlled by mandamus.¹

(e) SUPERSEDEAS.—Stay of proceedings will not be compelled for a mere irregularity in procedure.² But a mandamus lies to correct an improper granting or refusal of a supersedeas.³ It will, however, not issue to the district court for refusing to grant a supersedeas to a judgment of the county court, and entering the refusal on record.⁴ Nor will it be granted to compel the issue of a supersedeas which would be futile.⁵ So mandamus will not issue to vacate a supersedeas granted where no writ of error was sued out, as it has no legal effect.⁶

It is the duty of the judge, in allowing an appeal, to take se-

Fassett, 63 N. H. 573; Levy v. Yoto County Superior Court, 66 Cal. 292.

Where a judgment is fairly open to two different constructions, and according to the construction of the court and clerk execution should not issue, a mandamus will not be granted to compel the issuance of an execution. Hall v. Stewart, 23 Kan. 396.

1. Ex parte Jones, 66 Ala. 202; 1 Brickell's Digest, 774. § 2; People v. Superior Court, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 701; Louisiana v. Judge of Parish Court, 15 La. 521; Territory v. Ortiz, 1 N. Mex. 5; Palmer v. Jones, 49 Iowa 405; State v. Farrar, 20 La. An. 99. Compare Dixon v. Field, 10 Ark. 243.

The refusal of a court to grant a continuance on account of the absence of a witness is a matter of discretion, and will not be revised, although the court may have mistaken the rights of parties as to compelling the personal attendance of a witness. Locker v. Child, 11 Ala. 640.

Discretion of Court as to Time of Hearing Proof of Will.—The probate court is invested with a reasonable discretion as to advancing or postponing cases, and may properly, in the exercise of such discretion, during the pendency of an appeal from its order refusing the probate of a paper purporting to be a last will, stay and postpone the hearing of an application to probate another paper of a prior date claimed as the will of the same person; and the exercise of such discretion, when not abused, will not be interfered with by mandamus. In such case the good faith of the party appealing from the order refusing probate is not a matter of enquiry. People

v. Knickerbocker, 114 Ill. 539; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 879.

2. Culver v. Superior Court Judge, 57 Mich. 25. See People v. Judge of Calhoun Circuit, 24 Mich. 408. Mandamus is the proper remedy where a court, in which a case is pending, wrongfully passes an order staying proceedings therein. Rhodes v. Craig, 21 Cal. 419.

The supreme court of Georgia will not grant a writ of mandamus or prohibition to one of the judges of the superior court, when acting as chancellor, to restrain him from hearing and adjudicating a motion made before him, on the ground that one of the parties has excepted to his decision on point made before him during the hearing and progress of such motion, and has sued out a writ of error thereon, and filed bond, etc., in accordance with the statute, before any decision has been had upon the main question involved in the original motion made before him. Jones v. Dougherty, 11 Ga. 305.

An application for a writ of mandamus to compel the county treasurer to pay certain moneys, where the treasurer, without consulting an attorney, agreed to a statement of facts. Held, that the proceedings should be stayed until a copy of the record could be served on the district attorney, and the chairman of the board of supervisors. Uhler v. Boyd, 41 Cal. 60.

3. Ex parte Walker, 54 Ala. 577.

4. Mayo v. Clark, 2 Call. (Va.) 276.

5. Middleton v. McCollough (Ark.), 9 S. W. Rep. 844.

6. Ex parte Ralston, 119 U. S. 613. See U. S. v. Columbia Ins. Co., 2 Cranch, C. Ct. 266.

curity on the appeal in the sum decreed; if this is not done the appellant is not entitled to a supersedeas of any process necessary to carry the decree into effect, and the judge is bound on application of the plaintiff to issue such process. If he refuse to do this, the appellate court will issue a peremptory mandamus commanding him to carry the decree into effect.¹

The filing of a supersedeas bond cannot be denied by either the trial court or clerk upon the ground that no appeal lies, and the clerk may be compelled by mandamus to approve and file a bond which he admits to be good and sufficient. But before allowing mandamus to compel the clerk to approve such bond and issue a supersedeas, the superior court must determine whether or not an appeal lies from the particular judgment or order.²

(f) CHANGE OF VENUE.—The writ of mandamus will not lie to compel a court to enter an order granting a change of venue in a cause pending in such court.³ The duty of a court or judge to award a change of venue, if satisfied of the truth of the facts alleged, is judicial, not ministerial, in its character; and a man-

1. Stafford v. Union Bank, 17 How. (U. S.) 275; Stafford v. New Orleans etc. Co., 17 How. (U. S.) 283.

2. Daniels v. Miller, 8 Colo. 542.

Where, after an appeal to the United States supreme court, the judge below refused to approve a bond for a supersedeas because the sureties were non-residents of the district, the supreme court declined to issue a mandamus to compel the judge to approve the bond and allow a supersedeas, because the issuing a mandamus would control a matter apparently of judicial option, but ordered a supersedeas to issue, on the filing of a bond approved by the clerk of the supreme court. Ex parte Milwaukee R. Co., 5 Wall. (U. S.) 188.

Evidence in Application for Supersedeas.—On an application for a mandamus to a clerk to issue a writ of supersedeas, the judgment and appeal bond should both be received in evidence. Crumley v. McKinney (Tex.), 9 S. W. Rep. 157.

3. People v. McRoberts, 100 Ill. 458; State v. Washburn, 22 Wis. 99; Ex parte Banks, 28 Ala. 28; Flagler v. Hubbard, 22 Cal. 34; People v. Sexton, 24 Cal. 78; Ex parte Chambers, 10 Mo. App. 240.

"The granting of a change of venue is a judicial act. The refusal of a change of venue may be erroneous. In such case the party aggrieved has his remedy by appeal or writ of error; and mandamus never issues except where the petitioner has a specific right and no other specific remedy. State v. Lafayette Co. Court, 41 Mo. 225; State v. Garesché, 65 Mo. 480, 489." BLAKEWELL, J., in Ex parte Chambers, 10 Mo. App. 240; Newlin v. Indiana County (Pa.), 23 W. N. C. 153.

"At common law it seems that such a writ was not allowed, nor do we think that under our statute any change has been made in regard to an application of this character. If the writ was allowed in this case compelling the court to enter a mere interlocutory order, we see no reason why it might not be asked for and granted in every case while the suit was progressing, compelling the court to enter particular orders. In other words, it would be to bring up the case in fragments from the court below, and have every ruling of that court passed upon during the progress of the case, and in that way bring cases before the court where there was no final judgment or determination in the court below." WALKER, J., in People v. McRoberts, 100 Ill. 458.

If the venue of a case be changed after verdict, a mandamus will lie from the supreme court to compel the court below to proceed to a final disposition of the case. Ex parte Cox, 10 Mo. 742.

The action of a justice's court in granting or refusing a change of venue cannot be reviewed in an application for a mandamus. By this writ the justice may in case of his refusal be compelled to act, but his erroneous action cannot be thus corrected. The damus will not be granted to compel an order changing the venue of an action on the ground that the judge has decided wrong.¹

(g) DISMISSAL OF CAUSES.—Mandamus will not issue to compel the circuit judge to vacate an order.² When proceedings have been dismissed by an inferior court and upon application for their restoration to the docket such restoration is denied, a superior court will not (unless to prevent great injustice) interfere by mandamus to order such restoration.³

(h) REMOVING CAUSE FROM DOCKET.—Where an inferior court has set aside a judgment and has allowed defendant to plead to the merits, it will not be compelled by mandamus to remove the cause from its docket and to issue an execution upon the judgment since full and adequate relief may be afforded by an appeal in the ordinary course.⁴

Mandamus lies to compel an inferior court to change its docket entries to conform to the law and the facts.⁵ So where a trial remedy is by appeal. People v. Hubbard, 22 Cal. 34.

But see contra State v. McArthur, 13 Wis. 407, where it was held that the statute regulating changes of venue gave a defendant an unqualified and absolute right to a trial in the county where he resided, and that no discretion was left to the court in granting the application for such change, and that mandamus would therefore lie to compel the court to make the order changing the place of trial to the county of defendant's residence. This doctrine, however, was overruled in State v. Washburn, 22 Wis. 99; the court holding that the proper remedy for the party aggrieved was by appeal.

1. Newlin v. Indiana County (Pa.), 23 W. N. C. 153; see Cook v. Baxter, 27 Ark. 480. Compare State v. McArthur, 13 Wis. 407. The writ does not lie to compel the performance of a particular judicial act. Ex parte Chambers, 10 Mo. App. 240; People v. McRoberts, 100 Ill. 458.

Mandamus will lie to set aside an order made for a change of venue, in a criminal case, in the absence of the accused from the court room. Ex parte Bryan, 44 Ala. 402.

Transfer of Cause.—If a judge of probate improperly refuses to transfer to the circuit court a cause in which he is personally interested, mandamus lies to compel its transfer. State v. Castleberry, 23 Ala. 85.

Mandamus is not the proper remedy where a district court refuses to transfer an indictment for murder pending therein to another district court for trial—the legislature having passed a special act directing said court to transfer said indictment. People v. Judge of Twelfth District, 17 Cal. 548.

2. State v. Taylor, 19 Wis. 566; People v. Detroit Superior Court Judge, 41 Mich. 5; Elkins v. Athearn, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 191; Ex parte Easton, 25 Ala. 72; State v. Judge, 14 La. An. 60; People v. Common Pleas, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 73. Compare People v. New York Common Pleas, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 534.

But mandamus is the proper remedy to vacate an interlocutory order not touching the merits. People v. Bay County Circuit Court Judge, 41 Mich. 326.

Or when a prohibition has been improperly granted by a circuit judge, to restrain a probate judge from acting on an application for bail in a case which is within his jurisdiction, the supreme court will award a mandamus to set aside the order for the prohibition. Ex parte Keeling, 50 Ala. 474.

3. Davis v. Co. Commrs., 396; Ex parte Johnson, 25 Ark. 614; Goheen v. Myers, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 423; People v. Weston, 28 Cal. 639; People v. Judges, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 658; Heilbron v. Superior Court, 72 Cal. 96; State v. Wright, 4 Nev. 119; York v. Ingham, 57 Mich. 421; Hemstead County v. Grave, 44 Ark. 317; Ex parte Brown, 116 U. S. 401; State v. Secrest, 33 Minn. 381; In re Burdett, 127 U. S. 771; Ex parte Rowland, 26 Ala. 133.

4. Ex parte Goolsby, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 575.

5. Frederick v. Mecosta County Cir-

court refuses to act upon a motion and simply orders the case to be "dropped from the docket," the superior court will issue its writ of mandamus to compel it to proceed to final judgment.¹

Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel the reinstatement of a cause which has been improperly struck from the docket by the chancellor.² But after the court has fully discharged its duty by making a final disposition and determination of the cause it cannot be compelled by mandamus to reinstate an action which has been stricken from its docket. The reinstatement or refusal to reinstate is the exercise of judicial functions which cannot be controlled by mandamus.³

(i) REINSTATING ATTACHMENT.—Mandamus is the proper remedy to reinstate an attachment ancillary to an ordinary action, which attachment has been improperly dismissed. But an alternative mandamus only will be issued in such case, and without notice of the motion to the other party.⁴

(j) SETTING ASIDE SUMMONS.—Mandamus lies to set aside the service of a summons illegally made on one while attending court as a witness.⁵

(k) GRANTING OR DISSOLVING INJUNCTIONS is a matter of purely judicial discretion, and when this discretion has once been exercised, and the inferior court has refused to grant an injunction, or if already granted has refused to dissolve it, mandamus will not lie to control such decision,⁶ nor will it compel the cuit Judge, 52 Mich. 529; State v. Whittell, 61 Wis. 351; People v. Fillmore, 11 Mich. 197.

1. State v. Cape Girardeau Court, 73 Mo. 560; Sanders v. Nelson Circuit Court, Hard. (Ky.) 19.

2. Ex parte State, 51 Ala. 69; Sanders v. Nelson Circuit Court, Hard. (Ky.) 17; Matter of Nabor, 7 Ala. 459; Ex parte Lowe, 20 Ala. 330.

3. Hemstead Co. v. Grave, 44 Ark. 317; Brown v. Ragland, 35 La. An. 837. When a court has once decided a cause, it cannot be compelled, by mandamus, to decide it differently. The remedy, if any, is by appeal or writ of error. Hemphill v. Collins, 117 Ill. 396; Sankey v. Levy, 69 Cal. 244; Appling v. Bailey, 44 Ala. 333.

4. Boraim v. Da Costa, 4 Ala. 393.

5. Mitchell v. Huron Circuit Judge, 53 Mich. 541.

6. State v. Judge of Sixth Dist. Ct., 28 La. An. 905; McMillen v. Smith, 26 Ark. 613; Ex parte Montgomery, 24 Ala. 98; Ex parte Hays, 26 Ark. 510; People v. Muskegon County Judge, 40 Mich. 63; Ex parte Schwab, 98 U. S. 240; Ohio etc. R. Co. v. Wyandot, 7 Ohio St. 278; Beebe v. Judge of Sixth District Court, 28 La. An. 905. See Pardron v. Parish Judge, 31 La. An. 794; State v. Twelfth District Judge, 38 La. An. 31; People v. West Troy, 25 Hun (N. Y.) 179; State v. Judge of Sixth District Court, 32 La. An. 557; Detroit, Lansing etc. R. Co. v. Newton, 61 Mich. 33. See Ex parte Schwab, 98 U. S. 240; Ex parte Batesville & Bunkley R. Co., 39 Ark. 82; State v. Engleman, 86 Mo. 551; State v. Twenty-First District Judge, 36 La. An. 394; State v. Orleans Civil Judge, 37 La. An. 400; State v. Kispert, 21 Wis. 387.

Mandamus lies to vacate an injunction where the bill upon which it was granted was devoid of substance, and could not therefore support the application for the writ. Van Norman v. Jackson Circuit Judge, 45 Mich. 204; Merced Mining Co. v. Fremont, 7 Cal. 131; Ortman v. Dixon, 9 Cal. 23. Compare Fremont v. Merced Mining Co., 9 Cal. 18; Ex parte Conway, 4 Ark. 302; State v. Rightor (La.), 5 So. Rep. 416; Matter of Pile, 9 Ark. 336.

Mandamus lies to vacate an injunction where the bill upon which it was granted was devoid of substance, and could not therefore support the application for the writ. Van Norman v. Jackson Circuit Judge, 45 Mich. 204.

violation of an injunction.¹ See INJUNCTIONS, vol. 10, p. 986.

(l) GRANTING LICENCE.—An officer in granting or refusing a licence to sell liquor acts judicially; not ministerially, and his action cannot, therefore, be controlled or reviewed by mandamus.²

(m) OTHER REMEDIES—WRIT OF ERROR OR APPEAL.—The writ of mandamus cannot be made to perform the functions of a writ of error or an appeal.³ When addressed to subordinate

So where there is danger that the administration of justice may suffer by delay, a mandamus lies to compel a district judge to grant an injunction in limine, even though a party has other but slower means of relief (La. Code, arts. 830, 831), leaving the matter at the discretion of the court. State v. Lazarus, 36 La. An. 578.

1. Ex parte Fleming, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 581.

2. Dunbar v. Frazier, 78 Ala. 538; Sights v. Yarnalls, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 292; Atty. Gen. v. Justices of Guilford, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 315; Ex parte Whittington, 34 Ark. 394. See Ex parte Yeager, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 655.

Where an application for a mandamus was made to compel the issue of a licence to sell liquor, under the Pennsylvania act of May 13th, 1887, the mandamus was refused, although it was alleged that the court had wholly neglected to exercise the discretion vested in it by the law, but had concluded to grant no licences, on the ground that there was an aggregate preponderance of remonstrances over the petitions in respect to the issue of such licences. Re King's Application (Pa.), 23 W. N. C. 152.

3. State v. Laughlin, 75 Mo. 358; Hemphill v. Collins, 117 Ill. 396; Justices v. Munday, 2 Leigh (Va.) 165; State v. Dunn, Minor (Ala.) 46; State v. Holliday, 3 Hals. (N. J.) 205; Commissioners v. Lynah, 2 M'Cord (S. Car.) 170; Boyce v. Russell, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 444; Ex parte Nelson, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 417; People v. Brooklyn, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 318; State v. Bruce, 1 Treadw. Const. (N. Car.) 165, 175; Morris v. Mechanics' Bank, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 484; People v. Cayuga Common Pleas, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 632; Livingston v. Superior Court, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 545; People v. Superior Court, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 575; People v. Rensselaer Co., 2 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 189; People v. Columbia Common Pleas, 3 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 30; People v. Board of Police, 43

How. (N. Y.) Pr. 385; People v. Tracy, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 617; People v. Dutchess Common Pleas, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 658; State v. Lubke, 85 Mo. 338; State v. Megown, 39 Mo. 156; Early v. Mounix, 15 Cal. 149; State v. Marshall, 82 Mo. 484; People v. Lott, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 408; Blatchford v. Newberry, 100 Ill. 484; Olson v. Muskegon Circuit Judge, 49 Mich. 85; Ex parte Baltimore & Ohio R. Co., 108 U. S. 566; State v. Horner, 16 Mo. App. 191; State v. Marshall, 82 Mo. 484; People v. Lovelidge (Mich.), 42 N. W. Rep. 997; People v. Barnes (N. Y.) 20 N. E. Rep. 609; State v. Third District Court, 16 La. An. 185; State v. Twenty-first District Judge, 36 La. An. 394; Ex parte Brown, 116 U. S. 401; State v. Platte County Court, 83 Mo. 539; Ex parte Newman, 14 Wall. 152; Ex parte Schwab, 98 U. S. (8 Otto) 246; Cowan v. Doddridge, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 458; Ex parte Bottoms, 46 Ala. 312; State v. Buhler (Mo.), 3 S. W. Rep. 68.

Mandamus will not lie to correct an alleged error of law. State v. Orleans Civil Judge, 37 La. An. 842; Wilson v. Moore, 26 N. J. L. (2 Dutch.) 458; Ex parte Gordon, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 363; People v. Dutchess Co., 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 658.

A mandamus will not lie to a court from the decision of which an appeal is provided by statute. State v. Mitchell, 2 Treadw. Const. (S. Car.) 703.

A party against whom a decree is rendered is entitled to an appeal as a matter of right, and where the appeal is denied its allowance may be compelled by mandamus. Ware v. McDonald, 62 Ala. 81. But where the remedy is by appeal, and the party instead of availing himself of the proper remedy seeks mandamus, the writ will be denied. State v. Laughlin, 75 Mo. 358; People v. Cayuga Common Pleas, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 632; Livingstone v. Superior Court, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 545; State v. Lubke, 85 Mo. 338; Ex parte Schmidt, 62 Ala. 252; People v. Tracy, judicial tribunals it simply requires them to proceed to exercise their judicial functions.¹ Of course a court would not compel an inferior court to proceed to try a case of which it had no jurisdiction, and where an inferior court refuses to proceed and finally dispose of a case on the ground of an alleged want of jurisdiction, on application made to a higher court to compel such inferior court to hear the same, it will be the duty of the higher court to determine whether such inferior court has jurisdiction of the cause, and such determination will be binding upon the inferior court.²

It is not the province of this writ, which courts always grant with great circumspection, to correct errors of subordinate tribunals when acting within their jurisdiction.³ Nor does the fact that the decision bears oppressively upon the relator justify a departure from the rule.⁴ It is never resorted to to enforce the payment of a debt when it can be collected by suit, unless the tribunal having jurisdiction refuses to act; in which case the order would be not to render a specific judgment but to proceed with the cause.⁵ And though mandamus is never granted where another adequate remedy exists at law, the want of any such remedy by appeal or writ of error does not necessarily entitle the party aggrieved to this relief.⁶

1 Den. (N. Y.) 617. Mandamus will not lie to correct errors in the final judgments or decrees of an inferior court; and where the injury sought to be redressed consists in the refusal of the lower court to enter proper judgment upon the verdict of a jury the remedy is by appeal and not by mandamus. Ex parte Schmidt, 62 Ala. 252. See also People v. Dutchess Common Pleas, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 658; People v. Board of Police, 43 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 385; People v. Columbia Common Pleas, 3 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 30; People v. Rensselaer Co., 2 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 189.

1. State v. Lafayette Co. Ct., 41 Mo. 224; State v. Garesche, 65 Mo. 489; State v. Macon Co. Ct., 68 Mo. 29; State v. Laughlin, 75 Mo. 358.

Mandamus lies to compel the county court to permit the filing of the petition for the removal of a county seat, and to make the necessary order thereon, it being a ministerial duty. Doolittle v. Cabell Co. Court, 28 W. Va. 158.

2. State v. Laughlin, 75 Mo. 358; State v. Lubke, 15 Mo. App. 152.

When the county court refuses to grant an appeal, or to act on the application for it, it may be compelled by mandamus; and if the time for appealing has elapsed it will be compelled to make the necessary order by a nunc pro tunc entry. Pettigrew v. Washington Co., 43 Ark. 33; McCreary v. Rogers, 35 Ark. 298.

Where an inferior court having determined that it had no jurisdiction, and that another tribunal had exclusive jurisdiction, for that reason declined to proceed to a final disposition of a criminal case, and ordered it transferred to the other tribunal for that purpose, held that an appellate court would, upon an application for a mandamus to compel the inferior court to proceed, enquire into the question of jurisdiction, and if it found the jurisdiction to exist would issue the writ. State v. Laughlin, 75 Mo. 358.

3. State v. St. Louis Court App., 87 Mo. 374; Chase v. Blackstone Canal Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 244; People v. Oneida Common Pleas, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 20; Ex parte Parker, 120 U. S. 737; People v. Gale, 16 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 199.

4. State v. Thayer, 10 Mo. App. 540.

5. Mansfield v. Fuller, 50 Mo. 338; Ward v. Co. Court, 50 Mo. 401; Strahan v. Audrain Co. Court, 65 Mo. 644.

6. People v. Judges, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 658; Queen v. Blanchard, 13 Ad. & E. 318; Ex parte Whitney, 13 Pet. (U.

(n) ORDERING SPECIAL TERM.—Under a statute requiring a speedy trial in all contested elections—if the suit cannot be tried at the next regular term, a mandamus will lie to compel the judge, even if he be only appointed under a recusation of the presiding judge of the court, to order a special term and to try the case without unnecessary delay.¹

(o) COURTS ACTING UNDER A SPECIAL COMMISSION.—A mandamus will not be granted to a court acting under a special commission which has expired by its own limitation previous to the motion for a suit.²

(p) REFUSAL TO AWARD COSTS.—A mandamus is not the proper remedy where an inferior court refuses to enter a judgment for costs. The party complaining has the right to appeal from such a defective judgment, or he may resort to his action for the costs.³

(q) STIPULATION TO SETTLE.—Mandamus does not lie to enforce a disputed stipulation to settle a case, even though money has been paid thereunder.⁴

3. Appeal.—The right of appeal should be granted upon a judgment or final order. And if it be denied the superior court will, by mandamus, compel the inferior court to allow it.⁵

S.) 404; Ex parte Ostrander, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 679; State v. Judge, 1 Mo. App. 543; State v. Cooper Co. Court, 64 Mo. 170; Mansfield v. Fuller, 50 Mo. 338; State v. Thayer, 10 Mo. App. 540.

1. State v. Debaillon, 36 La. An. 828.

2. People v. Monroe Oyer and Term., 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 108.

3. Peralta v. Adams, 2 Cal. 594; Jansen v. Davison, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 72.

Where a judgment of a circuit court of the United States, in the record of which the amount of costs recovered was left blank, was affirmed by the supreme court, who issued a mandate to the circuit court to carry the judgment into execution, in which mandate the amount of costs was left blank in like manner; and the circuit court overruled a motion to amend the record by inserting the amount of costs, it was held that a mandamus would not lie to command the judge of the circuit court to adjudicate and allow the costs. Ex parte Many, 14 How. (U. S.) 24.

Where the judgment of a circuit court is reversed and the proceedings up to a certain point are set aside at the cost of the defendant in error, and the cause is remanded for further proceedings, if the circuit court refuse to render a judgment for the costs according to the mandate the supreme court will grant a rule to show cause why a mandamus should not issue. Jared v. Hill, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 155.

4. Leavitt v. Detroit Superior Judge, 52 Mich. 595. Mandamus will lie where under an agreement of record a party is entitled to judgment in the case, and the court below allows the other party to amend and go on with the case. Ex parte Lawrence, 34 Ala. 446.

5. McCreary v. Rogers, 35 Ark. 298; Ex parte Parke, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 767; Gresham v. Pyron, 17 Ga. 263; Ex parte Martin, 5 Ark. 371; Ware v. McDonald, 62 Ala. 81; Beebe v. Lockert, 6 Ark. 422; Greathouse v. Jameson, 3 Colo. 397; State v. Murphy (La.), 6 So. Rep. 816; State v. Currie, 35 La. An. 887; Ex parte Parker, 120 U. S. 737; State v. Lewis, 71 Mo. 170; State v. Eighth District Judge, 35 La. An. 212; State v. Rightor, 35 La. An. 515; State v. Judge of Sixth District Court, 22 La. An. 119; 8 c. 22 La. An. 120; Ware v. McDonald, 62 Ala. 81; State v. Judge of Fourth District Court, 22 La. An. 90; Ex parte Jordan, 94 U. S. (4 Otto) 248; State v. Judge of Second District Court, 24 La. An. 596; State v. Third District Judge, 31 La. An. 800; State v. Judge of Fifth District Court, 23 La. An. 713; Watson v. Mayrant, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) Eq. 449; State v. Parish Judge, 26 La. An. 122; Malain v. Judge of Third District, 29 La. An. 793; State

To entitle a petitioner to a writ of mandamus in such cases he must show that he has a clear right to an appeal.¹ Mandamus does not lie to compel the granting of an appeal in a case which, on the face of the papers, is unappealable.²

Where the statute requires that entries for appeal must be in writing, a judge cannot be compelled by mandamus to grant an appeal on a mere verbal notice.³

(a) APPEAL BOND.—Mandamus will lie to compel the trial court to allow to be filed an appeal bond where the sureties are sufficient, irrespective of the amount of the penalty named therein.⁴

(b) CORRECTING APPEAL.—If a judge makes errors in making out the appeal papers, and he refuses to correct the error, he may be compelled to do it by a writ of mandamus.⁵

v. Judge of Third District Court, 31 La. An. 800; State v. Houston, 36 La. An. 210; Danville v. Blackwell, 80 Va. 38; State v. Lazarus, 34 La. An. 1117; State v. Baton Rouge, 34 La. An. 1197. Compare Brown v. Parish Judge, 29 La. An. 809; State v. Judge of Superior District Ct., 27 La. An. 672; State v. Allen, 92 Mo. 20; State v. Monroe (La.), 6 So. Rep. 21.

A mandamus does not lie to compel the district court to hear an appeal from a justice of the peace which it has dismissed, although such dismissal was erroneous, and no appeal will when the amount involved is not sufficient. State v. Wright, 4 Nev. 119.

Mandamus will issue to compel an inferior court to grant an appeal, by a nunc pro tunc entry, if the time has elapsed within which the appeal should have been allowed. Pettigrew v. Washington County, 43 Ark. 33.

Return to an Appeal.—Mandamus may be issued to compel canal appraisers to make a return to an appeal taken from their decision to the canal board, notwithstanding the objections that the appeal was not taken in time, and that the appellant had settled and discharged his claim. Those questions are for the canal board. People v. Canal Appraisers, 20 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 64; s. c., 73 N. Y. 443.

1. Ex parte Cutting, 94 U. S. 14. See Lake v. King, 16 Nev. 215; Com. v. Clarke, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 531; Sabine v. Rounds, 50 Vt. 74.

A mandamus will not lie against a judge a quo, to compel him to allow an appeal on a judgment refusing a mandamus to compel a justice of the peace to issue a commission to take testimony.

The remedy is by appeal to the district court, and ultimately to this court, when the amount gives such appellate jurisdiction. State v. Third District Court, 16 La. An. 185.

An appeal will not lie on a refusal to grant a mandamus. Shrever v. Livingston Co., 9 Mo. 196.

Suspensive Appeal.—A mandamus lies to compel the granting of a suspensive appeal from a dissolving order on bond, where the doing of the act—as here, erection of a steam engine amidst lumber near the relator's premises—might imperil health and life. State v. Houston, 36 La. An. 886.

But if the bond tendered for a suspensive appeal from a judgment dissolving, with costs, an injunction for preservation and cultivation of a sugar plantation under seizure does not cover the consequent expenses incurred by the sheriff, a mandamus will not lie to compel the district judge to grant the appeal. State v. Twenty-sixth District Judge, 36 La. An. 910.

2. State v. Burthe (La.), 1 So. Rep. 656.

3. State v. Cooper, 20 Fla. 547.

The statute regulating appeals from orders and decrees of the county court in probate proceedings contemplates that the appeal shall be entered in writing by the party appealing. A mere verbal request made to the county judge to enter an appeal in his minutes, furnishes no ground for a mandamus to compel the judge to enter the appeal, if he neglects to comply with such request. State v. Cooper, 20 Fla. 547.

4. State v. Adams, 9 Mo. App. 464.

5. Taylor v. Gillette, 52 Conn. 216.

(c) DISMISSING APPEAL.—Mandamus will not lie to revise the judgment of a lower court dismissing an appeal for want of a sufficient appeal bond.¹ So where an appeal is dismissed for insufficiency of the affidavit, a mandamus will not be granted to compel the common pleas to allow the appellee to take the appeal bond from the files.² Mandamus does not lie to the court of common pleas to dismiss an appeal alleged to be improperly entered and sustained; a certiorari is the proper remedy.³

(d) REINSTATING APPEAL.—Mandamus will not lie to compel subordinate courts to reinstate an appeal, the proper remedy is by writ of error.⁴

4. Bill of Exceptions.—It has been uniformly held that superior courts have the power, when a judge of an inferior court refuses to sign a bill of exceptions, to award a writ of mandamus to compel the judge to settle and sign a bill of exceptions or to show cause why he has not performed an act he was bound by law to do.⁵ But to authorize a mandamus to compel a judge to

1. Ewing v. Cohen, 63 Tex. 482.

Where the superior court erroneously dismisses an appeal to it on the ground that the undertaking is insufficient, the appellant's remedy is not by mandamus but by certiorari. Levy v. Yoto Co. Superior Court, 66 Cal. 292.

2. Gregory v. Obrian, 13 N. J. L. (1 Green) 11.

3. Jones v. Allen, 13 N. J. L. (1 Green) 97.

4. Wells v. Stackhouse, 2 Harr. (N. J.) 355; Com. v. Common Pleas of Phila., 3 Binn. (Pa.) 273; Sinnickson v. Corwine, 2 Dutch. (N. J.) 311; Lankey v. Levy, 69 Cal. 244; People v. Judge, 1 Mich. 359; Brown v. Ragland, 35 La. An. 837; State v. Evans, 45 N. J. L. 295; Lewis v. Weir, 14 N. J. L. (2 Green) 353. Compare Adams v. Mathis, 3 Harr. (N. J.) 310; Freas v. Jones, 1 Harr. (N. J.) 358; Ten Eyck v. Farlee, 1 Harr. (N. J.) 348; Detroit etc. R. Co. v. Judge, 27 Mich. 304; Ex parte Parker, 9 S. Ct. Rep. 708; State v. Kansas City Courts of Appeals (Mo.), 10 S. W. Rep. 855.

If a defendant, erroneously assuming that, by his mere offer of settlement, litigation is suspended, fails to appear and move in the common pleas an appeal which he has taken from a justice's court, and therefore the common pleas dismisses the appeal, a mandamus will not be awarded for its reinstatement. State v. Evans, 45 N. J. L. 295.

5. Re Chateaugay O. & I. Co's Petition, 128 U. S. 544; State v. Brockwell, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 683; Che Gong

v. Stearns, 17 Pac. Rep. 871; State v. Drew, 32 La. An. 1043; Sikes v. Ransom, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) Rep. 279. See also People v. Van Buren Circuit Judge, 41 Mich. 725; People v. Judge of Superior Court, 41 Mich. 726; State v. Hall, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 255; Newman v. Scott Co., 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 787; State v. Elmore, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 528; People v. Judges of Washington, 1 Cal. (N. Y.) 511; Drexel v. Man. 6 W. & S. 386; State v. Haws, 43 Ohio St. 16; Crane, ex parte, 5 Pet. 190; State v. Macdonald, 30 Minn. 98; see Hawes v. People (Ill.), 17 N. E. Rep. 13; Tyler Cotton Press Co. v. Chevalier, 56 Ga. 494; People v. Van Buren Circuit Judge, 41 Mich. 725; Hawes v. People, 129 Ill. 123; McDonald v. Sheldon, 2 Kan. 322; Ex parte Crane, 5 Pet. 190.

When a bill of exceptions is presented to the court to settle and sign, the court should carefully examine the bill, and if any of the statements are incorrect, correct them. If a fact is truly stated, it must not be struck out because impertinent or immaterial, and any material facts omitted the court must add. Having thus settled the bill, it is the duty of the court to sign it, and, upon refusal, mandamus will lie to compel it to do so. Poteet v. Cabell, 30 W. Va. 58; see Morgan v. Fleming, 24 W. Va. 186.

A judge refused to sign a bill of exceptions because he thought that the time within which he was allowed to sign it by the statute had elapsed; on a petition for a mandamus, the court sign a bill of exceptions, a clear abuse of his discretion must appear.¹ A judge will not be compelled by mandamus to settle a bill of exceptions in a particular manner, where there is a dispute as to the incidents of the trial. His determination as to what occurred upon the trial is conclusive on such an application.²

(a) CORRECTION OF BILL.—The judge before whom the cause was tried has the power to determine the accuracy of the bill of exceptions, and whether it correctly recites the points made and opinions excepted to, and the exercise of this power is beyond control by mandamus.³

held that he might sign it after the time, if he thought that there was good excuse for not having applied to him earlier, and that the excuse offered was a good one, and thereupon ordered him to sign it, if found conformable to truth and proper to be signed. People v. Lee, 14 Cal. 510.

Where an alternative writ of mandamus was granted to compel a judge to sign a bill of exceptions, and the writ was delivered to the judge, but not returned by him, the supreme court granted a peremptory mandamus requiring him to sign it. People v. Pearson, 2 Scam. (Ill.) 189.

In Springer v. Peterson, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 188, a mandamus was awarded to compel the associate judges to sign a bill of exceptions, which had been signed by the president judge, or show cause, and no cause was shown, the court awarded a peremptory writ compelling them to sign the particular bill.

Where an alternative writ of mandamus commands a judge of an inferior court to allow and sign a certain bill of exceptions, filed with the petition in the case, and averred to be true, and which was tendered to him in due time, or to show cause why he does not sign the same, and he fails to answer, or answers and fails to show a sufficient cause, the peremptory writ should command him to sign the particular bill named. State v. Hawes, 43 Ohio St. 16.

The superior court cannot issue a mandamus to the orphans' court to compel the signing of a bill of exceptions. Crawford v. Short, 1 Harr. (Del.) 355.

1. Galloway v. Fleming, 2 Leg. Rep. 62; State v. Brockwell, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 683; Harbin v. Ketron, 94 Ind. 146.

The superior court will, in aid of its appellate jurisdiction, compel a trial judge, by mandamus to sign a bill of exceptions, but the writ will only be granted when it appears that there has been a clear abuse of discretion. Alexander v. State, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 88.

If the commissioners of a county in West Virginia, sitting as a board of canvassers after an election, refuse to sign bills of exceptions to their ruling, when requested to do so by a candidate voted for at the election, they will be required by mandamus to settle and sign such bills of exceptions. Alderson v. Kanawha Co. Commrs., 31 W. Va. 633.

2. Tweed v. Davis, 4 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 1; 47 How. Pr. 162; 1 Hun (N. Y.) 252.

A writ of mandamus to compel a judge of a lower court to sign a bill of exceptions requires nothing more than that the judge should confess and seal the exceptions, or deny them. Conrow v. Schloss, 55 Pa. St. 28.

3. People v. Pearson, 2 Scam. (Ill.) 189; People v. Lee, 14 Cal. 512; State v. Todd, 4 Ohio 351; Shepard v. Peyton, 12 Kan. 616; Benedict v. Howell, 39 N. J. L. 221; State v. Babcock, 51 Vt. 570; State v. Noggle, 13 Wis. 380; People v. Williams, 91 Ill. 87; People v. Jameson, 40 Ill. 96. See State v. Macdonald, 30 Minn. 98; State v. Cox, 26 Minn. 214; Delavan v. Boardman, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 132; Douglass v. Loomis, 5 W. Va. 542; State v. Clough, 69 Wis. 369. Compare State v. Macdonald, 30 Minn. 98.

Where the answer shows that the defendant is willing to sign a true bill, but denies that the bill presented is true, the writ must be refused, as the right to determine as to the truth of a bill of exceptions is vested in the judge to whom it is presented. State v. Todd, 4 Ohio 351; Creager v. Meeker, 22 Ohio St. 207.

Where exceptions were reserved to the refusal by the court of instructions to the jury, requested by the excepting party, and the judge of the

The knowledge and recollection of the judge who presides at the trial must determine finally what occurred there, so far as the settlement of bills of exceptions is concerned,¹ and the verdict of a jury cannot be resorted to to override such determination.²

But when he has already signed one bill of exceptions he cannot be compelled by mandamus to sign another and a different one, since it is his own exclusive province to determine the correctness of the bill which he shall sign.³

(b) DEMAND AND REFUSAL.—Mandate will not be awarded to compel a judge to sign a bill of exceptions who has not been requested to do so, though his predecessor has wrongfully refused.⁴

(c) LACHES.—It may be true that a judge who grants time in which to file a bill of exceptions cannot by his absence deprive the party of his bill, but a party cannot unreasonably delay the presentation of the bill after the return of the judge.⁵ The al-

circuit court struck from the bill of exceptions, as prepared and presented to him, the words "This being all the evidence in the case," an application for a mandamus to compel the judge to insert in the bill the words so stricken out, which fails to show that the bill of exceptions, without these words, does not show that the instructions were not abstract, or that the insertion of the words is necessary to show that the instructions were not abstract, fails to show a right to the insertion, and will be denied. Ex parte Huckabee, 71 Ala. 427.

A party to a cause sought, by an alternative mandamus, to compel the judge to sign a certain bill of exceptions which had been tendered. The judge gave insufficient reasons for not signing the bill, but admitted that he had not read it. Held, that the peremptory writ should issue to compel the signing of the bill tendered. [McILVAINE, C. J., and O'KEY, J., dissenting, on the ground that the judge should be ordered to sign a true bill, but not necessarily the bill tendered, without examination.] State v. Hawes, 43 Ohio St. 16.

1. Ex parte Bradstreet, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 102; Root v. King, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 569; Jamison v. Reid, 2 Greene (Iowa) 394.

A circuit judge will not be compelled by a mandamus to insert in a bill of exceptions instructions which it is claimed he gave to the jury, when he returns that he has already settled the bill of exceptions truly and correctly according to his knowledge and recollection of the facts and that he is confident he did not give such instructions to the jury. Spaulding v. Gale, 7 Wis. 693; State v. Larrabee, 3 Wis. 783; Fellows v. Tait, 14 Wis. 156.

The supreme court has jurisdiction to grant a writ of mandamus to compel a judge of an inferior court to sign a bill of exceptions. But the judge to whom the bill is offered must be the exclusive judge as to its correctness and will not be compelled to sign a bill which he believes does not contain the truth. People v. Jameson, 40 Ill. 93.

2. State v. Noggle, 13 Wis. 380.

3. People v. Jamison, 40 Ill. 96; Harris v. State, 2 Ga. 290; Harbaugh v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 32 Mich. 259.

A bill of exceptions, signed by the judge as a true bill, cannot be attacked for alleged imperfections on its face by a writ of mandate requiring the judge to sign a true bill of exceptions. Harbin v. Ketron, 94 Ind. 146.

4. State v. Slick, 86 Ind. 501; Alexander v. State, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 88. Where a judge whose term of office is about to expire refuses to sign a proper bill of exceptions presented in apt time, his successor may be promptly applied to by verified petition showing the facts, and it will be his duty to sign and file the bill, though the time limited for its presentation has expired by reason of the refusal of his predecessor—and then, if he refuse, he may be compelled by mandate to do so. State v. Slick, 86 Ind. 501.

5. Alexander v. State, 14 Lea (Tenn.)

lowance of time in which to file the bill is the grant of a privilege, and the party to whom it is granted will lose it unless he acts with reasonable diligence.¹ It is important that delay should not be allowed, for bills of exceptions containing the evidence should be prepared and signed while the matter is still in the memory of court and counsel.² A party cannot secure a writ of mandate unless he shows that he has acted with diligence and promptness.³

(d) WRIT GRANTED TO JUDGE WHO TRIED CAUSE.—A circuit judge will not be compelled by mandamus to settle and sign a bill of exceptions in a case which was tried before his predecessor in office.⁴ Whether a judge can be compelled, after his

88; People v. Van Buren Circuit Judge, 41 Mich. 725. Compare People v. Detroit Superior Court Judge, 41 Mich. 725.

A writ of mandate will not be awarded against a judge to compel him to sign a bill of exceptions after the time limited, where he was absent from the State when the time expired, if the applicant for the writ fails to show proper diligence in presenting the bill for signing after his return. An unexplained delay of fifty days shows want of diligence. State v. Dyer, 99 Ind. 426; State v. Brockwell, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 683.

1. State v. Dyer, 99 Ind. 426; Cross v. Cross, 90 N. Car. 15. The writ will not lie where the trial judge having a rule of court limiting the time for filing bills of exceptions, twice grants an extension for definite periods far beyond the limits of the rule, within which time of extension, so far as appears, the bill of exceptions might, by diligence, have been completed, and no further extension of time was asked for. Alexander v. State, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 88.

2. Engel v. Speer, 36 Ga. 258; State v. Dyer, 99 Ind. 426; State v. St. Louis Court of Criminal Correction, 41 Mo. 598; and see Midberry v. Collins, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 346; State v. Brockwell, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 683; Alexander v. State, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 88.

Where by agreement of counsel a further time than usual is granted to file a bill of exceptions, but the agreement is not entered upon the record, and the exceptions are not saved in writing at the trial, the judge will not be required by mandamus to sign a bill of exceptions presented so long after the trial that he cannot reasonably be expected to remember the proceedings well enough to be able to say whether the exceptions are true or not. State v. St. Louis Court, 41 Mo. 598.

Under the laws of Iowa, bills of exceptions were required to be taken and tendered to the judge for his signature, during the progress of the trial, although he might sign them afterwards nunc pro tunc. But where a bill of exceptions appeared to have been signed two years after the trial, it was held that they were rightfully stricken from the record by the appellate court, and a mandamus to the judge to sign the bill nunc pro tunc was properly refused, especially as it did not appear that the exceptions were taken during the trial. Sheppard v. Wilson, 6 How. (U. S.) 260.

3. State v. St. Louis Court of Criminal Correction, 41 Mo. 598; State v. Dyer, 99 Ind. 426; Cross v. Cross, 90 N. Car. 15; Brown v. Williams, 84 N. Car. 116. See State v. Brockwell, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 683. Where on the return to an alternative mandamus commanding the judges of a court of common pleas to sign and seal a bill of exceptions, or show cause, etc., it appeared that the bill of exceptions was not tendered to the judges of the trial, but was presented to them individually at different times after the court had adjourned for the term the supreme court of New York refused to grant a peremptory mandamus; Midberry v. Collins, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 345.

4. Davis v. Menasha, 20 Wis. 194; Oliver v. Town, 28 Wis. 328; Tellows v. Sherry, 14 Wis. 156. See State v. Roger, 7 La. An. 382.

In Davis v. Menasha, 20 Wis. 205, COLE, J., writing the opinion of the court, in stating that it is essential for the judge who tried the cause to settle the bill, uses the following language: "He knows what took place on the term of office expires, to settle and sign a bill of exceptions in a cause tried before him during his term is not well settled.¹

(c) ANSWER.—If a judge refuses to sign a bill of exceptions he should make known the cause.² While the mandatory part of the writ may be very general, the return or answer must be very minute in showing why the party did not do what he was commanded to do.³

It is the duty of the respondent to set forth in his return or answer the nature of his defence, either by denying the allega-

trial, what questions of law were raised and decided, and seems to be the most suitable person to settle the exceptions for the review of the appellate court. In this State it has been the common practice for the judge who tried the cause to settle the bill of exceptions, even after his term of office, and we can see no objection to his doing so."

And in Hale v. Haselton, 21 Wis., 322, the same learned judge says: "It seems that the bill of exceptions was settled and signed by Judge Noggle after his term of office had expired. And it is said that a circuit judge, after his term of office expires, has no right or authority to settle a bill of exceptions in a case tried before him. In Fellows v. Tait, 14 Wis. 156, it was stated that the practice in this State has been for the person before whom the cause was tried to settle the bill of exceptions, although he was no longer judge. We cannot perceive any valid objection to this practice, and indeed, unless the judge who tried the cause is sometimes permitted to settle a bill of exceptions after his term of office expires, it would deprive a party of the benefit of an appeal to this court." See also Galbraith v. Green, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 85.

In State v. Slick, 86 Ind. 501; ELLIOTT, J., said, "It is the duty of a judge to sign a proper bill of exceptions, duly presented within the time allowed, although the proceedings which it recites took place during his predecessor's term of office. Hedrick v. Hedrick, 28 Ind. 291; Smith v. Baugh, 32 Ind. 163.

One who tenders a proper and just bill within the time allowed presents it in season to allow a fair examination, and upon the refusal of the judge to sign it, proceeds with reasonable diligence, will not lose his rights because of the expiration of the term of office of the judge to whom the bill was presented. In such a case the party may, within a reasonable time, present to the successor of the judge to whom the bill was first presented a verified petition showing all the facts, and praying him to sign and seal the bill, and if, after notice and upon a hearing, the party is found entitled to the relief he seeks, it will be the duty of the judge to sign the bill and make it part of the record in such a manner as to make it available on appeal. If the judge to whom such a petition is presented should wrongfully refuse to sign the bill, then, upon a proper showing, mandate would issue commanding him to do it."

Leave to File Exceptions to Special Findings.—Mandamus to compel a court to allow the filing of exceptions to special findings was denied where no motion for leave to do so had been made until nearly two years after the findings had been filed and judgment rendered thereon, and the judge who had heard the case and entered judgment had gone out of office. Eggleston v. Kent Circuit Judge, 50 Mich. 147.

1. State v. Supervisors of Beloit, 21 Wis. 280; Fellows v. Tait, 14 Wis. 156.

In State v. Barnes, 16 Neb. 37, it was held that "the judge who heard or tried a case" in the district court has authority to settle and allow a bill of exceptions in a case tried before him after the expiration of his term of office.

2. State v. Judges, 1 West L. J. 358; State v. Hawes, 43 Ohio St. 27; State v. Brockwell, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 683; Sikes v. Ransom, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 279; State v. Drew, 32 La. An. 1043; see People v. Judges of Washington, 1 Cal. (N. Y.) 511; State v. Elmore, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 528; State v. Hall, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 255.

3. Regina v. Commissioners etc., 1 Best & Smith 4. A return to an alternative writ is insufficient which merely alleges that the relator had no authority to compel the respondent to sign the bill, since he himself must be the judge of the correctness of the exceptions, tions of the writ or stating facts sufficient to defeat the relator's right. It should contain positive allegations of fact, and not mere inferences from facts.¹

(f) CHARGE TO THE JURY.—Where an exception is taken to a refusal to charge that there is no evidence tending to prove a certain point, the plaintiff in error, desiring to bring up for review this exception, is entitled to have incorporated into the bill of exceptions all the evidence bearing upon the point in question; and if the circuit judge refuses to so incorporate it mandamus is the proper remedy.²

(g) CHANCERY COURTS.—Mandamus will not issue to compel the signing of a bill in a chancery cause determined in an inferior court. Nor will it be granted to compel a court of chancery to inscribe in an order book upon the application of one of the parties which it has made in a cause.³

(h) JUSTICE COURTS.—Mandamus will not compel the justice of the peace to sign a bill of exceptions in a cause tried by him.⁴

(i) WHEN GRANTED TO REFEREE.—A referee may be compelled by mandamus to settle a case and exceptions and to settle it correctly. But before the writ will be issued to compel the settlement in a particular way it must be made to appear that when so settled it will be according to the facts.⁵

IV. JUDICIAL OFFICERS—1. Generally.—Mandamus will be issued to compel judicial officers to perform duties imposed by law.⁶ And an application to compel the performance by an officer of the court of a duty devolving upon him by virtue of such office should ordinarily be made in the first instance to that court.⁷

2. Judges.—Mandamus will lie to compel a judge to perform a duty.⁸ Thus if a judge unreasonably delay judgment in a partitrial, cannot be taken in such a form as to bring the whole charge of the judge before this court, a charge in which he not only states the results of the law from the facts, but sums up all the evidence. Ex parte Crane, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 190.

1. Com. v. Commrs., 37 Pa. St. 277; State v. Hawes, 43 Ohio St. 17.

The answer of a judge to a writ, commanding him to seal a bill of exceptions, that the bill "is not a true bill of exceptions, and does not state the exceptions in manner and form as they were taken upon the case," without stating in what respect it is untrue, is bad for uncertainty. Reichenbach v. Ruddach, 121 Pa. St. 18.

2. Crane v. Judge of Wayne Co., 24 Mich. 513. Exceptions taken on the trial of a cause before a jury for the purpose of submitting to the revision of the court questions of law decided by the circuit court during the trial, cannot be taken in such a form as to bring the whole charge of the judge before this court, a charge in which he not only states the results of the law from the facts, but sums up all the evidence. Ex parte Crane, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 190.

3. High on Ex. L. Rem., § 211; State v. Powers, 14 Ga. 388.

4. Ohio v. Wood, 22 Ohio St. 537.

5. People v. Baker, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 105.

6. Buchoz v. Pray, 37 Mich. 512; People v. Randall, 37 Mich. 473; Ex parte Dowe, 54 Ala. 258; Brown v. Atkin, 1 Utah 277. See Mitchell v. Hay, 37 Ga. 581.

7. State v. Breese, 15 Kan. 123.

8. Com. v. M'Laughlin, 120 Pa. St. 518. See Boone v. DeHaven, 72 Cal. 280; Life etc. Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 291; Shehan v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 42 Mich. 69; Careago v. Fernold, 66 Cal. 351; Cochran v. Miller, 74 Ala.

cular case, he may be compelled to act by mandamus.¹ But it will not compel him to give judgment in a particular way; it will only compel him to act.²

The writ may issue to compel a judge to settle a statement on motion for a new trial,³ to compel a judge to accept a bond, and settle and sign the case for appeal,⁴ or to approve official bonds.⁵ To issue an execution;⁶ to certify a case on which he has heard and decided a motion for a new trial;⁷ to sign a bill

50; State v. Judge of the Third District, 17 La. An. 328; People v. Dodge, 5 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 47.

1. Com. v. M'Laughlin, 120 Pa. St. 518; State v. Lazarus, 37 La. An. 610.

2. Ex parte Bostwick, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 143; Johnston v. Glascock, 2 Ala. 519; State v. Kinkaid (Neb.), 37 N. W. Rep. 612; People v. Judge of Wayne Co. Court, 1 Mich. 359; State v. Williams, 69 Ala. 311; Ex parte Redd, 73 Ala. 548; Brown v. Kalamazoo Circuit Court Judge, 75 Mich. 274. See State v. Judges of Ninth etc. Jud. Dist., 29 La. An. 785; Griffen v. Steele, 1 Edm. (N. Y.) Sel. Cas. 505; Life Ins. Co. v. Adams, 9 Pet. 573.

Mandamus lies to compel a circuit judge to set aside a verdict and grant a new trial for communicating and drinking with others after being sent out to consider their verdict. Churchill v. Emerick Circuit Judge, 56 Mich. 536.

A mandamus lies to compel the trial of a case, where the judge has illegally refused to go into the merits of the action upon an erroneous construction of some question of practice preliminary to the whole case. State v. Twenty-sixth District Judge, 34 La. An. 1177.

A plea to the jurisdiction in a criminal case was sustained, and the order sustaining it directed, without any authority therefor, that the indictment be transmitted to another court. Held, that the indictment had not been disposed of, and that a writ of mandamus to compel the court to proceed with the trial would be granted, provided such court actually had jurisdiction of the offence charged. State v. Laughlin, 75 Mo. 358.

Upon the certificate of a judge of his disqualification to try a cause, a special judge, who has been appointed and qualified to try the cause, has power to do so, and where he refuses on the ground that the regular judge was not disqualified, and that, therefore, his own appointment was void, mandamus will lie to compel him to proceed. Schultze v. McLeary, 73 Tex. 92.

3. State v. Murphy, 19 Nev. 89. See Ex parte Virginia Commrs., 112 U. S. 177; People v. Circuit Judge of Branch County, 17 Mich. 67; Frost v. Frost, 45 Tex. 324; People v. Rosborough, 29 Cal. 415.

Mandamus will not issue to compel the superior court to settle a statement on motion for a new trial, where the notice of the motion was made too late. The writ would be of no avail if granted. Clark v. Crane, 57 Cal. 629.

Mandamus will not be granted to compel the circuit judge to grant a new trial, where he has exercised his discretion and refused it, after considering affidavits pro and con, and where the negligence of the defendant in not producing its principal witnesses at the trial stands confessed. SHERWOOD, C. J., and CAMPBELL, J., dissenting. Detroit Tug & Wrecking Co. v. Gartner (Mich.), 42 N. W. Rep. 968.

Mandamus to settle a case for review will not issue to a judge who has resigned since filing his answer to the order to show cause. Relief should be asked from his successor. DeHaas v. Newago Circuit Judge, 46 Mich. 12. See Eggleston v. Kent Circuit Judge, 50 Mich. 147.

4. Gartner v. Cohen, 16 Atl. Rep. (N. J.) 684. See Levy v. Yoto County Superior Court, 66 Cal. 292; Mansfield v. Fassett, 63 N. H. 573; Ex parte Powers, 4 La. An. 105; Ex parte Henderson, 6 Fla. 279; Anderson v. Brown, 6 Fla. 299. Compare Gruner v. Moore, 6 Colo. 526.

5. Ex parte Candee, 48 Ala. 386; Cate v. Ross, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 243; People v. Stout, 11 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 17; People v. Judges of Washington, 1 Cal. (N. Y.) 511; People v. Pearson, 3 Ill. (2 Scam.) 189; State v. Hall, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 255; Porter v. Harris, 4 Call (Va.) 485.

6. State v. Hoboken District Court, 49 N. J. L. 539; State v. Berning, 8 Mo. App. 600.

7. State v. Cox, 26 Minn. 214; State v. Phillips (Mo.), 10 S. W. Rep. 182.

of exceptions but not to direct what statements or exceptions the bill shall contain;¹ to sign a judgment rendered by his predecessor in office;² to consider a coroner's account for holding an inquest on the dead body of a stranger, the statute requiring this service of the judge;³ to issue a warrant on the county treasury in payment of claims allowed by the commissioners' court;⁴ to compel the judge of an inferior tribunal to grant an order essential to a speedy execution of its decree or judgment; for instance, an order that an appellant execute a supersedeas bond.⁵

But a judge's discretion will not be reviewed by mandamus, such as granting or refusing a rehearing⁶ or issuing a search warrant upon the complaint of a private citizen,⁷ or to compel the judge to commit for contempt,⁸ or to permit an answer to be filed;⁹ or to reverse his findings;¹⁰ or to receive certain evidence in a cause pending in the inferior court, the admissibility of the evidence being a question addressed wholly to the judgment of the court itself;¹¹ or to approve the salary now due of one of

1. People v. Anthony, 25 Ill. App. 532; State v. Eighth District Judge, 35 La. An. 248.

2. Life etc. Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 291.

A mandamus lies to compel a district judge to sign de novo a final judgment when improperly signed by him. State v. Orleans District Judge, 35 La. An. 218. But after the judge has proprio motu reinstated the case to be tried anew, a mandamus does not lie to compel him to sign a judgment therein. State v. Fifth District Judge, 35 La. An. 873.

3. Locke v. Speed, 62 Mich. 408.

4. Jack v. Moore, 66 Ala. 184. An alternative writ of mandamus was granted to compel a county judge to issue a warrant for costs of a witness. The judge pleaded that his term of office had expired. Held, that the proceedings might be continued against his successor, and a peremptory writ ordered. State v. Puckett, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 709.

5. Ex parte Sibert, 67 Ala. 349. Where property claimed as exempt is in the hands of the judgment debtor, and the execution is functus officio, mandamus will not be granted to compel the issuance of a supersedeas. Middleton v. McCullough (Ark.), 9 S. W. Rep. 844.

6. Ex parte Gresham, 82 Ala. 359; State v. Monroe, 39 La. An. 99; Territory v. Nowlin, 3 Dak. 349. See Jennings v. Kalamazoo Circuit Judge, 44 Mich. 99; State v. Rising, 15 Nev. 164;

Ex parte Jones, 66 Ala. 202; State v. Douglas County Judges, 19 Neb. 149; Castor v. Allegan Judge, 54 Mich. 318; State v. Rightor, 36 La. An. 112; State v. Monroe (La.), 1 So. Rep. 300; Kimball v. Morris, 2 Met. (Mass.) 573; Ex parte Denver & Rio Grande R. Co., 101 U. S. 711; State v. District Judge (La.), 5 So. Rep. 648; State v. Ellis (La.), 5 So. Rep. 530; Bassler v. Niesly, 1 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 431; Spencer v. Jawler (Cal.), 21 Pac. Rep. 742; State v. Judge of Superior District Court, 26 La. An. 116.

Mandamus will not issue in a case not specially provided for by law, but based only on the general discretion of judges to enjoin any "injurious act." State v. Rightor, 38 La. An. 916.

Mandamus will not issue to compel a probate judge in Kansas to grant a permit to a druggist to sell liquor, the granting or refusing of such permit being within the discretion of the judge. Stanley v. Monnet, 34 Kan. 708.

7. Mitchell v. Boardman, 79 Me. 469.

8. Atchison, Topeka etc. R. Co. v. Jennison, 60 Mich. 232.

9. State v. Thayer, 10 Mo. App. 540.

10. Delhi School District v. Ingham County Judge, 49 Mich. 432; State v. Orleans Appeals, 37 La. An. 111; Scott v. Superior Court, 75 Cal. 114; Byington v. Hamilton 39 Kan. 758; Ex parte Bell, 48 Ala. 285.

11. Ex parte Smith, 69 Ala. 528; King v. Justices of Cambridgeshire, 1 Dow. & Ry. 325.

Admission of Evidence Generally.—In their officers for a particular amount, when their refusal to thus approve is predicated on an act of the legislature reducing such salary twenty per cent.¹ So mandamus to compel a judge to do an act should be refused when there is an adequate remedy at law,² and when the judge has no jurisdiction.³

(a) POWER OF JUDGES AT CHAMBERS.—Where the right is clear, a judge at chambers, within his district, may grant a peremptory writ of mandamus.⁴ But the judge at chambers cannot legally hear and determine a prosecution in the nature of contempt for an alleged violation of the writ of mandamus.⁵

(b) AWARDING MANDAMUS IN VACATION.—A judge of the court cannot award a mandamus in vacation.⁶

3. Attorneys.—The admission of an attorney by a court is a judicial, not a ministerial act, and mandamus cannot issue to compel such admission.⁷ It rests exclusively with the court to determine who is qualified to become one of its officers as an attorney and counsellor and for which cause he ought to be removed.⁸ The power, however, is not an arbitrary and despotic one, to be exercised at the pleasure of the court, or from passion, prejudice or personal hostility; but it is the duty of the court to exercise and regulate it by a sound judicial discretion, whereby the rights and independence of the bar may be as scrupulously guarded and maintained by the court as the rights and dignity of the court.⁹ So where the discretion of an inferior court is exercised with manifest injustice in striking an attorney's name from its rolls mandamus may be used to control that discretion.¹⁰

Mandamus lies to compel a judge of an inferior court to recog-

a proceeding for a mandamus to compel a district survey or to survey disputed lands, a discrepancy in the calls of a survey having been established, held, that it was error to exclude the testimony of the surveyor who made the survey to show how a mistake was made in calling for the old line. Booth v. Upshur, 26 Tex. 64.

1. State v. Orleans District Judges, 34 La. An. 1114.

2. State v. Meiley, 22 Ohio St. 534.

3. Rogers v. Jenkins (N. Car.), 3 S. E. Rep. 821; State v. Stevens (Kan.), 19 Pac. Rep. 365; In re Price (Kan.), 19 Pac. Rep. 751.

4. Clark v. State, 24 Neb. 263; State v. Cheraw etc. R. Co., 16 Shand. (S. Car.) 524; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 631; Territory v. Shearer, 2 Dak. 332. Compare Belmont v. Reilly, 71 N. Car. 260; Palmer v. McChesney, 26 Ark. 452.

A judge of the superior court may deny the application for a rule nisi at chambers. Gay v. Gilmore, 76 Ga. 725.

5. In re Price, 40 Kan. 156; State v. Stevens, 40 Kan. 113.

6. Ex parte Grant, 6 Ala. 91; Territory v. Ortiz, 1 New Mex. 5. Compare Hammond v. Poole, 58 Ga. 169.

Rev. Stat. Mo., § 3254, providing that a judge may issue a writ of mandamus in vacation, does not infringe upon Const. Mo., art. 6, § 3, giving the supreme court power to issue such writs, and the writ will not be quashed merely because issued in vacation. State v. Weeks, 93 Mo. 499.

7. Re Splane (Pa.), 19 Pitt. Leg. J., N. S. 237.

8. Com. v. Common Pleas of Cumberland, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 187.

9. Ex parte Secombe, 19 How. (U. S.) 9.

10. State v. Kirke, 12 Fla. 278; s. c., 95 Am. Dec. 314.

City Attorney.—A writ of mandate will lie to reinstate a city attorney appointed by the common council and afterwards wrongfully removed by it from the office. Madison v. Korbly, 32 Ind. 74.

nize a duly elected (or appointed) and qualified district attorney.¹

Mandamus is an appropriate remedy to restore an attorney to practice in inferior courts, especially where no appeal or writ of error from the order of the inferior court or other remedy is authorized by law.² So where an attorney is disbarred by an inferior court for cause over which it has no jurisdiction.³

Where an attorney is proceeded against for the purpose of expelling him from the bar he is entitled to have notice of the charges against him and an opportunity to make his defence. And when his name is thus taken from the roll mandamus should issue to command the court to vacate the order and restore the party.⁴

A clear case of debarring must be made out, however, in order to warrant the interference by mandamus in this class of cases.⁵ And in order to restore an attorney who has been admitted to practice in all the courts of the State it must be alleged that he is a practitioner of law in all the courts of the State, both of State and federal jurisdiction, and that he is duly and regularly licenced, that he has taken the oath, and that the court has improperly removed him.⁶

1. People v. Hallett, 1 Colo. T. 352.

Under the Florida practice mandamus is a proper remedy, where one entitled to be examined for admission to practice law has been refused an examination. State v. Baker (Fla.), 6 So. Rep. 445.

2. State v. Kirke, 12 Fla. 278; Com. v. District Court, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 272. See Randall, 11 Allen (Mass.) 473.

3. Ex parte Bradley, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 364; State v. Kirke, 12 Fla. 278; Withers v. State, 36 Ala. 252; People v. Justices, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) Cas. 181; Ex parte Robinson, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 505; Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 333; Ex parte Heyfron, 7 How. (Miss.) 127; People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 148; Start v. Start, 7 Iowa 499; Fletcher v. Dangerfield, 20 Cal. 430; Leigh's Case, 3 Mod. 335; Beene v. State, 22 Ark. 149, 157; Bradley v. Fisher, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 335. See Ex parte Secombe, 19 How. (U. S.) 3; Ex parte Burr, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 530; White's Case, 6 Mod. 18; McLaughlin v. Court, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 272; Witliens v. State, 36 Ala. 252.

4. People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 145. In Ex parte Heyfron, 7 How. (Miss.) 127, no notice of the charges upon which the order was made was given; no opportunity for explanation, apology or defence was afforded; the judgment of the court was ex parte, and condemned the defendants without a hearing. It was held that a judgment thus rendered, partaking so strongly of the nature of a criminal proceeding, and so serious in its consequences, could not be sustained.

Where the statute directs that the proceedings to remove an attorney must be taken by the court on its own motion for matter within its knowledge, and that notice shall be given to the relator, yet where the court are of the opinion that no notice was necessary and proceed without it, its decisions, being made in the exercise of judicial authority where the subject was within their jurisdiction, cannot be reversed and annulled by mandamus. Ex parte Secombe, 19 How. (U. S.) 9.

5. People v. Dowling, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 200.

Where the only act of the court of which the relator complained related to a single case, which was ended before a mandamus was applied for, held that his general rights not being affected by the order made in that case there was nothing pending in which he had any interest that could give him standing in court to ask for the writ. People v. Dowling, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 197.

6. Withers v. State, 36 Ala. 252.

A rule to show cause why a mandamus should not issue to a court of common pleas to restore an attorney was refused because the affidavit did not

A subordinate court may be compelled by mandamus to appoint an attorney to defend a person who is non compos and against whom suit is brought.¹

4. Clerks of Courts.—A judge may issue a writ of mandamus to a clerk of a court in his judicial district, requiring the clerk to appear before him and show cause why he does not discharge what the judge considers the clerk's official duties.²

But the jurisdiction by mandamus over clerks of court to compel the performance of ministerial duties will be withheld if the party aggrieved has a sufficient remedy by writ of error,³ or if a plain, speedy and adequate remedy is provided by statute.⁴

Mandamus lies to compel a clerk of court to issue process to enforce a judgment,⁵ or to furnish copies of the record of the court,⁶ or to record an instrument,⁷ or perform any duty imposed by statute.⁸

state that the court had improperly removed. In re Gephard, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 134.

1. Ex parte Worthington, 37 Ala. 496.

2. Jones v. McMahon, 30 Fed. Rep. 719; State v. Shaw (Ohio), 1 West. Rep. 219; State v. Jacobs, 11 Oreg. 314; Ex parte Cornochan, T. U. P. Charlt. (Ga.) 215; Cox v. Kash, 1 Bush (Ky.) 201.

The supreme court of Arkansas cannot, by mandamus, compel a clerk of the circuit court to perform a legal duty which the judge of that court, by reason of interest, is disqualified from compelling. Except in the cases specially provided for, the jurisdiction of the supreme court is appellate only. Ex parte Snoddy, 44 Ark. 221.

Clerk of Municipal Court.—A writ of mandamus is the proper process to compel the clerk of a municipal court to furnish certified copies of its records. State v. Meagher, 57 Vt. 398.

3. State v. Engleman, 45 Mo. 27.

Where the court of common pleas granted an appeal to the district court, with the proviso that no transcript should be made out until the filing of the bond, held that such proviso was unwarranted; but the clerk acting under the direction of the court properly refused to issue the transcript in default of a bond, and mandamus would not lie against him to compel its issue. The proper remedy of appellant in such case was by writ of error. State v. Engleman, 45 Mo. 27.

4. Pickell v. Owen, 66 Iowa 485.

Mandamus will not lie to compel the clerk of the courts to issue an execution on a judgment, because, in case of his refusal to do so in a proper case, the statute (Code, § 2923) provides a plain, speedy and adequate remedy, in the presence of which mandamus is forbidden by code, § 3376. Pickell v. Owen, 66 Iowa 485.

Remedy at Law.—A mandamus will not lie against a clerk of the court to compel him to issue execution on a money judgment where the plaintiff has, in an ordinary course of law, a plain and adequate remedy by an action on the bond of the officer. Goodwin v. Glazer, 10 Cal. 333; Fulton v. Hanna, 40 Cal. 278. If the remedy by action against the clerk upon his official bond for damages be inadequate to procure for the party aggrieved the specific relief to which he is entitled, mandamus will lie. People v. Loucks, 28 Cal. 68; Atty. Gen. v. Lum, 2 Wis. 507.

5. Moore v. Muse, 47 Tex. 210; People v. Clerk of Marine Court, 3 Abb. (N. Y.) Dec. 491; People v. Lucks, 28 Cal. 68. A judge of one circuit who orders an injunction to issue in another circuit, cannot, by mandamus, compel the clerk of the latter circuit to issue the writ. Welch v. Byrns, 38 Ill. 20.

6. State v. Meagher, 57 Vt. 398; Davis v. Carter, 18 Tex. 400.

7. Wulftange v. McCollom, 83 Ky. 361; State v. Gimshaw (Mo.), 5 West. Rep. 427; People v. Miller, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 463; Ex parte Goodell, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 335. See State v. Ware, 13 Oreg. 380; Road Co. v. Douglas Co., 5 Oreg. 373.

8. Ex parte Lawson, 12 Ark. 323.

It does not lie to compel a clerk to furnish a transcript of the record when the writ of error has not issued,¹ or to require the clerk of the court below by mandamus to send up a record when the case could not, under the law, be heard after its arrival, and the process would thus be useless.²

(a) APPROVAL OF BOND.—If the clerk refuses to consider the sufficiency of a bond tendered for his approval, either for no reason or for an assigned insufficient reason, mandamus will lie, not to compel him to approve the bond; that is a matter for his own enlightened judgment; it will lie to compel him to consider and pronounce on the sufficiency of the bond. This involves an enquiry into its form, whether it is in proper penalty and condition, and whether the sureties tendered are sufficient. This is a duty cast on him, which he alone can perform, and suitors who may be required to give such bonds have the clear legal right to demand its exercise.³ A mandamus will not be awarded to compel the approval of a bond which was refused on the ground of the insufficiency of the sureties.⁴ And where the statute makes it the duty of the clerk of the court to approve the bonds of all county officers, the act of approval is so far judicial in its nature that mandamus will not lie to control the judgment of the clerk as to the approval of a bond presented.⁵

(b) ISSUING CERTIFICATE OF ELECTION.—Mandamus will issue to compel the county clerk to issue to the relator a certificate of election where the proof shows that he is duly elected.⁶

(c) CLERK OUSTED FROM OFFICE.—Mandamus is the proper remedy to restore a clerk ousted from his office by the illegal appointment of another person.⁷

5. Justices of the Peace.—Mandamus lies to compel justices of

1. Ex parte Ralston, 119 U. S. 613.

2. Roberts v. Smith, 63 Ga. 213. See People v. Loucks, 28 Cal. 68.

3. Mobile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cleveland, 76 Ala. 321; Gulick v. New, 14 Ind. 93; Moses on Mand, 61; State v. Stockwell, 7 Kan. 103; McDuffie v. Cook, 65 Ala. 430; Swan v. Gray, 44 Miss. 393. And see Ross v. People, 78 Ill. 375; People v. Fletcher, 2 Scam. (Ill.) 482; State v. Lafayette Co. Court, 41 Mo. 222; State v. County Court of Texas Co., 44 Mo. 230; Beck v. Jackson, 43 Mo. 117; Daniels v. Miller, 8 Colo. 542.

In approving an attachment bond, the clerk to whom it is tendered acts in a quasi judicial capacity; and when he refuses to approve it, either because he considers the sureties insufficient, or for no assigned reason, his refusal will not be controlled or reviewed by mandamus; but, when he refuses to act on the bond tendered, or bases his refusal to accept it on a specified reason which is insufficient in law, mandamus will lie, not to compel his approval, but to require him to pass upon the sufficiency of the bond without regard to the supposed defect. Mobile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cleveland, 76 Ala. 321.

4. Ex parte Thompson, 52 Ala. 98; McDuffie v. Cook, 65 Ala. 430.

5. Swan v. Gray, 44 Miss. 393; McDuffie v. Cook, 65 Ala. 430.

6. People v. Matteson, 17 Ill. 167. Upon a petition for a mandamus to compel a county clerk to issue a certificate of election to the relator, who was duly elected a justice of the peace, it is no defence that the clerk has already issued a certificate to the relator's competitor, and that he has been regularly commissioned by the governor. People v. Rives, 27 Ill. 242.

7. Dew v. Judges, 3 Hen. & M. (Va.)

1. See State v. Schofield, 41 Mo. 38.

the peace to perform the duties required of them by law,¹ to hear and determine matters properly within their jurisdiction and properly brought before them.² Their discretion will not be controlled by mandamus, but if they disregard their plainly defined duties mandamus will lie,³ It will lie to compel a justice of the peace to enter judgment;⁴ to grant an appeal in a proper case;⁵ to issue his warrant in summary proceedings to recover possession

1. King v. Montague, 1 Barn. K. B. 72; Com. v. Smith, 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 95; State v. Shropshire, 4 Neb. 411; Kirk v. Cole, 3 McArthur (D. C.) 71; Harrison v. Emmerson, 2 Leigh 764; Smith v. Moore, 38 Conn. 105; Forman v. Murphy, Pen. 1024; Anderson v. Pennie, 32 Cal. 265; Garrett v. Stacy, 17 Mo. 601; Moore v. The State, 72 Ind. 358; Laird v. Abrahams, 3 Green 22; Terhune v. Barcelow, 6 Halst. 38; Ex parte Morris, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 292; Cox v. Rich, 24 Kan. 20; Town of Orange v. Bill, 29 Vt. 442; Kirk v. Cole, 3 McArthur 71; Ballou v. Smith, N. H. 530; Caly v. Hardy, Holt 407; R. v. Barnstaple, 1 Barn. 137; R. v. Drake, 6 M. & S. 116; R. v. Kent, 14 East 395; R. v. Long, 1 Q. B. 740; R. v. Cumberland, 1 M. & S. 190; R. v. Rawlinson, 6 B. & C. 23; R. v. Nottingham, 2 Barn. 56; R. v. Eaton, L. R., 8 Q. B. D. 158; R. v. Paget, L. R., 8 Q. B. D. 151; R. v. New Windsor, L. R., 1 Q. B. D. 152; R. v. Eyre, L. R., 4 Q. B. 487.

To Levy Tax.—Neither the supreme nor circuit court of Tennessee has power to award a mandamus to the justices of the county court to compel the assessment of taxes for the payment of county debts. Justices of Cannon Co. v. Hoodenpyle, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 145.

2. People v. Barnes, 66 Cal. 594; Rex v. Tod, Stra. 530; King v. Montague, 1 Barn. K. B. 72; R. v. Cumberland, 4 A. & E. 695; R. v. Beard, 12 East 673; R. v. Handsley, L. R., 8 Q. B. D. 383; R. v. Brown, 7 E. & B. 757; R. v. Cambridgeshire, 7 A. & E. 480; R. v. Walker, 3 D. & L. 131; R. v. Martyr, 13 East 55; Ex parte Willingford, 9 Dowl. 987; Clark v. Minnis, 50 Cal. 509.

In Atty. Gen. v. Police Justice, 40 Mich. 631, mandamus was issued to compel the police justice of Detroit to entertain a complaint. See also King v. Mawbey, 6 Term Rep. 628; Reg. v. Adamson, 1 Q. B. Div. 201.

A writ of mandamus lies to compel a justice of the peace to proceed with the preliminary examination of a person regularly charged with having committed a public offence, arrested and brought before him. The duty of the preliminary examination is especially enjoined on the justice by sections 858-860 of the penal code, and his refusal to proceed with the examination is not justified by the mere statement of the counsel for the defendant that an examination for the same offence had been had before another magistrate, on which the defendant had been held to answer. People v. Barnes, 66 Cal. 594.

Mandamus cannot issue to a justice of the peace who is willing to proceed, but who thinks himself prevented from so doing by superior authority. State v. Judge, 39 La. An. 994.

Mandamus will not issue to compel a justice of the marine court to entertain an application for summary proceedings to eject a tenant, the refusal of the justice arising from the fact that all his time is occupied with other business of the court. People v. McAdam, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 284; s. c., 64 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 238.

Proceedings Commenced Before T o Justices.—Where a prisoner was arrested on a warrant issued by Justice A on complaint of prisoner's wife, and was afterwards arrested on a coroner's warrant and taken before Justice B. and the county attorney preferred to continue the proceedings before B rather than before A, held that A was not entitled to mandamus to bring the prisoner before him. Evans v. Thomas, 32 Kan. 469.

3. People v. Norton, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 477. State v. Judge, 1 So. Rep. 281; Anonymous, 3 N. J. L. (2 Pen.) 576; Petition of Farwell, 2 N. H. 123; Wannell v. Kern, 51 Mo. 365; Miller v. Powell, 53 Me. 252; Frisbie v. Justices, 2 Va. Cas. 92.

4. Smith v. Moore, 38 Conn. 105; Anderson v. Pennie, 32 Cal. 265; Forman v. Murphy, 3 N. J. L. 1024.

5. Ex parte Martin, 5 Ark. 371; Levy v. Inglish, 4 Ark. 65; Ex parte of lands;¹ to make correct docket entries in accordance with the facts;² and to perform all duties that are purely ministerial.³ It will not lie to compel a justice after rendering a judgment to set it aside and render a different one.⁴

(a) ISSUING EXECUTION.—The issuing of an execution by a justice of the peace upon a judgment rendered by him is the exercise of a ministerial function. It is a duty enjoined by law as resulting from his office and one which he may be compelled to perform by mandamus.⁵

(b) FILING TRANSCRIPT.—Mandamus may be maintained against a justice of the peace on appeal properly taken from him in a criminal case if he fail to send up the transcript in the limited time.⁶

(c) DISMISSING WRIT OF REPLEVIN.—Where a writ of replevin is dismissed by a justice and defendant waives return he has a right to introduce evidence to prove the value of the property and mandamus will lie to compel the justice to receive it in case he refuses to allow it.⁷

Morris, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 292; Town of Orange v. Bill, 29 Vt. 442.

1. People v. Willis, 5 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 205.

2. Green v. Van Ells, 69 Wis. 19. See State v. Edwards (N. J.), 17 Atl. Rep. 973.

3. Harrison v. Emmerson, 2 Leigh (Va.) 764; State v. Shropshire, 4 Neb. 411; Com. v. Smith, 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 95; Bennett v. McCaffery, 28 Mo. App. 220; People v. Barnes, 66 Cal. 594; In the matter of Trustees of Williamsburgh, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 34; Harrison v. Emmerson, 2 Leigh (Va.) 764; State v. Kings, 23 Neb. 540; Ostertag v. Galbraith, 23 Neb. 730; Logansport etc. R. Co. v. Groniger, 51 Ind. 383.

4. Brien v. Tallman, 36 Mich. 13.

5. Hamilton v. Lutt, 65 Cal. 57; Laird v. Abrahams, 3 Green (N. J.) 22; Terhune v. Barcalow, 6 Halst. (N. J.) 38; State v. Berning, 8 Mo. App. 600.

If a justice of the peace enters a judgment against a defendant, and afterwards makes a conditional order that the judgment shall be opened upon payment of costs by the defendant on a certain day, and, notwithstanding the defendant neglects to pay the costs on the day prescribed, the justice refuses to issue execution on the judgment, after being requested by the plaintiff so to do, a mandamus will be granted to compel the justice to issue the execution. Terhune v. Barcalow, 6 Halst. (N. J.) 38.

A justice cannot be compelled by mandamus to issue execution on a judgment rendered in an action before it stood regularly for trial, after such judgment has been vacated and a new trial granted. Barons v. Anderson, 37 Kan. 399.

Where a constable charges illegal and unreasonable fees for executing a writ of replevin issued by a justice of the peace, the latter will not be compelled by mandamus to issue an execution for their collection. Chase v. De Wolf, 69 Ill. 47.

6. State v. Crisinger, 88 Ind. 499. The supreme court of Illinois, in the case of Little v. Smith, 4 Scam. (Ill.) 400, held, as summed up in the syllabus, as follows: "The provisions" of the act "are only directory to the justice, prescribing a ministerial duty to be performed by him within a limited time; the performance of which, if neglected, may be enforced by the circuit court. When the party appealing from the judgment of a justice of the peace has entered into the appeal bond, and the same is accepted and approved by the justice, the appeal is taken; and the neglect of the justice to return the papers to the office of the clerk within the time limited by the statute, does not defeat the appeal. The justice is the officer of the law, and not the agent of the party." See Cox v. Rich, 24 Kan. 20.

7. People v. Osborn, 38 Mich. 313; People v. Judge, 23 Mich. 497; People v. Tripp, 15 Mich. 518.

(d) CORRECTION OF ERRORS.—Where a justice erroneously dismisses a cause mandamus will not lie to correct the error when the case was judiciously determined by him.¹ So mandamus will not issue to require a justice to amend his record when the amount is insignificant and it would not benefit the petitioner.²

6. Sheriff.—When a party has a clear legal right to demand from a sheriff the performance of a specific duty, and there is not a defined adequate legal remedy, mandamus from the proper tribunal is the appropriate remedy to compel performance.³

Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel a sheriff to keep his office at the county seat,⁴ or to execute a writ of restitution issued by a justice of the peace upon his refusal to do so.⁵ But it will not issue to compel a sheriff to levy⁶ or to set off attached

1. State v. Miller, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 596. See Queen v. Justices of Middlesex, 2 Q. B. D. 516.

When a criminal case before a justice is disposed of so as to be out of court, there is no way by which the justice can reinstate the case, or bring the party before him for trial, without commencing anew. The writ ought not to issue requiring him to do what the law gives him no authority to do. State v. Secrest, 33 Minn. 381.

A constable made application for a mandamus to compel a justice of the peace to reinstate a judgment on the docket of his predecessor, where, on a trial to a jury of the right of property levied on by him, a verdict had been rendered in favor of the judgment creditors, which, on motion, was set aside by the justice on the ground of partiality and undue means. Held, that the error, if any, in setting aside the verdict and judgment, cannot be reviewed on an application for a mandamus. State v. Powell, 10 Neb. 48.

2. Hall v. Crossman, 27 Vt. 297.

3. Ex parte Shandies, 66 Ala. 134. See Hopkins v. Thomas, 80 Ga. 644; State v. Brown, 38 Ohio St. 344; Waite v. Washington, 44 Mich. 388; Com. v. McLaughlin, 120 Pa. St. 518; Williams v. Smith, 6 Cal. 91; People v. McClay, 2 Neb. 7.

When the sheriff fails to produce the body of the person, in whose behalf the writ of habeas corpus was sued out, and alleges, as an excuse for his failure, that the prisoner was in his custody under a sentence to hard labor for the county, and, being subject to the control of the court of county commissioners, had been delivered up, on their order, and to their agent, after the service of the writ; on such return, the judge may properly refuse to make an order requiring the sheriff to produce the body before him. Ex parte Shandies, 66 Ala. 134.

Nor will a writ of mandamus lie to compel a sheriff to cause an appraisal of personal property levied on, to enable the debtor in execution to select such as he desires to claim as exempt, after the property has been sold and delivered by the sheriff. State v. Bowden, 18 Fla. 17.

Right to Private Interview.—The provision of New York constitution that "in any trial in any court whatever, the party accused shall be entitled to appear and defend in person and with counsel," gives the right to a private interview with counsel before trial. Such right may be enforced by mandamus against the sheriff. People v. Risley, 66 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 67.

Changing Official Advertisements.—Where a sheriff changed his official advertisements from one newspaper to another in the same county, held that mandamus did not lie to compel him to keep his advertising in the first paper, although he had not given notice of his intention to change, as required by Georgia Code, § 3650. Tillman v. Thrasher, 61 Ga. 15.

4. State v. Walker, 5 S. Car. 263; State v. Saxton, 11 Wis. 27.

5. North Pac. R. Co. v. Gardner (Cal.), 21 Pac. Rep. 735; Fogarty v. Sparks, 22 Cal. 142.

6. Habersham v. Sears, 11 Oreg. 431; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 481. A writ of mandamus will not lie, at the instance of a judgment creditor, to compel a sheriff to levy execution upon property, the legal title to which is in the debtor's property as exempt after he has sold it,¹ or to accept county warrants or scrip in payment of an execution from the supreme court in favor of the county.²

V. COURTS—1. Federal Courts.—The Supreme Court of the United States has power under the constitution to grant a writ of mandamus only in cases where its exercise is necessary in aid of the appellate powers of the court. It cannot grant the writ as the exercise of an original jurisdiction.³ It cannot review, by mandamus, the action of the circuit court relating to a matter which, but for the fact that the amount in controversy was not sufficient to give jurisdiction by appeal or writ of error, would be thus reviewable.⁴

A writ of peremptory mandamus will issue from the Supreme Court of the United States to the judges of the court of claims commanding them to hear and decide certain motions for a new trial.⁵ But the supreme court will not compel, by mandamus, the circuit court to rehear a motion to remand a cause which the petitioner avers would not have been remanded had the complaint been before that court. The remedy is by application to the circuit court for a rehearing.⁶ Where the State statute only permits mandamus to issue after the return of an unsatisfied execution against a city, the federal court should conform its practice to the statute.⁷

2. Circuit courts will not entertain proceedings in mandamus or grant the writ in any case where it is not a necessary adjunct to the exercise of a jurisdiction which they already possess.⁸ wife, but which is alleged to belong in equity to the debtor. State v. Craft, 17 Fla. 722.

1. State v. Bowden, 18 Fla. 17.

2. Hinkle v. Ball, 34 Ark. 177.

3. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137. See Const., art. 3, § 1; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Wheelwright, 7 Wheat. 534.

The supreme court has neither an original nor an appellate jurisdiction to issue a mandamus to persons holding office under the authority of the United States. McCluney v. Silliman, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 369; s. c., 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 598.

4. Re Burdett, 127 U. S. 771.

5. Ex parte United States, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 699.

6. Re Sherman, 124 U. S. 364; Ex parte Hoard, 105 U. S. 578.

7. Laird v. De Soto, 25 Fed. Rep. 76. Where the State statute makes a judgment dormant if execution is not taken out within five years, the federal court will not, after five years, issue its writ of mandamus to enforce the collection of a judgment against a municipality, mandamus, in such cases, being the equivalent of execution. United States v. Oswego, 28 Fed. Rep. 55.

8. Smith v. Jackson, 1 Paine (U. S.) 453; McIntire v. Wood, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 504; Graham v. Norton, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 427; Bath Co. v. Amy, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 245. See Lansing v. County Treasurer, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 522; Knox Co. Commrs. v. Aspinwall, 24 How. (U. S.) 376; Welch v. St. Genevieve, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 130; Rusch v. Supervisors, Woolw. (U. S.) 313; Riggs v. Johnson Co., 6 Wall. (U. S.) 166; Rees v. Watertown, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 107; U. S. v. Lee Co., 2 Biss. (U. S.) 77.

The power to grant the writ is limited under the Judiciary act of 1789, to cases where it is necessary to the exercise of their general jurisdiction as conferred by law. See McIntire v. Wood, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 504; American Union Telegraph Co. v. Bell Telephone Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 175.

A federal court issues a writ of mandamus to compel the levy of a tax; it can control the execution of the process so that property which should not

3. State Courts.—Mandamus will not lie to compel the removal of a cause from a State court to a federal court.¹ So a State court cannot rescind or disregard by mandamus the order of an inferior court directing a cause to be transferred to the federal court. The attempt would be a flagrant violation and abuse of the well established functions of the writ.²

Authority conferred upon a court by a State constitution to issue writs of mandamus and to hear and determine the same carries with it the power to pass upon the facts without the intervention of a jury.³

4. Appellate Courts.—Where the supreme court of the State is vested only with appellate powers it cannot interfere by mandamus with the proceedings of a subordinate court,⁴ except when pay a tax shall be protected. Apperson v. Memphis, 2 Flip. C. Ct. 363.

On mandamus to compel the county court to levy a tax for the payment of county bonds, the federal court will not determine existing equities, nor order a second levy on lands sold for payment of bonds due before such sales were made. Shelley v. St. Charles County, 30 Fed. Rep. 603.

1. People v. Judge, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 198; Spraggins v. County Court, Cooke (Tenn.) 160. And see People v. Judge of Circuit Court, 21 Mich. 577; Hough v. Western Transp. Co., 1 Biss. (U. S.) 425; Ladd v. Ludor, 3 W. & M. 326; In re Cromie, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 160; State v. Curler, 4 Nev. 445; Francisco v. Manhattan Ins. Co., 36 Cal. 283; Shelby v. Hoffman, 7 Ohio St. 450; People v. Judges, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 197. Compare State v. Judge of Thirteenth District, 23 La. An. 29; Hopple v. Kalkman, 17 Cal. 517; Brown v. Crippin, 4 H. & M. (Va.) 173.

In People v. Judge of Circuit Court, 21 Mich. 577, the court said: "We are also unable to discover any propriety in resorting to the writ of mandamus of this court to correct the action of a circuit court in a case under the act of congress. If any coercive action should be deemed necessary to transfer proceedings into the courts of the United States, it should naturally come from the United States authority; and if the result cannot be reached without the intervention of some writ, we find it difficult to believe that the remedy can be dependent on the discretion of a State court. In all cases where writs are expressly mentioned for purposes of removing cases into the United States courts they issue returnable there. There is no writ of certiorari or mandamus known to the common law issuing from one jurisdiction to courts within it for the removal of causes into another jurisdiction. Certiorari is the proper writ for removing records from one court into another for trial and is the writ expressly authorized to be issued by United States courts under the act of 1833, 4 U. S. Stat. 633. But whether certiorari or mandamus would be appropriate for this purpose, it is certainly more seemly that they should not depend on the discretion of any tribunal not holding its commission from the authority creating the right of removal. The United States supreme court has never, that we can find, decided expressly upon a case arising under the statute in question that the circuit courts of the United States may issue the proper writ if any is required, but the principle has been asserted distinctly that a summary remedy exists, and if so, there can be no special difficulty in ascertaining it. Gordon v. Longest, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 97." See People v. Judges of N. Y. Common Pleas, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 197.

2. Francisco v. Manhattan Ins. Co., 36 Cal. 283; People v. Weston, 28 Cal. 639.

Mandamus to set aside an order of removal to a federal court was denied without looking into the merits where the record did not show that any application had been made to the respondent to vacate the order. Le Roux v. Judge of the Circuit, 45 Mich. 416.

3. State v. Johnston, 26 Ark. 281.

4. State v. Hall, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 3; State v. Biddle, 36 Ind. 138; King v. Hampton, 3 Hayw. (Tenn.) 60; Westbrook v. Wicks, 36 Iowa 382; U. S. v. Com., Morr. (Iowa) 31; Morgan v. The Register, Hard. (Ky.) 618; Daniel v.

necessary to aid their appellate powers.¹ A mandate from the court of appeals to an inferior court is imperative on the court below; it has not the option to obey or disobey it. It must be carried into effect by the inferior court according to its time, intent and meaning.² But a circuit court may, by injunction, prevent the enforcement of a mandate of the court of appeals which has been obtained by fraud or surprise or in violation of an agreement.³

In general, the court of last resort will not take original jurisdiction of the writ of mandamus to compel the performance of local official duty in respect to a matter which, though publici juris, is of a local interest merely and does not involve directly the sovereign prerogative or the interest of the State at large.⁴

5. County Courts.—County courts may be compelled by mandamus to make a levy to pay for work done under a contract.⁵ So a mandamus is the proper remedy to compel the county court to admit a deputy sheriff to qualify.⁶

VI. PUBLIC OFFICERS—1. Generally.—The office of the writ of mandamus when addressed to a public officer is to compel him to exercise such functions as the law confers upon him. When the law enjoins upon such officer the performance of a specific act or duty, obedience to the law may, in the absence of other adequate remedy, be enforced by this writ. But the writ neither creates nor confers power upon the officer to whom it is directed. It can do no more than to command the exercise of powers already existing.⁷ And in order to compel a public officer by man-

Warren Co. Court, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 497; Hawes v. People, 124 Ill. 560.

1. State v. Hall, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 255; U. S. v. Commrs. of Dubuque, Morr. (Iowa) 42. See Ing. v. Daven, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 276; Hosier v. Higgins Township Board, 45 Mich. 340; State v. Judge Superior District Court, 26 La. An. 121. See Com. v. Commrs. of Lancaster, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 5; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Canal Commrs., 21 Pa. St. 9; Com. v. Councils of Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496; Com. Hartranft, 77 Pa. St. 154.

2. McLean v. Nixon, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 769.

3. Bank of Kentucky v. Hancock's Admr., 6 Dana (Ky.) 285.

4. State v. Supervisors, 38 Wis. 554. See State v. Breese, 15 Kan. 123; State v. Cooper Co. Court, 64 Mo. 170.

5. Anderson Co. Court v. Stone, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 852.

6. Day v. Justices of Fleming, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 198; Applegate v. Applegate, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 237.

7. Meadows v. Nesbit, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 486; Butterworth v. U. S., 112

U. S. 50; U. S. v. Butterworth, 3 Mackey (D. C.) 229; U. S. v. Labette Co., 2 McCrary (U. S.) 27; Williams v. Smith, 6 Cal. 91; Houston etc. R. Co. v. Randolph, 24 Tex. 317; Johnson v. Lucas, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 306; U. S. v. Clark Co., 95 U. S. 769; People v. Forquer, Breese (Ill.) 104; Bateman v. Magowan, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 533; Clark v. McKenzie, 7 Bush (Ky.) 523; Patton v. State 117 Ind. 585; U. S. v. Black, 128 U. S. 40; Carroll v. Board of Police, 28 Mass. (6 Cush.) 38; People v. Lake, 33 Cal. 487; Baldwin v. Kouns, 81 Ala. 272; Beaman v. Lake County, 42 Miss. 237; Commrs. of Land Office v. Smith, 5 Tex. 471; D'Oyley's Case, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 238; State v. Beloit, 21 Wis. 280; State v. County Judge, 7 Iowa 425; Alger v. Seaver, 138 Mass. 331.

When executive officers of the government refuse to act in a case at all, or when by special statute or otherwise a mere ministerial duty is imposed upon them that is a service which they are bound to perform without further question, then, if they refuse, a manda-damus to do an act at the instance of a relator he must show that he has an interest in the act sought to be coerced.¹

The writ of mandamus lies to compel a public officer to perform a duty concerning which he is vested with no discretionary power and which is either imposed upon him by some express enactment or necessarily results from the office which he holds.² But it will not lie to restrain the incumbent of an office from discharging his duties,³ or to decide mere abstract questions from the determination of which no practical result can follow.⁴

Political and executive functions cannot be subject to judicial review when not ministerial, and when that review would require the court to act outside of judicial authority.⁵

In all matters resting in the sound discretion of an officer to whom a duty is confided by law, mandamus will not lie to control the discretion or determine the decision which is to be made.⁶

mus must be issued to compel them. U. S. v. Black, 128 U. S. 40.

A mandamus is the more efficient and appropriate remedy to compel the collectors of public revenue to proceed and perform their duties. State v. Whetworth, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 594.

Under the act of March 31st, 1876, providing for a supply of water for the city of Napa, and for that purpose authorizing the trustees of the city to issue bonds, to be signed by the president and secretary of the board, the defendant, who was also city clerk, was elected and qualified as secretary, and was ordered by the trustees to prepare and present to the board a proper form of bond to be adopted and issued, but refused to obey. Held, upon an application for a writ of mandamus, that the board had no power to elect or appoint a secretary, or to prescribe his duties or the duties of the city clerk, and as the act required of the clerk was not an official act enjoined upon him by the charter of the city, the application should be denied. Napa v. Rainey, 59 Cal. 275.

1. State v. Commrs. etc., 4 Kan. 261; State v. Grubb, 85 Ind. 213; State v. Taylor, 59 Md. 338; People v. Masonic Benevolent Assoc., 98 Ill. 635; Sansom v. Mercer, 68 Tex. 488; see Territory v. Cole, 3 Dak. 301; Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Clinton, 1 Ohio St. 77.

Mandamus will not issue at the instance of one showing no beneficial interest beyond that of a citizen, to compel the secretary of a State insane asylum to permit the examination of a written charge against the medical superintendent. Colnon v. Orr, 71 Cal. 43.

A mandamus will not issue to compel a public officer to perform a ministerial duty, when the evidence shows that his ability to do so depends on the co-operative action of a third person who is not before the court. State v. Cavanac, 30 La. An., pt. 1, 237.

2. Pond v. Parrott, 42 Conn. 14, 16; Dickson v. Hill, 75 Ga. 369; Napa v. Rainey, 59 Cal. 275; Johnson v. Kelly, Wright (Ohio) 353; see Samis v. King, 40 Conn. 304; State v. Bacon, 6 Neb. 286; Hempstead v. Underhill, 20 Ark. 337; State v. Robinson, 1 Kan. 188; Goheen v. Myers, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 423; Ex parte Black, 1 Ohio St. 30; Free Turnpike Road v. Sandusky, Ohio St. 149; Glasscock v. Commr. etc., 3 Tex. 51; Bracken v. Wells, Tex. 88; Meyer v. Carolan, 9 Tex. 250; State v. Washington Co., 2 Chand. (Wis.) 247.

3. Terry v. Stauffer, 17 La. An. 306.

4. People v. Com. Council of Troy, 82 N. Y. 575.

5. Ambler v. Auditor Gen., 38 Mich. 746; Auditor Gen. v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 34 Mich. 59; Supervisors of Midland v. Auditor Gen., 27 Mich. 165; Respublica v. Clarkson, 1 Yeates (Pa.) 46; Dwelling House Ins. Co. v. Wilder (Kan.), 20 Pac. Rep. 265; People v. Auditor General, 36 Mich. 271; U. S. v. Seaman, 17 How. 225.

6. Berryman v. Perkins, 55 Cal. 483; People v. Auditor General, 36 Mich. 271; People v. Judge of Monroe Circuit, 36 Mich. 274; Moses on Mandamus 82; Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 208; People v. Leonard, 74 N. Y. 443; U. S. v. Commr., 5 Wall. (U. S.) 563; State v. Board of Liquidators, 23 La. An. 790; Secretary v. McGarrahan,

The writ may perhaps be awarded to set public officers in motion as to acts and duties necessarily calling for the exercise of judgment and discretion on their part and to compel action upon the particular matters over which they may have jurisdiction; yet the courts will in no manner interfere with the exercise of that discretion nor control or dictate the judgment or decision which shall be reached.¹

A public officer is not in default so as to be subject to mandamus until after demand and refusal.² While it is true as a general rule and especially where the proceeding has relation to private rights or interests that a writ of mandamus must show a req Wall. (U. S.) 298; State v. Shaw, 23 La. An. 388; Freeman v. Selectman of New Haven, 34 Conn. 406; King v. Licensing Justices, 4 Dow & Ry. 735; People v. Atty. Gen., 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 114; People v. Collins, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 56; State v. Warmouth, 23 La. An. 76; State v. Robinson, 1 Kan. 188; State v. Bonner, Busb. (N. Car.) L. 257; Com. v. Cochran, 5 Binn (Pa.) 87; s. c., 6 Binn. (Pa.) 456; People v. Leonard, 74 N. Y. 443; Howland v. Eldredge, 43 N. Y. 457; People v. Adam, 3 Mich. 427; Swan v. Gray, 44 Miss. 393; Hull v. Commrs. of Patents, 2 McArthur (U. S.) 90; Holliday v. Henderson, 67 Ind. 103; Bledsoe v. International R. Co., 40 Tex. 537; Rutter v. State, 38 Ohio St. 496; Bailey v. Ewart, 52 Iowa 111; People v. Fairchild, 67 N. Y. 334; Queen v. Hall, 7 Q. B. D. 575; Seymour v. Ely, 37 Conn. 103; State v. Police Jury, 29 La. An. 146; State v. Board of Liquidators, 29 La. An. 264; State v. Atty. Gen., 30 La. An. 954; State v. Moore, 42 Ohio St. 103; Shober v. Cochrane, 53 Md 544; State v. Nash, 23 Ohio St. 568; U. S. v. Thacher, 2 McArthur (U. S.) 24; State v. Dubuclet, 28 La. An. 85; State v. Brown, 28 La. An. 103; Lunt v. Davison, 104 Mass. 498; State v. Barnes (Fla.), 5 So. Rep. 722.

1. People v. Equitable Life Assurance Society, 103 N. Y. 635; Dechert v. Com., 113 Pa. St. 229; People v. Contracting Board, 33 N. Y. 382; People v. Contracting Board, 27 N. Y. 378; U. S. v. New Orleans, 31 Fed. Rep. 537; Wintz v. Charleston Education Board, 28 W. Va. 227; State v. McGrath, 91 Mo. 386; People v. Highway Commrs., 118 Ill. 239; Cicotte v. Wayne Co., 59 Mich. 509; Davison v. Solans Co. Supervisors, 70 Cal. 612; People v. Fairman, 12 Abb. (N. Y.) N. Cas. 252.

Pilot Commissioners.—Mandamus lies to review the action of pilot commissioners in suspending a pilot [McIVER, J., not concurring]; State v. Beaufort Pilotage Commrs., 23 S. Car. 175; State v. Courtenay, S. Car. 180.

Arbitrators.—If arbitrators refuse to act, mandamus will not issue to compel them. People v. Nash, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 542.

Mandamus will issue to compel an arbitrator to restore to the files of the court an award which he has withdrawn before judgment has been entered on it. Chapman v. Ewing, 78 Ala. 403.

Keeper of the Rolls.—Mandamus will lie at the petition of any citizen of the commonwealth to compel the keeper of the rolls to strike from the rolls, and the superintendent of public printing to omit from the acts of the assembly, any act which in the judgment of the supreme court of appeals is not a law. Wise v. Bigger, 79 Va. 269.

Tax Collector.—A mandamus may be granted to compel a tax collector to collect a tax assessed, notwithstanding the remedy against his sureties and by execution against himself. State v. Fyler, 48 Conn. 145; see State v. Whitworth, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 594.

Register of Deeds.—A register of deeds who refuses to enter a satisfaction of a mortgage may be compelled by mandamus. People v. Miner, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 466; 23 How. Pr. 223.

Mandamus will not lie to compel a register of deeds to enter a discharge of a mortgage in the record where the certificate offered to him as evidence upon which the right to a discharge is founded is insufficient. People v. Miner, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 612.

2. Talcott v. Harbor Commrs., 53 Cal. 199; State v. Lehre, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 234; State v. Davis, 17 Minn. 429; State v. Governor, 1 Dutch. (N. J.)

quest and a refusal to perform the act commanded by the writ to be done, yet there are cases affecting public officers or duties where the idea of a literal demand and refusal does not exist, there being no one particularly empowered to demand it as it does not affect individual interests.¹

2. Federal Officers.—Where the duty in question is required by a federal officer and is one which is purely ministerial, and with regard to which nothing like judgment and discretion in the performance of the duty is left to the officer, mandamus will lie.²

331; Condit v. Newton Co., 25 Ind. 422; Chance v. Temple, 1 Iowa 189.

1. State v. County Judge, 7 Iowa 188; State v. Bailey, 7 Iowa 390; Com. v. Commrs. of Allegheny, 37 Pa. St. 237; Orrville etc. R. Co. v. Plumas Co., 37 Cal. 354.

2. Litchfield v. Register, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 577; Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 534; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137; Gaines v. Thompson, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 347; Brashear v. Mason, 6 How. (U. S.) 92; U. S. v. Seaman, 17 How. (U. S.) 225; Commrs. of Patents v. Whitely, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 522; Secretary v. McGarrahan, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 298; U. S. v. Boutwell, 3 McArthur (D. C.) 172; U. S. v. Key, 3 McArthur (D. C.) 328; Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 497. In U. S. v. Guthrie, 17 How. (U. S.) 284, application for mandamus was made to compel the secretary of the treasury to pay the salary of a judge of a territory after his removal. Held, that mandamus would not lie. McLEAN, J., dissenting on the grounds that the president had no power to remove such a judge, and that the payment of the salary was a ministerial duty.

Where, on application for an increased pension, the commissioner rates the applicant, mandamus will not lie to the commissioner to assign him to a different class; the decision rerating the applicant is an exercise of official discretion. United States v. Black, 9 S. Ct. Rep. 12.

Secretary of the Interior.—When a patent to a citizen for a part of the public lands has been regularly signed by the president, and sealed with the seal of the government, countersigned by the recorder and duly recorded, the right of its possession by the grantee is perfect and a writ of mandamus will lie to the secretary of the interior to compel its delivery. U. S. v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 407.

The petitioner applied for a writ of mandamus against the secretary of the interior to order the survey of Arsenal Island, which is situated in the Mississippi river, opposite the city of St. Louis. He represented that the island contained 230 acres, was ten feet above high water mark, and not subject to overflow; that the island was fast anchored and not subject to be changed by the action of the river; that the land was subject to pre-emption under the laws of the United States, and that he had inhabited and improved the land for the purpose of obtaining a title thereto. The application was rejected by the commissioner of the land office, and his action was sustained by the secretary of the interior on account of the drifting character of the island. Upon appeal to the supreme court of the United States from the supreme court of the district, on application for mandamus, it was held that there was no error in refusing a rule for mandamus. The court say: "It is settled by many decisions of this court that in matters which require judgment and consideration to be exercised by an executive officer of the government, or which are dependent upon his discretion, no rule for a mandamus to control his action will issue. It is only for ministerial acts, in the performance of which no exercise of judgment or discretion is required, that the rule will be granted. Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 499; U. S. v. Guthrie, 17 How. (U. S.) 284; U. S. v. Commr., 5 Wall. (U. S.) 563; Litchfield v. Register, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 577." United States v. Lamar, 116 U. S. 423.

Secretary of State.—Mandamus will not compel the secretary of state to pay over money withheld by him to cover the possible expenses of a claims commission, in case a foreign government shall not pay them. United States v. Bayard, 4 Mackey (D. C.) 310.

Secretary of the Treasury.—Where,

3. State Officers—(a) THE GOVERNOR of a State in the exercise of those powers and duties confided to his discretion by the constitution is entirely independent of the supervision of the judiciary and cannot be coerced or nowise controlled by the writ of mandamus.¹ As to ministerial duties enjoined on him by statute, which might have been devolved on another officer of the State and affecting any specific private right, he may be made in a suit brought by the United States, against a receiver of public money, a verdict and judgment is rendered for the defendant on a set-off, a mandamus does not lie to compel the secretary of the treasury to credit the defendant upon the books of the department with the amount of the verdict, and to pay the same. Reese v. Walker, 11 How (U. S.) 272.

The D. C. supreme court will not issue a writ of mandamus to compel the secretary of the treasury to draw his warrant for the payment of money, when the act involves the exercise of judgment or discretion, nor unless there has been a specific appropriation for the particular claim, and a direction by congress for its payment. U. S. v. Boutwell, 3 McArthur (D. C.) 172; see Mississippi v. Durham, 4 Mackey (D. C.) 235.

Commissioners of Patents.—Mandamus will issue to compel the commissioner of patents to give a certified copy of an abandoned application for a patent, remaining on file in the patent office, especially where it is made part of the specifications of an existing patent by reference thereto, where he has refused to give such copy upon a reasonable suggestion of necessity for its use as a document for evidence. U. S. v. Hall (D. C.), 16 Wash. L. Rep. 782.

Mandamus may issue to compel the commissioner of patents to prepare a patent, to countersign it, and to lay it before the secretary of the interior for his signature, the commissioner having decided that the relator was entitled to it. Butterworth v. U. S., 122 U. S. 50; U. S. v. Butterworth, 3 Mackey (D. C.) 229.

Postmaster General.—When the salary of a postmaster has been adjusted and fixed at the proper time, upon a sworn statement of the revenues of the office furnished by such postmaster, a mandamus will not issue to compel a subsequent postmaster general to readjust the salary so fixed by his predecessor. U. S. v. Key, 3 McArthur (D. C.) 328.

Collector of a Port.—The U. S. circuit court has power to compel, by mandamus, a collector of a port to grant a clearance which, without sufficient reason, he refuses to grant. Gilchrist v. Collector, 5 Hughes C. Ct. 1.

1. Board of Directors of Insane Asylum v. Wolfley, 22 Pac. Rep. (Ariz.) 383; Middleton v. Low, 30 Cal. 596; Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 189; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 432; Tennessee etc. R. Co. v. Moore, 36 Ala. 371; Low v. Towns Governor, 8 Ga. 360; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 9; People v. Bissell, 19 Ill. 229; People v. Yates, 40 Ill. 126; Chumasero v. Potts, 2 Mont. 242; Sutherland v. Governor, 29 Mich. 320; State v. Johnson, 28 La. An. 932; Com. v. Dennison, 24 How. (U. S.) 66; Houston etc. R. Co. v. Randolph, 24 Tex. 317; Jonesboro etc. Turnpike Co. v. Brown, 8 Bax. (Tenn.) 490; Mauran v. Smith, 8 R. I. 192; State v. Champ- lin, 2 Bail. (S. Car.) 220; State v. Fletcher, 39 Mo. 388; State v. Governor, 1 Dutch. (N. J.) 331; Chamberlin v. Sibley, 4 Minn. 309; State v. McGrath (Mo.), 3 S. W. Rep. 846; Magruder v. Swann, 25 Md. 173; Groome v. Gwinn, 43 Md. 572; Miles v. Bradford, 22 Md. 170. In re Dennett, 32 Me. 508; State v. Governor, 5 Ohio St. 528; State v. Moffitt, 5 Ohio 358; Cotten v. Ellis, 7 Jones (N. Car.) L. 545; Com. v. Wick- ersham, 90 Pa. St. 311; State v. Fletch- er, 39 Mo. 388; Vicksburg & Meridian R. Co. v. Lowry, 61 Miss. 102; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 76; Berryman v. Perkins, 55 Cal. 483; see Hosner v. DeYoung, 1 Tex. 764; see Re Cunningham, 14 Kan. 416; State v. Gruber, 2 Bail. (S. Car.) 220; State v. Kirkwood, 14 Iowa 162; Rice v. Austin, 19 Minn. 103; Board of Directors v. Wolfley (Ariz.), 22 Pac. Rep. 383.

Very considerable diversity of opinion exists upon the question of author- ity of a State court to issue a mandamus against the governor of the State. On the one hand the authority is denied, amenable to the compulsory process of the court by mandamus.¹ But where the act to be done requires the exercise of judgment and discretion in the governor, against whom mandamus is prayed it will be refused.² It must appear, however, that the matter was brought to the attention of the governor, or that his delay was not for the purpose of an investigation.³

(1) To Issue Commission.—Where the governor is required by law to issue a commission in accordance with the determination because the structure of the constitutional government of the State requires its three departments to be separate and independent of each other and it is argued that if the judicial can control either the legislative or the executive branches of the government, the balance of power intended to be preserved would be destroyed. On the other hand it is said that while the executive head of the government is independent of everything, except his liability to the people by impeachment, for all acts pertaining to his executive office, nevertheless he is subject to law, like every other individual in the State, with respect to all duties of a purely ministerial character as distinguished from those belonging to his executive office. While in a third class of the cases, it is said that all duties imposed upon the governor in his official capacity are necessarily executive, and not ministerial. State v. Governor, 5 Ohio St. 534.

In Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570, the court declined to issue a mandamus to compel the governor to issue a commission to a commissioner of public buildings.

Under the fourth section of the act of April 1st, 1876, "to provide for a supply of water for the University and for the asylum for the deaf, dumb, and blind," the power to approve or disapprove of the appraisal, made under the act, is vested in the governor, and his discretion in the matter cannot be controlled by mandamus. Berryman v. Perkins, 55 Cal. 483.

In State v. Towns Governor, 8 Ga. 360, the writ was denied on general principles, as well as on the facts of the case.

In re Dennett, etc., 32 Me. 508, the court refused a mandamus commanding the governor and council to declare the petitioner elected to the office of county commissioner, denying generally the authority of the court in the premises.

The governor cannot be compelled by mandamus to perform any act. Vicksburg R. Co. v. Lowry, 61 Miss. 102; 5. c., 48 Am. Rep. 76.

In Mauran v. Smith, 8 R. I. 192, the court declined to compel the governor, by mandamus, to convene a court-martial for the trial of the petitioner.

In Illinois, the supreme court has no control over the governor of the State to compel him to perform any public duty. People v. Bissell, 19 Ill. 229; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 11.

In People v. Yates, 40 Ill. 126, the writ was refused "for the purpose indicated," when asked for to compel the governor to deposit in the office of the secretary of state a bill passed by both houses of the legislature.

Mandamus will not issue from the supreme court to compel the governor of the State to call an election. People v. Cullom, 100 Ill. 472.

In Louisiana it has been held that the writ of mandamus will not lie to compel the chief executive officer of the State to perform any act coming within the range of his duties as governor. State v. Warmouth, 22 La. An. 1; 5. c., 2 Am. Rep. 712; State v. Warmouth, 24 La. An. 351.

In Pennsylvania, the courts have no power to issue writs of mandamus to State officers. Com. v. Wickersham, 90 Pa. St. 311.

1. Miles v. Bradford, 22 Md. 170; Cotten v. Ellis, 7 Jones (N. Ca.) 545; Tennessee etc. R. Co. v. Moore, 36 Ala. 371; State v. Chase, 5 Ohio St. 528; Magruder v. Swann, 25 Md. 173; Groome v. Gwinn, 43 Md. 572; Midd. ton v. Lowe, 30 Cal. 596; Chumas v. Potts, 2 Mont. 242; Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 189; Gray v. State, 72 Ind. 567; Low v. Towns Governor, Ga. 360; State v. Blasdel, 4 Nev. 241; State v. Adams, 19 Nev. 370; State v. Chase, 5 Ohio St. 528.

2. Miles v. Bradford, 22 Md. 170.

3. Martin v. Ingham, 38 Kan. 641; State v. Adams, 19 Nev. 370.

of the board of county canvassers, the court will not award a mandamus directing a commission to be issued in conflict with such determination.¹

(2) To Declare Person Elected.—The court has no authority by mandamus to compel the governor and council to declare the relator elected to an office under a statute requiring such officers to open and compare the votes returned upon the election.²

(3) To Deposit Bill with Secretary of State.—Mandamus will not lie to compel a governor to deposit in the office of the secretary of State a bill which was passed by the general assembly and placed in the hands of the governor for his consideration, and which, it is alleged, has not been returned to the proper house within the time limited by the constitution with his objections.³

4. State Officers Generally.—State officers inferior to the governor have many duties which courts can compel them to perform.⁴ Mandamus will lie to compel the secretary to audit a claim or perform a duty imposed by law.⁵ The writ commanding the performance of such duty will issue against the present incumbent of that office, although the proceedings were commenced against his predecessor.⁶

1. State v. Governor, 25 N. J. L. 331; State v. Governor, 39 Mo. 388; Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; State v. Fletcher, 1 Dutch. (N. J.) 331; State v. Drew, 17 Fla. 67.

Mandamus will not issue although it appear affirmatively that the decision of the board of county canvassers was based upon illegal evidence and is contrary to the truth of the case. State v. Governor, 25 N. J. L. 331.

2. In re Dennett, 32 Me. 508.

3. People v. Yates, 40 Ill. 127.

4. Ayers v. State Auditors, 42 Mich. 422; State v. Ryan, 2 Mo. App. 303.

Register of Deeds.—Mandamus does not lie to compel a register of deeds to record a deed delivered to him in escrow, and withheld by the grantor's order. People v. Curtis, 41 Mich. 723.

5. State v. Gates, 22 Wis. 210; State v. Barker, 4 Can. 379; U. S. v. Bayard, 17 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. (D. C.) 485; State v. Secretary of State, 33 Mo. 293. See Burkhart v. Reed (Idaho), 22 Pac. Rep. 1; Isle Royale Land Corporation v. Secretary of State, 76 Mich. 162. Compare State v. Doyle, 38 Wis. 92.

In mandamus proceedings against a secretary of state, to compel him to audit and allow a claim, the peremptory writ will issue against his successor, the duty being a continuing one. State v. Warner, 55 Wis. 271.

14 C. of L.—10

Mandamus will not lie to the secretary of state to compel him to issue patents to State lands; that is the duty of the governor. Crane v. Secretary of State, 51 Mich. 195.

The secretary of state has no authority to issue patents for school lands, and therefore mandamus does not lie to compel him to do it. State v. Harvey, 11 Wis. 33.

Mandamus will not issue to compel the secretary of state to count up votes where the office in question is already filled by a person holding by color of right by virtue of a commission issued to him under the election. State v. Rodman, 43 Mo. 256.

Neither will mandamus lie on the application of the president of the council of a session of the legislature to compel the secretary of the territory to record a report of such president as part of the proceedings of the session, or to expunge from the records of such proceedings part of a former report made by the clerk. BERRY, J., dissenting. Clough v. Curtis (Idaho), 22 Pac. Rep. 8.

6. State v. Gates, 22 Wis. 210; State v. Warner, 55 Wis. 271.

Generally, proceedings by mandamus against a fiscal officer—in this case a county treasurer—to require him to pay a demand are not defeated by

Mandamus will lie to compel a secretary of state to deliver a commission to which a party is entitled;¹ to give a certificate of election;² to affix his official signature to the commission of a sheriff by the governor;³ and to furnish a copy of the laws to the person holding the contract to print the same, notwithstanding the existence of a later law providing for the printing thereof by another party.⁴

(a) STATE REPRESENTATIVES.—The house of representatives in a State legislature have no such jurisdiction over the counting of the votes for members as will oust the jurisdiction of the common law courts in proceedings by mandamus against the canvassers. The member elected has a right to receive the certificate of election, and if it is refused him and given to another he may call upon the courts for redress by mandamus.⁵

(b) COMMISSIONERS.—Mandamus lies to compel a land commissioner to perform the duty of making and certifying a transcript of proceedings before him required for the purposes of an appeal.⁶ But a mandamus to compel the commissioner of the general land office to give title to public land will not be granted where it appears that there are other claimants who are not parties to the proceeding, notwithstanding that their claims are alleged in the petition to be void.⁷

Mandamus is not allowable to compel the commissioner of the general land office to issue railroad certificates.⁸

(c) TITLE TO OFFICE.—While the writ of mandamus will not be awarded to try a disputed right or title to an office,⁹ it is an appropriate remedy to compel the restoration of a rightful incumbent when wrongfully deprived of the enjoyment of official privileges by removal or suspension.¹⁰

the person against whom they were commenced going out of office. People v. Treasurer of Rexford, 37 Mich. 351.

1. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137.

2. State v. Havne, 8 S. Car. 367; State v. Lawrence, 3 Kan. 95.

3. State v. Wrotnowski, 17 La. An. 156.

4. State v. Barker, 4 Kan. 379.

5. People v. Hilliard, 29 Ill. 413.

When neither the speaker of the house of delegates, nor the joint assembly of both houses of the legislature, convened under section 3 of article 7 of the constitution of West Virginia for the purpose of opening and publishing the returns of the election for the office of governor, does in fact open and publish the returns in respect to said office, or declare any person elected to that office, this court cannot by mandamus adjudge the person who appears from the returns certified to the speaker of the house to have received the highest number of votes for that office to be the governor, and compel the person who was the governor during the preceding term to deliver the office and its insignia to him. Goff v. Wilson (W. Va.), 9 S. E. Rep. 26.

6. State v. Ryan, 2 Mo. App. 303.

7. Tabor v. Commrs., 29 Tex. 508.

8. Galveston etc. R. Co. v. Gross, 47 Tex. 428. See Sullivan v. Shanklin, 63 Cal. 247; Smith v. Power, 2 Tex. 57.

9. Ex parte Lusk, 82 Ala. 519; State v. Johnson, 29 La. An. 399; Matter of Gardner, 68 N. Y. 467. See Anderson v. Colson, 1 Neb. 172; State v. Falconer, 44 Ala. 696; State v. Jaynes, 19 Neb. 161.

Quo warranto, not mandamus, is the method of trying the title of an officer to his office. People v. Stevens, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 616; Bonner v. State, 7 Ga. 473; People v. Detroit, 18 Mich. 338; People v. Corporation, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) Cas. 79.

10. Ex parte Lusk, 82 Ala. 519;

(d) BOOKS, PAPERS, MUNIMENTS, ETC.—Mandamus lies by an officer to compel the delivery by his predecessor of the records, books and papers of the office, and to compel the payment of money which the officer is required by law to apply to public purposes, the needs of which may require the prompt application of the money.¹ So it lies to compel the State comptroller to allow the district attorney to inspect and make copies or abstracts or computations therefrom of all books, papers, statements and accounts on file or of record, in his office, relating to the proceeds of mines.²

5. State Boards.—Where the duties imposed upon State boards are deliberative and discretionary, mandamus will not lie.³ State boards can be directed to act, but not how to act, in a matter as to which they have the right to exercise their judgment; and where they are vested with power to determine a question of fact the duty is judicial, and however erroneous their decision may be, they cannot be compelled by mandamus to alter their determination.⁴

6. Auditing Officers.—Mandamus may be resorted to to compel auditing officers to do an act which is sought to be enforced in all cases where the officers have no discretion and where he is under an obligation to do the specific act and there is no adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law.⁵

See O'Donnel v. Dusman, 39 N. J. L. 677; State v. Board of Health (N. J.), 8 Atl. Rep. 509; Chew v. Justices, 2 Va. Cas. 208; Amory v. Justices, 2 Va. Cas. 523; Metsker v. Neally (Kan.), 21 Pac. Rep. 206; State v. Common Council, 9 Wis. 254; Den. v. Judges, 3 Hen. & M. (Va.) 1.

1. Frisbie v. Trustees, 78 Ind. 269; People v. Kilduff, 15 Ill. 492; People v. Head, 25 Ill. 287; Territory v. Shearer, 2 Dak. 332; State v. Johnson, 29 La. An. 399; Runion v. Latimer, 6 Rich., N. S. 126; Burr v. Norton, 25 Con. 103; State v. Layton, 4 Dutch. (N. J.) 244; Atherton v. Sherwood, 15 Minn. 221; Crowell v. Lambert, 10 Minn. 369; Felts v. Mayor, 2 Head (Tenn.) 650; King v. Owen, 5 Mod. Rep. 314; Rex v. Clapham, 1 Wils. 305; King v. Ingram, 1 Black W. 50. See Bonner v. State, 7 Ga. 473; Nelson v. Edwards, 55 Tex. 389; Metsker v. Neally (Kan.), 21 Pac. Rep. 206; Hooten v. McKinney, 5 Nev. 194; State v. Jumel, 32 La. An. 60; State v. Secretary of State, 32 La. An. 579.

If the auditor of public accounts declines to deliver to the commissioner copies of the land and property books for his district, the court will compel him by mandamus. Peters v. Auditor, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 368.

2. State v. Hobart, 12 Nev. 408.

3. People v. Illinois Dental Examiners, 110 Ill. 180; State v. Gregory, 83 Mo. 123; Shober v. Cochrane, 53 Md. 544; People v. State Prison, 4 Mich. 187; People v. Canal Board, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 432; State v. Verner, 30 S. Car. 713.

4. Hoole v. Kinkead, 16 Nev. 217; State v. Scott, 17 Neb. 686; Shober v. Cochrane, 53 Md. 544; State v. Gregory, 83 Mo. 123.

Mandamus lies to compel the board of State auditors to perform mandatory duties imposed on them by the legislature outside of the exclusive powers vested in them by the constitution. Ayers v. State Auditors, 42 Mich. 422.

Board of Public Lands.—Where a mandamus is sought to compel the board of public lands and buildings to accept the highest bid for the leasing of certain school lands, the writ will be denied unless it is clear that there is an abuse of discretion, and that the sum bid is the full rental value of the lands. State v. Scott, 17 Neb. 686.

5. Lachance v. Auditor General (Mich.), 43 N. W. Rep. 1005; McDou-

So where the duty of passing upon and determining the validity of claims against a State is entrusted by law to the discretion of the officer, mandamus will not lie to compel the auditor to allow a claim.¹ But if the auditor refuses to act upon a claim properly presented to him the court will compel him to do so.²

gall v. Bell, 4 Cal. 177; Oliver v. Board of Education (La.), 4 So. Rep. 166; State v. Anderson (N. J.), 18 Atl. Rep. 584; Lindsey v. Auditor, 3 Bush (Ky.) 231. See People v. Auditor General, 17 Mich. 161; McCulloch v. Stone, 64 Miss. 378; Peters v. Massey, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 368; People v. State Auditors' Board, 42 Mich. 422; Oliver v. Board of Liquidation, 40 La. An. 321; Brown v. U. S., 6 Ct. of Cl. 171; Weston v. Dane, 51 Me. 461; State v. Hobart, 12 Nev. 408; People v. Auditor General, 36 Mich. 271; Eichelberger v. Sifford, 27 Md. 320; State v. Anderson (N. J.), 18 Atl. Rep. 584; Ex parte Peckett, 24 Ala. 91; Justices of Inferior Court v. Felder, 23 Ga. 212; McDougal v. Roman, 2 Cal. 80.

A mandamus may issue to compel the controller of state to account to a member of the legislature for the daily compensation fixed by law. Fowler v. Pierce, 2 Cal. 165.

In Hull v. Supervisors of Oneida, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 259, a mandamus was applied for to compel the supervisors of Oneida to audit and allow a bill for a surgical operation on a transient pauper; and it was shown in answer to the rule that the supervisors had acted on the subject and audited the bill, but at a very small amount; and the court denied the application on the ground that the board of supervisors were endowed with a discretion by statute which the court could not control. Fish v. Weatherwax, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 217.

Under the provisions of Mansf. Dig. Ark., § 5775, the money paid to the county treasurer for redemption of lands sold for taxes, must be in coin or treasury notes of the United States, made a legal tender by the acts of congress; and, where a county treasurer refuses to pay over to the purchaser the full amount in such money, but tenders instead the amount, partly in money and partly in county script or warrants, he may, by mandamus, be compelled to make full payment in money. Murphy v. Smith, 49 Ark. 37.

Mandamus lies to the postmaster requiring him to give a credit on his books to certain contractors; which credit had been certified by the solicitor of the treasury to be due to the contractors pursuant to an act of congress; and the postmaster general had been ordered by the same act to give the credit, but refused compliance. Kendall v. U. S., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 524.

Payment of Bonds.—Mandamus will not lie to compel the State treasurer to pay over the principal and interest of State bonds without a special act of legislature authorizing and commanding him to pay. State v. Bishop, 45 Mo. 504.

To Levy Tax.—Mandamus will not lie to direct a levy of a tax for the purpose of redeeming bills of credit issued in contravention of the constitution. State v. Comptroller General, 4 S. Car. 185. See State v. County Judge, 12 Iowa 237; State v. Harris, 17 Ohio St. 608.

1. Morton v. Comptroller General, 4 S. Car. 430; People v. Auditor etc., 2 Col. 97; Auditorial Board v. Arles, 15 Tex. 72; Towle v. State, 3 Fla. 202; Auditorial Board v. Hendrick, 20 Tex. 60; State v. Doyle, 38 Wis. 92; People v. Equitable Ins. Co., 103 N. Y. 635; State v. Verner (S. Car.), 9 S. E. Rep. 113; State v. Bruce, 1 Treadw. Const. (S. Car.) 165; Grier v. Shackelford, 2 Treadw. Const. (S. Car.) 642; State v. Applegate (N. J.), 16 Atl. Rep. 59; Green v. Purnell, 12 Md. 329. Ex parte Lynch, 16 S. Car. 32; Sanilac County v. Alpin (Mich.), 36 N. W. Rep. 794; People v. Adam, 3 Mich. 427; State v. Braden (Minn.), 41 N. W. Rep. 817.

A comptroller cannot be required to draw his warrant to pay a void judgment of costs against the State. Morgan v. Pickard, 86 Tenn. 208; see State v. Nolan, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 663.

In Michigan, the supreme court has no jurisdiction, by mandamus, to coerce or direct the action of the board of State auditors, as they are made an independent tribunal by the constitution of the State. People v. Board of State Auditors, 32 Mich. 191.

2. People v. Auditor etc., 2 Colo. 97; People v. Chapin, 105 N. Y. 309; Johnson v. Reynolds, 44 Ala. 586; McKinney v. Reynolds, 44 Ala. 660.

Auditing officers will be required by mandamus to make their audit according to law. If the compensation is fixed by statute or by agreement they will be required to audit the compensation so fixed. If they have already audited an account at a less sum than that fixed by statute or agreement, they will be required to set aside the audit already made, and to re-audit according to law.¹

(a) ISSUING WARRANT FOR SALARY, ETC.—The court may, by writ of mandamus, compel the auditor of State to issue his warrant on the treasurer of State for a sum due a public officer on his salary, it being an official duty involving no exercise of discretion by an executive officer of the State.² And it is no objection that such salary has already been paid to a third person, now out of office, who claimed the same as superintendent

In this case the court said: "We think the comptroller had legal authority to receive an act upon the proofs offered, and that they did constitute legal evidence. He was clearly authorized to decide the question of the validity or invalidity of the tax sales, at least as between the State and the purchaser, and for the purpose of determining whether the purchaser was entitled to have the purchase money paid by him refunded out of the State treasury. This was in the nature of a judicial function conferred upon him by law. It is a general principle that where a power is given by statute, everything necessary to make it effectual, or requisite to attain its end is implied. 1 Kent's Com., 464; Stief v. Hart, 1 N. Y. 20, 30.

To Pay Sheriff's Fees.—The comptroller of the State of Florida refused to pay a sheriff certain fees, to which he was entitled, and the sheriff petitioned for a mandamus. It appeared that it was the duty of the comptroller to audit, adjust and settle the accounts of all officers, and also to decide upon the justice and legality of claims against or by the State. Held, that as his office was not purely ministerial, but discretionary, the comptroller could not be controlled by the court in the exercise of his judgment and discretion, and that the relief of the sheriff was by memorial to the general assembly of the State. Towle v. State, 3 Fla. 202.

Evidence.—Where a person in the employ of the State presented his claim for services to the board of examiners, which was allowed by them, but he failed to have such claim audited by the controller, and the latter, for that reason, refused to issue his warrant on the treasury for the amount, held, in an application for a mandamus to compel the controller to issue his warrant on the treasury for the amount, that it was necessary for the relator to show a presentation of the claim for allowance to the controller. State v. Doron, 5 Nev. 399.

1. People v. Elmira Auditors, 82 N. Y. 80; People v. Police Board, 75 N. Y. 38; People v. Green, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 390; People v. Supervisors, 40 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 54; People v. Supervisors, 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 452; State v. Hastings, 15 Wis. 83; Fowler v. Peirce, 2 Cal. 165; McCauley v. Brooks, 16 Cal. 11; Swann v. Buck, 40 Miss. 268; 5 Wait's Pr. 561-6.

In Osborn v. Clark, 1 Ariz. 397, it was held that if a State auditor has erred in an audit, his error cannot be remedied by mandamus.

2. Bryan v. Cattell, 15 Iowa 538; Turner v. Meloney, 13 Cal. 621; State v. Bordelon, 6 La. An. 68; Danley v. Whitely, 14 Ark. 687; State v. Gamble, 13 Fla. 9; State v. Secretary of State, 33 Mo. 293; People v. Smith, 43 Ill. 219; People v. Secretary of State, 58 Ill. 90; Auditor v. Haycraft, 14 Bush. (Ky.) 284; People v. Schuyler, 79 N. Y. 189; Smith v. Strobach, 50 Ala. 462; Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488; Nichols v. Comptroller, 4 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 154; State Bank v. Hastings, 15 Wis. 75; Ryan v. Hoffman, 26 Ohio St. 109; Smith v. Commrs., 9 Ohio 26; State v. Burgoyne, 7 Ohio St. 153; Comms. v. Hunt, 33 Ohio St. 169; State v. Board of Education, 35 Ohio St. 368; State v. Wilson, 17 Wis. 687, 694; State v.

de facto and that hence the right to the office is involved.¹ So it will lie to compel payment of a claim on a special fund where the failure to pay is without excuse, and the proceeding without appeal.² But where a claim against the State is payable only out of a specific appropriation, which has been exhausted, the court cannot, by mandate, order the auditor to issue a warrant for the payment of the claim, or the treasurer to pay it.³ If there is no appropriation to pay it and the claim is one recognized by law he should audit and settle it and issue to the claimant a certificate of the amount under his official seal if demanded.⁴

In cases where the State does not recognize a liability mandamus will not issue to compel the State treasurer to pay.⁵ So it will not issue to compel the State auditor to audit a claim where an adequate remedy is afforded by appeal.⁶

(b) MATERIALS FURNISHED THE STATE UNDER CONTRACT.—Where it is the duty of a State treasurer to countersign and pay a warrant for amount due for materials received by the State under a contract he may be compelled to perform the duty by mandamus.⁷

(c) AWARDED PUBLIC CONTRACTS.—The duties of officers entrusted with the letting of contracts for public work to the lowest responsible bidder are not of a strictly ministerial nature, but involve the exercise of such a degree of official discretion as to place them beyond the control of the courts by mandamus.⁸

Auditor Delaware Co., 39 Ind. 272; Fowler v. Pierce, 2 Cal. 165; State v. Starling, 13 S. Car. 262; People v. Board of Police, 75 N. Y. 38; State v. Clinton, 28 La. An. 47; State v. Jumel, 30 La. An. 339, 861.

1. Williams v. Clayton (Utah), 21 Pac. Rep. 398.

2. State v. Bollinger County, 48 Mo. 475.

3. State v. Porter, 89 Ind. 260; see Pritchard v. Woodruff, 36 Ark. 196.

Under Gantt's Ark. Dig., § 2779, providing that "in all cases where the law recognizes a claim for money against the State, and no appropriation shall be made by law to pay the same, the auditor shall audit and settle such claim." Held, that the auditor could be compelled by mandamus to audit and settle a claim for legal services rendered in enforcing the payment of overdue taxes for which claim no appropriation had been made. Files v. State, 42 Ark. 233.

4. Files v. State, 42 Ark. 233; State v. Clinton, 28 La. An. 47; State v. Clinton, 28 La. An. 72; State v. Dubuclet, 28 La. An. 85; Buffington v. Clinton, 28 La. An. 132; see Livingston v.

McCarthy (Kan.), 20 Pac. Rep. 478. A mandamus will not lie to compel the comptroller of New York to pay a claim for which no appropriation has been made by law. People v. Haws, 23 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 107; s. c., 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 440; People v. Connolly, 2 Abb. Pr., N. S. 315; People v. Glowacki, 2 s. c., (N. Y.) 436; People v. Green, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 1; s. c., 1 S. C. (N. Y.) 90.

5. Buster v. Butler, 60 Mich. 40.

6. State v. Babcock, 22 Neb. 38.

7. People v. Secretary of State, 58 Ill. 90. A petition for a writ of mandamus against the auditor to compel him to issue his warrant upon the treasurer in favor of the plaintiff for a sum of money due the plaintiff from the State, for work done and materials furnished in repairing public property, under a contract with the superintendent of public property, is not demurrable because it does not show that the repairs were made by the plaintiff under a written contract, approved by the governor. Haly v. Auditor, 4 Bush (Ky.) 490.

8. State v. McGrath, 91 Mo. 386; State v. Dixon Co. (Neb.), 37 N. W.

Nor can a bidder for work, on mandamus, secure the award to himself simply by showing defects in the successful competitor's bid.¹

(d) CONVEYING TITLE.—An action of mandamus will lie to compel the auditor to convey to any one offering to comply with the requirements of the law such title as the State may have to lands acquired under a tax sale, whether such sale, in the opinion of the auditor, be valid or not. The auditor has no authority to determine as a matter of law the validity of a tax sale, except that he may, with the advice of the attorney general, strike from his lists such lands as, in the opinion of the attorney general, are held by the State by invalid titles. And such action is maintainable by the party seeking the conveyance of the auditor.²

(e) AFFIXING SEAL TO WARRANT.—Where the clerk of a board of auditors neglects to place the seal to a warrant he may be compelled by mandamus to affix the seal and a remedy at law cannot be successfully urged against the right to maintain such a proceeding.³

(f) DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS.—The writ of mandamus cannot be invoked by a creditor of the State to compel the State treasurer to make a certain distribution of funds, not yet in his hands, as they may be received by him.⁴

(g) PAYMENT OF STATE TAXES.—The State taxes upon the capital stock of corporations are payable directly to the State treasurer by the proper officer of the corporation, and their payment may be enforced by a writ of mandamus at the instance of the State.⁵ It can properly issue against the State treasurer only when he has money and illegally withholds it from one entitled to be paid.⁶

Rep. 936; Hoole v. Kinkead, 16 Nev. 217; State v. Kendall, 15 Neb. 262; see Detroit Free Press Co. v. Auditors, 47 Mich. 135; State v. York County Supervisors, 17 Neb. 643; People v. Board of Education, 5 N. Y. Supp. 392.

The only restriction upon a contracting board was that when they contracted it should be with the lowest bidder. Held, that mandamus did not lie for the lowest bidder to compel the board to contract with him, but that they might reject his bids as being deceptive and fraudulent and disadvantageous to the State. People v. Contracting Board, 33 N. Y. 382.

Mass. Pub. St., ch. 22, § 22, does not require county commissioners to accept the lowest proposal for the construction of public works. Mandamus, therefore, will not issue to compel them to. Mayo v. Hampden County Commrs., 141 Mass. 74.

Mandamus to compel commissioners of public buildings to accept the highest bid for leasing school lands, will be refused unless it appears that the bid was the full rental value. State v. Scott, 17 Neb. 686.

1. State v. Board of Education, 42 Ohio St. 374.

2. McCulloch v. Stone, 64 Miss. 378.

And if to such action of mandamus the auditor set up the defence that he has already conveyed the title of the State to the lands in question to another, the supreme court of Mississippi will determine whether such conveyance be a valid one, but will not pass upon the validity of the title under which the State held. McCullough v. Stone, 64 Miss. 378.

3. Prescott v. Gonser, 34 Iowa 175.

4. State v. Dubuclet, 24 La. An. 16.

5. Barney v. State, 42 Md. 480.

6. State v. Dubuclet, 26 La. An. 127.

VII. PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.—When a statute imposes a specific duty upon a private corporation, either in express terms or by a fair and reasonable implication, and there is no other specific and adequate remedy, the writ of mandamus may be awarded to compel the performance of the duty.¹

The court will not interfere with the internal regulation of private corporations in the enforcement of their rules unless under very peculiar circumstances of substantial wrong; if members have any grievance arising therefrom, for which they are entitled to redress, they can proceed by action.² So mandamus will not usually lie to settle the controversies of private corporations where the facts are not important on public grounds, or would not justify the interference of the court if corporate authority did not exist.³

1. People v. State Ins. Co., 19 Mich. 392; State v. Board of Trustees, 4 Nev. 400; State v. Wright, 10 Nev. 167; Fireman's Ins. Co. v. Mayor of Baltimore, 23 Md. 297; Mount Moriah Cemetery Assoc. v. Com., 81 Pa. St. 235; People v. Cummings, 72 N. Y. 433; Norris v. Irish Land Co., 8 Ellis & B. 512; Price v. Riverside etc. Co., 56 Cal. 431; Insurance Co. v. Baltimore, 23 Md. 296; People v. Saratoga etc. R. Co., 7 West. L. J. 155; s. c., 2 Am. L. J. 158; People v. Manhattan Gas Light Co., 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 136; s. c., 30 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 87; Freon v. Carriage Co., 42 Ohio St. 30; s. c., 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 101; Canal etc. Commrs. v. Willamette Transp. etc. Co., 6 Oreg. 219; Queen v. Hull & Selby R. Co., 6 Ad. & E., N. S. 70.

The Fireman's Insurance Company, a joint stock corporation of the city of Baltimore, is bound by the express terms of the statute to furnish to the appeal tax court the list of stockholders, with their places of residence, and amount of stock held by each, and having failed or refused so to do, the appropriate remedy to enforce a compliance with the obligation so imposed, was by the writ of mandamus. Fireman's Ins. Co. v. Baltimore, 23 Md. 296.

The authorities of a hospital will be compelled by mandamus, to correct a certificate of death filed with the board of health; such correction being necessary to enable the widow of the deceased to obtain a legacy payable in a foreign country. People v. German Hospital, 8 Abb. (N. Y.) N. Cas. 332.

A failure on the part of the first board of trustees of a mining company for a period of nearly two months after the expiration of the first six months of its organization, to call and provide for a meeting of the stockholders for the purpose of electing their successors, shows a neglect and failure on the part of the trustees to do their duty, and mandamus will issue against them. State v. Board of Trustees, 4 Nev. 400. 2. Hargnell v. Lafayette Benevolent Society, 47 Mich. 648; Morton v. Timken, 48 N. J. L. 87.

Redress for injuries received from private corporations organized for joint or partnership undertakings, should be sought at common law, not through mandamus proceedings. Lamphere v. Grand Lodge of United Workmen, 47 Mich. 429.

Mandamus does not lie to compel a mutual benefit insurance company to levy an assessment to pay the amount falling due upon the death of a member; the proper course is to bring suit upon the undertaking of the company. Bates v. Detroit Mutual etc. Assoc., 47 Mich. 646.

Mandamus does not lie to compel a private corporation to pay dividends which it has declared. Van Norman v. Central Car Co., 41 Mich. 166.

Breach of Contract of Insurance.—If a mutual benefit association fails to pay the amount due upon the death of a member whom it has agreed to insure to the extent of a certain sum for each certificate in force, the remedy is by an action for breach of contract, especially if the liability is disputed; and not by mandamus to compel the company to assess its members in order to make up the amount due. Burland v. Northwestern Mutual Benefit Assoc., 47 Mich. 424.

3. Lamphere v. Grand Lodge of United Workmen, 47 Mich. 429.

1. Affixing Seal.—A corporation or its officers may be compelled by mandamus to affix the corporate seal to its official action.¹

2. Religious Corporations.—Where property is conveyed to a church society to be used in a certain manner, and subject to a certain trust, courts of equity will, on the application of any party interested, compel the execution of that trust and restrain any diversion from such use.²

A writ of mandamus is the proper remedy to put a minister of any religious sect in possession of the pulpit to which he is entitled, notwithstanding such pulpit is occupied by another person.³ But the courts will not interfere to compel an individual to attend worship at any place, to remain connected with any church organization, nor to receive anyone as his pastor.⁴ So the secular courts have no power by mandamus to reinstate a member expelled from membership by the church after conviction in accordance with its rules and discipline.⁵

3. Reinstatement of Member.—A writ of mandamus will not lie to compel a corporation to reinstate a member who has been regularly tried and expelled therefrom.⁶ But where the proceedings were not in accordance with the by-laws of the society a writ of

1. Rex v. Windham, Cowp. 377; King v. University of Cambridge, 1 Black W. 547; Rex v. Vice Chancellor of Cambridge, Burr. 1647; King v. Bland, 7 Mod. Rep. 355; Queen v. Kendall, 1 Ad. & E., N. S. 366.

The keeper of the common seal of a university may be compelled to affix the seal to the diploma or instrument appointing one to an office in the university to which he has been duly elected. Rex v. Vice Chancellor of Cambridge, Burr. 1647.

2. Feizel v. First German Soc. M. E. Church, 9 Kan. 592.

Subscriptions to a denominational church building fund were induced by a stipulation in the subscription papers that the building should be used by other denominations. Held, that mandate would not issue to enforce the stipulation. State v. Salem Church Trustees, 114 Ind. 389.

3. People v. Steele, 2 Barb. (N.Y.) 398.

Every endowed minister, of any sect or denomination of Christians, who has been wrongfully dispossessed of his pulpit, is entitled to the writ of mandamus to be restored to his function, and temporal rights with which it is endowed. Runkel v. Winemiller, 4 Har. & M. (Md.) 429. Aliter, if the office is not allowed; Runkel v. Winemiller, 4 Har. & M. (Md.) 429. But see People v. Dikeman, 7 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 124.

4. Feizel v. First German Soc. M. E. Church, 9 Kan. 592.

5. People v. German etc. Church, 63 N. Y. 103.

6. Sale v. First Reg. Baptist Church 62 Iowa 26; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 169; Society for the Visitation of the Sick v. Com., 52 Pa. St. 125; People v. Board of Trade, 80 Ill. 134; State v. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, 47 Wis. 670; Burt v. Grand Lodge of Masons, 44 Mich. 208; Com. v. Pike Beneficial Soc., 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 247; Black etc. Soc. v. Vandyke, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 309; Tribe v. Murbach, 13 Md. 91; Leech v. Harris, 2 Brews. (Pa.) 571; State v. Adams, 44 Mo. 570; Riddell v. Harmony Fire Co., 8 Phila. (Pa.) 310; Harmstead v. Washington Fire Co., 8 Phila. (Pa.) 331; People v. Board of Trade, 80 Ill. 134; Schmidt v. Abraham Lincoln Lodge, 84 Ky. 490; State v. Odd Fellows Grand Lodge, 8 Mo. App. 148; Barrows v. Mass. Medical Society, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 402.

The Massachusetts Medical Society having expelled a member for alleged gross immorality, the court declined to issue a mandamus to compel his restoration, there being no sufficient proof of haste, or prejudice against such member, or that the society came to a wrong decision, or acted in violation of his rights. Barrows v. Mass. Medical Soc., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 402.

mandamus will lie against the officers and society to compel reinstatement of expelled member.¹

4. Admission to Society.—A mandamus will lie to compel the admission of a duly qualified applicant to a society; the right of

1. Sperry's Appeal, 116 Pa. St. 391; Doyle v. New York etc. Society, 6 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 85; 3 Hun 360; Roehlen v. Mechanics' Aid Soc., 22 Mich. 86; Green v. African M. E. Soc., 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 254; Evans v. Philadelphia Club, 50 Pa. St. 107; Hibernia Fire Engine Co. v. Com., 93 Pa. St. 264; State v. Georgia Medical Society, 33 Ga. 608; Hussey v. Gallagher, 61 Ga. 86; Sibley v. Carteret Club of Elizabeth, 40 N. J. L. 295; State v. Lusitanian Portuguese Soc., 15 La. An. 73; Union Church of Africans v. Saunders, 1 Houst. (Del.) 100; People v. Albany Medical College, 10 Abb. (N. Y.) N. Cas. 122; Medical etc. Society v. Weatherly, 75 Ala. 248; s. c., Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 26; Fuller v. Plainfield Academic School, 6 Conn. 532; People v. Medical Society, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 570; People v. Board of Trade, 45 Ill. 112; People v. Mechanics' Aid Society, 22 Mich. 86; Delacey v. Nuese River Nav. Co., 1 Hawks (N. Car.) 274. But see Cook v. College of Physicians, 9 Bush (Ky.) 542.

So, where the by-laws required notice to members to be tried, and this was omitted, it was held that members could compel reinstatement by mandamus. Com. v. German Society, 15 Pa. St. 251; Delacey v. Nuese River Nav. Co., 1 Hawks (N. Car.) 274; Com. v. Pennsylvania Beneficial Institution, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 141; Washington Ben. Society v. Bacher, 20 Pa. St. 425.

Mandamus will issue to restore to membership in an incorporated society one suspended for a failure to pay a penalty not authorized by the constitution or by-laws. Erd v. Bavarian Nat. A. & L. Assoc. (Mich.), 11 West. 171, 34 N. W. 555.

But where relator, without his knowledge, was expelled from membership in a society, and after such expulsion brought a civil action to recover damages for the loss of his rights and privileges as a member, occasioned by such expulsion, in which he recovered verdict and judgment, it was held that the bringing of such action is a waiver of his right to a mandamus to restore him to his rights and privileges of membership. State v. Slavonska, 28 Ohio St. 665.

A member of a benevolent association, whose constitution and by-laws contain no definition of offences against the society, or provisions for imposing penalties, cannot be suspended for non-payment of a fine imposed by the society, and a writ of mandamus will lie to restore him to membership. Erd v. Bavarian Nat. Aid & Relief Assoc., 67 Mich. 233.

In an application for a rule to show cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue to a literary corporation, commanding it to restore an expelled member to the privileges of membership, where it appeared that the proceedings of the corporation, which first partially, and then wholly, disfranchised the applicant, were irregular, and where certain papers written by the applicant, which were the grounds of his disfranchisement, were not before the court, the rule prayed for was made absolute; but, in order to enable the corporation to set out, in its return to the writ, specifically, the grounds of its action, the rule was, that the writ should issue in the alternative, either to restore the applicant to his rights of membership, or to show good cause to the contrary. Sleeper v. Franklin Lyceum, 7 R. I. 523.

In Roehlen v. Mechanics' Aid Society, 22 Mich. 86, it was held that, where a by-law made uttering slanderous words against the society an expellable offence, by slanderous words must be meant something similar to the legal signification of slander, and hence that a return to a writ of mandamus to compel the reinstatement of a member expelled under the by-law, which did not set out the words alleged to be slanderous, was bad. Roehlen v. Mechanics' Aid Society, 22 Mich. 86. See also Green v. African M. E. Soc., 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 254.

An incorporated lodge of Odd Fellows has the right, through its proper officers, and in accordance with its established rules, to determine who are not members thereof, and the courts will leave that question to be determined by the lodge itself, through the judicial action of its proper officers, regardless of whether the charter of the lodge in which membership is claimed gives, in express terms, such power to immediate expulsion should be clear and unquestioned to justify the rejection of the claim.¹

5. Election of Officers.—Mandamus is the proper remedy to issue at the instance of a stockholder of a private (as well as a public) corporation to compel the officers to hold an election for new officers.²

6. Corporation Books and Records.—Mandamus will lie upon the petition of a private corporation to compel the surrender to its lawful officers of books and papers pertaining to their offices and held by persons actually but unlawfully exercising the functions of those offices under a claim of right.³

these officers. State v. Odd Fellows Grand Lodge, 8 Mo. App. 148.

A fellow of King's College, Cambridge, had been expelled the college and deprived of his fellowship, by the provost and fellows, upon a charge of fraud and perjury, the proceedings being conducted partly in the absence of the accused, and the charge being alone supported by a comparison of his letters with an answer which he had filed in a suit in chancery. Upon appeal to the visitor, the decision of the provost and fellows was affirmed. Held, that the court had no power to grant a mandamus to restore to the fellowship. Buller, ex parte, 30 Eng. Law and Eq. 356. See Dr. Widdrington's Case, 1 Lev. Part 123; s. c., sub nom. Dr. Witherington's Case, 1 Keb. 2; Parkinson's Case, Carth 92; s. c., 3 Mod. Rep. 265; Appleford's Case, 1 Mod. Rep. 82. But see King v. Patrick, 2 Keb. 65; King & Queen v. St. John's College, 4 Mod. Rep. 241.

Rights of Pastor.—Mandamus will not lie to compel a local church to receive as its pastor one appointed by the ecclesiastical organization of which the local church is a member, where the church property is vested in and subject to the disposition of the local church, and no salary has been agreed on, nor rents of the church property directed to be applied to the payment of the pastor's salary, so as to vest in him a temporal right of which the civil courts can take jurisdiction. State v. Bibb St. Church (Ala.), 4 So. Rep. 40.

1. People v. Medical Society of Erie, 32 N. Y. 187; s. c., 25 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 333; Bartlett v. Medical Society, 32 N. Y. 187.

Mandamus will not issue to compel a medical society to admit a member who would be immediately liable to expulsion for gross ignorance or misconduct. Ex parte Paine, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 665.

2. Orr v. Bracken Co., 4 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. (Ky.) 231; People v. Albany Hospital, 61 Barb. (N. Y.) 397; State v. Wright, 10 Nev. 67; People v. Cummings, 72 N. Y. 433.

An application for mandamus, by a stockholder of a corporation, requiring the board of managers to hold an election at the time specified by the by-laws thereof, need not be supported by a previous demand and refusal. Motter v. Primrose, 23 Md. 482.

3. American R. Frog Co. v. Haven, 101 Mass. 398; St. Luke's Church v. Slack, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 226; State v. Gall, 3 Vroom (N. J.) 285; Anon., 1 Barn. K. B. 402; Rex v. Wildman, Stra. 879; Warner v. Myers, 4 Oreg. 72.

On the refusal of the treasurer or clerk of a religious society whose term of office has expired to deliver the records and papers of the society to his successor in office, a writ of mandamus will be issued on the petition of the society to compel him to do so. St. Luke's Church v. Slack, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 226.

Officers of a corporation who, upon the expiration of their terms, refuse to deliver to their successors books, papers, accounts, or the like, which came to their hands as such, may be compelled to do so by mandate. Fasnacht v. German etc. Assoc., 99 Ind. 133.

A writ of mandamus will not lie to compel the restoration of parish registers by a person who obtained possession of them by wrong. The Hospital of St. Cross, which was partly a charitable institution and partly an ecclesiastical benefice, was united in 1507 with the parish of St. Faith, and the church of the latter was pulled down. Subsequently to that union many persons were instituted and inducted to the mastership of the hospital with the rectory of St. F.; but since 1808 the

(a) BOOKS OF TRADING CORPORATION.—The books and papers of a trading corporation, though of necessity left in some one hand, are the common property of the stockholders; and unless the charter provides otherwise, a stockholder has the right, at proper times, to inspect them personally, and with the aid of a disinterested expert, to make extracts from them for a definite and proper purpose.¹

(b) INSPECTION OF BOOKS.—The officers of a corporation have no right to exclude one of its members from an inspection of its books, although they believe him to be hostile to the interests of the institution, and mandamus is the proper remedy to compel permission to inspect them.²

(c) DEMAND AND REFUSAL.—To entitle a corporator in the absence of statutory provisions to a mandamus to compel the rectory had been vacant, and there was no regular officiating minister. In 1853, C was appointed under a decree of the court of chancery receiver of the hospital charities; and he had taken possession of the joint registers of St. F. and St. C., which were formerly kept in the church of St. Cross, but now at the office of C out of the parish. Upon the application of a church warden of St. F. for a mandamus to compel C to deliver up the register books to the church wardens, it was held that the writ of mandamus could not go against C, as his possession of the books was wrongful from the first. Holloway, ex parte, 30 Eng. Law and Eq. 240.

1. Phoenix Iron Co. v. Com., 113 Pa. St. 563.

2. People v. Throop, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 183; Com. v. Phoenix Iron Co., 105 Pa. St. 111; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 184; People v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 280; Foster v. White, 6 So. Rep. (Ala.) 88; State v. Bergenthal, 39 N. W. Rep. (Wis.) 566; see Lyon v. American Screw Co., 17 Atl. Rep. (R. I.) 61; Kelsey v. Fermentation Co., 3 N. Y. Sup. 723; Foster v. White (Ala.), 6 So. Rep. 88; People v. St. Louis & San Francisco R. Co., 44 Hun (N. Y.) 552.

A stockholder in a private corporation, who is denied access to corporate records and information as to corporate affairs, may, in certain cases, have a mandamus to compel the production of such books and papers as are essential to him for some proper and definite purpose, such as an accurate ascertainment and legal assertion of his rights as a stockholder. Com. v. Phoenix Iron Co., 105 Pa. St. 111; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 184.

If a corporation does not keep the books which the statutes prescribe it is their duty to permit an inspection of such as they do keep for the purpose of recording the transactions which the statutes give the stockholders the right to know. And such right of inspection may be enforced by mandamus. People v. Pac. Mail S. S. Co., 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 280.

Such right may be exercised by the attorney in fact of the stockholder. Foster v. White, 86 Ala. 467.

In Lyon v. American Screw Co., 17 (R. I.) Atl. Rep. 61, mandamus was not allowed to compel the inspection of the stock ledger.

A benevolent association is entitled to a peremptory writ of mandamus for an inspection of its books in the hands of one claiming a lien upon them for arrears of salary, the books to be returned to the claimant after the inspection. People v. Scheel, 8 Abb. (N. Y.) N. Cas. 342.

Mandamus lies to compel a cashier of a bank to permit inspection of books by director. People v. Throop, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 183.

An appeal from a final judgment rendering peremptory the mandamus permitting relator to examine the books, papers and affairs of the bank, but giving no permission for the appointment of experts to aid him, the court below made an ex parte order appointing two experts to aid relator. Held, that the court à quâ erred in granting this supplemental order. It was not at the time in the power of the court to reopen the case and make this order. The judgment had been signed ten days previously, disposing finally of the mandamus case, and there was custodian of the corporate records and documents to allow him an inspection of them he must show that he has made a proper demand for such inspection at a proper time and place and for a proper reason. The writ will not be granted to enable a corporator to gratify idle curiosity.¹

The members of a corporation have no right on speculative grounds to call for an examination of the books in order to see if by possibility the company's affairs may be better administered than they think they are at present. If they have any complaint to make, some suit should be instituted, some definite matter charged, and then the question will arise whether the court will grant a mandamus.²

(d) TO WHOM THE WRIT SHOULD BE DIRECTED.—The rule is that the writ shall be directed to the person having the custody of the books in question.³

7. Transfer of Stock.—Mandamus does not lie to compel the transfer of stock on the books of the corporation⁴ for the reason no suit pending in which the order in question could be granted. State v. Accommodation Bank, 28 La. An. 874.

1. People v. Walker, 9 Mich. 328. If there is fair reason to believe that a party asking for an inspection of corporate books intends to make an improper use of them, and on that ground his request is denied, the court will not aid him by mandamus. Rosenfeld v. Einstein, 46 N. J. L. 479.

2. King v. Master and Warden of the Merchant Tailors Co., 2 Barn. & Adol. 115; Pratt v. Meriden Cutlery Co., 35 Conn. 36; People v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. 456.

3. People v. Throop, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 183.

4. Tobey v. Hakes, 54 Conn. 274; Georgia Bank v. Harrison, 66 Ga. 696; Lowell on Transfer of Stocks, § 233, citing Rex v. Bank of England, Doug. 524; Rex v. London Assurance Co., 5 B. & A. 899; Kimball v. Union Water Co., 44 Cal. 173; American Asylum v. Phoenix Bank, 4 Conn. 172; Townes v. Nichols, 73 Me. 515; Murray v. Stevens, 110 Mass. 95; Baker v. Marshall, 15 Minn. 177; State v. Rombauer, 46 Mo. 155; State v. Guerrero, 12 Nev. 105; State v. Warren Foundry Co., 3 Vroom (N. J.) 439; Shipley v. Mechanics' Bank, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 484; Birmingham etc. Ins. Co. v. Comm., 92 Pa. St. 72; Wilkinson v. Providence Bank, 3 R. I. 22; Cooper v. Dismal Swamp Canal Co., 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 195; People v. Crockett, 9 Cal. 112, holding contra has been overruled, and Green Mt. Turnpike Co. v. Bulla, 45

Ind. 1, is modified by later decisions. See also Rex v. Worcester Canal Co., 1 Man. & R. 529; Reg. v. Liverpool & M. R. R. Co., 21 L. J., Q. B. 284; Crawford v. Provincial Ins. Co., 8 U. C. C. P. 263; People v. Parker Vein Coal Co., 10 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 186; Durham v. Monumental Silver Mining Co., 9 Oreg. 41.

Mandamus will not lie to compel the secretary of a private corporation to allow a stockholder to transfer his stock on the books of the corporation. Tobey v. Hakes, 54 Conn. 274; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 400; Shipley v. Mechanics' Bank, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 484. Ex parte Fireman's Ins. Co., 6 Hill (N. Y.) 243.

Exceptions.—In some jurisdictions the remedy by mandamus is allowed by statute. People v. Goss etc. Mfg. Co., 99 Ill. 355; State v. First Nat. Bank, 89 Ind. 302; and in Norris v. Irish Land Co., 8 E. & B. 512, the court hesitates between the statute and the fact that the corporation was established by royal charter, as a ground for issuing the writ.

Mandamus has been allowed where a sheriff was seeking to transfer stock sold on execution, on the ground that the sheriff was performing a public duty. Bailey v. Strohecker, 38 Ga. 259; State v. Jeffersonville Bank, 89 Ind. 302. See, however, Durham v. Monumental M. Co., 9 Oreg. 41, and also where the corporation was a railway company, on the ground that it was a public corporation, which, however, it is not. State v. McIver, 2 S. Car. 25; that the relator has a plain, speedy and adequate remedy at law by an action against the corporation for the value of the stock claimed.¹

8. To Issue Certificate of Stock.—The officers of a business corporation cannot be compelled by mandamus to cancel a certificate of stock and issue others in lieu thereof without proof that they are under a legal duty to do so and that their refusal so to do will result in a pecuniary injury to the applicant which cannot be recovered in an action at law.²

9. Railway Companies.—(a) GENERALLY.—Railway companies are given, as it should be, a very large discretion in determining all questions relating to the equipment and operation of its road. Hence courts, as a general rule, will not interfere with the management of railways in these respects, except where the act sought to be enforced is specific, and the right to its performance in the manner proposed is clear and undoubted. Ordinarily, the true interests of railway companies and the strict liabilities imposed upon them as common carriers are all that is necessary to protect the public against such abuses as are complained of in most cases.³

The writ should not be granted in any case where it is clear that it would prove unavailing; as where the act sought to be enforced is from its very nature physically impossible; or where from extrinsic causes it has become so; or where performance,

State v. Cheraw etc. R. Co., 16 S. Car. 524. See also State v. Orleans R. Co., 38 La. An. 312; Memphis Appeal Publishing Co. v. Pike, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 697. So the writ may be granted to require a corporation to enter upon its books the probate of the will of a deceased shareholder, disposing of his shares in the company, leaving all doubts as to the question of the right to the shares so disposed of to be shown by the corporation in its return to the writ. Rex v. Worcester etc. Canal, 1 Man. & R. 529.

1. Kimball v. Union Water Co., 44 Cal. 173; Rex v. Bank of England, cited in Kortright v. Buffalo Com. Bank, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 94; Shipley v. Mechanics' Bank, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 484; American Asylum v. Phoenix Bank, 4 Conn. 172; Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90; Wilkinson v. Providence Bank, 3 R. I. 22. Ex parte Fireman's Ins. Co., 6 Hill (N. Y.) 243; Birmingham Fire Ins. Co. v. Com., 92 Pa. St. 72.

Instances.—The purchaser of shares in a building and loan association is not entitled to a mandamus to compel the association to transfer them to him on their books. He has an adequate remedy in a suit for damages. State v. People's Building and Loan Assoc., 43 N. J. L. 389.

Mandamus will not lie to compel the officers of a bank to transfer stock from a vendor to a purchaser except under a judicial sale; in that case the bank official becomes a public officer pro hac vice. State of Georgia Bank v. Harrison, 66 Ga. 696.

The purchaser of shares in such a corporation, where the incidental rights of a stockholder do not depend on the ownership of these specific shares, is not entitled to a writ of mandamus to compel their transfer. Freon v. Carriage Co., 42 Ohio St. 30; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 794.

2. State v. St. Louis Paint Mfg. Co., 21 Mo. App. 526.

Nor to compel a corporation to issue stock, under an apparently illegal contract which calls for full paid stock in consideration of services worth only one-third the face value of the shares. State v. Timken, 48 N. J. L. 87.

3. Ohio etc. R. Co. v. People, 120 Ill. 200; s. c., 30 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 509.

though not absolutely impossible, is from any cause not within the power of the defendant. But whatever the grounds may be whenever it is apparent that the defendant is unable to perform the act sought to be thus enforced, the writ, as a general rule, will be denied.¹ There are many instances, in cases where the duty is clear and imperative, in which mandamus is held to lie, notwithstanding the thing required to be done involves the performance of a multiplicity of acts requiring the exercise of judgment and discretion on the part of the defendant as to such details.² Thus the writ of mandamus has been awarded to compel a company to operate its railroad as one continuous line;³ to compel it to operate a railway on a bridge on a continuous portion of its main line, and to desist from using "transfer trains" across it;⁴ to compel the running of passenger trains to the terminus of the road;⁵ to compel it to construct and maintain fences and cattle guards;⁶ to compel it to build a bridge and keep it in repair;⁷ to compel it to construct its road across streams so as not to interfere with navigation;⁸ to compel the company to run daily trains;⁹ to compel it to use a train to transport passengers to a particular point;¹⁰ to compel the delivery of grain at a particular elevator;¹¹ to compel the grading of its track so as to

1. People v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 55 Ill. 95; People v. Lieb, 85 Ill. 484; People v. Trustees, 86 Ill. 613; Cristman v. Peck, 90 Ill. 150; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 9.

2. Ohio etc. R. Co. v. People, 120 Ill. 200; s. c., 30 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 509.

3. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Hall, 91 U. S. 343.

4. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 4 Dill. (U. S.) 479; Affirmed, 1 Otto (U. S.) 343.

5. State v. Hartford etc. R. Co., 29 Conn. 538.

The Hartford and New Haven Railroad Company was chartered to construct and operate a railroad from Hartford to the navigable waters of New Haven harbor. A steamboat company was afterwards chartered to run in connection with it to New York, and the railroad and line of steamboats constituted a route that was of great convenience to the public. After the construction of the road, and the use of it in connection with the steamboat line for several years, the railroad company constructed a track diverging from the original track at a point a mile and a half from its terminus at tide water, and running to the station of the New York and New Haven Railroad Company in the city of New Haven, and discontinued the running of passenger trains to the original terminus at tide water.

This change incommoded travellers who wished to pass by the steamboat route, of whom there were many. Held, that a mandamus ought to be issued to compel the railroad company to run passenger trains to the original terminus. State v. Hartford etc. R. Co., 29 Conn. 538.

6. People v. Railroad Co., 14 Hun (N. Y.) 371; Cohn v. Goldman, 76 N. Y. 284.

Mandamus is the proper proceeding to compel a railroad company to construct its fences in compliance with the provisions of the statute. Ohio etc. R. Co. v. People, 121 Ill. 483.

7. People v. Boston etc. R. Co., 70 N. Y. 569; People v. Troy etc. R. Co., 37 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 427; State v. Wilmington Bridge Co., 3 Harr. (Del.) 312; State v. Northeastern R. Co., 9 Rich. (S. Car.) 247.

8. State v. Northeastern R. Co., 9 Rich. (S. Car.) 247; State v. Northeastern R. Co., 9 Rich. (S. Car.) 247; State v. Wilmington Bridge Co., 3 Harr. (Del.) 312; In re Trenton Water Power Co., Spen. (N. Y.) 659.

9. Re New Brunswick & Canada R. Co., 1.

10. State v. Hartford etc. R. Co., 29 Conn. 538; Rex v. Severn, 2 Barn. & Ald. 646.

11. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. People, 56 Ill. 365.

make crossings convenient and useful;¹ to compel completion of railway;² to construct a viaduct;³ to compel the re-establishment of an abandoned station;⁴ to compel the replacement of a track taken up in violation of its charter;⁵ to restore a portion of its track which it had refused;⁶ to prevent the abandonment of a road once completed;⁷ to compel a company to exercise its franchise;⁸ to compel it to take tax receipts in payment for its charges;⁹ to carry cedar logs, though the company had

1. Gould v. Oneonta, 71 N. Y. 303; Indianapolis R. Co. v. State, 37 Ind. 486; State v. Nicholson Pavement Co., 35 N. J. L. 397; People v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 67 Ill. 118; State v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. (Minn.), 39 N. W. Rep. 153.

2. Farmers' etc. Co. v. Leavenworth etc. R. Co., 17 Am. Law Reg., N. S. 266; State v. Southern Minnesota R. Co., 18 Minn. 40; People v. Albany etc. R. Co., 24 N. Y. 261.

When a railroad company have obtained an act of parliament reciting that the formation of a railway from A to D will be beneficial to the public, and that the company are willing to execute it, and giving them compulsory powers upon landholders for that purpose, and the company, in exercise of the powers, have taken lands and thereupon made part of their line, they are bound by law to complete such line, not only to the extent to which they have taken lands, but to the farthest point, although the statute enacts only that "it shall be lawful" for them to make the railway. Regina v. York etc. R. Co., 16 Eng. L. & Eq. 299. See also Queen v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 10 Ad. & E. 531; Queen v. York, Newcastle & Berwick R. Co., 16 Ad. & E., N. S. 886; Queen v. Great Western R. Co., 1 El. & Bl. 253; reversed on error in the exchequer chamber, 1 El. & Bl. 874; Queen v. Bristol Dock Co., 2 Ad. & E., N. S. 64. But see Queen v. Rochdale & Halifax Turnpike, 12 Ad. & E., N. S. 448; Queen v. Bristol & Exeter R. Co., 4 Ad. & E., N. S. 162; King v. Brecknock Canal Co., 2 Ad. & E. 217.

3. State v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 33 Kan. 176; High's Extraordinary Legal Remedies, §§ 319, 320, and cases there cited; §§ 276 and 290, and cases there cited; Cooke v. Boston etc. R. Co., 133 Mass. 185; s. c., 10 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 328; and note and cases there cited; Cambridge v. Charleston etc. R. Co., 7 Met. (Mass.) 70; 1. & C. R.

Co. v. State, 37 Ind. 489; In re Trenton Water Power Co., Spen. (N. J.) 659; Habersham v. Savannah etc. Canal Co., 26 Ga. 665.

Where a duty rests upon a railroad company to construct a viaduct over its railroad tracks where the same cross a public street in a city, mandamus will ordinarily lie to compel the railroad company to so construct such viaduct. But where a city of the first class by ordinance orders three railroad companies jointly to construct a viaduct, and the ordinance is vague and indefinite with respect to the dimensions of the viaduct and the materials to be used in its construction, and its construction as ordered by the city would require a change of the grade of certain streets of the city in violation of certain provisions of the statutes, held that mandamus will not lie to enforce the construction of such viaduct. State v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 33 Kan. 176.

4. State v. New Haven etc. R. Co., 37 Conn. 154; State v. New Haven etc. R. Co., 41 Conn. 134.

Y being a flourishing town, the county seat, and the largest and only important place in the county, a railroad stopped its trains there, but afterwards ran all its trains through, without stopping, to a point four miles beyond, where there were only a few houses, and speculators were attempting to build up a town as a rival to Y. Held that Y might compel the railroad to stop its trains, establish a depot, and afford it other proper facilities for transacting business. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Territory, 3 Wash. Ter. 303.

5. King v. Railway Co., 2 Barn. & Adol. 644.

6. Rex v. Severn, 2 Barn. & Ald. 646.

7. Talcott v. Pine Grove, 1 Flipp. (U. S.) 145.

8. People v. Albany etc. R. Co., 24 N. Y. 261.

9. Mobile etc. R. Co. v. Wisdom, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 125.

never before carried the same;¹ to receive and transport freight upon such terms as are reasonable and usual, and to perform its duties as a common carrier;² and to pay a tax upon its capital stock.³

Many of these cases, however, it will be found, are controlled by special statutory provisions.⁴ Where the charter of the company expressly requires that a certain duty shall be performed, the company may be compelled by mandamus to perform this, like any other specified duty enjoined by its charter or by other statutory provision.⁵ And in order to compel by mandamus the performance of a duty by a railroad company the difficulties in obeying it should be taken into consideration in determining

1. Rutherford v. Grand Trunk, 20 Lower Canada Jurist 11.

2. People v. New York Co., 28 Hun (N. Y.) 545; People v. New York etc. R. Co., 63 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 291.

Plaintiff was the manufacturer of a nonintoxicating beverage known as "New Era Beer." Defendant, a common carrier, refused to transport this product into Iowa, basing its refusal on the prohibitory liquor law of Iowa. The words "intoxicating liquor" in this law (Code Iowa, ch. 6, title 11) are declared by subsequent statute to include "beer." Held that as the product was denominated "beer," with nothing to show that it was not intoxicating, defendant had a right to assume that it was intoxicating, and, therefore, prohibited, and govern itself accordingly, and that, as defendant had a discretion in regard to the evidence whereby it might be satisfied that the product was lawful, mandamus would not lie to compel its transportation. Milwaukee Malt Extract Co. v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 73 Iowa 98.

3. A railroad company which has leased its road and owns no personal property of material value may be compelled by mandamus from this court to pay a tax on its capital stock when it has obtained a certiorari removing the assessment into this court, and a rule staying further proceedings on the warrant. Person v. Warren R. Co., 3 Vroom (N. J.) 441.

4. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Hall, 91 U. S. 343; Ohio etc. R. Co. v. People, 121 Ill. 483.

5. State v. Missouri Pac. Co., 80 Mo. 117; People v. Long Island R. Co., 31 Hun (N. Y.) 125.

In State v. Hartford etc. R. Co., 29 Conn. 538, a railroad company had abandoned part of its track and refused to run passenger trains on it.

In proceedings by the attorney general asking a mandamus to compel the railroad company to run trains over such portion of the road for the accommodation of the public, the court observed: "We hardly know what principles of law are thought to be involved in the case. The respondents certainly were bound to make their road (if at all) within the time prescribed in the charter, and, having made it, to put it into use—every material part of it—and keep it in use until discharged by the legislature. And this continuous duty is in no manner inconsistent with the power in the company (which has been so much dwelt upon in the argument) to regulate and control the manner of using the road by wholesome rules and by-laws. These, we admit, are necessary and allowable, but then they must be such as are really promotive of the original design of the charter, and not such as tend to defeat that design."

Though the writ of mandamus will lie at the instance of a private individual against a corporation to compel the performance of a duty enjoined by its charter, to be executed for the benefit of the relator or the class of individuals to which he belongs, the allowance of the writ in such cases must be controlled by the principle that it is the absence of an adequate legal remedy that gives the court jurisdiction to proceed by mandamus. Two things must concur; a specific legal right and the absence of an effectual legal remedy. State v. Paterson etc. R. Co., 14 Vroom (N. J.) 505; s. c., 10 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 334; 2 Dill. on Mun. Corp., §§ 665, 686; State v. Holliday, 3 Halst. 205; State v. Union, 8 Vroom whether, in view of all the facts shown, the people have made out such a case as to entitle them to the relief prayed.¹

Mandamus will not lie to compel a railroad company to do an act where they are vested by a clause in their charter with a discretion as to the time and manner of its performance.²

(b) ABANDONMENT OF ROAD.—Where a railroad company owns by consolidation two lines of road, and can substantially accommodate the people of the State by operating one line between the same points, and can abandon the other line without any serious detriment to any considerable number of people, it should not be compelled by mandamus to operate both lines at a great sacrifice of money upon the fanciful idea that the sovereignty of the State is wounded by its omission to operate both lines.³

(c) ERECTION OF DEPOT.—A railroad company may be compelled by mandamus to erect and maintain a depot, this duty being imposed upon it by law.⁴

(d) COMMUTATION TICKETS.—Mandamus will lie to compel a railroad company to issue a commutation ticket to one entitled.⁵

(e) DISCRIMINATION.—Where a railroad company is found to discriminate and is ordered to reduce its rates, mandamus is a proper remedy to enforce such order.⁶

(f) DAMAGES FOR LAND TAKEN.—Where a railway company or other corporation is vested with the right of eminent domain it may be compelled by mandamus to take the necessary steps for summoning a jury to assess damages for the property taken or damaged, and it may even be required by the writ to make payment of the amount of damages so assessed in the absence of any other specific or adequate remedy.⁷

(N. J.) 343; Queen v. Hull & Selby R. Co., 6 Q. B. 70; Moses on Mandamus 176, 178; 2 Redf. on Railways, 279, 286.

1. Ohio etc. R. Co. v. People, 120 Ill. 200.

2. State v. Canal etc. R. Co., 23 La. An. 333.

3. People v. Rome etc. R. Co., 103 N. Y. 95; s. c., 28 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 35.

4. Railroad Commrs. v. Portland etc. R. Co., 63 Me. 269; People v. New York etc. R. Co., 40 Hun (N. Y.) 570; s. c., 17 Abb. (N. Y.) N. Cas. 304.

5. State v. Delaware etc. R. Co., 48 N. J. L. 55; s. c., 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. (N. J.) 470; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 543.

A railroad company, chartered as a carrier of passengers and freight, is under no obligation to establish commutation rates for a particular locality, but when it has established such rates and commutation tickets are sold thereat to the public, the refusal of such a ticket to a particular individual, under the same circumstances and upon the same conditions as such tickets are sold to the rest of the public, is an unjust discrimination against him and a violation of the principle of equality which the company is bound to observe in the conduct of its business. Atwater v. Delaware etc. R. Co., 48 N. J. L. 55; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 543.

6. State v. Fremont etc. R. Co., 22 Neb. 313; Wells v. Northern Pacific R. Co., 23 Fed. Rep. 469; s. c., 10 Sawy. (U. S.) 441.

7. High's Ex. L. Rem., § 318; King v. Waterworks Co., 6 Ad. & E. 355; Queen v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 2 Ad. & E., N. S. 347; Green v. Deptford Pier Co., 8 Ad. & E. 910; Queen v. Trustees of Swansea Harbor, 8 Ad. & E. 439. See Chesebro v. Circuit Judge, Mich. 38 N. W. Rep. 658; State v. Grand Island & W. C. R. Co. (Neb.),

(g) HIGHWAYS.—Mandamus is an appropriate remedy to compel the restoration of a highway by a railway to its proper condition, and, in this respect, to the company to perform its charter duties.¹

10. Canals.—Mandamus will issue to compel a canal company to bridge its ditch as ordered by the county supervisors.²

11. Telephone Corporations.—Telephone companies being common carriers of news, all persons are entitled to equal facilities in the enjoyment of the benefits to be derived from the use of the telephone; and where no good reason is assigned for a refusal by a telephone company to furnish a telephone instrument to a person who desires to become a subscriber, and tenders a full compliance with all the rules established for other subscribers, a writ of mandamus will issue to compel such company to furnish such person with the necessary instruments.³

43 N. W. Rep. 419; see Re Spring Valley etc. Works, 17 Cal. 132; Shine v. Kentucky Cent. R. Co., 85 Ky. 117.

S, being the owner of lands through which the defendants desired to build their road, agreed to give them the right of way, and the company, with his written permission, took possession without compensation and constructed their road, and had up to this time been in uninterrupted possession for more than ten years. The plaintiff, claiming under S, now demanded compensation and obtained a mandamus nisi to proceed to arbitration under the Railway Act, 1868. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled; that S having the right to accept any or no compensation, and having elected to take none, the company then became entitled to the lands, and the plaintiff could not succeed. Thompson v. Canada Cent. R. Co., 3 Ontario Q. B. Div. 136; s. c., 14 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 431.

1. State v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 86 Mo. 13; s. c., 29 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 604. High's Ex. L. Rem., § 320; 2 Rover on Railroads 934.

2. Fresno Co. v. Fowler Switch Canal Co., 68 Cal. 359.

3. State v. Nebraska Telephone Co., 17 Neb. 126; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 1; Central Union Telephone Co. v. Bradbury, 106 Ind. 1; Central Union Telephone Co. v. State, 118 Ind. 194.

A public telephonic company having furnished telephonic facilities to one telegraph company with the consent of its licensor cannot refuse to furnish like facilities to all other telegraph companies, notwithstanding it is for-bidden to do so by its contract with the owner and licensor of the patent. Such portion of the contract is void. Commercial Union Tel. Co. v. New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., 17 Atl. Rep. (Vt.) 1071.

"The case of State v. Telephone Co., 22 Alb. Law J. 363, was an application for mandamus to compel the defendant to connect the plaintiff's office with its wires, and give it the use of telephonic facilities. The defendant contended that it could not be compelled to do so, because by the terms of its licence from the patentee of the invention it was forbidden to connect with any telegraph office or permit any telegraph company to become one of its subscribers. THAYER, J., said: 'In my judgment, this clause of the contract is indefensible when called in question by any person or corporation injuriously affected thereby. In so far as the contract between the respondent and the patentee compels the former to discriminate against one class of its would be customers, and to deny them the same privileges and service which it accords to others, the contract is invalid. It is not possible to admit the principle that a railroad, telegraph, or telephone company may avoid the performance of any part of the paramount duty they owe to the entire public by contract obligations which they may enter into, even with the patentee of an invention.' In Transfer Co. v. Telephone Co., 24 Alb. Law J. 283, the plaintiff was a proprietor of public omnibuses and carriages, and the defendant was a telephone company, and also proprietor of public carriages. Upon an application by plaintiff for an injunction to restrain the defendant from removing its telephone from the plaintiff's office and from refusing to transact its (plaintiff's) telephone business pursuant to contract, the defendant insisted that a mere rival in one branch of its business could not force it to afford it facilities which it had provided for another branch of its business. The court said 'that the real contention between the plaintiff and defendant is confined to their carriage and coupe services; defendant insisting that, as against plaintiff, a rival in the business, it has the right to a monopoly in the use of its own telephonic methods of communicating and receiving orders for coupes; that a mere rival in one branch of its business cannot force it to afford it the facilities which it has provided for another branch of its business . . . that defendant is engaged in two distinct employments—one in operating a telephonic exchange, and the other in operating a carriage or coupe service. Plaintiff and defendant are not rivals in the former business, and as to that part of defendant's business it occupies the same position towards the plaintiff as it does towards the rest of the public; that defendant is a quasi public servant, and as such is bound to serve the general public, including plaintiff, on reasonable terms, with impartiality; that defendant is governed by the principles of the law of common carrier.' In Telephone Co. v. Telegraph Co., 66 Md. 399, 7 Atl. Rep. 809, the court holding the same view, said: 'The telegraph and telephone are important instruments of commerce, and their service as such has become indispensable to the commercial and business public. They are public vehicles of intelligence, and they who own or control them can no more refuse to perform impartially the functions that they have assumed to discharge than a railway company, as a common carrier, can rightfully refuse to perform its duty to the public. . . . They have no power to discriminate, and, while offering readily to serve some, refuse to serve others.'

A recent case is that of State v. Telephone Co., 23 Fed. Rep. 539 (Cir. Ct. E. D. Mo.), which arose upon a state of facts nearly identical with those in the case at bar. BREWER, J., in giving the opinion of the court, from which TREAT, J., dissented, said: 'Now, the question is whether the court can compel this defendant, doing the telephonic business of this city, to establish communication with any other individual or company than that permitted by its licence from the patentee. I believe fully in the sacredness of property, but I think all property stands upon an equal basis, whether that property consists of gold dollars in your pocket, real estate, or the ownership of a patent. There is no peculiar sanctity hovering over or attaching to the ownership of a patent. It is simply a property right, to be protected as such. Starting from that as a basis, while every property owner may determine for himself to what he will devote his property, yet the moment he puts that property into what I perhaps may, for lack of a better expression, define as the 'channels of commerce,' that moment he subjects that property to the laws which control commercial transactions. . . . A telephonic system is simply a system for the transmission of intelligence and news. It is, perhaps, in a limited sense, and yet in a strict sense, a common carrier. It must be equal in its dealings with all. It may not say to the lawyers of St. Louis: 'My licence is to establish a telephonic system open to the doctors and the merchants, but shutting out you, gentlemen of the bar.' The moment it establishes a telephonic system here it is bound to deal equally with all citizens in every department of business; and the moment it opened its telephonic system to one telegraph company, that moment it put itself in a position where it was bound to open its system to any other telegraph company tendering equal pay for equal service. So my conclusion is that, notwithstanding the terms of this licence, which seemed to inhibit it from dealing or giving its telephonic privileges to any other telegraph company than the Western Union, the moment it established its telephonic system here, that moment it compelled itself to respond to the demands of any telegraph company or any individual in the city tendering to it equal pay for equal privileges. The application for mandamus will be sustained.' The supreme court of Nebraska has rendered a similar decision in State v. Telephone Co., reported in 22 N. W. Rep. 237. The same question was before the supreme court of Pennsylvania in Telephone Co. v. Com., 3 Atl. Rep. 825, which contains a full review of the decided cases,

VIII. PRIVATE PERSONS.—Mandamus will not issue against a private citizen.¹

1. Infants.—A court will guard the interests of infant litigants by mandamus whether protected by their guardian or not.²

2. Guardian.—Mandamus does not lie to compel a guardian to pay a claim against his ward which the probate court has adjudged valid; the proceeding must be by action.³

IX. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—1. Generally.—Whilst the writ of mandamus may perhaps be awarded to set municipal corporations in motion, and to compel action upon the particular matters over which they may have jurisdiction, it will in no manner interfere with the exercise of that discretion nor control or dictate the judgment or decision which shall be reached.⁴ And where the duty to be performed is purely ministerial in its character mandamus is the proper remedy to enforce its performance.⁵ So where an act of the legislature gives power to or imposes an obligation upon a municipal corporation to do a certain act or duty, such as to direct the city councils to appropriate money to pay certain and in which the same doctrine is held. See also People v. Telephone Co., 19 Abb. N. C. 466 (decided in 1887).⁶ TYLER, J., in Commercial Union Tel. Co. v. New Eng. Tel. & Tel. Co., 17 Atl. Rep. (Vt.) 1071.

1. State v. Powers, 14 Ga. 388.

2. Sheahan v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 42 Mich. 69.

3. Smith v. Burton, 48 Mich. 643.

4. Pfister v. State, 82 Ind. 382; People v. Mayor of New York, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 393; In re Town Board of Lloyd, 7 N. Y. Supp. 165; State v. Demaree, 80 Ind. 519; Supervisor of Sand Lake v. Supervisor of Berlin, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 485; U. S. v. County Commrs., Morr. (Iowa) 42; Supervisors of Will Co. v. People, 110 Ill. 511; State v. Bonner, Busb. L. (N. Car.) 253; State v. Francis, 95 Mo. 44; Dechert v. Com., 113 Pa. St. 229; Ottawa v. People, 48 Ill. 233; Howe v. Crawford County, 47 Pa. St. 361; Wintz v. Board of Education, 28 W. Va. 227.

Courts of law have uniformly refused to allow the rule for a mandamus to issue to compel a corporation to act in any particular manner where such corporation was invested with discretionary power. But mandamus may be resorted to to compel an inferior officer to do the act which is sought to be enforced in all cases where the officer has no discretion and where he is under obligation to do the specific act and there is no adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law. McDougall v. Bell, 4 Cal. 177.

Where a statute does not impose an absolute obligation upon a county board to perform a certain act but clothes it with an ultimate discretion in the matter, or where the statute is merely directory as to the act, and not mandatory, creating an absolute duty, mandamus will not lie to compel the board to perform the act. Supervisors of Will Co. v. People, 110 Ill. 511.

Approval of Security.—Mandamus to compel a municipal council to act on a liquor bond offered for its approval will not be granted where the ground on which the council refused is not clearly shown.

5. Mau v. Liddle, 15 Nev. 271; Humbolt Co. v. Churchill Co., 6 Nev. 30; People v. Common Council of New York, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 473; Ex parte Common Council of Albany, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 358; People v. Collins, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 549; People v. Supervisors of Ontario, 85 N. Y. 323; People v. Green, 64 N. Y. 499; People v. Supervisors of Sullivan Co., 56 N. Y. 249; Lafayette v. State, 69 Ind. 218; Overseers of Jersey Shore, 82 Pa. St. 275; Henry v. Taylor, 57 Iowa 72; Morley v. Power, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 691; State v. Shakespeare (La.), 6 So. Rep. 592; Com. v. Mayor, 5 Watts (Pa.) 152.

Thus where the law specially enjoins a duty upon the county commissioners and leaves them no discretion, mandamus is the proper remedy to en-expenses, and provides no specific legal remedy to enforce performance thereof, the court will grant a writ of mandamus to command the doing of such act or duty.¹

And where a municipal officer neglects and refuses to perform some act or duty which the law requires him to perform, any party directly injured in consequence and who is without other legal remedy may have recourse to a writ of mandamus. The court will not, however, attempt to control the exercise of any discretionary power vested in the officer unless he appears to be acting in bad faith.² Nor will it compel him to act after his force the performance of the law. Mau v. Liddle, 15 Nev. 271.

1. Commrs. v. Philadelphia, 3 Brews. (Pa.) 596. See Commrs. of Henry, 31 Ohio St. 211. See Will County Supervisors v. People, 101 Ill. 511; McArthur v. Township of Duncan, 34 Mich. 27.

A mandamus will lie to the corporation of a city neglecting to make an assessment for buildings destroyed to open a road, which, by an act of the legislature, they were authorized to estimate and compensate for. Shoolbred v. Corporation of Charlestown, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 63.

Under Mass. Stat. 1875, ch. 185, authorizing the taking of land for a park in Boston, and Stat. 1886, ch. 304, providing that the council may issue bonds and that upon its voting so to do the park commissioners shall at once proceed to construct the park, mandamus to compel the council to make an appropriation will not issue at the instance of persons whose lands have been assessed for betterments, although such lands are so situated that access cannot be had to them until the park is completed. Boston Water Power Co. v. Boston, 143 Mass. 546.

2. Hull v. Supervisors, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 259; People v. Supervisors, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 414; In re Nelson, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 417; In re Baily, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 479; Gourley v. Allen, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 644; People v. Dutchess etc. R. Co., 58 N. Y. 154; Com. v. Park, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 444; Com. v. Pittsburg, 34 Pa. St. 496; Goodrich v. Chicago, 20 Ill. 445; Ottawa v. People, 48 Ill. 233; People v. Cass Co., 77 Ill. 438; People v. La Salle Co. Supervisors, 84 Ill. 303; Supervisors v. U. S., 4 Wall. (U. S.) 435; County Commrs. v. Duckett, 20 Md. 468; Sights v. Yarnalls, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 292; Napa Valley R. Co. v. Napa Co., 30 Cal. 435; Meyer v. Carolan, 9 Tex. 250; Louisville v.

Kean, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 9; Com. v. Henry, 49 Pa. St. 530; State v. Wilmington, 3 Harr. (Del.) 294; Michigan City v. Roberts, 34 Ind. 471; State v. Robinson, 1 Kan. 188; Thurston v. Elmira Auditors, 82 N. Y. 80; State v. Earle, 42 N. J. L. 94; Williamsport v. Com., 90 Pa. St. 498; State v. Starling, 13 S. Car. 262; School Trustees v. Kay, 8 Ill. App. 30; State v. Studheit, 11 Neb. 359; Just v. Wise, 42 Mich. 573; Rice v. Shay, 43 Mich. 380; Waite v. Washington, 44 Mich. 388; Mau v. Liddle, 15 Nev. 271; Stone v. Small, 54 Vt. 498; State v. Fiedler, 43 N. J. L. 400; Cantlin v. Hancock, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 464; Barrett v. New Orleans, 33 La. An. 542; Morley v. Power, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 691; State v. Springfield School Directors, 74 Mo. 21; State v. Rainey, 74 Mo. 229; Tippton v. Jones, 77 Ind. 307; McBride v. Grand Rapids, 47 Mich. 236; U. S. v. Brooklyn, 10 Biss. (U. S.) 466; State v. Fuller, 18 S. Car. 246; Cheney v. Newton, 67 Ga. 477; State v. Jackson Co. Commrs., 19 Fla. 17; Polk v. James, 68 Ga. 128; State v. Stone, 69 Ala. 206; Roscommon v. Midland Co. Supervisors, 49 Mich. 454; State v. Staley, 38 Ohio St. 259; State v. Brown, 38 Ohio St. 344; State v. New Orleans, 34 La. An. 1149; State v. Baton Rouge, 34 La. An. 1197; Appleby v. New York, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 481; People v. Thacher, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 349.

Mandamus will not lie to control the discretion of the common council of New Orleans in the matter of providing for the alimony of the city. U. S. v. New Orleans, 31 Fed. Rep. 537.

The comptroller of Philadelphia is invested with a discretionary power which he is entitled to exercise free from all interference and mandamus will not lie to review his action. Dechert v. Com., 113 Pa. St. 229. So is the board of education or its president in term office has expired.¹ It is issued only in cases where the plaintiff has a clear legal right to the performance of some official or corporate act by a public officer or corporation and no other adequate specific remedy exists.²

2. Demand of Performance.—The writ will not be granted to compel the corporate authorities of a village or other body to do an act it has never been asked to do. The petition should show a demand for performance of the act and a refusal.³

approving the trustee's appointment of teachers. Wintz v. Charleston Education Board, 28 W. Va. 227.

The duties of officers entrusted with the letting of contracts for public work to the lowest responsible bidder are not of a strictly ministerial nature, but involve the exercise of such a degree of official discretion as to place them beyond the control of the courts by mandamus. State v. McGrath, 91 Mo. 386; People v. Contracting Board, 27 N. Y. 378; People v. Croton etc. Board, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 259; Free Press Assoc. v. Nichols, 45 Vt. 7; People v. Contracting Board, 33 N. Y. 382.

So highway commissioners in taking steps to construct bridges by asking county aid. People v. Highway Commrs., 118 Ill. 239.

A statute which obliged several railroad corporations having their tracks in a city to unite in one station, and provided for the discontinuance of some of the existing tracks, and the extension by the city of a street therein, enacted that the city should maintain a suitable track upon the extension of the street, or partly upon the extension and partly upon the discontinued railroad location, to be connected with the tracks of one or more of the railroads in the city, "for the accommodation of the business establishments on the line of said extension which were accommodated by the tracks of" a certain railroad when the act was passed. Held, that after the city had in its discretion constructed a track for the purposes named this court could not, on a petition for a writ of mandamus, exercise a supervisory power over the mode in which it was done and determine whether a track in another place would better accommodate the petitioner. Rice Machine Co. v. Worcester, 130 Mass. 575.

To Institute Suit Against County Clerk.—A petition for a mandamus sought to compel a county board to require a county clerk whose term of office had expired to forthwith pay to the county treasurer certain moneys alleged to be in his hands belonging to the county, and in default thereof to require the relator as State's attorney to commence suit on the official bond of the clerk for the recovery of such moneys. It appeared that the county board had once acted on the matter and refused to make such order. It was held that the petition failed to show a case that would justify the granting of the writ, such matters being purely within the discretion of the county board, and a demurrer to the answer was sustained to the petition, and the same dismissed. People v. McCormick et al., 106 Ill. 184.

1. State v. Kirman, 17 Nev. 380.

2. Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Commrs. of Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77; State v. Commrs. of Jefferson Co., 11 Kan. 67; Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Commrs. of Jefferson Co., 12 Kan. 127; State v. Mo. Pac. R. Co., 33 Kan. 176; High Ex. Rem., §§ 17, 333; People v. Mayor, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 393; Van Rensselaer v. Sheriff, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 501; Mobile etc. R. Co. v. Wisdom, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 125. See Parker v. Portland, 54 Mich. 308.

As a general rule, a proceeding by mandate will not be sustained where the plaintiff has an adequate legal remedy; but, under section 1168, Rev. Stat. 1881 (Ind.), a writ of mandate may be issued to any inferior tribunal, corporation, board or person, to compel the performance of an act which the law specially enjoins, or a duty resulting from an office, trust or station. Gardner v. Haney, 86 Ind. 17.

3. People v. Hyde Park, 117 Ill. 462; Kemmerer v. State, 7 Neb. 133; People v. Whittemore, 4 Mich. 27; Dobbs v. Stauffer, 24 Kan. 12; State v. Hull, 17 Minn. 429; State v. Bacon (S. Car.), S. E. Rep. 765; Bryson v. Spaulding, 20 Kan. 427.

Where a proceeding by mandamus is

3. To Do an Unlawful Act.—A writ of mandamus will not be awarded for the performance of an act which for any reason has become unlawful to be performed.¹

4. Approval of Bond.—If an officer or board of officials vested by law with discretionary powers refuse to accept or approve an official bond, mandamus is the proper remedy to compel action but not to interfere with the exercise of official discretion or judgment.²

Where a power of this doubtful kind is conferred on a judicial officer, and the public interests will be best subserved by holding it to be of a judicial nature, the courts are always so inclined to hold.³ In the matter of approving official bonds, the duty of deciding upon the sufficiency of the sureties involves the exercise of such judgment and discretion as to be of a quasi judicial nature, and that the exercise of the power will not be controlled by mandamus.⁴ instituted by a private individual, as a taxpayer, against a county clerk and treasurer to require them to keep the books pertaining to their respective offices in a particular manner, it must appear that a demand for that purpose was made upon such officers before the action was commenced. State v. Eberhardt, 14 Neb. 201.

In Moses on Mandamus, 204, it is said: "The petition for a mandamus should present to the court a prima facie case of duty on the part of the defendant to perform the act demanded and an obligation to perform it; otherwise the alternative writ will not be granted. It should also appear from the petition that a demand has been made on the defendant to do the thing he is sought to be compelled to do, and that he has refused and neglected to do it. Stephens Nisi Prius, 2318-19; People v. Walker, 9 Mich. 328."

In Redfield on Railways (5th ed.) 659, note 6, it is said: "It is first indispensable to demand of the party against whom the application is to be made to perform the duty. See also State v. Governor, 1 Dutch. (N. J.) 331; State v. Lehre, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 234; State v. Davis, 17 Minn. 429.

In State v. Rahway, 33 N. J. L. (4 Vr.) 111, it was held that to authorize a mandamus against the common council of a city there need not be a positive refusal by the common council to perform the duty; it is sufficient to show a manifest intention not to perform it.

Upon an application for a writ of mandamus against the township committee of Union, to compel them to borrow money to pay a judgment, it appears that a demand was made upon one member and the clerk of the committee to perform this duty on May 24th, and the rule to show cause in this case was allowed June 1st following and there was no meeting of the township committee in the interval. Held, that the interval is too brief to support a presumption of a refusal of the committee to perform their duty. Magie v. Union, 42 N. J. L. 531.

1. People v. Hyde Park, 117 Ill. 462; Hall v. Steele, 82 Ala. 562; People v. Fowler, 55 N. Y. 262.

A writ of mandamus will not be awarded to compel an official act that it may have been the duty of the officer to perform at the time the proceeding was commenced, but which has since been forbidden by law. Hall v. Steele, 82 Ala. 562.

2. In re Prickett, Spencer (N. J.) 134; State v. Lewis, 10 Ohio St. 46; Nelson v. Edwards, 55 Tex. 389; Arapahoe Co. v. Crotty, 9 Colo. 138; Lewis v. Marion, 14 Ohio St. 515; Ex parte Harris, 52 Ala. 87; Beebe v. Robinson, 52 Ala. 67; Ex parte Thompson, 52 Ala. 98. See also Thompson v. Holt, 52 Ala. 491.

3. Ex parte Harris, 52 Ala. 87; Ex parte Thompson, 52 Ala. 98.

4. McDuffie v. Cook, 65 Ala. 430; Mobile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cleveland, 76 Ala. 321; Ex parte Harris, 52 Ala. 87. See Briggs v. Hopkins (R. I.), 13 Atl. Rep. 109.

5. Liquor Bond.—The writ will not be granted to compel a municipal council to act on a liquor bond offered for its approval where the ground on which the council refused is not clearly shown.¹

6. Issuing of Bonds.—Mandamus lies where the plaintiff has a clear legal right to compel the issuing of bonds by a municipal corporation.²

7. Payment of Bonds.—Mandamus is the proper remedy of holders of city bonds to compel city treasurer to pay interest thereon or city government to raise funds by taxation to pay them, where expressly directed to do so by charter which authorized their issue.³

1. Negley v. Sturgis, 44 Mich. 1. Mandamus to compel a village board to approve a liquor dealer's bond will be denied if there is nothing to show that the refusal to approve it was capricious or to rebut the presumption that the board has fairly passed upon all the questions which determine the sufficiency of the bond and the reliability of the sureties. Parker v. Portland, 54 Mich. 308.

In an application for a mandamus to compel a township board to approve of a druggist's liquor bond, the return showed that after hearing the testimony of the relators and their witnesses they found that one of the sureties upon the bond offered for approval was insufficient, not being worth the amount of the bond over and above his debts and exemptions. Held, that there being nothing in the return showing that the discretionary power of the township board was not exercised reasonably and in good faith, mandamus should be denied. McHenry v. Township Board of Chippewa (Mich.), 31 N. W. Rep. 602.

2. Smalley v. Yates, 36 Kan. 519; People v. Brennan, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 522; Summit County Commrs. v. People, 10 Colo. 14; Santa Cruz R. Co. v. Santa Cruz County Supervisors, 62 Cal. 239; Platt v. Peble, 29 Ill. 54. Compare Ham v. Toledo etc. R. Co., 29 Ohio St. 174.

Where a city of the second class, through its mayor and council, enters into an agreement to execute and deliver to a lawful purchaser thereof certain water works bonds of the city which have been duly carried by a vote of the electors of the city, and the purchaser of such bonds fully complies with all of the terms of the agreement upon his part, and the mayor and council refuse to comply with their official duty in that respect, held, mandamus will lie to compel the mayor and council to execute and deliver the bonds to the purchaser of the same according to the terms of the agreement of the parties. Smalley v. Yates, 36 Kan. 519.

A county, under a statute authorizing the funding of its floating indebtedness by an election conducted in substantial conformity to the statute, voted to issue bonds as a means of funding such indebtedness. Held, that the plaintiff, a holder of county warrants constituting a part of such floating debt, was entitled, upon tendering his warrants, and refusal on the part of the county commissioners to issue to him bonds to the amount of such warrants, to a mandamus to compel them to do so. Board of Commrs. of Summit Co. v. People (Colo.), 14 Pac. Rep. 47.

3. Kennedy v. Sacramento, 19 Fed. Rep. 580; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 553; State v. County Commrs., 19 Fla. 17; Shelley v. St. Charles, 30 Fed. Rep. 603; Loague v. Taxing District of Brownsville, 36 Fed. Rep. 149; Hopple v. Brown Township, 13 Ohio St. 311; Shelby Co. v. Cumberland etc. R. Co., 8 Bush (Ky.) 209; Com. v. Allegheny Co., 32 Pa. St. 218; Com. v. Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496; McLendon v. Anson Co., 71 N. Car. 38; Columbia Co. v. King, 13 Fla. 452; Greene Co. v. Daniel, 102 U. S. 189; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 105; State v. Rainey, 74 Mo. 229; s. c., 7 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 183; Winter v. Montgomery, 65 Ala. 403; s. c., 7 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 307; Decatur Co. v. Indiana (Ind.), 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 604; Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 625; Knox Co. v. Aspinwall, 24 How. (U. S.) 376; Supervisors v. United States, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 435; Van Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 433; Riggs v. Johnson Co., 6 Wall.

But mandamus does not lie to compel a municipal corporation to raise money to pay bonds so long as it is an open question whether the bonds are a legal obligation on the corporation and whether the relator is a bona fide holder of them, as those are questions for the trial court.¹

A provision in a city charter that the city shall not be sued upon bonds issued by it is no answer to a proceeding by mandamus to compel an officer of the city to perform a duty in connection with the bonds enjoined upon him by the law under which they were issued.²

8. Granting Licence.—Where municipal authorities are by law entrusted with jurisdiction over certain matters, such as the granting of licences, the decision of which rests in their sound discretion and requires the exercise of their judgment, mandamus will not lie to control or in any manner interfere with their decision, since the courts will not direct in what manner the discretion of inferior tribunals and officers shall be exercised.³

(U. S.) 166; Weber v. Lee Co., 6 Wall. (U. S.) 210; United States v. Keokuk, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 514; Supervisors v. Rogers, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 175; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 575; Cass Co. v. Johnson, 95 Wall. 360; United States v. Clark Co., 96 U. S. 211; United States v. New Orleans, 98 U. S. 381; Welch v. St. Genevieve, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 130; Lansing v. County Treasurer, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 522; Rusch v. Des Moines Co., Woolv. (U. S.) 313; United States v. Badger, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 308; Sibley v. Mobile, 3 Woods (U. S.) 535; Knox County v. Aspinwall, 24 How. 376; English v. Supervisors, 19 Cal. 172; Maddox v. Graham, 2 Met. (Ky.) 56; see State v. Whitesides, 30 S. Car. 579; State v. Harper, 30 S. Car. 586; Swigert v. Hamilton County (Ill.), 22 N. E. Rep. 609.

A peremptory mandamus may issue to a city treasurer to compel him to pay the overdue interest on the city bonds, although the money in his hands may have been appropriated by city councils to other uses; provided the amount thus withdrawn from the city treasury is not absolutely needed for the ordinary expenses of the city. Reading v. Hopson, 90 Pa. St. 498.

On the hearing of an order to show cause why a peremptory mandamus should not issue in a case to enforce the levy and collection of a tax to pay interest upon bonds of a city, the validity of the bonds was questioned by the city, and various questions, both of law and of material facts affecting their validity, were raised. Held, that it was error to grant the writ before the relator had established his right in an ordinary action at law. State v. Mayor etc. of Manitowoc, 52 Wis. 423.

But mandamus will not issue to compel payment of interest on interest. Davis v. Porter, 66 Cal. 658.

1. Loomis v. Rogers Township Board, 53 Mich. 135.

2. Meyer v. Porter, 65 Cal. 67; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 561.

3. State v. Cramer, 96 Mo. 75; Louisville v. Kean, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 9; People v. Supervisors of San Francisco, 20 Cal. 591; Ex parte Persons, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 655; Schlaudecker v. Marshall, 72 Pa. St. 200; People v. Thacher, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 349; Dunbar v. Frazer, 78 Ala. 538; State v. Board of Commrs. Tippecanoe Co., 45 Ind. 501; Walsford v. Weidlein, 23 Kan. 601. See also Purdy v. Sinton, 56 Cal. 133; People v. Crotty, 93 Ill. 180; see Hall v. Steel, 82 Ala. 562; State v. Bonnell, 119 Ind. 494; Port Royal Min. Co. v. Hagood (S. Car.), 9 S. E. Rep. 686.

In proceedings to obtain mandamus to compel a city to grant a ferry licence the return stated that under the legislative power delegated to it "to regulate, tax and licence all ferries within the limits of the city," defendant had granted exclusive licence to another, that public necessity did not require a second ferry, and that once before the city, acting in its discretion, had refused to grant plaintiffs a licence. Held, on demurrer to the return, that the discretion of the municipal corporation could not be controlled in such case by man-

If, however, the licence has been refused under mistake of the law and it is shown that the applicant is clearly entitled to the licence, the error may be corrected by mandamus.¹ So under a general ordinance of a city for licencing dram-shops, the city authorities have no right to make an arbitrary discrimination in granting licences. They cannot grant the same to a favored few and refuse it to another who has in all respects complied with the ordinance and laws of the State, and who is admitted to be in every respect a suitable person.²

9. Inspection of Public Records.—In this country, the records, public books and by-laws of municipal corporations are of a public nature, and if such a corporation should refuse to give inspection thereof to any person having an interest therein, or, perhaps for any proper purpose to any inhabitant of the corporation, whether he had any special or private interest or not, a writ of mandamus would lie to command the corporation to allow such inspection, and copies to be taken, under reasonable precautions, to secure the safety of the originals.³ Where the claim is for a continuous use of the record office and its public contents from damus. State v. Cramer, 96 Mo. 75. See Oxford Ferry Co. v. Comms. of Sumner Co., 19 Kan. 293.

Under the Illinois act regulating the practice of dentistry (Hurd, Rev. Stat. 1885, ch. 91, p. 816) it lies in the discretion of the State board of dental examiners, in issuing licences for the practice of dentistry to graduates of dental colleges, to determine what colleges are reputable colleges within the meaning of the act. But if this discretion is abused from personal or selfish motives to bar the graduates of a particular college from practice, mandamus will lie to compel the issuance of a licence. Ill. Board of Dental Examiners v. People, 123 Ill. 227.

A court of record in New York city has power to issue an alternative writ of mandamus to review the refusal of the commissioners of excise of said city to grant relator an hotel licence, under Laws N. Y. 1886, ch. 496, which provides that it shall be lawful in such cases for the person refused to apply to any court of record in the city for a writ of mandamus to review the action of said commissioners, and that said commissioners in their return to said writ shall include all evidence and all papers on which the action was based. People v. Woodman, 1 N. Y. Supp. 335.

Where the city council of Wheeling passed an order to issue an innkeeper's licence on the first of May, and the inn keeper before that date sued out a mandamus nisi against the officer whose duty it would be to issue the licence, it was held the officer might, in his return, allege a noncompliance on the part of the inn keeper with an order subsequently passed by the council taxing the licence. Sights v. Yarnalls, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 292.

Signing Licence.—Under the Mass. Pub. Stats., ch. 100, § 5, and the Stat. of 1882, ch. 164, the mayor of a city, in signing a licence for the sale of intoxicating liquors, performs a merely ministerial duty; and if a licence is granted by the board of aldermen the signing by the mayor may be enforced by mandamus. Braconier v. Packard, 136 Mass. 50.

But in Deehan v. Johnson, 141 Mass. 23, it was held that mandamus will not lie to compel the mayor of a city to sign a licence granted by the board of aldermen of the city to the petitioner to be a common victualler if the mayor is not satisfied that the petitioner has complied with all the provisions of the Pub. Stats., ch. 102, § 8, so as to entitle him to a licence.

1. Thomas v. Armstrong, 7 Cal. 286.

2. Zanone v. Mound City, 103 Ill. 552. See Bean v. County Court, 53 Mo. App. 635.

3. Dillion's Mun. Corp., 3rd ed., § 848, 303; People v. Reilly, 38 Hun (N. Y.) 433. See Hawes v. White, 66 Me.

day to day and week to week, and not merely for a single occasion, with all its material facts defined, there must be great, if not insuperable, difficulty in enforcing the claim by mandamus. Where the case presents a single occasion and calls for an act which is presently determinate, it is entirely practicable to direct the act by mandamus. But where the case contemplates something continuous, yet variable in its conditions and aptitudes, the remedy by that process seems an unfit one. It is the office of mandamus to direct the will, and obedience is to be enforced by process for contempt. It is, therefore, necessary to point out the very thing to be done; and a command to act according to circumstances would be futile.¹

305; O'Hara v. King, 52 Ill. 303; State v. Rachac, 37 Minn. 372; Diamond Match Co. v. Powers, 51 Mich. 145; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 144; Cormack v. Wolcott Register etc., 17 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. (Kan.) 309

In order to entitle a taxpayer to a writ of mandamus for the inspection of public documents, it is not essential that he be legally capable of maintaining an action in his own behalf. State v. Williams, 41 N. J. L. 332.

1. Diamond Match Co. v. Powers, 51 Mich. 145; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 144.

In Buck v. Collins, 51 Ga. 395, the court said: "But no person has a right to examine or inspect the records of his office except in his (clerk's) presence and under his observation. If he may do this for a minute, the clerk is not keeping them safely and securely. A blot or scratch may be made in a minute that may alter a record. A leaf may be extracted in a minute; and if one man may of right take a record book and abstract its contents, work a week upon it, any other man may do it. If a good, honest man has a right to do this, a bad man has the same right; and, if this may be done except under the clerk's immediate inspection, no record can be safely kept. If the complainant has the right to do what he claims, he has the right to keep the clerk's attention from minute to minute, from day to day, until his book is finished. He has the right to the services of the public officer for months together without pay; for not only the law, but every principle of propriety, requires that no person shall inspect the books except under the watchful observation of the clerk."

The supreme court of Colorado have decided that the right of a person to examine the records is not open for all. The court in Bean v. People, 7 Colo. 202, says: "We are of opinion that the statute in question was not designed to allow individuals who wish to abstract the entire records for future profit in their private business the privilege of using continuously the public property and of monopolizing from day to day, for months and years, a portion of the time and attention of a public officer, against his will, and without recompense."

The supreme court of Michigan have also decided this question, founded upon a statute much broader than the statutes of some of the other States. The court say: "The right once conceded, there is no limit to it until every public office is exhausted. The inconveniences which such a system would engraft upon public officers; the dangers, both of a public and private nature, from abuses which would inevitably follow in the carrying out of such a right—are conclusive against the existence thereof. . . . The language of the act referred to does not, in clear and unmistakable terms, include a case like the present, and such a one should not be conferred by construction. The object of the act was to enable persons having occasion to make examination of the records for any lawful purpose . . . to have suitable facilities therefor." Webber v. Townley, 43 Mich. 534.

But under the Wisconsin and Minnesota statutes relating to the duties of the register of deeds, such register cannot exclude from the examination of the records in his office a person whose examination is for the purpose of making a set of abstract books for his own use. Hanson v. Eichstaedt, 69 Wis. 538; 20 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 137. See also State v. Rachac, 37 Minn. 372.

10. Inspection of Poll Books.—One whose object is to vindicate some public or private right is entitled to inspect the registration lists, poll books, and lists in the custody of the recorder of voters of a city, and mandamus will lie to compel the recorder of voters to grant such inspection.¹

11. To Correct Records.—Mandamus will lie for the purpose of correcting errors in the records of the proceedings of municipal bodies.²

12. Custody of Municipal Books.—Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel the old trustees of an incorporated village, attempting to hold over, to deliver to the new board the books, papers and articles of personal property in their possession belonging to the village; and to prevent their interfering with the new trustees in the exercise of their office.³

13. Distribution of Public Funds.—Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel public officers to pay over to the proper local officers the amount of the public funds to which they are entitled by the law,⁴ or to pay to the State treasurer the State's

A recorder is not compellable by mandamus to allow abstract makers to use his office and the county records for the purpose of abstracting the entire records of the land titles of the county for sale. Bean v. People, 7 Colo. 200.

So the register of deeds will not be compelled by mandamus to permit any person to make copies of the entire records in his office for the purpose of making a set of abstract books for private use or speculation; and no such right is given by Comp. Laws Kan. 1885, § 211, ch. 25. Cormack v. Wolcott, 37 Kan. 391.

1. State v. Hoblitzelle, 85 Mo. 620.

2. Farrell v. King, 41 Conn. 448; Ellis v. Bristol Co. Commrs., 2 Gray (Mass.) 370; People v. Matteson, 17 Ill. 167; People v. Hilliard, 29 Ill. 419; Rex v. Harris, 3 Burr. 1421; Bower v. O'Brien, 2 Ind. 423.

Mandamus will not lie to compel the registrar of conveyances for the parish of Orleans to erase from the records a tax deed, in the absence of a final judgment of a competent court declaring the nullity of the tax sale, even if the purchaser at such sale is made a party. State v. Batt (La.), 4 So. Rep. 495.

3. Stone v. Small, 54 Vt. 498; Kimball v. Lamprey, 19 N. H. 215; Strong, ex parte, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 484; Conlin v. Aldrich, 98 Mass. 557; American R. Frog Co. v. Haven, 101 Mass. 398; Walter v. Belding, 24 Vt. 658; King v. Payn, 1 Nev. & P. 524; King v. Ingram, 1 Black W. 50; Keokuk v. Merri- am, 44 Iowa 432; King v. Buller, 8 East R. 389; King v. Wildman, 2 Strange 879; Borough of Calne, 2 Strange R. 948; 3 Black. Com. 110; 6 Bacon Ab., Mand. D. 439.

Mandamus is a proper remedy against an ex-mayor to obtain possession of a seal, books, papers, muniments, etc., the property of the corporation; and a pretended intrusion into or retention of the office of mayor will not justify the withholding of such property so as to drive the informant to resort to quo warranto. People v. Kilduff, 15 Ill. 493.

4. East Saginaw v. Saginaw Co. Treas., 44 Mich. 273. See State v. Hollinshead, 47 N. J. L. 439; Roscommon v. Midland County Supervisors, 49 Mich. 454; State v. Hammell, 31 N. J. L. 446; U. S. v. Corporation of Washington, 2 Cranch C. Ct. 174; State v. Warren County, 2 Ohio 10; State v. Roderick 23 Neb. 505; School District No. 2 v. School District No. 1, 3 Wis. 333.

Mandamus will not lie against a county treasurer to compel him to pay over funds received by his predecessor for the benefit of a railway company, and transferred by him to the county fund, in the absence of proof that the money was received by defendant from his predecessor, or is presumptively in his possession. Minneapolis etc. R. Co. v. Becket, 75 Iowa 183.

Mandamus cannot issue to a city treasurer to set apart moneys for a sinking fund, when those moneys had proportion of taxes collected by such county treasurer.¹ So where a statement of account between a county and the State, showing a debt due to the State, is correctly and regularly made and the ascertained amount is seasonably certified in due form to the clerk of the county, it is the duty of the board of supervisors to make the proper appointment and if they refuse to do so they may be compelled by mandamus.²

14. School Boards.—Mandamus will issue to compel school boards to act where they refuse to act.³ But where a discretion is left to a board of school directors it cannot be controlled by mandamus, though the discretion be unwisely exercised. And when the act to be done is ministerial on a given state of facts, the writ lies, although they must judge, according to their best discretion, whether the facts exist, and whether they should perform the act.⁴ So a board of education is entitled to mandamus already been expended by him, though illegally, at the date of the application. Bates v. Porter, 74 Cal. 224.

In a proceeding to compel a division of funds between an old and a new township, the trustee of the former, showing no substantial interest, cannot intervene. Towle v. Shoenaman, 110 Ind. 120.

School Fund.—Where money has been apportioned to a school township and received by the trustee thereof, some of which belongs to a school town afterwards organized, and he refuses to pay it over, he may be compelled by mandate to do so, and the school trustees of the town are the proper relators in such a suit. Hon v. State, 89 Ind. 249. See State v. Geiver, 35 La. An. 1148.

1. Staley, 38 Ohio 259.

2. People v. Supervisors of Jackson Co., 24 Mich. 238. See State v. Staley, 38 Ohio 259; People v. Reis, 76 Cal. 269.

Mandamus was granted to compel a board of supervisors to provide for the payment of a balance credited upon the books of the county to a certain township, which belonged, with another, to a county set-off from the first, the credit having been made in pursuance of a mutual arrangement between the townships and the county indebted. Higgins v. Supervisors of Midland Co., 52 Mich. 16.

To Compel County Court to Adjust Claim.—If the county court of a new county refuses to ascertain and adjust its proportion of the debt of the parent county, when properly presented to it for adjustment, it may be compelled to by mandamus. Hemstead Co. v. Grave, 44 Ark. 317.

3. Case v. Blood, 71 Iowa 632.

4. Clark v. Board of Directors, 24 Iowa 266; Morley v. Power, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 691; State v. Duffy, 7 Nev. 342; Newby v. Free, 72 Iowa 379; Com. v. Williamson, 30 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 406; People v. School Officers, 18 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 165; People v. Regents, 30 Mich. 473.

Duty of Trustee.—It is the duty of the trustee of a school township to apply the tuition funds of the township, when received, to the payment of its indebtedness for tuition, and the performance of such duty by the proper trustee may be enforced by writ of mandate. State v. Coopridge, 96 Ind. 279; Board etc. v. State, 61 Ind. 379; Jessup v. Carey, 61 Ind. 584; Smith v. Johnson, 69 Ind. 55; Duke v. Beeson, 79 Ind. 24; Gardner v. Haney, 86 Ind. 17.

Change of Boundaries.—Where plaintiff and others, residents of the district township of M, petitioned the directors of said district, and also the directors of the adjoining independent district of E, to have certain territory in which they lived detached from the district township and attached to the independent district, and the directors of the independent district had acted favorably to the petitioners, but the directors of the district township refused to act at all, held that mandamus would lie to compel them to act in the premises. Hightower v. Overhauser, 65 Iowa 347; District Township of Eden v. Independent Dist. of Templeton, 72 Iowa 687.

Awarding Contract for School House.—Where the school board, in inviting proposals for the erection of a school to compel its treasurer to pay its funds to the proper depository under the law.¹ But where a school fund is placed in compliance with the charter in the hands of a town treasurer to be paid out by him upon warrants signed by the president of the board of education, the common council have no control over the fund and they cannot compel the treasurer by mandamus to retain a portion of the fund and apply it to the payment of certain special assessments against school property.²

Mandamus will lie to compel the board of education of a city to admit a child to the public schools.³ So where it is the duty of the directors of a school district to provide equal school facilities for the blacks and whites and they apportion the school funds and limit the school terms to each class according to their scholastic population, mandamus will lie to compel them to provide a school according to the requirements of the statute.⁴

Mandamus will issue to compel the directors of district township to restore a schoolhouse to the site from whence it has been removed.⁵ Mandamus may issue to enforce the granting of a petition for the formation, under the statute, of a new school district out of existing districts.⁶ But the writ will not issue to compel school directors to grant a petition for the restoration of house, stated: "The contract will be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder. The board reserve the right to reject any and all bids," held that mandamus would not lie, at the instance of one who claimed to be the lowest responsible bidder, to compel the board to award the contract to him. Hanlin v. Ind. Dist. of Charles City, 66 Iowa 69.

Renting School House.—School directors may, in a proper case in the exercise of their lawful discretion, cause the school to be taught in a rented house instead of the public school building, and their action in so doing cannot be reviewed in the proceeding by mandamus. Scripture v. Burns, 59 Iowa 70.

Sectarian Instruction.—Where plaintiff, a private person, sought by writ of mandamus to compel school directors to observe and enforce the law forbidding sectarian instruction in the public schools, held, that the relief was properly refused, because it did not appear that plaintiff had demanded of the directors the performance of the duty sought to be enforced. Scripture v. Burns, 59 Iowa 70.

To Turn Over Insurance Money.—Mandamus will not lie to compel school directors to pay over to the county treasurer insurance money received on a loss by fire on a school building in their district, to be divided between it and a new district recently formed out of it, where they have actually expended the money in the erection of a new school building, pursuant to the unanimous vote of the district electors. Elder v. Territory 3 Wash. T., 438.

1. Port Huron Board of Education v. Runnels, 57 Mich. 46. See Hillis v. Ryan, 4 Greene (Iowa) 78.

2. State v. Board of Council (N. J.), 18 Atl. Rep. 571.

3. People v. Board of Education of Detroit, 18 Mich. 400; State v. Osborne, 24 Mo. App. 309; State v. Duffy, 7 Nev. 342. See also People v. Board of Education of Detroit, 18 Mich. 400; Clark v. Board of Directors, 24 Iowa 266; Dove v. Independent School District, 41 Iowa 689; Smith v. Directors, 40 Iowa 518; People v. Board of Education, 127 Ill. 613.

Mandamus will not lie to compel the admission of a child to a public school which is full. Re Nicoll, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 340.

4. Maddox v. Neal, 45 Ark. 121; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 540.

5. Atkinson v. Hutchinson, 68 Iowa 161.

6. School Trustees v. People, 121 Ill. 552.

territory to a school district, the statute giving an adequate remedy by appeal.¹

(a) ADOPTION OF TEXT BOOKS.—Where a statute makes it the absolute duty of the directors of the district school board to introduce into the schools under their charge the text books adopted by the president's meeting, they cannot by an exercise of their discretion as to the time of introducing such books defeat the will of said meeting and evade the requirements of the statute. And where they fail to perform the duty imposed upon them by statute mandamus is the proper proceeding to compel its performance.²

15. Overseers of the Poor.—A mandamus lies to compel the overseers of the poor to receive and maintain a pauper under an order of removal unappealed from.³

X. AUDITING AND PAYMENT OF CLAIMS—1. Generally.—Where it is made the duty of disbursing officers to audit or pay all accounts, debts and demands, the amounts of which are fixed by law and justly chargeable against a municipal corporation and they refuse to do so, mandamus should be allowed unless the relator has another legal and specific remedy. If the relator has a clear, direct and adequate remedy by action at law, no case will be shown for the exercise of the extraordinary jurisdiction of the court to issue the writ of mandamus.⁴ So as a general rule,

1. Barnett v. Earlham District Directors, 73 Iowa 134.

Where the directors of a school district refuse to recognize, as a part of the district, territory alleged by the inhabitants thereof to be a part of such district, and to provide such territory with proper school facilities, mandamus will lie to compel them to grant the relief asked. Hancock v. District Township of Perry, 78 Iowa 550.

2. State v. School Directors of Springfield, 74 Mo. 21. See Dobbs v. Stauffer, 24 Kan. 12.

3. Port Township v. Overseers of Jersey Shore, 82 Pa. St. 275.

4. Lexington v. Mulliken, 7 Gray (Mass.) 280; Boyce v. Russell, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 444; Ex parte Lynch, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 45; Com. v. Commrs. of Allegheny, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 317; Hester's Case, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 416; State v. Union Township, 8 Vroom (N. J.) 343; State v. County Judge, 5 Iowa 380; State v. Orleans Judge, 38 La. An. 43; Com. v. Rodes, 5 Mon. (Ky.) 318; Bamford v. Hollingshead, 47 N. J. L. 439; Mansfield v. Fuller, 50 Mo. 338; Ward v. County Court, 50 Mo. 401; Wheelock v. Auditor, 130 Mass. 486; Bryant v. Moore, 50 Mich. 225; State v. Mayor of Lincoln, 4 Neb. 260; State

v. Township Committee, 37 N. J. L. 84; Portwood v. Montgomery Co., 52 Miss. 523; U S. v. Ottawa, 28 Fed. Rep. 409; Elmendorf v. Board of Finance, 41 N. J. L. 135; Mich. Paving Co. v. Detroit, 34 Mich. 201; Hull v. Supervisor of Oneida, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 259; Commrs. of Johnson Co. v. Hicks, 2 Ind. 527; People v. Clark Co., 50 Ill. 213; Brown v. Ruse, 69 Tex. 589; People v. Chenango Co., 11 N. Y. 563; People v. New York, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 680; People v. Thompson, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 73; People v. Wood, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 653; State v. Supervisors of Sheboygan, 29 Wis. 79; Burnet v. Auditor, 12 Ohio 54; State v. County Judge, 5 Iowa 380; Crandall v. Amador Co., 20 Cal. 72; People v. Green, 58 N. Y. 295; People v. Booth, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 31; People v. Myers, 3 N. Y. Supp. 365; People v. Haws, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 440; State v. Titus, 47 N. J. L. 89; State v. Mount, 21 La. An. 755; Sessions v. Boykin, 78 Ala. 328; McArthur v. Township of Duncan, 34 Mich. 27; Mackenzie v. Baraga, 39 Mich. 554; State v. Hamilton Co., 19 Ohio 116; Needham v. Thresher, 49 Cal. 393; McCoy v. Justices etc., 6 Jones (N. Car.) L. 488. Compare State v. Brown, 30 La. An., pt. 1, 78.

mandamus will lie to compel a disbursing officer to pay an order legally drawn upon funds in his hands, subject to the payment of such order.¹ And the rule in this respect is not changed by reason of the officer having, through inadvertence or misapprehension of duty, made payment to another who had no claim upon, or pretence of right to, the fund thus paid out.² But where, by reason of a complication of extraneous circumstances not specifically provided for by the statute, a well founded doubt arises, either as to the right of the applicant to receive the fund, or the duty of the officer to pay it out, mandamus is not the proper remedy. The right in such case being doubtful, the claimant must resort to some other appropriate remedy to determine it.³ So the courts will not allow one creditor to gain a preference over another by the device of applying for a writ of mandamus to compel an officer to pay a sum of money accruing to

A claim being for a certain and ascertained amount, its allowance and audit by the town council is equivalent to a judgment at law, and mandamus will lie to enforce its payment. Kelly v. Wimberly, 61 Miss. 548.

Where both the general law and the village charter make it the duty of the village trustees to provide for the payment of claims against the village, they will be compelled by mandamus to make provision. People v. Peekskill, 38 Hun (N. Y.) 332.

Mandamus will issue to compel a town treasurer to pay warrants drawn by the acting moderator, although the title of the latter to the office is questioned. The court will not consider that question in this collateral proceeding. School District v. Root, 61 Mich. 373.

Mandamus to compel one municipality to pay an indebtedness to another as agreed upon by representatives of both, held, properly denied, where the proceedings to determine the debt did not clearly appear to be those prescribed by statute. Portsmouth v. Bay City, 57 Mich. 420.

1. People v. Johnson, 100 Ill. 537; 39 Am. Rep. 63; State v. Earle, 42 N. J. L. 94; Devine v. Harvie, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 439; Raisch v. Board of Education (Cal.), 22 Pac. Rep. 890; Tennessee etc. R. Co. v. Moore, 36 Ala. 371; People v. Van Tassel (Mich.), 40 N. W. Rep. 847. See People v. Haws, 23 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 107; 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 440; People v. Conolly, 2 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 315; People v. Glowacki, 2 S. C. (N. Y.) 436; People v. Green, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 1; 3 S. C. (N. Y.) 90; State v.

Scott, 15 Neb. 147; Just v. Wise, 42 Mich. 573; California Bank v. Shaber, 55 Cal. 322; Joos v. McCandless (Pa.), 8 Atl. Rep. 159; People v. Kent County Supervisors, 38 Mich. 421; Crawley v. Mershon, 61 Ga. 284.

A contractor to build a court house, who has not done the work according to contract, is not entitled to a mandamus to compel the justices of the county to pay the sum agreed on. Dameron v. Cleveland, 1 Jones (N. C.) L. 484.

The city of New Orleans may contest the account of the criminal sheriff, although approved by the clerk and judge; and only after he has obtained judgment thereon can he ask for a mandamus to compel its payment. State v. New Orleans, 30 La. An., pt. 1, 82.

2. People v. Smith, 43 Ill. 219; People v. Bender, 36 Mich. 195.

3. People v. Dulaney, 96 Ill. 503; People v. Klokke, 92 Ill. 134; People v. Johnson, 100 Ill. 537; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 63; State v. Applegate (N. J.), 16 Atl. Rep. 59; Dement v. Rokker, 126 Ill. 194; State v. Ross (Nev.), 14 Pac. Rep. 827; Crise v. Auditor, 17 Ark. 572; Foot v. Board of Suprs. (Miss.), 6 So. Rep. 612; Avery v. Township Board, 73 Mich. 622; State v. County Commrs. (S. Car.), 9 S. E. Rep. 692; Schuck v. City of Pittsburgh (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 651; People v. Green, 66 Barb. (N. Y.) 630; People v. Supervisors of Kings, 23 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 89; Portsmouth Township v. Bay City, 57 Mich. 420.

A person who claimed to be the holder and owner of certain ditch the debtor out of funds to be thereafter received by such officer, there being no real opposition by the officer to making payment.¹

2. Auditing Claim.—Where the auditor has not the right to fix the amount to be drawn, the claim must be audited and passed upon by the proper officers.² It is not the province of mandamus to settle differences of opinion between municipal authorities and claimants as to the amount due for services rendered.³ Disputed accounts or claims against the municipality should be referred to the arbitrament of a jury or to the ordinary process of the courts, and not by proceedings in mandamus.⁴

And the fact that the person aggrieved or complaining has, by neglecting his remedy at law, placed himself in such a position that he can no longer avail himself of its benefits, constitutes no ground for interference by mandamus.⁵

orders, asked for a writ of mandamus to compel the board of supervisors to provide for their payment. The board answered that they had no knowledge as to whether the relator was holder and owner of the orders as claimed. Held, that the answer was proper; and that relator would not be entitled to the writ unless her right to the orders was admitted or proved. Brownell v. Gratiot v. Super., 49 Mich. 414.

1. State v. Burbank, 22 La. An. 298.

2. Putnam County v. Allen, 1 Ohio St. 322; Ex parte Black, 1 Ohio St. 36; People v. Common Council of Detroit, 34 Mich. 201. See Bryant v. Moore, 50 Mich. 225; State v. Earle, 42 N. J. L. 94; Crandall v. Amador County, 20 Cal. 72; People v. Clark Co., 50 Ill. 213; People v. Brennan, 18 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 100; State v. Turpan, 9 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. (Ohio) 126; Garrard County Court v. McKee, 11 Bush (Ky.) 234; State Board of Education v. West Point, 5 Miss. 638.

This highest of judicial writs will not issue to compel a county treasurer to pay an auditor's checks for assessment expenses, where the accounts for which the checks were issued have not been examined and approved by the county commissioners, as required by the act of 1875, § 23 (15 Stat. 993), and subsequent legislation. State v. Fuller, 18 S. Car. 246.

In State v. Furnas County Commrs., 10 Neb. 361, it is held that a party having a valid claim against a county cannot, by mandamus, compel the county commissioners to audit his claim and issue a warrant therefor until he has appealed to the district court, as provided in Neb. Laws 1879, 365, §§ 33, 37.

Where a judgment against the town is rendered by a court having jurisdiction of the parties and the subject matter, auditing it is a mere ministerial act not involving the exercise of official discretion, and the performance of it can be coerced by mandamus. Lower v. U. S., 91 U. S. (1 Otto) 536.

Where a claim has been audited by the proper officers, mandamus will not lie to compel the comptroller to draw a warrant for more than the amount audited by such board. State v. Hallock (Nev.), 22 Pac. Rep. 123.

3. Johnson Co. Commrs. v. Hicks, 2 Carter (Ind.) 527.

4. High's Ex. L. Rem., § 339; Burnet v. Auditor, 12 Ohio 54; Com. v. Commrs. of Allegheny, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 317. But see Ex parte Loy, 59 Ind. 235.

Mandamus will issue to compel county supervisors to permit a claimant to amend informalities in the form of his claim, as presented. People v. Wayne County Supervisors, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 62.

5. State v. Supervisors, 29 Wis. 79; Dunklin Co. v. District, 23 Mo. 449; Blecker v. St. Louis Law Commr., 30 Mo. 111.

The rule is that where there is unreasonable delay the court will, in the exercise of its discretion, refuse to issue the writ. Moses Mand. 190; 1 Redf. Railw. 658, and the cases there cited. State v. Earle, 42 N. J. L. 94. See also King v. Stainforth, 1 M. & S. 32; People v. Delaware Common Pleas, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 256; People v.

3. Exercise of Jurisdiction.—Where auditing officers exceed their jurisdiction in allowing claims, mandamus will not lie to compel payment of such claims.¹ But if a board of supervisors of a county refuse to act on a claim against the county presented to them for the reason that they have not the power to approve of it, mandamus is the proper remedy to test this preliminary jurisdictional question.²

Mandamus will not issue to compel a county officer to audit a charge pursuant to an order of the court where there is no legislative authority for compelling the county to bear such expenses.³

4. To Sign Warrant.—One who has entered into a valid contract with a municipal corporation cannot, after having performed the same on his part, compel by mandamus the corporation to facilitate the satisfaction of the demand by signing a warrant for it, payment, since he has an ample remedy by action against the city.⁴ But where, by the regulations of a municipal corporation, money in its treasury can only be drawn upon an order signed by a city officer, and the duty of such officer in respect thereto is wholly ministerial, a mandamus will issue to compel such officer to sign such an order for a sum of money appropriated to pay a claim by the body entrusted within such municipality with the power of appropriation.⁵

Seneca Common Pleas, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 264.

1. People v. Laurence, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 244.

2. People v. Supervisors, 28 Cal. 430; San Francisco Gas Co. v. Supervisors, 11 Cal. 42; Frank v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 668; Emeric v. Gilman, 10 Cal. 404; People v. Cortland Co., 24 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 119; People v. New York, 21 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 322; People v. Supervisors of Delaware Co., 45 N. Y. 196; Bright v. Supervisors of Chenango, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 242; Hull v. Supervisors of Oneida, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 259; People v. Supervisors of Macomb, 3 Mich. 475; Thurston v. Elmira Auditors, 82 N. Y. 80.

3. People v. Greene County Supervisors, 39 Hun (N. Y.) 299; Ex parte Tully, 4 Ark. 220; People v. Brennan, 1 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 184; Wilson v. Jenkins, 72 N. Car. 5; Shaffer v. Jenkins, 72 N. Car. 275.

4. People v. Opdyke, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 306; People v. Havemeyer, 4 S. C. (N. Y.) 365; s. c., 47 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 494. Thus where the relator, having performed certain work and labor under and in pursuance of contracts between him and the city of New York, procured his account therefor to be approved by the city inspector, examined and found correct by the auditor and approved by the comptroller, but the common council did not order it to be paid nor take any specific action in relation to it. Held, the relator was not entitled to a writ of mandamus to compel the mayor to countersign a warrant drawn by the comptroller upon the chamberlain for the amount of the debt. People v. Wood, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 653.

So where it is doubtful whether a person in whose favor a warrant is drawn upon the treasurer of the city of Brooklyn by the comptroller, is entitled to the money, there being another claimant who has sued the city therefor, the mayor is not obliged to sign the warrant and cannot be compelled to do so by mandamus. People v. Booth, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 31.

5. State v. Fiedler, 43 N. J. L. 400; People v. Flagg, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 503; State v. Mount, 21 La. An. 352; Jack v. Moore, 66 Ala. 184.

An objection to a resolution appropriating money to pay a claim against the corporation, interposed by way of veto by a mayor having a veto power, and overcome by the requisite vote, cannot be again urged by the mayor, to avoid doing a mere ministerial act to

5. Payment of Warrants.—Mandamus will not issue to compel the payment of a warrant properly drawn upon the city treasury.¹ One who seeks mandamus to compel a fiscal officer of a municipality to make a payment must first obtain a judgment against the municipality.²

6. Payment of Salary.—Mandamus is the proper remedy to enforce the payment by a municipal corporation of an official salary, where the amount is fixed.³ So mandamus to compel a effectuate such appropriation. State v. Fiedler, 43 N. J. L. 400.

When a claim against the county has been audited and allowed by the commissioners court, the issue of a warrant on the county treasurer for its payment is a ministerial duty devolved by law on the probate judge; but that court has no power to compel him to draw his warrant, and the remedy to compel his obedience, the order not being void on its face, is a mandamus from the circuit court, at the suit of the person in whose favor the claim is allowed. Jack v. Moore, 66 Ala. 184. See also People v. Auditors of Wayne Co., 5 Mich. 223; State v. Buckles, 39 Ind. 272; State v. Richter, 37 Wis. 275; Apgar v. Trustees, 5 Vroom (N. J.) 308; Ryan v. Hoffman, 26 Ohio St. 109; People v. Green, 56 N. Y. 466.

The common council of Newark passed, over the veto of the mayor, a resolution appropriating money to pay a stenographer employed by a committee to take testimony. Held, it being the duty of the mayor to countersign the warrant drawn for such appropriation, a refusal to perform it would be enforced by mandamus. State v. Haynes (N. J.), 11 Atl. Rep. 151.

In State v. Ames, 31 Minn. 440, where a claim against the city, of a class for the payment of which the council is empowered to make an appropriation, having been first audited and adjusted by the comptroller, and an appropriation for its payment made and authorized by the requisite and duly recorded vote of the council, when an order for its payment, in due form, and duly signed by the clerk, is presented to the mayor for his signature, it was held that it was his duty to sign it within such reasonable time as may be necessary for him to ascertain whether the council has kept within its jurisdiction, and whether the appropriation has been authorized by the necessary vote. Upon the refusal so to sign an order, he may be compelled to sign by mandamus.

1. Connersville v. Connersville Hydraulic Co., 86 Ind. 184.

2. State v. Snodgrass, 98 Ind. 546. The holder of county warrants brought suit thereon in the federal court against the county. It was contended that the remedy was by an application for mandamus and not by suit. Held, that this contention was untenable; that the foundation of an application for mandamus must be a judgment first obtained. Jerome v. Rio Grande County Commrs., 18 Fed. Rep. 873; s. c., 5 McCrary C. Ct. 639.

In State v. Gaudy, 2 Neb. 232, it is held that a writ of mandamus will be granted against county treasurer to compel the payment of county warrants, if they are legally issued and there are funds in the treasury.

3. McBride v. Grand Rapids, 47 Mich. 236; State v. Starling, 13 S. Car. 262; Honea v. Monroe, 63 Miss. 171; Reynolds v. Taylor, 43 Ala. 420; Just v. Township of Wise, 42 Mich. 573; People v. Auditors of Wayne, 13 Mich. 233; People v. Auditors of Wayne Co., 5 Mich. 223; Peterson v. Manistee, 36 Mich. 8; Dayton v. Rounds, 27 Mich. 82; State v. Stone, 69 Ala. 206; People v. Smith, 77 N. Y. 347; State v. Ocean County Freeholders, 48 N. J. L. 70; Morley v. Power, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 691. Compare People v. New York, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 680; Ex parte Lynch, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 45; People v. Thompson, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 73; State v. Hannon, 38 Kan. 593; Respublica v. Commissioners of Philadelphia, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 181; Walcott v. Mayor etc., 51 Mich. 249; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 87; People v. Mayor etc. of New York, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 680.

Where an officer cannot sue a corporation, he may compel payment of his salary by means of a mandamus. People v. Supervisors, 32 N. Y. 473; People v. Edwards, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 529; Commonwealth v. Johnson, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 275; Baker v. Johnson, 41 Me. 15; Taylor v. School Committee, school district assessor to pay a school order for salary will be allowed where the court is satisfied there is no valid defence.¹

But an officer de jure of a municipal corporation cannot have a mandamus to compel the payment of his salary by the controller, where it has already been paid to another person de facto in possession of the office.² Nor can the right to an office be determined in a proceeding by mandamus to compel the payment of salary to a person claiming such office, or in a proceeding to compel the performance of official duty alleged to be obligatory by reason of the official character of the claimant. In such cases he who has the better prima facie right must be recognized until, by contesting the election, or by proceedings in quo warranto, the rights of the parties are finally determined.³

5 Jones L. (N. Car.) 98; Thurston v. Elmira Auditors, 82 N. Y. 80; McBride v. Grand Rapids, 47 Mich. 236; State v. Starling, 13 S. Car. 262; Newport v. Berry, 80 Ky. 354; s. c., 4 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 659. But this writ will not lie to control a discretion as to the amount to be allowed. People v. Supervisors, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 362; People v. Mayor etc., 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 508; Runkle v. Commrs., 97 Pa. St. 328.

An action at law, where salaries may be recovered like other debts by means of it is, however, the ordinary remedy. Boyce v. Russell, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 444; In re Lynch, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 45; People v. Mayor etc. of New York, 25 Wend. 680; People v. Thompson, 25 Barb. 73; Reynolds v. Taylor, 43 Ala. 420.

If no appropriation has been made for the payment of the salary of a judge, a mandamus will not lie to the auditor of public accounts to pay the same. Ex parte Tully, 4 Ark. 220.

Where, after decisions in the supreme court on a question of title to office, the fiscal officer of the municipal corporation pays the salary to the successful claimant, and afterwards the court of last resort reverses such decision and declares the adverse party to be entitled, held, that a mandamus would not lie at the suit of the latter to compel payment again of the salary for the same period, to him, in the absence of any appropriation for the purpose. People v. Brennan, 1 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 184. But see People v. Brennan, 30 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 417.

There seems to be some variance on the question as to whether mandamus is the proper remedy to require municipal authorities to pay salaries which are due from a municipal corporation to its officers. Some of the text writers on the subject of mandamus regard such claims as an indebtedness of the corporation which may be enforced by an action on the case for a neglect of corporate duty. This view does not seem, however, to be supported by the weight of the authorities. In Just v. Township of Wise, 42 Mich. 573, it was held that mandamus and not assumpsit was the proper remedy to compel a township board to pay a valid order for labor performed, given by the highway commissioners on the township treasurer.

Another Action Pending.—While a petition to the court of common pleas under Mass. Stat. 1859, ch. 249, § 3, by the keeper of a jail, dissatisfied with the amount of the salary allowed him by the county commissioners, is pending, payment of the sum so allowed will not be enforced by mandamus. Adams v. Hampden County, 82 Mass. (16 Gray) 41.

1. Martin v. Tripp, 51 Mich. 184. See Rogers v. People, 68 Ill. 154.

County boards of education are courts of limited jurisdiction, and before they can try an application for an order to pay money to a teacher, it must appear that the account has been audited by the county commissioner. For a refusal by a county school commissioner to audit a claim, mandamus will lie to compel him to do so. Cheney v. Newton, 67 Ga. 477.

2. People v. Brennan, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 457.

3. State v. John, 81 Mo. 13; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 238; People v. Lane, 55 N. Y. 217; Winston v. Moseley, 35 Mo. 146; State v. Auditor, 34 Mo. 375.

7. Payment of Judgments and Other Liabilities.—A writ of mandamus will lie to compel a municipal corporation to pay a judgment rendered against it, or other corporate liability,¹ there being no other adequate remedy, as an execution cannot be levied upon the property of such corporation.² It lies to compel municipi-

1. Olney v. Harvey, 50 Ill. 453; Marathon v. Oregon, 8 Mich. 372; People v. Cairo, 50 Ill. 154; Brown v. Crego, 32 Iowa 498; Chicago v. Sansum, 87 Ill. 182; Duncan v. Mayor of Louisville, 8 Bush (Ky.) 98; Rice v. Walker, 44 Iowa 458; Webb v. Commrs. of Beaufort, 70 N. Car. 307; Uzzle v. Commissioners, 70 N. Car. 564; Craven Co. v. Pamlico Co., 73 N. Car. 298; McLendon v. Commrs. of Anson, 71 N. Car. 38; Leach v. Commrs, 84 N. Car. 829; City Council v. Hickman, 57 Ala. 338; Devereau v. Brownsville, 29 Fed. Rep. 742; Com. v. President of Anderson Road, 7 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 6; Frank v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 668; Cairo v. Everett, 107 Ill. 75; Coy v. Lyons City Council, 17 Iowa 1; s. c., 85 Am. Dec. 539; Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595; Wells v. Mason, 23 W. Va. 456; Supervisors v. U. S., 4 Wall. (U. S.) 435; Galena v. Amy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 705.

Where a municipal charter has been repealed and the same territory reorganized into a new corporation, mandamus will lie to compel it to pay a judgment against the original corporation. Devereau v. Brownsville, 29 Fed. Rep. 742.

Mandamus will not lie against city officials to compel payment of a judgment against the city to an attorney claiming a lien upon the judgment, if the judgment was, after the filing of the lien, assigned by the judgment plaintiff, and satisfaction entered by the assignee, and no proceedings have been taken to set aside such satisfaction or determine the attorney's rights. Chambers v. Territory, 3 Wash. T. 280.

Injuries Caused by Mobs.—A claim for damages for injuries to property caused by a mob or riot (in the city and county of San Francisco) is not to be presented in the first instance to the board of supervisors for allowance, as in the case of other claims, but a judgment must first be had, and thereupon the board must order it to be paid unless they shall determine to appeal. And upon the refusal of the county treasurer to pay the claim mandamus was the proper remedy. Bank of California v. Shober, 55 Cal. 322.

Injuries by Dogs.—Action against the township and not mandate against the township trustee is the proper remedy for one whose sheep have been killed by dogs to enforce his claim to an allowance from the dog tax. Shelby v. Randles, 57 Ind. 390.

Allowing Credits.—Mandamus will not lie to compel the allowance of credits to the county treasurer for moneys by him paid out pursuant to law—either before or after the expiration of the statutory time for appeal from the decision of the county board. State v. Board etc. of Sheboygan Co., 29 Wis. 79.

2. State v. Guttenberg, 39 N. J. L. 660; Alden v. Alameda Co., 43 Cal. 270; Com. v. Allegheny Co., 32 Pa. St. 218; Com. v. Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496; Com. v. Allegheny Co., 37 Pa. St. 277; Walkley v. Muscatine, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 481; Mayor v. Lord, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 409; Heine v. Levee Commrs., 19 Wall. (U. S.) 655; Rees v. Watertown, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 107; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 535; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 575; Supervisors v. U. S., 18 Wall. (U. S.) 71; Galena v. Amy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 705; Lexington v. Mulliken, 7 Gray (Mass.) 280; Maddox v. Graham, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 56; State v. Madison, 15 Wis. 33; State v. Milwaukee, 25 Wis. 122; Flagg v. Palmyra, 33 Mo. 440; Brown v. Crego, 32 Iowa 498; State v. Buffalo Co., 6 Neb. 454; Columbia Co. v. King, 13 Fla. 421; State v. Burbank, 22 La. An. 318; Pegram v. Cleveland Co., 64 N. Car. 557; Carroll v. Board of Police, 28 Miss. 38; Klein v. Warren Co., 51 Miss. 878; Klein v. Smith, Co., 54 Miss. 254; State v. Mount, 21 La. An. 352; Reynolds v. Taylor, 43 Ala. 420; People v. Brennan, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 536; Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488.

Where a duty exists in a city to pay a specific and ascertained charge, it would be unjust to both parties, debtor and creditor, to permit or require a suit at law when the judgment cannot be collected by execution. The township pal officers to provide specifically in the forthcoming yearly budget, out of the funds to arise from the general tax therein levied, means for paying all judgments against the city then registered in the office of the administrator of public accounts, and unsatisfied, in the order of their registry.¹

Whenever money has been collected by the treasurer upon a tax levied to pay a judgment against the county it is the duty of the treasurer to pay it over to the plaintiff on demand. The payment in such case is an act the performance of which the law specially enjoins as a duty resulting from the office held by the defendant. For a refusal to perform this act mandamus will lie and the writ is granted on the petition of the private party aggrieved when the public interest is not concerned.²

8. Exceptions to General Rule.—The general rule, however, that mandamus will not lie when the party has another remedy is not universally true in relation to corporations and ministerial officers.³ Notwithstanding their liability to an action on the case for a neglect of duty they may be compelled by mandamus to exercise their functions according to law⁴ in cases where the relator should bring his action against the town and recover judgment and would probably have to proceed by mandamus to compel the town authorities to levy a tax to pay it.⁵

9. Discretion of Auditing Boards.—Mandamus does not lie to compel municipal authorities invested with discretionary powers to make any particular decision or to set aside a decision already made. The writ may properly issue to compel action upon a claim presented, but not to direct any particular action or compel the allowance of any specified sum.⁶

ought not to be put to useless expense by the fault of its officers and the creditor ought not to be put to delay or a double pursuit. Marathon v. Oregon, 8 Mich. 378; Harrington v. County Commrs. of Berkshire, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 263; People v. Supervisors of St. Lawrence, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 292; People v. Township Board of La Grange, 2 Mich. 187; People v. Supervisors of King's Co., 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 520; Miller v. Bridgewater, 4 Zab. (N. J.) 54; People v. Supervisors of Westchester, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 64; Treat v. Middletown, 8 Conn. 243.

1. State v. New Orleans, 30 La. An., pt. 1, 129.

2. State v. Marshall Co., 7 Iowa 186; State v. Johnston Co., 10 Iowa 157; Dishon v. Judge, 10 Iowa 212; State v. Davenport, 12 Iowa 335; State v. Keokuk, 9 Iowa 438; Coy v. Lyons City Council, 17 Iowa 1; State v. Judge, 7 Iowa 390; State v. Jones Co. Judges, 13 Iowa 139; Bryan v. Cottell, 15 Iowa

538; Murphy v. Board of Directors, 30 Iowa 429.

3. State v. Wilson 17 Wis. 694; Buck v. Lockport, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 253.

4. People v. Mead, 24 N. Y. 114; Regina v. Southampton, 101 E. C. L. 4.

5. State v. Wilson, 17 Wis. 694.

6. People v. Chapin, 104 N. Y. 96; Dechert v. Com., 113 Pa. St. 229; Cicotte v. Wayne Co., 59 Mich. 509; State v. Commrs. of Hamilton, 26 Ohio St. 364; City of Chicago v. O'Hara, 60 Ill. 413; Board of Supervisors, 60 Ill. 481; People v. Board of Apportionment, 52 N. Y. 224; People v. Wood, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 653; People v. Livingston Co., 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 118; People v. Johnson, 17 Cal. 305; Board of Police v. Grant, 17 Miss. 77; Runkle v. Com., 97 Pa. St. 328; People v. Johnson, 100 Ill. 537; People v. Auditors of Wayne Co., 10 Mich. 307; Mixer v. Supervisors of Manistee Co., 26 Mich. 422; Videto v. Supervisors of

So when a claim against a county has been audited and allowed by the board of county commissioners acting within the limits of their jurisdiction, their action is final unless appealed from, and stands as a quasi judgment, which can only be set aside by a proper proceeding for that purpose upon the ground of fraud or mistake.¹ A subsequent allowance of the claim, followed by a disallowance on the same day does not affect the case, as the allowance was not an adjudication of the merits.²

10. Misappropriation.—Mandamus is not the proper remedy in cases of mere misappropriation.³

11. Want of Funds.—Auditing officers will not be compelled by mandamus to act upon claims unless there are funds in the treasury for the payment of such claims.⁴ Mandamus will not lie, even if payment is made to the wrong person and there is no

Jackson Co., 31 Mich. 116; Barry Co. v. Supervisors of Manistee Co., 33 Mich. 497; Clark v. Supervisors of Ingham Co., 38 Mich. 658.

When the auditor is called upon to countersign a warrant his duty is not merely ministerial, but he is invested with a discretionary power which he is entitled to exercise free from all interference and mandamus will not lie to review his action. Dechert v. Com., 113 Pa. St. 229.

1. Richland Co. v. Miller, 16 S. Car. 236; Tilden v. Supervisors of Sacramento Co., 41 Cal. 68; Com. v. County Commrs. 5 Binn. (Pa.) 536; People v. Supervisors of Albany, 12 Johns. (N.Y.) 414; People v. Supervisors of N. Y. 1 Hill (N. Y.) 362; and see Carroll v. Board of Police, 28 Miss. 38; State v. Commrs. of Hamilton Co., 26 Ohio St. 364; Portwood v. Montgomery Co., 52 Miss. 523. Compare People v. Supervisors of Westchester, 73 N. Y. 173; People v. Greene County Supervisors, 14 Abb. (N. Y.) N. Cas. 29; Thurston v. Elmira Auditors, 80 N. Y. 80.

When the county court has refused the application of a creditor of the county, whose claim has been reduced to judgment, for a warrant on the treasury payable out of a particular fund, it will not be compelled, by mandamus, to change its decision and grant the warrant; 1st, because its action on the application is judicial; 2nd, because an appeal lies from its order to the circuit court. State v. Macon Co. Court, 68 Mo. 29.

When a board of supervisors have acted on a claim and disallowed it, a writ of mandamus will not be issued to reverse or renew its judgment, even when the statute denies any other remedy. Tilden v. Sacramento Co., 41 Cal. 72.

A succeeding board of county commissioners has no authority to review and revise the action of its predecessor in auditing and allowing a claim against the county. State v. Kirby, 17 S. Car. 563.

2. Board of Supervisors v. Catlett's Exrs. (Va.), 9 S. E. Rep. 999.

3. Township Board etc. v. Boyd, 58 Mo. 276; Bates v. Porter, 74 Cal. 224; Haumeister v. Porter (Cal. Pac. Rep. 187. Compare State v. Board of Council (N. J.), 18 Atl. Rep. 571.

4. Lancaster Co. v. State, 13 Neb. 523; Com. v. Commrs. of Philadelphia Co., 1 Whart. (Pa.) 1; Com. v. Commrs. of Phila., 2 Whart. (Pa.) 286; Com. v. Commrs. of Lancaster Co., 6 Binn. (Pa.) 5; People v. Haws, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 59; Talbot v. Mayor etc., Bay City (Mich.), 38 N.W. Rep. 890; State v. Calhoun, 27 La. An. 167; Stevens v. Saginaw County Supervisors, 62 Mich. 579; Murphy v. Reeder, Township Treasurer, 56 Mich. 505; Ex parte Tully, 4 Ark. 220; State v. Neely (S. Car.), 9 S. E. Rep. 664; Dubordieu v. Butler, 49 Cal. 512. Compare State v. Hoffman, 35 Ohio St. 435; Johnston v. Sacramento County Supervisors, 65 Cal. 481.

The relator must show that respondent is in charge and control of funds legally applicable to the demand. State v. Smith, 8 S. Car. 127; State v. Jumel, 31 La. An. 142.

The county court will not be compelled, by mandamus, to issue a warrant on the common fund of the county for the payment of railroad bonded indebtedness when the result would be to withdraw from the treasury all the money left within the officers' control from which he may make payment to the person who should have received it.¹ So it will not lie to compel payment from a special assessment which has been adjudged invalid.²

The fact that there are no funds in the treasury to meet expenses necessarily incurred is no reason why the proper officers should not audit such an account, though it might necessarily delay the payment. They may be compelled to do so by mandamus.³

If there are funds in the treasury and the claim has been allowed by the proper officers, mandamus is the proper remedy to compel the auditor to issue a warrant for such claim.⁴

In proceedings by mandamus to compel the auditor to pay a warrant the court is not authorized to ascertain the difference in funds necessary for the support of the county government, and thus to disrupt and disorganize it. State v. Macon Co. Court, 68 Mo. 29.

Under Rev. St. Ill., 1889, ch. 113, § 41, which provides that when municipal bonds are declared void by the courts, and there remains in the State treasury a balance of funds to the credit of the bond fund of such municipality, and there are no other valid bonds issued by it, the auditor of public accounts shall draw his warrant for the amount of such balance, which shall be paid thereon to the municipality, mandamus will not lie to compel the auditor to draw his warrant for the balance due to the credit of void county bonds, where there are outstanding valid bonds of such county to which the balance in the treasury may be legally applied, and the proportion of such balance that belongs to the void bonds has not been ascertained. Swigert v. Hamilton Co. (Ill.), 22 N. E. Rep. 609.

In Campbell v. Polk Co., 49 Mo. 214, it was held that when a county warrant was made payable out of a particular fund the holder of such warrant, after such fund had been exhausted, could not recover against the county in an action thereon. In Pettis Co. v. Kingsbury, 17 Mo. 479, it was held that a contractor who had built a bridge to be paid for out of the road and canal fund could not compel the county to pay a warrant (drawn payable out of said fund) with the common fund of the county.

1. People v. O'Keefe, 100 N. Y. 572.

2. People v. East Saginaw, 40 Mich. 336.

3. People v. Supervisors, 22 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 71; Buffington v. Clinton, 28

La. An. 132; State v. Dubuclet, 28 La. An. 85; State v. Clinton, 28 La. An. 47; State v. Clinton, 28 La. An. 72.

4. State v. Buckles, 39 Ind. 272; Clarke v. Jersey City, 42 N. J. L. 94; State v. Stone, 69 Ala. 206.

A contract of county commissioners for the recopying of the plats of the county for use in the auditor's office, the estimated expense of which exceeds five hundred dollars under the statute is void, as against the county, unless it be made with the lowest responsible bidder in accordance with the provisions of the statute. Where such contract is made in disregard of the provisions of the statute, a mandamus will not be awarded to compel the auditor of the county to draw a warrant on the treasurer for the payment of the sum allowed by the commissioners as the amount due on the contract. Ohio v. Yeatman, 22 Ohio St. 546.

Mandamus is the appropriate remedy to compel the county treasurer to pay when he refuses to pay a demand which the board of supervisors have legally audited or allowed, or directed to be paid. People v. Edmonds, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 468.

Where the county court refuses to draw their warrant on the treasurer of the county, directing him to pay an account which has been allowed by the circuit court to the clerk of said court for office rent, a mandamus is an appropriate remedy to compel them to do so. Boone Co. v. Todd, 3 Mo. 140.

A school township trustee can be compelled by mandamus to apply the tuition funds received by him to the payment of the township's indebtedness for tuition. State v. Coopridger, 96 Ind. 279.

value indicated. When anything remains to be done or fact to be ascertained, relief cannot be afforded by mandamus.¹

12. Laches.—Mandamus will not issue to enforce payment of a claim against a county after unreasonable delay on the part of the petitioner for the writ.² So it will not issue to compel the meeting of directors of two municipal subdivisions to agree on a division of assets where they cannot agree.³

13. Statute of Limitations.—Mandamus against disbursing officers is barred by the statute of limitations.⁴

XI. MUNICIPAL TAXATION.—Mandamus will lie against a municipal corporation to compel the proper authorities thereof to levy a tax for the purpose of raising money to pay its debts when the duty is so plain and imperative as to admit of no element of discretion in its exercise.⁵

1. Clayton v. McWilliams, 49 Miss. 311; Board of Police v. Grant, 9 S. and M. (Miss.) 77, 90; Swan v. Work, 24 Miss. 439.

2. State v. Appleby, 25 S. Car. 100. See Board of Supervisors of Catlett's Exrs. (Va.), 9 S. E. Rep. 999.

3. Case v. Blood, 68 Iowa 486.

4. Auditor v. Halbert, 78 Ky. 577; Prescott v. Gonser, 34 Iowa 175; Board of Supervisors v. Gordon, 82 Ill. 435. See State v. Halliday, 60 Mo. 596.

In New York, under section 414 of the code of civil procedure, the time within which mandamus may be resorted to is the same as that within which an action may be brought to obtain a remedy for the same injury. People v. French, 12 Abb. (N. Y.) N. Cas. 156.

In Ohio there is no statutory limitation as to the time within which mandamus may be obtained. But it is held that in determining what constitutes such unreasonable delay as will justify the refusal of the writ, regard may be properly had to the circumstances which justify the delay, to the character of the case, to the nature of the relief demanded and to the question whether or not the defendant or other persons have been injured by the delay. Chinn v. Trustees, 32 Ohio St. 236.

In some of the states it is held that there is no statute of limitations which cuts off the right of a party to apply for the writ. State v. Kirby, 17 S. Car. 563; Klein v. Supervisors of Smith Co., 54 Miss. 254; State v. Meagher, 57 Vt. 398; People v. Supervisors of Westchester, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 446.

5. Coy v. Lyons City Council, 17 Iowa 1; s. c., 85 Am. Dec. 539; State v. Jackson Co. Commrs., 19 Fla. 17; Palmer v. Stacy, 44 Iowa 340; Labette

Co. v. United States, 112 U. S. 217; Wisdom v. Memphis, 2 Flipp. (U. S.) 285; Kelly v. Wimberly, 61 Miss. 548; Klein v. Supervisors of Smith Co., 54 Miss. 254; Board of Police v. Grant, 9 S. and M. (Miss.) 77; s. c., 47 Am. Dec. 102; State v. New Orleans, 36 La. An. 687; State v. Davenport, 12 Iowa 335; State v. Milwaukee, 25 Wis. 122; State v. Smith, 11 Wis. 65; Watts v. Police Jury of Carroll, 11 La. An. 141; Cape v. Collins, 37 Ark. 649; United States v. City of Sterling, 2 Biss. 408; Labette Co. Commissioners v. United States, 112 U. S. 217; Deere v. Rio Grande Co., 33 Fed. Rep. 823; City of East St. Louis v. United States, 7 S. Ct. Rep. 739; Tarver v. Commissioner's Court, 17 Ala. 527; People v. Supervisors of Columbia Co., 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 363; Lee Co. v. State, 36 Ark. 276; People v. Bennett, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 480; People v. Supervisors of Chenango, 8 N. Y. 317; Knox v. Aspirwall, 24 How. (U. S.) 376; People v. Zilwaukee, 10 Mich. 274; State v. Buchanan, 24 W. Va. 362; Boro v. Phillips Co., 4 Dill. 216; Morgan v. Commonwealth, 55 Pa. St. 456; State v. Harris, 17 Ohio St. 608; Cass Township v. Dillon, 16 Ohio St. 38; Wilkinson v. Cheatham, 43 Ga. 258; People v. Supervisors Herkimer, 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 452; People v. Supervisors of Otsego, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 564; State v. Harris, 17 Ohio St. 608; Morgan v. Commonwealth, 55 Pa. St. 456; Rodman v. Larue Co., 3 Bush (Ky.) 144; Lutterloh v. Cumberland Co., 65 N. Car. 403; Pegram v. Cleveland Co., 64 N. Car. 557; Schoolbred v. Corporation of Charleston, 2 Bay. (S. Car.) 63; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 535; Supervisors v. United States, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 435; Mayor v. Lord, 9

If the board of supervisors have no power or authority under the statute to levy a tax to pay an indebtedness, a court cannot confer upon them the power, and hence cannot compel them by mandamus to levy the tax.¹ Nor will a municipal corporation be compelled by mandamus to levy a tax in excess of the amount authorized by law for the payment of a judgment against the corporation.² Nor will it lie to compel the levy of a tax for the payment of county orders drawn on a fund which is exhausted.³ So if the amount of indebtedness by the city authorities be uncertain and unliquidated,⁴ or the validity of the claim is questioned, the writ of mandamus will not lie to compel the levy of a tax to pay the debt.⁵

Mandamus will lie to enjoin collection of a tax under a new law, until its alleged unconstitutionality can be determined.⁶

Wall. (U. S.) 409; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 575; Galena v. Amy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 705; Lehigh Coal & Navigation Co.'s Appeal, 112 Pa. St. 360; Justices of Clark v. Paris etc. Co., 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 154; People v. Schenectady, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 408; Nelson Co. Court v. Washington Co. Court, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 96.

Where the circuit court has jurisdiction of the subject matter and of the parties in a suit against a municipal corporation, its judgment against the corporation, until reversed or set aside, is absolutely conclusive in a proceeding by mandamus to compel the corporate authorities to levy and collect a tax to discharge the same, as to the right of the plaintiff therein to receive and the duty of the defendant to pay the amount of it. Cairo v. Campbell, 116 Ill. 305.

The circuit court may by mandamus compel the county court to levy a county tax to pay a bill for medical services rendered a poor negro woman afflicted with small-pox, under the employment of the county judge. Rodman v. Larue Co., 3 Bush (Ky.) 144.

Mandamus will not be withheld because the superintendent has made an ineffectual attempt at an assessment. Himmelmann v. Cofran, 36 Cal. 411.

Orders were drawn by highway commissioners upon a township treasurer, payable out of any funds in the treasury belonging to a road district. On application for a mandamus to compel the township to levy taxes for payment of these orders, it was held that since the township did not appear to have had the benefit, either rightfully or wrongfully, of the district fund, the mandamus must be denied. People v. Zilwaukee, 10 Mich. 274.

Relevy.—Except at the time fixed for levying general taxes, a mandamus will not lie to compel the council of a "city of the second class" to reassess and relevy an informal tax under laws of 1867, 120. State v. Wyandotte, 4 Kan. 430.

1. Patterson v. Spearman, 37 Iowa 36; State v. Shreveport, 29 La. An. 658; U. S. v. Town of Guttenberg, 39 N. J. L. 660; State v. Maysville, 12 S. Car. 76; State v. Fournet, 30 La. An. 1103; State v. County of Macon, 99 U. S. 582; State v. Davenport, 12 Iowa 335; Coy v. Lyons City Council, 17 Iowa 1. See Supervisors v. Klein, 51 Miss. 807; U. S. v. New Orleans, 2 Woods 230; Vance v. Little Rock, 30 Ark. 435.

Mandamus will not lie to compel county authorities to lay a tax for payment of warrants, where the question of incurring the debt was not submitted to popular vote as required by law, and the relator acquired the warrants with notice of the facts. Pach v. Supervisors of Presque Isle, 36 Mich. 377.

2. U. S. v. County of Macon, 99 U. S. 582; People v. Haws, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 440.

3. Cabaniss v. Hill, 74 Ga. 845.

4. State v. Board of Education West Point, 50 Miss. 638. See Lehigh Coal & Nav. Co.'s Appeal, 112 Pa. St. 360; Sheridan v. Fleming, 93 Mo. 321.

In State v. Trustees etc., 61 Mo. 155, it was held that the claim must be first reduced to judgment as contemplated by the statute before mandamus would lie to levy a tax.

5. State v. Manitowoc, 52 Wis. 423.

6. State v. Young, 38 La. An. 923.

Respect must be had to the law fixing the time and prescribing the mode for levying and collecting taxes. Taxes cannot be levied or collected at any other time nor in any other manner than that designated by law.¹

1. The Levy of Tax to Pay Judgment.—That a mandamus is generally the proper remedy to enforce the levy of taxes for the payment of judgments against municipal corporations when the ordinary process of execution is inadequate seems both to follow from the reason of the thing and to be settled by many adjudications.² Usually the money required to satisfy such judgment must be the proceeds of taxation.³ The duty to pay is clearly and conclusively established by the judgments, and execution failing, all ordinary legal remedy is exhausted, so that the conditions which justify a resort to mandamus exist, viz., a clear legal right requiring the performance of a specific duty and no other adequate means of redress.⁴ The United States courts have frequently employed the writ for this purpose. And the supreme courts hold that its propriety is no longer questionable.⁵ Nor is

1. Supervisors v. Klein, 51 Miss. 807.

2. Cairo v. Everett, 107 Ill. 75.

3. Coy v. Lyons City Council, 17 Iowa 1; Galena v. Amy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 705.

4. Olney v. Harvey, 50 Ill. 455. See Louisiana v. St. Martin's Parish Police Jury, 111 U. S. 716.

Mandamus to compel the levy of a tax to pay a judgment against a county is in the nature of an execution, and the county cannot deny the effect of the judgment. Harshman v. Knox County, 122 U. S. 306.

5. Cairo v. Everett, 107 Ill. 75; State v. Madison, 15 Wis. 30; State v. Supervisors of Beloit, 20 Wis. 79; Wells v. Town of Mason, 23 W. Va. 456; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 562; State v. Milwaukee, 20 Wis. 91; State v. Racine, 22 Wis. 258; Gorgas v. Blackgouch v. Gregory, 65 N. Car. 143; Lutterloh v. Cumberland Co., 65 N. Car. 403; State v. Jackson County Commrs., 19 Fla. 17; Hitchcock v. Galveston, 4 Woods C. Ct. 308; Coy v. Lyons City Council, 17 Iowa 1; Olney v. Harvey, 50 Ill. 455; Frank v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 680; Galena v. Amy, 5 Wall. 705. See Clay v. McAleer, 115 U. S. 616; Weber v. Lee Co., 6 Wall. (U. S.) 210; Beaulieu v. Pleasant Hill, 14 Fed. Rep. 222; Moore v. Town of Edgefield, 32 Fed. Rep. 498; Boynton v. Newton, 34 Iowa 510; Soutter v. Madison, 15 Wis. 30; State v. Commrs. of Buffalo, 6 Neb. 454; U. S. v. Board of Supervisors, 2 Biss. 77; U. S. v. County Court, 7 S. Ct. Rep. 1171; Devereaux

v. City of Brownsville, 29 Fed. Rep. 742; City of East St. Louis v. U. S., 7 S. Ct. Rep. 739; U. S. v. County Court, 7 S. Ct. Rep. 1171. Compare Georges Creek Coal & Iron Co. v. Allegany County Commrs., 59 Md. 255; State v. St. Martin Parish Police Jury, 33 La. An. 1122.

Where the prayer in a petition for a mandamus is in the alternative, that the defendant, a city, cause a levy of a tax to be made for the payment of a judgment against it, if the money on hand shall be insufficient to discharge the same, a judgment will be authorized directing payment out of a levy made after suit brought, and before the hearing, to the extent authorized by the charter, treating the due proportion of the amount levied as levied for the benefit of creditors of the city, to be so applied when the levy shall be collected. East St. Louis v. Underwood Ex'x, 105 Ill. 308.

A judgment creditor of a municipal corporation entitled by his original contract to be paid out of specific tax levies, which agreement the corporation failed to comply with, is entitled, in mandamus proceedings, to a writ ordering the levy and collection of a sufficient tax to pay his judgment according to the assessment roll of the year in which the levy is made. State v. Police Jury, 111 U. S. 716; s. c., Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 510.

If the charter of a city be repealed, and the territory and inhabitants reorganized into "taxing districts," under it necessary that the creditor should first demand the levy of such tax. The demand of payment is held to include a demand to do any particular thing necessary to such payment.¹

So whenever the duty of levying a tax to satisfy a judgment against a municipal corporation is plainly and specifically imposed by law upon the corporate authorities, or the ordinary remedy by execution is unavailing and it is the plain and unmistakable duty of the corporate officers vested with the taxing power to exercise that power for the purpose of satisfying the judgment, mandamus will go to compel the levying and collecting of the necessary tax.²

the control of commissioners to whom the power of taxation for current expenses and compromise bonds is given, such "taxing district" is the successor of the city in the municipal obligations, and mandamus to the commissioners will lie to enforce by taxation the payment of judgments against the original corporation. Devereaux v. City of Brownsville, 29 Fed. Rep. 742. See State v. Police Jury Parish of Jefferson (La.), 8 So. Rep. 88.

A judgment creditor of a municipal corporation is not entitled to a writ of mandamus to compel the assessment and levy of a tax to pay his claim, when a sufficient tax has already been assessed and levied, but has not been fully collected. Huey v. Jackson Parish Police Jury, 33 La. An. 1091.

1. Cairo v. Everett, 107 Ill. 75; State v. Jacksonville, 22 Fla. 21.

A demand upon a city council for the payment of a judgment recovered against the city, if made at any time before the day fixed by law for the adoption of the ordinance for the levy of the municipal taxes, will be sufficient to justify a proceeding by mandamus to compel the levy of taxes with which to satisfy the judgment. Cairo v. Campbell, 116 Ill. 305.

Where the law authorizing city bonds made it the duty of the council from time to time to levy a tax to pay interest and principal and did not make that duty contingent upon a demand being made; held, that after judgment upon the bonds or coupons, mandamus would lie to compel the levy of a tax to pay the judgment without demand made. State v. Racine, 22 Wis. 259. See Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595.

In a petition for a mandamus to compel a city council to levy a tax for the purpose of paying a judgment against the city, allegations that execution had been issued and returned nulla bona; that the relator "has demanded payment of said judgment of the treasurer of said city, and the said treasurer has failed and refused to pay the same or any part thereof;" and "that the common council of said city have failed to make any provision, by the assessment of taxes or otherwise, to pay or satisfy said judgment, but refuse so to do," show a sufficient demand and refusal of payment. State v. Milwaukee, 20 Wis. 87.

2. High on Mand., § 377; Frank v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 668; Coy v. Lyons City Council, 17 Iowa 1; Gorgas v. Blackburn, 14 Ohio 252; State v. Racine, 22 Wis. 258; State v. Milwaukee, 20 Wis. 91; State v. Supervisors, 20 Wis. 79; State v. Madison, 15 Wis. 30; Gooch v. Gregory, 65 N. Car. 143; Supervisors v. U. S., 4 Wall. (U. S.) 435; Lutterloh v. Cumberland Co., 65 N. Car. 403; Galena v. Amy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 705; Benbow v. Iowa City, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 313; U. S. v. Brooklyn, 10 Biss. (U. S.) 466; Welch v. Ste. Genevieve, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 130; U. S. v. Muscatine Co., 2 Abb. (U. S.) 53; s. c. sub nom. Lansing v. County Treasurer, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 522; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 575; Boynton v. District Township of Newton, 34 Iowa 510; Britton v. Platte City, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 1; Mayor v. Lord, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 409; Wisdom v. Memphis, 2 Flipp. (U. S.) 285; State v. Rahway, 43 N. J. L. 338; Stevenson v. District Township, 35 Iowa 462. See also Fisher v. Mayor, 17 W. Va. 628; U. S. v. Vernon Co., 3 Dill. (U. S.) 281; U. S. v. Mobile, 4 Woods C. Ct. 536; Sheridan v. Fleming, 93 Mo. 321; Worthington v. Hilton, 13 L. T. R., N. S. 463; U. S. v. Buchanan Co., 5 Dill. (U. S.) 285.

The judgment conclusively determined that the town was chargeable for the sum for which the judgment

Mandamus will not issue to compel a city to levy a tax to pay a judgment where the facts necessary to the action of the court are not proved,¹ or where the judgment has been obtained by fraud or is dormant.²

2. The Levy of a Tax to Pay Bond Debts.—Mandamus lies to compel a city to levy a tax to pay its bonds or interest on its bond debts, and, for the purpose of doing justice thereby to an individual relator, the court may make a preliminary order separating his portion of the debt from that held by others.³ But it will not issue to pay interest upon bonds where their validity is questioned by the city, and various questions, both of law and of material facts, affecting their validity are raised.⁴

was rendered, and it is the duty of the common council of all towns in the State to annually make up and enter on their journal an accurate estimate of all sums which are or may be lawfully chargeable to such town, and which ought to be paid within the year, and to order a levy of so much as may in its opinion be necessary to pay the same. The payment of such judgment against a town, however erroneous, if no writ of error has been taken, should be so provided for by taxation; and if it be not done and it cannot be collected by execution, its payment should be enforced by mandamus. Wells v. Mason, 23 W. Va. 456.

Duty to Levy a Continuing One.—The duty of levying a municipal tax in satisfaction of a judgment against the corporation is treated as a continuing duty and it does not terminate with the levying of a single tax which is collected only in part, but ends only where the whole amount is collected and the judgment paid. State v. City of Madison, 15 Wis. 30. See also Benbow v. Iowa City, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 313; Robinson v. Butte Co., 43 Cal. 353.

Where the party entitled to the money collected by virtue of a tax levied in aid of a railroad company agrees that, if a designated proportion of the tax is paid within a stipulated time the tax payers shall be released from the payment of the remainder, mandate will not lie to compel collection of the difference between the amount levied and the amount paid under the agreement. Board of Commrs. v. State, 109 Ind. 596.

Where a writ of mandamus commanded a municipal corporation to forthwith levy a specific tax on the taxable property of the city for the year 1865, sufficient to pay a specified judgment, interest and costs, and to collect the tax and pay the judgment, or to show cause to the contrary, by the next term of court, a return "that the defendants, in obedience of the order of the court, did proceed to levy a tax of one per cent upon the taxable property of said city, for the purpose of paying the judgment named, and other claims, and that said tax is sufficient in amount to pay the said judgment and other claims," was held insufficient on demurrer. Benbow v. Iowa City, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 313.

Right to Intervene.—In an action against an officer to compel the performance of a legal duty in the levying of a tax, a tax payer cannot intervene on the ground that the tax would be void when levied. Harwood v. Quinby, 44 Iowa 385.

Power of Federal Courts.—The federal courts may exercise the same authority by mandamus to compel the payment of a judgment against a municipal corporation as may be exercised by the State courts. Riggs v. Johnson Co., 6 Wall. (U. S.) 166.

Appointment of Marshal by Federal Court to Enforce Mandate.—The federal courts have the power to appoint a marshal as a commissioner, to levy and collect a tax against a municipal corporation when the board of supervisors have disobeyed or evaded the law of the State or the peremptory mandate of the federal court. Supervisors v. Rogers, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 175; Lansing v. County Treasurer, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 522.

1. U. S. v. Elizabeth, 24 Fed. Rep. 851.

2. State v. School Dist. No. 2, 25 Neb. 301.

3. Ex parte Parsons, 1 Hugh 282. See Shelley v. St. Charles Co., 30 Fed. Rep. 603; State v. City of Rahway (N. J.), 8 Atl. Rep. 106.

4. State v. Manitowoc, 52 Wis. 423.

Where, on application for mandamus to levy taxes to pay bonds, it appears that the tax, if levied in one year, would be a burden on the tax payers, the court may apportion the levy over such number of years as not to be oppressive.¹

3. Taxation for School Purposes.—Where trustees of a village are required by statute to raise money by the levy of a tax for the support of schools, mandamus will go to compel the levy of such taxes.² So it lies to compel a board of education to appropriate moneys in the treasury for the purpose, towards the payment of negotiable bonds issued for school purposes, or to levy such tax as may be necessary to complete such payment.³

4. Payment of Taxes.—Mandamus lies to compel the proper officer to issue his warrant of distress against a collector of taxes neglecting to collect and pay over the same, according to the assessor's warrant.⁴ So a tax payer, on payment of his taxes, and

1. State v. School Dist. No. 7, 22 Neb. 700.

2. People v. Bennett, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 481.

The writ will lie to require a board of school directors to levy a tax for building a school house, the electors of the school district having voted to erect the house. Cooper v. Nelson, 38 Iowa 440.

A mandamus will lie against the common council of the City of Beaver Dam to compel them to raise by taxation the necessary and proper amount for educational purposes, designed by law when the same has been determined by the board of education of the city. State v. Smith, 11 Wis. 65. See State v. Madison, 15 Wis. 30; State v. Supervisors, 20 Wis. 79; State v. Racine, 22 Wis. 258; State v. Milwaukee, 25 Wis. 122.

The school board of a district having certified to the county commissioners that it was necessary to levy a certain tax on the property of the district for a special fund, as required by Gen. St., Colo., ch. 97, § 67 (Laws 1887, pp. 398, 399), on petition for a mandamus to compel the county commissioners to levy the special tax by the people at the relation of the district, the supreme court has original jurisdiction. People v. Co. Comms., 7 Colo. 190.

A peremptory writ of mandamus will not be issued against a board of county commissioners to compel it to levy taxes upon the taxable property situated within a school district to pay interest, etc., on the bonds of the school district, unless the right is clear and the school district has had an opportunity to be heard. Cassatt v. County Comms., 39 Kan. 505.

Report of Taxes.—On application for mandamus to compel the board of directors of a school district to report to the county board the amount of taxes necessary to be levied and collected for the payment of a judgment against the district, the answer alleged that the court rendering the judgment had no jurisdiction over the defendant; that the judgment was obtained by fraud; and that the judgment was dormant. It appeared that the judgment had been rendered more than five years prior to the commencement of the proceedings, and was dormant, and that in a proceeding to revive the judgment the question of the want of jurisdiction could be litigated. Held, that the application for a mandamus should be dismissed without prejudice in order that proceedings to revive the judgment might be first had. State v. Babcock, 25 Neb. 278.

Refusal to Sign Report.—One B, moderator of a school district, refused to sign a report to the county clerk of the lawful taxes voted by his district at the annual meeting. Held, that it being a duty enjoined by law, he would be compelled by mandamus to sign the same. State v. Studheit, 11 Neb. 359.

3. State v. Board of Education of Perrysburg, 27 Ohio St. 96.

4. Waldron v. Lee, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 323; Tremont School District v. Clark, 33 Me. 482; School District No. 8 v. Perkins, 49 N. H. 538. See Brown v. Crego Treasurer, 32 Iowa 498; State v. Supervisors of Beloit, 20 Wis. 79; State v. Madison, 15 Wis. 30. Compare the tax collector's refusal to give him a receipt therefor, to which he is entitled, has a remedy by mandamus.¹

5. Refunding Taxes Illegally Collected.—When the board of supervisors are authorized to cause taxes illegally assessed and paid in their county to be repaid, and they fail to perform that duty, they will be compelled by mandamus to proceed and perform such duty.² So when required by law to hear and determine applications for the recovery of taxes which have been illegally imposed, they will be required by mandamus to act upon an application of this nature.³

6. Erroneous Assessments.—Mandamus lies to compel assessors to correct an erroneous assessment after their refusal to make the proper correction.⁴ The remedy for an erroneous assessment is by application to the board of equalization from whose decision an appeal may be taken to the circuit court. But the writ will not lie to compel the officers of a county to strike out an assessment alleged to be erroneous.⁵ It lies in behalf of a nonresident illegally assessed to compel the assessors to strike the assessment from the assessment roll.⁶

XII MUNICIPAL AID BONDS.—Where municipal authorities are authorized by law to levy a tax sufficient to pay the interest and State v. Boulton, 26 La. An. 259; State v. Pinckney, 3 Strobb. (S. Car.) 400.

A writ of mandamus will lie to compel the payment by a corporation of taxes assessed, as provided by Vt. Rev. Laws, § 284, on its capital stock owned by nonresidents. St. Albans v. National Car Co., 57 Vt. 68.

Where the party entitled to the money collected by virtue of a tax levied in aid of a railroad company agrees that if a designated proportion of the tax is paid within a stipulated time the tax payers shall be released from the payment of the remainder, mandate will not lie to compel collection of the difference between the amount levied and the amount paid under the agreement. County of Huntington v. State (Ind.), 10 N. E. Rep. 625.

Refusal to Accept Payment of Taxes.

—The State tax collector cannot be compelled by mandamus to receive the three per cent. State bonds called "baby bonds" in payment for lands forfeited to the State and again offered for sale when the property is burdened with back taxes. State v. Houston, 38 La. An. 533.

An application for mandamus to compel respondent to receive certain money in payment of taxes and to furnish receipted bills therefor cannot be construed to be an application to redeem from a tax sale. People v. Cady, 6 N. Y. Supp. 546.

1. People v. Washburn, 20 Cal. 318.

2. People v. Supervisors of Otsego Co., 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 564; People v. Supervisors of Ulster Co., 65 N. Y. 300; People v. Supervisors of Herkimer Co., 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 452; State v. Van Winkle, 46 N. J. L. 117. Compare Younger v. Santa Cruz County Supervisors, 68 Cal. 241; Butler v. Supervisors of Fayette, 46 Iowa 326.

3. People v. Supervisors of Essex Co., 70 N. Y. 228.

Prior to repeal of an act authorizing repayment of certain taxes, a circuit court granted a mandate against a board of commissioners ordering the allowance by them of just claims for the refunding of such taxes. After the passage of the act, the board having refused to allow such claims, an attachment was issued by the court to compel obedience to its mandate, whereupon the board allowed the claims. Held, that the action of the board was a nullity, and vested no rights in the claimants. Henderson v. State, 58 Ind. 244.

4. People v. Olmsted, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 644.

5. Meyer v. County of Dubuque etc., 43 Iowa 592.

6. People v. Barton, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 148.

ultimately satisfy the principal of outstanding bonds of the county, they must fairly exercise their judgment with a view to effect the end contemplated, and if they refuse to do so may be compelled by the writ of mandate.¹

Bonds issued in payment of a subscription to a railroad company, signed by a majority of the court of county commissioners in the presence of the probate judge, who certified to that fact, and for the payment of which it was made the duty of the commissioner's court to levy and assess a special tax each year, are not such claims as need be presented for allowance before commencing suit to enforce their payment.² But the holder who resorts to the courts of the United States must there reduce the bonds or the coupons to judgment before he is entitled to the remedy by mandamus.³

Where a city charter requires a certain per cent. of taxes levied and collected to be devoted to the payment of its bonds and coupons as a class of indebtedness, the recovery of a judgment against the city on such bonds will not merge the indebtedness in the judgment so that it will lose its proper classification. The origin of the debt will fix its classification, which will remain, however numerous the mutations which the form of the debt may undergo.⁴

1. Robinson v. Butte Co., 43 Cal. 353; Columbia Co. v. King, 13 Fla. 421; Pegram v. Cleveland Co., 64 N. Car. 557; State v. Commrs. of Clinton Co., 6 Ohio St. 280; Com. v. Commrs. of Allegheny Co., 37 Pa. St. 277; Com. v. Commrs. of Allegheny, 32 Pa. St. 218; Com. v. Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496; Knox Co. v. Aspinwall, 24 How. (U. S.) 376; Shelby Co. Court v. Cumberland etc. R. Co., 8 Bush (Ky.) 209; Maddox v. Graham, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 56; Commrs. Court v. Rather, 48 Ala. 433; State v. Anderson Co., 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 249; Sedgwick Co. v. Bailey, 11 Kan. 631; Flagg v. Palmyra, 33 Mo. 440; People v. Mead, 24 N. Y. 114. See People v. Supervisors of Ulster, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 59; Cassatt v. Board of Co. Commrs. (Kan.), 18 Pac. Rep. 517; People v. Mitchell, 35 N. Y. 551; Howland v. Eldredge, 43 N. Y. 457; People v. Allen, 52 N. Y. 538; People v. Batchellor, 53 N. Y. 128; People v. Logan Co., 63 Ill. 374; People v. Glann, 70 Ill. 232; People v. Cass Co., 77 Ill. 438; Illinois Midland R. Co. v. Barnett, 85 Ill. 313; Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77; Clarke Co. v. Paris etc. Co., 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 143; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Davidson Co., 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 637; Napa Valley R. Co. v. Napa Co., 30 Cal. 425.

Mandamus will lie against the mayor and common council of the city of Rahway compelling them to raise and collect by tax, as other city taxes are levied and collected, the deficiency as reported to the said common council by the board of water commissioners of said city, on application of a water bond holder, to whom interest on bonds is due. State v. Mayor of Rahway, 9 East Rep. 604.

There are some authorities to the contrary, holding that when the municipality has not entered into any binding contract of subscription with the railroad company, a mandamus will not lie at the instance of the latter. Crawford Co. v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 39 Ind. 192; Sankey v. Terre Haute etc. R. Co., 42 Ind. 402; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Olmstead, 46 Iowa 316.

2. Greene Co. v. Daniel, 102 U. S. 187; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 105; Commrs. Court v. Rather, 48 Ala. 433.

3. Greene Co. v. Daniel, 102 U. S. 187; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 105.

4. East St. Louis v. Underwood Ex'x, 105 Ill. 308.

The charter of East St. Louis limited the right of taxation for all purposes to one per centum per annum on the assessed value of all taxable property in the city, and required the city council to levy a tax of three mills on the dollar on each assessment for general purposes, and apply it to the interest and sinking fund on its bonded debt, held, that the use of the remaining seven-tenths was within the discretion of the municipal authorities, and was not subject to judicial order in advance of an ascertained surplus. East St. Louis v. U. S., 110 U. S. 321.

1. Subscriptions.—Where the board of supervisors of a county are empowered to subscribe for the county to the capital stock of a railroad, they may be compelled to subscribe by writ of mandamus.¹ If a county is compelled by law to make such subscriptions, the corporation must tender its books to the officers of the county and demand the subscription before it can apply for a writ of mandamus.²

2. Issue of Bonds.—Mandamus is the usual and appropriate, if not the only, remedy to compel the issue by a county of its bonds in payment of a subscription to the capital stock of a corporation.³ The municipality may lawfully impose conditions upon which the subscription is to depend, and the corporate bonds to be issued, and until such conditions are complied with the courts will

Title to the Bonds.—In proceedings by mandamus to compel a city to levy a tax to pay a judgment recovered on its bonds, an affidavit by the relator's attorney that the judgment has been assigned to the relator, and that the written assignment is in the affiant's possession, was held to be presumptive evidence of the relator's ownership. State v. Racine, 22 Wis. 258.

Validity of Bond.—On the hearing of an order to show cause why a peremptory mandamus should not issue in a case to enforce the levy and collection of a tax to pay interest upon bonds of a city, the validity of the bonds was questioned by the city, and various questions, both of law and of material facts, affecting their validity were raised. Held, that it was error to grant the writ before the relator had established his right in an ordinary action at law. State v. Mayor etc. of Manitowoc, 52 Wis. 423.

On application for a mandamus to compel a county treasurer to pay over money assessed and collected to pay town bonds, etc., it is a good defense to show that the necessary assent of the tax payers of the town was not obtained to authorize the issuing of such bonds. People v. Mead, 36 N. Y. 224.

1. Napa Valley R. Co. v. Napa Co., 30 Cal. 435.

It was held in Ex parte Selma G. R. Co., 45 Ala. 696, that a writ of mandamus will be granted to enforce a lawful subscription for stock, and the issuance of bonds of the county in payment for the same, if the municipal authorities refuse to comply with the law upon the ground that it is void for want of conformity to the constitution of the State.

As to the jurisdiction of a court of equity to grant relief in cases of a railroad subscription where the plaintiff has an adequate remedy by a suit at law. See State v. McCrillus, 4 Kan. 250.

2. Oroville etc. R. Co. v. Plumas Co., 37 Cal. 354.

The commissioners having elected, in pursuance of the statute to deliver bonds of the county to the company in payment of the subscription, and having become bound to do so and afterwards refusing upon demand to deliver them, and showing no cause for such refusal, except that the act aforesaid was of doubtful constitutionality, a writ of mandamus is the proper remedy to enforce the delivery. Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77.

3. Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Jefferson Co., 12 Kan. 128; Duncan v. Mayor of Louisville, 8 Bush (Ky.) 98. Compare Chicago etc. R. Co. v. St. Anne, 101 Ill. 151.

Where the charter of a railroad company authorized the call of a township election to determine whether the town should subscribe a certain sum to the capital stock of the company upon the petition of ten legal voters of the town, and it appeared that there were but ten names signed to such call and that three of them were aliens and not voters, and that at the election held under such call three votes were cast in favor of the not compel the issuing and delivery of the bonds by mandamus.¹ Where bonds issued by a township on a subscription to the stock of a railroad company are required by law to be countersigned by the town clerk before being delivered, mandamus will go to compel the countersigning of such bonds.²

The refusal of the commissioners of the county to issue and deliver the bonds, however wrongful, is not a breach of the obligation of the county which would give rise to an action against it for the recovery of damages. The breach of obligation in such a case would consist simply in the refusal on the part of the commissioners of the county to perform a ministerial duty the only remedy for which would be a proceeding at law in the name of the railroad company by a writ of mandamus.³

3. Another Action Pending.—The pendency of proceedings quo warranto against the persons claiming to compose a corporation to try their right to exercise corporate powers is no defence to an action for a writ of mandamus brought by the corporation to compel a county to subscribe to its capital stock and issue its bonds therefor.⁴

4. Judgment Upon Municipal Aid Bonds.—Mandamus is the appropriate remedy to compel municipal corporations to comply with their duty of levying and collecting taxes in payment of judgments obtained upon bonds or other obligations of the municipality issued by authority of law in aid of railway and other en-subscription by persons not entitled to vote unless there was a majority of one vote against the proposition, and that these facts were known to the railroad company when they procured the supervisor to make the subscription and issue a part of the bonds of the town; held, on application for a mandamus to compel the supervisor to issue and deliver the remaining bonds, the facts being admitted by demurrer to the return of the writ, that on account of the fraud and illegality in the call and election and the subscription, the company was not entitled to have the bonds issued and delivered, it being a party to the fraud. People v. Cline, 63 Ill. 394.

1. People v. Glann, 70 Ill. 232; People v. Waynesville, 88 Ill. 469. See also People v. Holden, 91 Ill. 446.

Where a township voted a subscription of $50,000 of the capital stock of railway company, to be paid in bonds, under a law providing that no bonds should be delivered nor any payment made under such subscription until an amount of work was done on such road in the town or on such part of the line of the road as the authorities issuing the bonds should designate, equal in value to the amount of bonds to be issued, and the condition of the vote was, that the bonds were to be delivered when work was done in the township to the amount of such bonds; it was held that the building of the road through the town at a cost of only $30,000, or even $41,000, was not a substantial compliance with the conditions and that the court would not compel the issue of the bonds voted. People v. Waynesville, 88 Ill. 469.

When the law requires as a condition to the issuing of such bonds that the assent of a majority of the tax payers should be procured and that the instrument by which such assent is evidenced should be filed and recorded in the county clerk's office, the omission to file and record such assent is sufficient ground for refusing a mandamus to compel the issuing of the bonds to the railway company. High on Ex. Rem., § 389; Essex Co. R. Co. v. Town of Lunenburg, 49 Vt. 143; People v. Trustees of Fort Edward, 70 N. Y. 28.

2. Houston v. People, 55 Ill. 398.

3. Smith v. Bourbon County, 127 U. S. 105; s. c., 22 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 74.

4. Oroville etc. R. Co. v. Plumas Co., 37 Cal. 354.

terprises.¹ The circuit court of the United States has authority to issue the writ in such cases.²

5. Corporation Concluded by Judgment.—A judgment upon municipal aid bonds cannot be collaterally questioned, and when application is made for mandamus to compel a municipal corporation to collect taxes in payment of such judgments the courts will not permit the correctness of the judgment to be impeached.³

6. Surrender of Illegal Bonds.—Municipal aid bonds deposited with the State treasurer under a law which is afterwards declared unconstitutional are in his official custody and he may be compelled to surrender them by mandamus.⁴

XIII. MUNICIPAL OFFICERS AND ELECTIONS—1. Generally.—Mandamus will lie to compel the holding of a municipal election when the duty is clearly obligatory and has been disregarded by the officers entrusted by law with its performance.⁵ So the court

1. High's Ex. Rem., § 393; Supervisors v. United States, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 435; Galena v. Amy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 705; Mayor v. Lord, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 409; United States v. Sterling, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 408; United States v. Lee Co., 2 Biss. (U. S.) 77; Knox Co. v. Aspinwall, 24 How. (U. S.) 376; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 535; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 575; Benbow v. Iowa City, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 313; Welch v. Ste. Genevieve, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 522; United States v. Muscatine Co., 2 Abb. (U. S.) 53.

2. Knox Co. v. Aspinwall, 24 How. (U. S.) 376; Welch v. Ste. Genevieve, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 130; State v. Muscatine Co., 2 Abb. (U. S.) 53; s. c., sub nom. Lansing v. County Treasurer, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 522. Contra, Rusch v. Des Moines Co., 1 Woolw. (U. S.) 313; Rees v. Watertown, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 107; Barkley v. Levee Commrs., 93 U. S. 258.

In Knox Co. v. Aspinwall, 24 How. (U. S.) 376, GRIER, J., said: "By the 14th section of the Judiciary act of 1789 (1 St. at L.) it is enacted that courts of the United States shall have power to issue writs of scire facias, habeas corpus, and all other writs not specially provided for by statute, which may be necessary for the exercise of their respective jurisdictions and agreeable to the principles of the common law.' Now the 'jurisdiction' is not disputed and it is necessary to an efficient exercise of this jurisdiction that the court have authority to compel the exercise of a ministerial duty by the corporation, which by law they are bound to perform, and by the performance of which alone the plaintiff's remedy can be effected. The fund to pay this judgment by the face of the contract is a special tax laid and to be collected by defendants. They refuse to perform a plain duty. There is no other writ which can afford the party a remedy which the court is bound to afford the party, if within its constitutional powers, except that afforded by this writ of mandamus."

3. Supervisors v. United States, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 435.

4. People v. State Treasurer, 23 Mich. 499; La Grange v. State Treasurer, 24 Mich. 468.

5. Sansom v. Mercer, 68 Tex. 488; McConike v. State, 17 Fla. 238; State v. Rahway, 4 Vroom (N. J.) 110; Lamb v. Lynd, 44 Pa. St. 336; People v. Town of Fairbury, 51 Ill. 149; King v. Mayor of Grampond, 6 T. R. 301; People v. Common Council of Brooklyn, 77 N. Y. 503; Attorney General v. City Council of Lawrence, 111 Mass. 90; High on Ex. Rem., § 401; Regina v. Mayor of Bradford, 4 Eng. Law & Eq. 194; State v. Holden, 19 Neb. 249; State v. Twenty-second District Judge, 35 La. An. 637.

Where the president and board of trustees of a town incorporated under the general law have neglected to give the requisite notice for holding the annual election for the new board within the year for which they were elected, as prescribed by law, and refuse afterwards to give notice and call a meeting of the qualified voters of such town for the election of their successors in office, may properly by mandamus require the two branches of a city council to meet in convention as a required preliminary step to the election of someone to an office.¹

The validity of an election may be enquired and determined by mandamus.² But where election officers have proceeded illegally in counting the ballots and made and filed their report with the proper officer, a mandamus will not issue to compel them to reconsider their action or to act in a certain manner.³

The writ of mandamus will be allowed to compel municipal authorities to proceed and determine as to the election of an officer in the mode pointed out by the charter. And when they have proceeded and elected a person to an office in the way prescribed by the charter and refuse to admit him mandamus should be allowed.⁴ The writ will not be granted, however, unless the relator shows a clear right to the remedy, or at least a prima facie title to the office claimed by him.⁵

So mandamus is the proper remedy to invoke in cases involving the doing of what are ministerial acts,⁶ such as the canvass-a mandamus will be awarded compelling them to do so. People v. Town of Fairbury, 51 Ill. 149.

1. Gibbs v. Hampden, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 298; Morse, Petitioner, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 443; Strong, Petitioner, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 484; Rex v. Cambridge, 4 Burr. 2008; King v. Norwich, 1 B. & Ad. 310; Lamb v. Lynd, 44 Pa. St. 336.

A township committee, having exercised its choice to call a special election to choose between two candidates who have had an equal number of votes at an annual township meeting, and having posted notices of such election, may be compelled by mandamus to proceed with the election, as they cannot rescind their action. State v. Boden (N. J.), 16 Atl. Rep. 58.

2. Lawrence v. Ingersoll (Tenn.), 12 S. W. Rep. 422.

3. People v. Reardon, 3 N. Y. 560.

4. Mason Co. v. Minturn, 4 W. Va. 300; Chase v. Blackstone Canal Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 244; Ex parte Secomb, 19 How. (U. S.) 15; Carpenter v. County of Bristol, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 258; Springfield v. Hampden, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 68; United States v. Lawrence, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 42.

5. State v. Rahway, 4 Vroom (N. J.), 111; Supervisors of Mason Co. v. Minturn, 4 W. Va. 300. See also Mayor of Vicksburg v. Rainwater, 47 Miss. 547; State v. Board etc. of Trenton, 17 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. (N. J.) 296; see Klokke v. Stanley, 109 Ill. 192; s. c., 9 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 465; People v. Village of Crotty, 93 Ill. 180; Ex parte Harris, 52 Ala. 87; People v. Trustees, 86 Ill. 613; People v. Lieb, 85 Ill. 484; Ex parte Many, 14 How. (U. S.) 24; Ex parte Cutting, 94 U. S. 14; Re Morris, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 292; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. (3rd ed.), § 828; People v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 55 Ill. 95; Commissioners of Highways v. People, 66 Ill. 339; People v. Elgin, 66 Ill. 507; People v. Dulaney, 96 Ill. 503; People v. Johnson, 100 Ill. 537.

The relator was a candidate for mayor. He received a sufficient number of votes to elect him, but was refused a certificate of election by the board of canvassers on the ground that he was disqualified to hold the office. Application was made for a peremptory writ of mandamus to compel them to grant the certificate. The return showed that the relator did not possess the qualification of inhabitancy; and the writ stated, "And if, perchance, construed not to have been an inhabitant of said city for one year, yet," etc. Held, that if the relator was disqualified, he had no right, at the hand of the court, to be armed with a certificate of election.—evidence of title to that to which he has no right. State v. Newman, 17 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. (Mo.) 516.

6. State v. Cummings, 17 Neb. 311; State v. Batt, (La.), 4 So. Rep. 495; State v. Parish of St. Bernard (La.), 2 So. Rep. 305; State v. Sovereign, 17 Neb. 173; Dickson v. Hill, 75 Ga. 369; State v. Mayor etc., 43 N. J. L. 542; Ramsey v. Clerk of Township, 52

ing of election returns,¹ the issuing of certificates of election to Mich. 344; State v. Wilson (Neb.), 38 N. W. Rep. 31; Monroe Supervisors v. State, 63 Miss. 135; People v. Purviance, 12 Ill. App. 216; People v. French, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 263; People v. New York Police Board, 107 N. Y. 235; East Boston Ferry Co. v. Boston, 101 Mass. 488; Hawley v. Fairbanks, 108 U. S. 543; State v. Meadows, 1 Kan. 90; State v. Palmer, 18 Neb. 644; Parker v. Hubbard, 64 Ala. 203; Roberts v. Davidson, 83 Ky. 279; State v. Magill, 4 Kan. 415; State v. Shakespeare (La.), 6 So. Rep. 592; Rainey v. Clydelette, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 122; Bledsoe v. International R. Co., 40 Tex. 537; People v. Registrar of Arrears (N. Y.), 20 N. E. Rep. 611; Ridley v. Dougherty (Iowa), 42 N. W. Rep. 178; McDiarmid v. Fitch, 27 Ark. 106; People v. Taylor, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 129.

City Marshal.—Under a city ordinance providing that the city marshal shall report to the city council "the names of all persons or firms engaged in the liquor traffic, and the place of business of each, and whether licenced or unlicenced, and shall notify any unlicenced liquor dealers to at once cease such traffic, and shall make complaint against all persons selling liquor without licence." Held, that the marshal's duty applied as well to wholesale as to retail liquor sellers, and for his neglect a private citizen might maintain mandamus. State v. Cummings, 17 Neb. 311.

County Superintendent.—Where, as by the Nebraska statute, the county superintendent of schools has authority to change the boundaries of school districts, so that all children may have the opportunity to attend school, the court will not interfere with his action. State v. Palmer, 18 Neb. 644.

County Treasurer.—Mandamus will not lie to compel a county treasurer to certify that all taxes are paid when taxes remain unpaid, although the same are illegal. Smith v. Schroeder, 15 Minn. 35 (Gil. 18) commented upon. State v. Nelson (Minn.), 42 N. W. Rep. 548.

Canvassers.—The powers of canvassers are, generally, ministerial only, and the regularity of their proceedings may, therefore, be enquired into by mandamus. People v. Grand County Commrs., 6 Colo. 202.

County Clerk.—Neb. Comp. St. 1885,

ch. 26, § 103, directing the county clerk to fill vacancies in town offices by appointment, applies to the offices of the town board and town clerk in a new town, and mandamus will issue to compel the performance of the duty. State v. Forney, 21 Neb. 223.

Town Clerk.—A writ of mandamus will issue to compel a town clerk to record the proceedings of a town meeting, as publicly declared by the moderator; also to correct his record to conform to such declaration. Hill v. Goodwin, 56 N. H. 441.

Recorder.—Mandamus will lie to compel the recorder of a village to fulfil the duty, imposed upon him by the charter, of advertising and selling lands returned for delinquent paying taxes; and he cannot refuse to do so on the ground that he believes the action of the council in laying the particular tax to be illegal, especially if the proceedings are sufficiently fair on their face to protect ministerial action, and the work has been done and the tax in a great measure paid in. Common Council of Hudson v. Whitney, 53 Mich. 158.

1. Hudson v. Slaughter, 70 Ala. 546; Long v. State, 17 Neb. 60; Davidson v. Smith, 20 Iowa 466; State v. Cavers, 22 Iowa 343; Atty. Gen. v. Barstow, 4 Wis. 749; People v. Van Cleve, 1 Mich. 362; Thompson v. Circuit Judge, 9 Ala. 338; Mayo v. Freeland, 10 Mo. 629; State v. Rodman, 43 Mo. 256; State v. Steers, 44 Mo. 223, 229; Bacon v. York Co. Commrs., 26 Me. 491; Taylor v. Taylor, 10 Minn. 107; O'Ferrall v. Colby, 2 Minn. 180; Marshall v. Kerns, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 68; State v. Wilson (Neb.), 38 N. W. Rep. 31; Territory v. Bernalillo Co., 20 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. (New Mex.) 44; State v. Carney, 3 Kan. 88; 4 Wait, Act. & Def. 369; Kisler v. Cameron, 39 Ind. 488; People v. Hilliard, 29 Ill. 419; In re Strong, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 484; High, Extr. Rem., §§ 60, 61; People v. Supervisors of Kern, 47 Cal. 205.

When a peremptory writ of mandamus has issued to a board of canvassers to count what purport to be election returns, they have no power to say that these are not returns. Rice v. Smith, 9 Iowa 570.

In Bull v. Southwick, 2 New Mex. 321, Justice Bristol, whose opinions are always able, in delivering the opinion of the court in that case, made some observations worthy to be quoted and considered. In commenting on the history of the case then before him, he said: "As such board of canvassers they assumed judicial power to pass upon the illegality of and reject votes without any other ceremony than because partisan bystanders challenged them as illegal. In this way hundreds of votes were thrown out and the result of the election arbitrarily changed. This is but another illustration of what experience has long since demonstrated, which is, that if such judicial power should be conferred on mere canvassing boards, to be exercised at the close of a hotly contested election, in the absence of real parties interested, and almost always with the partisan advisers of such boards in the background, their sitting would be marked by the exercise of arbitrary power that would be more aggressive and odious than that of the ancient court of star chamber."

Authority to Exclude Votes.—The general rule is, subject to modification by statute, that the powers of canvassers are ministerial, simply involving the labor of counting the votes returned, and determining who has received the highest number; they have no judicial power to reject votes polled. The regularity of their proceedings may be enquired into on mandamus. People v. Grand Co. Commrs., 6 Colo. 202.

In Brown v. Commrs., of Rush Co., 38 Kan. 436, it was held where election returns are regular in form, and genuine, a canvassing board has no authority to determine whether illegal votes have been received and included in said returns; and where, upon such investigation and determination, certain votes are excluded from such returns and canvass by said canvassing board, such exclusions are erroneous, and such canvassing board may be compelled by mandamus to reconvene, and recanvass such returns.

In Lewis v. Commrs., 16 Kan. 102, it was said: "It is a common error for a canvassing board to overestimate its powers. Whenever it is suggested that illegal votes have been received, or that there were other fraudulent conduct and practices at the election, it is apt to imagine that it is its duty to enquire into these alleged frauds, and decide upon the legality of the votes." But this is a mistake. Its duty is "almost wholly ministerial. It is to take the returns as made to them from the different voting precincts, add them up, and declare the result. Questions of illegal voting and fraudulent practices are to be passed upon by another tribunal." Also, see State v. Stevens, 23 Kan. 456; State v. Commissioners, 23 Kan. 268; Hagerty v. Arnold, 13 Kan. 367; Dalton, clerk, v. State, 11 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 81.

It was held in State v. Stevens, 23 Kan. 456, however, that the court would not compel the canvassing board of a county to canvass the returns where it was shown that the returns were so grossly and manifestly untrue as to be of no value in ascertaining the will of the people.

Counting Votes as for Separate Persons.—In State v. Williams, 95 Mo. 541, it was held that where, in an election, votes were given for Matthew Ryan, Mattias Ryan, and M. Ryan, and the recorder counted them as for one person—Matthew Ryan—mandamus to compel him to count the votes as given for separate persons will not lie, there being no averment that Matthew Ryan, Mattias Ryan, and M. Ryan are not the same person. The court said: "It needs no citation of authorities to establish the proposition that the duty of respondents, in canvassing the returns of said election, are purely ministerial, and that words readily distinguishable in sound are not idem sonans; but it does not follow from this that Mattias was not intended for Matthew, or that initials prefixed to a surname may not identify the person. The rule governing in canvassing returns is stated by COOLEY as follows: 'The action of such boards is to be carefully confined to an examination of the papers before them, and a determination of the result therefrom, in the light of such facts of public notoriety connected with the election as everyone takes notice of, and which may enable them to apply such ballots as are in any respect imperfect to the proper candidates or officers for which they are intended, provided the intent is sufficiently indicated by the ballot, in connection with such facts, so that extraneous evidence is not necessary for this purpose.' Cooley, Const. Lim. 623. In the case of State v. Foster, 38 Ohio St. 599, the above rule is quoted, and was acted upon; and it is there held, 'that when the returns showed that votes were cast for H. L. Morey, and were counted by the canvassers for Henry L. Morey, it not being averred that H. L. and Henry L. are not the same persons, mandamus will not issue to compel such votes to be counted for the person entitled thereto,¹ and the issuing of a commission to a claimant duly elected.²

The writ has been granted against commissioners appointed by the county court to open the gates of a turnpike road.³ It has been sustained in favor of a teacher of a common school against the county trustee in his capacity as treasurer of the school board of directors.⁴ It has been deemed the appropriate and only adequate remedy on behalf of a teacher who has rendered services in accordance with law, and who is entitled to payment out of the school fund, to compel the necessary officers to draw their order for the payment of the money.⁵ And the proper remedy against the officers of a school district requiring them to conform to the law or to reinstate a teacher whom they have removed without authority for so doing.⁶ But it will not issue to two persons.' This ruling was made in view of the authorities (they having been cited in that case) to which counsel for relator have cited us. It will be found, upon examination of the cases cited, that none of them were proceedings by mandamus, but by quo warranto. It will be observed that in this case it is not alleged either that M. Ryan, Mattias Ryan, and Matthew Ryan are different persons, or that the vote was cast for different persons. Had these allegations been made, the trial court would, under our ruling in the case of State v. Garesche, 65 Mo. 480, have investigated the question, and ascertained the specific legal duty of respondents in the premises. It is there held that, before issuing a writ of mandamus to a ministerial officer, the court must ascertain what is his specific duty in the premises."

Mandamus to recanvass the votes cast at an election cannot be maintained pending proceedings by the relator to contest the election. State v. Matley, 17 Neb. 564.

1. Thompson v. Judge, 9 Ala. 338; State v. Judge, 13 Ala. 805; Clark v. McKenzie, 7 Bush (Ky.) 523; Kisler v. Cameron, 39 Ind. 488; State v. County Judge, 7 Iowa 186; Barnes v. Gottschalk, 3 Mo. App. 111; Barnes v. Gottschalk, 3 Mo. 222; State v. Bailey, 7 Iowa 390; Strong v. Petitioner, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 484; Roberts v. Rivers, 27 Ill. 242; Ingerson v. Berry, 14 Ohio (Ill.) 315; Territory v. Bernalillo Co., 20 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. (N. M.) 44. Compare Pond v. Parrott, 42 Conn. 13; Lawrence v. Ingersoll (Tenn.), 12 S. W. Rep. 422; State v. Garesche, 3 Mo. 526.

Where a court has to judicially determine that a candidate was legally elected, and a certificate is necessary for the purpose, the proper officers may be compelled to issue it. Burke v. Monroe Co., 4 W. Va. 371.

Mandamus will not lie to give a certificate of election to one who does not possess the requisite qualifications. State v. Newman, 91 Mo. 445.

Mandamus to compel a county clerk to issue a certificate of election to a person shown by the returns to have been legally elected was denied when it would not have given substantial relief, and the question might be raised again in an issue as to the accuracy of the returns or by proceedings in the nature of quo warranto. Sherburne v. Horn, 45 Mich. 160.

The election of a person to an office who does not possess the requisite qualifications gives him no right to hold the office, and a writ of mandamus will not lie to give him a certificate of election therefor. State v. Newman, 91 Mo. 445.

2. Smith v. Easton County Supervisors, 56 Mich. 217; Clark v. McKenzie, 7 Bush (Ky.) 523; State v. Gibbs, 13 Fla. 55; Ellis v. Bristol Commrs., 2 Gray (Mass.) 370; State v. Robinson, 1 Kan. 17; State v. County Judge, 7 Iowa 186; Kisler v. Cameron, 39 Ind. 488; In v. Strong, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 484; People v. Rives, 27 Ill. 242; People v. Hilliard, 29 Ill. 419; Brower v. O'Brien, 2 Ind. 423.

3. White Creek Turnpike Co. v. Marshall, 2 Baxt. (Tenn.) 104.

4. Arrington v. Cotton, 1 Baxt. (Tenn.) 316.

5. Apgar v. Trustees, 5 Vroom (N. J.) 308.

6. Gilman v. Bassett, 33 Conn. 298.

control the discretion of a public officer¹ or to correct judicial errors.²

Mandamus does not lie to compel officers to allow a claim; the power of the court in that proceeding extends no further than to require them to act upon it.³ So it does not lie to compel them to perform their general official duties in a particular manner.⁴

2. Mandamus to Admit to Municipal Office.—Mandamus will lie to compel a municipality to admit to office any person duly and properly elected where there is a vacancy in the office and no one claims to be holding the same.⁵ Where an office is already filled by an actual incumbent, exercising the functions of the office de facto and under color of right, mandamus will not lie to compel the admission of another claimant, nor to determine the disputed

People v. Van Sicler, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 537. As to college professor, see Bracker v. William and Mary College, 3 Call (Va.) 573.

A mandamus will lie at the instance of a teacher of a public school under a valid contract to compel the directors of a school district who had unlawfully removed him to reinstate him as teacher, and to issue to him an order or warrant on the proper disbursing officer of the school fund for the instalments of his salary. Morley v. Power, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 691.

1. U. S. v. New Orleans, 31 Fed. Rep. 537; Davison v. Solano County Supervisors, 70 Cal. 612; Wintz v. Charleston Education Board, 28 W. Va. 227; State v. Police Jury, 39 La. An. 759; People v. Commrs. of Highways, 118 Ill. 239; Springfield v. Hamden, 42 Pick. (Mass.) 59; Woodman v. Somerset Co. Commrs., 11 Shep. (Me.) 151; Mayor etc. v. Rainwater, 47 Mass. 547; State v. Clary (Neb.), 41 N. W. Rep. 256.

Mandamus will not lie to control the discretion of county supervisors in appointing road overseers on petition under Cal. Code, § 2642, as amended in 1883. Davison v. Solano County Supervisors, 70 Cal. 612. Or the board of education or its president in approving the trustee's appointment of teachers. Wintz v. Charleston Education Board, 28 W. Va. 227.

Election Inspectors.—In canvassing the votes cast at an election the inspectors refused to count a certain ballot for the relator because his name, as it appeared thereon, was scratched. The marks over the name were such as to call for an exercise of judgment by the inspectors as to whether it had been scratched or whether it was the intention of the person casting it to vote for the relator. Held, that this exercise of judgment by the inspectors could not be controlled by mandamus. State v. Deane, 23 Fla. 121.

2. Weeden v. Town Council of Richmond, 9 R. I. 128; State v. Nemaha County Commrs., 10 Neb. 32.

3. Portwood v. Supervisors of Montgomery, 52 Miss. 523.

4. People v. Whipple, 41 Mich. 548; State v. Dubuclet, 28 La. An. 698.

Mandamus will not lie against a county auditor to compel the entry of taxes on the tax duplicate until the time for making up such duplicate comes. Zanesville v. Auditor of Muskingum Co., 5 Ohio St. 589.

5. Atty. Gen. v. Mayor, 128 Mass. 312; King v. Slatford, 5 Mod. Rep. 316; State v. Harlam County, 25 Neb. 33; McDermott v. Miller, 45 N. J. L. 253; State v. Rahway, 33 N. J. L. 111; State v. Kennv., 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 349; State v. Auditor, 36 Mo. 70; Lindsley v. Tuckett, 20 Tex. 516; Morley v. Power, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 691; Putnam v. Langley, 133 Mass. 204; People v. Matteson, 17 Ill. 167; People v. Head, 25 Ill. 287; People v. Hilliard, 29 Ill. 413; People v. Detroit, 18 Mich. 338; State v. Dunn, Minor (Ala.) 46; People v. Scrugham, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 302; People v. Trustees of Saratoga Springs, 7 N. Y. Supp. 125; Ex parte Diggs, 52 Ala. 381; Ex parte Wiley, 54 Ala. 226; People v. Board of Police etc., 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 535. See People v. Board of Police, 9 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 257; State v. McCullough, 3 Nev. 202; Clayton v. Carey, 4 Md. 26. Compare Hildreth v. Heath, 1 Ill. App. 82.

The courts will not aid by mandamus an officer, illegally elected, in getting title.¹ Nor will mandamus lie to put one in possession of an office to which his term has expired pending the proceedings,² or to induct a person into office during the pendency of an appeal in quo warranto between the same parties.³

The writ of mandamus is issued to admit to office not only the person who claims a right by election or appointment but also one who, having been admitted by election or appointment, has since been improperly removed.⁴

The charge of improper amotion from office may be based on the lack of good cause or the want of proper formalities, such as notice, opportunity to be heard, etc. It may therefore well be that a good cause for amotion existed, yet that the removal was erroneous because no notice was given, etc. But in such cases it is well settled that a mandamus to restore to office will possession of the office to which he claims to have been elected. Beal v. Ray, 17 Ind. 554.

1. Lewis v. Whittle, 77 Va. 415; s. c., 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 271; Ellison v. Aldermen of Raleigh, and note, 80 N. Car. 125; s. c., 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 477; State v. Kenny, 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. and note, 349; Kelley v. Edwards, 69 Cal. 460; People v. New York, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 79; St. Louis Co. v. Sparks, 10 Mo. 118; State v. Auditor, 36 Mo. 70; People v. Matteson, 17 Ill. 167; People v. Head, 25 Ill. 287; People v. Hilliard, 29 Ill. 413; State v. Delieesseline, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 52; Bonner v. State, 7 Ga. 473. But see Harwood v. Marshall, 9 Md. 83; State v. Falconer, 44 Ala. 696; In re Reid, 50 Ala. 439; Rex v. Winchester, 7 Ad. & El. 215; Regina v. Derby, 7 Ad. & El. 419; Regina v. Slatter, 11 Ad. & El. 502; Regina v. Leeds, 11 Ad. & El. 512; Rex v. Sawyer, 10 B. & C. 486; Frost v. Chester, 5 E. & B. 531; Harwood v. Marshall, 9 Ind. 83; Strong's Case, 20 Pick. 497; People v. Stevens, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 616; People v. Kilduff, 15 Ill. 492; In re Diggs, 52 Ala. 381; Lindsey v. Luckett, 20 Tex. 516; State v. Pilot, 21 La. An. 336; Frey v. Michle (Mich.), 36 N. W. Rep. 184; State v. John, 81 Mo. 13; Underwood v. White, 27 Ark. 382; Biggs v. McBride (Oreg.), 21 Pac. Rep. 878; People v. Stephens, 2 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. N. S. 348; Banton v. Wilson, 4 Tex. 400; Sudbury v. Stearns, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 148. Compare Conlin v. Aldrich, 98 Mass. 557; Harwood v. Marshall, 9 Md. 83; Putnam v. Langley, 133 Mass. 204; People v. Scrugham, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 302; Ex parte Heath, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 42.

Mandamus is not the proper remedy to try the title to a public office. The proceedings should be by quo warranto. Meredith v. Supervisors of Sacramento, 50 Cal. 433; Warner v. Myers, 4 Oreg. 72; Denver v. Hobart, 10 Nev. 28; Brown v. Turner, 70 N. Car. 93.

The court, on a petition for mandamus to obtain possession of an elective office, that, for example, of clerk of court, will not go behind the certificate of election if the petitioner has taken the oath and given bond. State v. Dodson, 21 Neb. 218; State v. Jaynes, 19 Neb. 161.

2. Fitzpatrick v. Kirby, 81 Va. 467; Woodbury v. County Commrs., 40 Me. 304.

3. Hannon v. Halifax County Commrs., 89 N. Car. 123.

4. Moses Mand. 129; High Ex Rem. § 67; Howard v. Gage, 6 Mass. 462; Strong. Petitioner, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 484, 495.

A mandamus will lie to restore to his office an inspector of tobacco removed by an irregular summary proceeding. Singleton v. Commissioners, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 105.

Mandamus is an appropriate remedy whereby the county court may be compelled to show cause why they refuse to approve and qualify a deputy appointed by the sheriff. From the judgment of the circuit court in such proceedings an appeal lies to the court of appeals. Applegate v. Applegate, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 236.

A mayor of a city cannot be compelled to make a nomination to the board of aldermen for the office of chief of police while a person is holding that office de facto and no one but the incumbent is claiming it, and while not issue, notwithstanding the applicant has a perfect title.¹ So a writ of mandamus will not be allowed for the purpose of enquiring into the qualifications of electors or the legality of an election as affected by matters not apparent on the face of the returns.²

When it is used to place a person in possession of an office it confers no right. It merely places him in possession to enable him to assert his right, which in some cases he could not otherwise do.³ The writ will not lie to prevent a person from being disturbed or molested in the exercise of the functions and powers pertaining to his office.⁴

3. Commissioners—Generally.—Where a public duty is imposed upon county commissioners for public reasons, in the exercise of which there is no discretion left to them, mandamus is the appropriate remedy to compel the performance of that duty.⁵ But an information in the nature of a quo warranto is pending to try his title to the office. Attorney General v. New Bedford, 128 Mass. 312. See Oakes v. Hill, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 47; Strong's Case, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 484; Ellis v. County Commrs., 2 Gray (Mass.) 370.

A writ of error may issue from the Supreme Court of the United States to a judgment of a circuit court of the United States awarding a peremptory mandamus to restore to office where the matter in controversy is sufficient to give jurisdiction to the court. Columbian Ins. Co. v. Wheelwright, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 534.

1. High Ex Rem, § 70; Rex v. Campion, 1 Sid. 14; Rex v. Axbridge, Cowp. 523; Rex v. New Castle, Bull. N. P. 207.

In King v. Bristol, 1 Dow. & R. 389, the court said: "It would be a very extraordinary proposition if the court thought itself warranted in commanding a corporate body to restore a person to office from which they had removed him from what appeared to them to be a sufficient cause when the very next moment they might exercise the same right on precisely the same grounds." See State v. Teasdale, 21 Fla. 652.

2. State v. County of Coahoma (Miss.), 3 So. Rep. 143.

The aldermen of a city, in canvassing the election returns, determined that the relator had been elected mayor, but declined to direct the clerk to issue the certificate of election, basing their refusal upon the fact that relator was not an inhabitant of the city as required by law. Held, that the election of a person to an office who does not possess the requisite qualifications gives him no right to hold the office or to claim a certificate of election; and his application for a writ of mandamus against the aldermen must therefore be refused. State v. Aldermen of Pierce City (Mo.), 3 S. W. Rep. 849.

3. Brower v. O'Brien, 2 Carter (Ind.) 423.

4. Legg v. Mayor of Annapolis, 42 Ind. 203.

5. Richards v. County Commrs. etc., 120 Mass. 401; State v. Young, 84 Mo. 90; Gather v. Green (La.), 4 So. Rep. 210; Chance v. Temple, 1 Clark (Iowa) 179; People v. Commrs. (Ill.), 22 N. E. Rep. 596; Ex parte Jennings, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 518; Throckmorton v. State, 20 Neb. 647; State v. Board etc., 101 Ind. 398. See Pfister v. State, 82 Ind. 382; State v. Commrs. of Belmont, 31 Ohio St. 451; U. S. v. County Commrs., 1 Morris (Iowa) 42; Knox Co. v. Aspinwall, 24 How. (U. S.) 376; State v. Commrs. of Baltimore, 46 Md. 621; McLaughlin v. County Commrs., 7 S. Car. 375; State v. Ryan, 2 Mo. App. 303; People v. Jeffreds, 4 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 398; Kuechler v. Wright, 40 Tex. 601; Noble County Commrs. v. Hunt, 33 Ohio St. 169; Com. v. County Commrs., 6 Whart. 476.

A mandate will lie against a board of county commissioners to compel them to take action upon the petition of a taxpayer of a township asking them to take stock in a railroad company to the amount of money collected on a tax voted for that purpose. Pfister v. State, 82 Ind. 382.

Mandamus lies to compel county commissioners to act after proper application under Swan & C., Ohio Stat.

not to revise the exercise of a discretionary power.¹ Mandamus will not lie to compel county commissioners to revise their decision on a complaint for the abatement of a tax.² To revise their decision upon the merits of the claim of an owner of land for damages sustained by the construction of a railroad.³ To order a part of the expense incurred by a town in making a highway to be repaid out of the county treasury.⁴ To summon a jury to make an entirely new line of way from one terminus to another⁵; to pay a disputed bill until their liability is fixed by action,⁶ or to enforce the performance of duties not imposed by statute.⁷

(a) OPENING HIGHWAY.—A mandamus lies to compel commissioners to open a road laid out by the judges of the court on an appeal to them from the refusal of such commissioners to lay out the road.⁸ It will be granted without regard to the near approach, with reasonable promptness in either approving or disapproving the duties of a county recorder elect. State v. Commrs. of Belmont, 31 Ohio St. 451.

1. State v. Fire Commrs. of Cleveland, 26 Ohio St. 24; Respublica v. County Commrs. of Philadelphia, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 181; Rose v. County Commrs., 50 Me. 243; Proprietors of Kennebec Toll Bridge, Petitioners, 11 Me. 263; Com. v. County Commrs., 6 Whart. (Pa.) 476; State v. Board of Commrs., 119 Ind. 444; Woodman v. Somerset, 24 Me. 151.

The action of highway commissioners in refusing to have what is claimed to be a public road ascertained and recorded will not be controlled by mandamus. People v. Hulse, 38 Hun (N. Y.) 388.

Fixing Compensation for Disabled Policemen.—The court will not interfere by mandamus with the action of the New York police commissioners in fixing the compensation for sick and disabled policemen. People v. French, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 263.

2. Gibbs v. Hamden, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 298; Morse, Petitioner, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 443.

3. Smith v. Mayor and Aldermen of Boston, 1 Gray (Mass.) 72.

4. Ipswich Petitioners, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 343; Springfield v. Hampden, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 59.

5. Gloucester v. Essex, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 375.

6. Hester's Case, 2 Watts & S. (Pa.) 416.

7. State v. Knox County Commrs., 101 Ind. 398.

Where county commissioners are required by statute to perform a particular act not embraced in their general duties as commissioners, no appeal lies from their proceedings in the case, and the performance may be enforced by mandamus. U. S. v. County Commrs., 1 Morris (Iowa) 42.

8. People v. Champion, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 61; see Hill v. Worcester Co. v. Gray (Mass.) 414; Jones v. Justices, 1 Leigh (Va.) 584.

Mandamus will not be granted pending another action. Oswego Highway Commrs. v. People, 99 Ill. 587.

Where a peremptory writ of mandamus has been awarded against commissioners of highways, requiring them to open a certain road, it seems that it will be a sufficient excuse, on the part of the commissioners, for not obeying the writ, that after the writ was awarded, and before it was issued and served, the road thereby directed to be opened was vacated by an order of the same commissioners, made in pursuance of statute authority. Swan Commrs. v. People, 31 Ill. 97.

On an application for a peremptory writ of mandamus to compel county commissioners to open a road in their county, established by a special act of the legislature, which declared that the location should be complete on the filing of the plat and field notes of the survey in the registry of deeds of the counties through or into which the road passed,—the defendants having denied the filing of the plat, etc., as required by the statute,—it was held, that the writ could not issue. Warner v. Hennepin Co. Commrs., 9 Minn. 139.

proach of the expiration of their offices; when the term of office expires their successors must obey the command of the writ.¹ So it lies to compel the county commissioners to issue their warrant for empanelling a new jury where one jury has already been summoned and acted without being able to agree.² Mandamus will lie to compel a township committee to assign a road to the overseers of the highways.³

(b) BRIDGES AND HIGHWAYS.—Mandamus will issue to compel the performance of the quasi public duty of building and keeping in repair necessary bridges or causeways.⁴ To compel a board of commissioners to approve or disapprove bridge plans submitted in accordance with statutory provision.⁵ So on application to a judge for the appointment of commissioners to condemn lands he may be compelled to act if such duty is imposed by statute and such a case is made as the statute directs.⁶

1. People v. Collins, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 56.

2. Mendon v. Worcester, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 235.

3. Anonymous, 7 N. J. L. (2 Hals.) 192.

4. State v. Bramwell (Kan.), 18 Pac. Rep. 952; State v. Demaree, 80 Ind. 519; State v. Gibson Co. Commrs., 80 Ind. 478; State v. Cloud County Commrs., 39 Kan. 700; Howe v. Crawford Co., 47 Pa. St. 361; see People v. Supervisors of Dutchess, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 50; People v. Supervisors of New York, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 362; Brander v. Chesterfield Judges, 5 Call (Va.) 548; Haines v. People, 19 Ill. App. 354; Com. v. Justices, 2 Va. Cas. 499; Com. v. Justices of Fairfax Co., 2 Va. Cas. 9; State v. Ousatonic Water Co., 51 Conn. 137. Compare State v. Coleman, 33 Mo. App. 470.

In Howe v. Crawford Co., 47 Pa. St. 361, it was held that the duty enjoined upon the commissioners to repair bridges would be enforced by mandamus.

It was conceded in People v. Dutchess Co., 1 Hill (N. Y.) 50, that the duty to keep bridges in repair was an imperative one, but a doubt was suggested as to whether the remedy for a failure to perform it would be by an indictment or by mandamus. The court of appeals of Virginia, in Brander v. Chesterfield Judges, 5 Call (Va.) 548, held that county officers could be compelled by mandamus to repair a public bridge. The same general doctrine is declared in Pumphrey v. Mayor etc., 47 Md. 145; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 446; and in Co. Commrs. etc. v. Duckett, 20 Md. 468.

Where the city council is obliged to keep a street in repair, if they suffer it to so far fall into disrepair as to prevent passage thereon in carriages, and to render it dangerous for people having houses thereon to pass to and fro, and to endanger said houses, the abutters thereon have cause of action by reason of the special injury done to them, and may have mandamus to issue to the council. Hammar v. Covington, 3 Met. (Ky.) 494.

Mandamus will not issue to compel highway commissioners to rebuild bridges, if they neither have the necessary means nor the power to procure the means by taxation. Bloomington Highway Commrs. v. People, 19 Ill. App. 253; see Justices v. Munday, 2 Leigh (Va.) 165; State v. Board of Commrs., 119 Ind. 448.

Private Bridge.—The court cannot, under the Michigan statute (How. Stat., § 1379), compel the township commissioner to declare a private bridge a highway or require him to expend money of his township upon its repair. The public necessity of a bridge must be determined by the local authorities, and not by the courts. Travis v. Skinner, 72 Mich. 152.

Approach to Bridge.—County commissioners cannot be compelled by mandamus to construct an approach to a county bridge, erected by them on the site indicated by the bridge viewers, where the bridge does not connect with a public highway, as the commissioners have no power to appropriate private land, or to lay out a highway to the bridge. Com. v. Loomis, 128 Pa. St. 174. 5. Commrs. v. Board of Public Works, 39 Ohio St. 628.

6. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Wilson, 27

(c) OBSTRUCTIONS IN STREETS AND HIGHWAYS.—Where the charter gives the city council full power to keep in repair the streets and to provide for keeping them in repair and to prohibit obstructions therein, mandamus is the proper remedy.¹ But if there is a remedy at law for obstructing a public highway and will afford a remedy convenient, beneficial and effectual in its nature, as a mandamus to compel the opening of the highway, a mandamus will not be awarded.² Nor will it be allowed when the legal existence of the road as a public road is in question.³

(d) ALLOWANCE OF FEES.—Where fees are to be determined by county commissioners or by a county court, mandamus will not lie to compel their allowance.⁴

4. Supervisors.—Where a board of supervisors have a discretion in the performance of certain duties and have once acted and exercised their discretion, a mandamus will not lie to compel them to act further.⁵ Mandamus will not lie to compel them to

Ill. 128; Illinois Central R. Co. v. Rucker, 14 Ill. 353.

To Vacate a Road.—In New Jersey, a mandamus will lie to the court of common pleas to make an appointment of surveyor to vacate a road which has been laid out and recorded, though never opened, where, after a proper application, they have refused to make such appointment. State v. Judges, 4 Halst. (N. J.) 246.

1. People v. Bloomington, 63 Ill. 207; Hammar v. Corington, 3 Met. (Ky.) 494; State v. Orange, 2 Vroom (N. J.) 131; Uniontown v. Com., 34 Pa. St. 293; People v. Thompson, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 93; People v. Commrs. (Ill.), 22 N. E. Rep. 596; Patterson v. Vail, 43 Iowa 142.

In such case mandamus will lie against a road supervisor to compel the removal of a fence or other obstruction placed by him across such highway. Larkin v. Harris, 36 Iowa 93; Patterson v. Vail, 43 Iowa 142.

Mandamus will not issue to compel the removal by a city officer of a structure in a public street in a sparsely populated part of the city erected by a railroad corporation under color of legislative authority. People v. Manhattan R. Co., 20 Abb. (N. Y.) N. Cas. 393.

It is no reason for refusing a writ of mandamus to compel a public officer to abate a nuisance in a city street, that there are thousands of similar nuisances. People v. Newton, 20 Abb. (N. Y.) N. Cas. 386.

2. Commrs. etc. v. People, 73 Ill. 203; Commrs. of Highways of Yorktown v. People, 66 Ill. 339.

3. State v. Buhler, 90 Mo. 560.

Where a substantial doubt exists as to the right or power of an officer to perform a duty, mandamus will not lie to compel him to do so; it will not lie to compel a road overseer to remove an obstruction from a public road where there is a question as to the legal existence of the road as a public road. State v. Buhler, 90 Mo. 560.

4. State v. County Court, 83 Mo. 559.

The reason for this decision is that mandamus never lies to compel the performance of a discretionary judicial act, such as the allowance of fees. State v. Marshall, 82 Mo. 484; another reason exists where the claimant may appeal from the decision of the county court or county commissioners. This remedy being adequate excludes mandamus. Boisliniere v. Board of Co. Commrs., 32 Mo. 375. See also, in this connection, Williams v. Judge of Cooper Court, 27 Mo. 225; Blecker v. St. Louis Law Commr., 30 Mo. 111; State v. Macon Co. Court, 68 Mo. 48; State v. Lafayette Co., 41 Mo. 22; Miltonberger v. St. Louis Co. Court, 50 Mo. 172; State v. Byers, 67 Mo. 706.

5. People v. Supervisors of St. Lawrence, 30 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 173; Ex parte Farrington, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 407; People v. San Francisco, 27 Cal. 655; Welch v. Board of Supervisors, 23 Iowa 199.

Wis. Rev. Stat., ch. 19, § 113, confers on town supervisors the power of deciding upon the necessity of building or repairing bridges, where the cost of issue a certificate to one whom they have declared not elected,¹ or to compel them to lay out a road where the necessary proceedings before them have not been had.²

Where a specific duty is imposed on the supervisors by statute and they do not conform to the statute, mandamus will issue to compel them.³ It will issue to compel supervisors to admit and allow the claims of county officers,⁴ or to compel a board of supervisors to levy a tax to repay a sum collected as a tax contrary to law, which the legislature have directed them to repay.⁵

5. De Facto Officers.—An officer de facto while in office may be compelled to perform official acts in behalf of another which the duties of such office dictate.⁶ Mandamus will not lie to eject a municipal officer de facto acting under color of right.⁷

6. To Compel Delivery of Books, Records, etc.—Mandamus affords the proper remedy to compel a county officer, duly removed, to surrender the office, books, records, etc.⁸ Or when an officer has resigned his office and his successor has been duly appointed and qualified and entered upon his duties,⁹ and it is not necessary to allege in the application that such successor is eligible to the office, as is the case in quo warranto to try title.¹⁰ But a mandamus will not issue to recover the records of an office from an individual who does not pretend to hold them by virtue of office.¹¹ so doing will not exceed $300, and their judgment on that question cannot be controlled by mandamus. Winslow v. Mt. Pleasant, 16 Wis. 613.

1. Magee v. Supervisors, 10 Cal. 376.

2. State v. Supervisors, 9 Wis. 554.

3. Adrian v. Supervisors of N. Y., 12 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 224. See People v. Supervisors, 21 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 322; Boycé v. Supervisors of Cayuga Co., 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 294; People v. Chenango, 8 N. Y. (4 Seld.) 317.

4. People v. Supervisors of New York, 32 N. Y. 473. See People v. Supervisors, 24 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 119; People v. Supervisors, 28 Cal. 421.

5. People v. Supervisors of Otsego, 36 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 1.

6. Kelly v. Wimberly, 61 Miss. 548; People v. Treasurer of Ingham, 36 Mich. 416.

Contracts of Officer De Facto.—Where de facto officers of a municipality, being the governing body, contracted a debt on behalf of the municipality, passed the claim and ordered the treasurer to pay the bill, and the treasurer, having funds of the municipality, refused to pay upon presentation of the order duly signed, mandamus against the treasurer is the proper remedy to compel payment. State v. Philbrick, 49 N. J. L. 374.

7. French v. Cowan, 79 Me. 426.

8. State v. Meeker, 19 Neb. 444; McGee v. State, 103 Ind. 444; Nelson v. Edwards, 55 Tex. 389; Com. v. Athearn, 3 Mass. 287; Taylor v. Henry, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 397; Hauffman v. Mills (Kan.), 18 Pac. Rep. 516. See Welchans v. Shirk, 98 Pa. St. 17.

Where the relator's rights to possession of the books and papers, to procure which the writ is applied for, cannot be determined without an investigation into the respondent's right to the office whereof he is the de facto incumbent, mandamus will not lie. State v. Williams, 25 Minn. 340.

A committee appointed by a town to audit the accounts of the overseers of the poor, and to demand and receive from them the books of account belonging to the town, held by the overseers in their official capacity, have no such property in the books as will authorize them to apply in their own names for a mandamus to compel the surrender of the books. Bates v. Plymouth, 14 Gray (Mass.) 163.

9. McGee v. State, 103 Ind. 444; Nelson v. Edwards, 55 Tex. 389; Runion v. Latimer, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 126.

10. McGee v. State, 103 Ind. 444.

11. Hussey v. Hamilton, 5 Kan. 462.

7. Public Records.—The power of a town clerk to amend his records is confined to the individual whose duty it was originally to make them, and is allowed to him only while he is in office, and against the abuse of this power the law has provided safeguards, not only in the selection of the officer and the sanctions it imposes upon him, but in the provisional remedy it affords by writ of mandamus.¹

Mandamus will lie to correct clerical errors in the assessment rolls while yet in the hands of the assessor.² So it lies to compel a county treasurer to permit the inspection of liquor bonds filed in his office.³

8. Removal of County Seat and County Offices.—Mandamus lies to compel the county commissioners to remove or locate the county seat.⁴ But where a statute requires, as a condition precedent to removal of a county seat, a bond to convey to the county a certain quantity of land at the new location, mandamus will not lie to compel the county commissioners to remove the county seat when they refuse because an invalid bond is tendered them.⁵

Mandamus lies to compel the county officer to keep his office at the county seat.⁶

Mandamus will not lie to compel a mere private person to deliver to the county clerk a book of surveys and plats of the county roads, although the same were made under order of the county court, and paid for by the county. State v. Trent, 58 Mo. 571.

1. Boston Turnpike Co. v. Pomfret, 20 Conn. 590.

Clerk of School District.—The court will not grant a writ of mandamus, requiring the clerk of a school district to amend his records, where it appears that he has ceased to be clerk, and thus removed without the jurisdiction of the court. Mason v. School Dist. No. 14, 20 Vt. 487.

2. People v. Wilson, 7 N. Y. Supp. 627.

3. Brown v. County Treasurer, 54 Mich. 132.

4. State v. Fetter, 12 Wis. 632. See Sauls v. Freeman, 24 Fla. 223. See State v. Juneau Co., 38 Wis. 554; Tithe-row v. Grundy County Court, 9 Mo. 118.

Mandamus does not lie to contest an election for the relocation of a county seat, Kan. Laws 1869, ch. 27, furnishing an adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law. State v. Stockwell, 7 Kan. 98.

5. Condit v. Board of Commrs., 25 Ind. 422.

6. Rice v. Shay, 43 Mich. 380; State v. Weid, (Minn.), 40 N. W. Rep. 561;

State v. Board of Co. Commrs., 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. (Kan.) 43. See People v. Grew, 29 Mich. 121.

In an action brought to compel a sheriff to keep his office at the county seat, upon his answer that the town named is not the county seat, the validity of a law or election changing the county seat may be tried. State v. Saxton, 11 Wis. 27.

In an action of mandamus, brought in the supreme court in the name of the State of Kansas, by the attorney general, to compel the county officers of a certain county to hold their offices at the town of K, which is alleged to be the county seat of the county, held, that the supreme court has jurisdiction to hear and determine the case, although in the determination thereof it may be necessary to determine the result of an election held in the county to permanently locate the county seat of such county, and for frauds perpetrated in one of the townships of such county, to wholly ignore the returns from such township and the canvass thereof, and the declaration made by the board of canvassers that a place other than K had become by such election the permanent county seat of the county. State v. Board of Commrs., 35 Kan. 640.

On mandamus to compel county officers to remove their offices to another town, in accordance with the vote of

XIV. MUNICIPAL IMPROVEMENTS—1. Generally.—Where the duty of making local improvements, such as streets, highways or bridges, or of keeping them in repair, is imposed upon municipal corporations, mandamus will lie to compel the performance of that duty.¹ But will not issue to compel highway commissioners to levy a tax for and to open a road or build a bridge where there is no clear duty on the part of the highway commissioners to do the act sought to be coerced.²

Where citizens construct part of a bridge or highway and the public authorities accept and treat it as a part of the public highway, it will be deemed such, and the rights and obligations existing with reference to it will be the same as though the county officers had themselves built it.³

2. Erection of Public Buildings.—Where the statute provides for the erection of certain public buildings by an inferior court, mandamus is the proper remedy to compel them to do it.⁴

3. Contracts of Municipalities.—When a municipal corporation has legally contracted for certain work to be done, and to be paid for in a certain specified way, the corporation may, on the completion of the work, be compelled by mandamus to carry out the electors, held, that the mere charge by defendant that the election was fraudulent, without alleging specific acts, was not sufficient. Hunter v. Patterson, 14 Neb. 506.

In an action of mandamus brought in the supreme court by the attorney general in the name of the State, to compel county officers to hold their offices at a certain town, which is alleged to be the county seat, the court may go behind the election returns for fraud. State v. Hamilton County Commrs., 35 Kan. 640.

1. State v. Demaree, 80 Ind. 519; State v. Board of Commrs., 80 Ind. 478; Uniontown v. Com., 34 Pa. St. 296; Commrs. of York Co. v. Com., 72 Pa. St. 24; Ottawa v. People, 48 Ill. 233; People v. San Luis Obispo Co., 50 Cal. 561; People v. Bloomington, 63 Ill. 207; State v. Supervisors of Wood Co., 41 Wis. 28; Trustees v. Kinner, 13 Bush (Ky.) 334; Pumphrey v. Mayor of Baltimore, 47 Md. 145; Richards v. Co. Commrs., 120 Mass. 401; People v. San Francisco, 36 Cal. 595; Hammar v. Covington, 3 Met. (Ky.) 494; People v. Collins, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 56; People v. Brooklyn, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 404; Uniontown v. Com., 34 Pa. St. 293; Com. v. Justices, 2 Va. Cas. 9. Compare Reading v. Com., 11 Pa. St. 196; People v. Champion, 16 Johns. (N.

Y.) 61; Perrine v. Township Board, 48 Mich. 641.

The case of Uniontown v. Com., 34 Pa. St. 296, decides that mandamus will lie to compel the officers of a municipal corporation to keep its streets in repair. A provision in the charter of the city of Covington imposed upon the corporate officers the duty of repairing streets, and it was held that the court could compel the performance of the duty by mandamus. Hammar v. Covington, 3 Met. (Ky.) 494. Mandamus was held to be the appropriate remedy to compel a municipal corporation to repair its streets in the case of People v. Bloomington, 63 Ill. 207, where it was said: "The charter gives the city council full power to keep in repair the streets, and to provide for keeping them in repair, and to prohibit obstructions therein. This power is granted to be exercised for the public benefit, and its execution can be insisted on as a duty. Bloomington v. Bay, 42 Ill. 503; Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Black. (U. S.) 418."

2. Com. v. People, 99 Ill. 587; State v. Wood County, 72 Wis. 629.

3. State v. Demaree, 80 Ind. 519; Shear. & Red. Neg., § 246; Angell Highways, § 38; State v. Campton, 2 N. H. 513; Watson v. Proprietors etc., 14 Me. 201.

4. Com. v. Justices of Hamden, 2

the stipulations as to payment contained in the contract.¹ So where an officer is required by statute to enter into a contract for paving certain streets the performance of such act will be enforced by mandamus, though the municipality have made no appropriation for its part of the cost.²

4. Estimates.—Mandate lies against a city as a corporation at the suit of a contractor to compel the making of correct estimates of work done by him in the improvement of its streets, according to the terms of his contract, so far as the same may be chargeable to abutting real estate.³ Or at the instance of a citizen and tax payer to compel the council to pass upon estimates of expenses incurred by the employment of examiners under the civil service act by the mayor.⁴ But a bidder on proposals for estimates has no ground for a mandamus, as he has no cause of action and no clear legal right until a contract is made with him and approved by the common council.⁵

5. Discretion of Municipal Authorities.—Where municipal authorities are vested with discretionary powers and are required to exercise their own judgment in making local improvements, mandamus will not lie to control them in the manner of conducting the general duties of their office.⁶

6. Payment and Assessment of Damages.—Mandamus will lie on refusal of public officers to pay damages which have been assessed.⁷ It will lie to enforce the levy of taxes and the collection of damages,⁸ or to issue the bonds authorized for that purpose. Pick. (Mass.) 414; People v. Common Council, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 473; Manor v. McCall, 5 Ga. 522.

1. State v. Mayor etc. of New Orleans, 29 La. An. 868.

If one whose bid for a public work has been accepted by a city has a clear right to the contract, mandamus will not lie to compel the commissioner to execute it; the proper remedy being by an action against the city for damages. If his right is not clear, the writ will also be denied. People v. Campbell, 72 N. Y. 496.

2. Com. v. Dickinson, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 561.

In Com. v. McFadden, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 161, it was held that mandamus would not issue against the chief engineer of the water department to compel him to lay pipe on a certain street, when it is not alleged that there has been an appropriation by the city councils, which will enable the chief engineer to contract for and proceed with the work.

3. Wren v. Indianapolis, 96 Ill. 206. See Indianapolis v. Patterson, 33 Ind. 157.

4. People v. Buffalo Common Council, 16 Abb. (N. Y.) N. Cas. 96.

5. People v. Croton Aqueduct Board, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 240.

6. State v. Essex, 3 Zab. (N. J.) 214; Hill v. Worcester Co., 4 Gray (Mass.) 414; State v. Police Jury of Jefferson, 22 La. An. 611; Mayor v. Roberts, 34 Ind. 471; County of St. Clair v. People, 85 Ill. 396; Haskins v. Supervisors, 51 Miss. 406; Hitchcock v. County Comrs., 131 Mass. 519; Rice etc. Machine Co. v. Worcester, 130 Mass. 575; State v. Morris, 43 Iowa 192; State v. Henry Co., 31 Ohio St. 211; Dickerson v. Peters, 71 Pa. St. 53; Com. v. Henry, 49 Pa. St. 530; Travis v. Skinner (Mich.), 40 N. W. Rep. 234.

7. Justices of Williamson Co. v. Jefferson, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 419; Treat v. Middleton, 8 Conn. 243; People v. Lowell, 9 Mich. 144; State v. Keokuk, 9 Iowa 438; Trustees of the Wabash & Erie Canal v. Johnson, 2 Cart. (Ind.) 219; People v. Supervisors of Westchester, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 64; Minhinnah v. Haines, 29 N. J. L. (5 Dutch.) 388; Wilson v. Berkstresser, 45 Mo. 283.

8. Miller v. Bridgewater, 24 N. J. L. 54; Johnston v. Supervisors, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 272; State v. Keokuk, 9 Iowa pose,¹ or to draw the proper vouchers² or warrants,³ or to audit the accounts and collect the damages,⁴ and to compel the county commissioners to estimate damages caused by injuries done by a railroad company to buildings near the line of their road.⁵

The supposed irregularities in the proceedings of the commissioners would not vitiate and avoid the assessment as against the city. Nor can the respondent be heard to allege, on return to a mandamus, that the charges were exorbitant or that the amount is incorrect, or take advantage of any irregularities in the proceedings,⁶ especially when possession has been taken.⁷

Mandamus lies to compel the court of sessions that improperly and without good cause rejects the verdict of a jury summoned and empanelled to estimate the damages occasioned to any person by the laying out of a highway to do right and accept the verdict.⁸ If it is shown that the road has never been opened or used and that there were irregularities in the laying out, the court will refuse a mandamus to compel the payment of damages.⁹

Where a board of supervisors refuse to act on a report and refuse to make the proposed road a highway, and to declare it open, etc., the mandate can proceed no further than to order them to take action on the report.¹⁰

XV. FORM OF THE WRIT—1. Alternative and Peremptory Writs Defined.—The alternative writ is issued upon the first application for relief commanding the defendant either to perform the act demanded or to show cause, why he does not, before the court at a time and place named. If defendant attends and shows sufficient cause, judgment passes in his favor and the writ is dismissed. If the cause shown is insufficient, or if he makes default, a peremptory writ is issued containing an absolute unqualified command that he shall do the act in question.¹¹

438; Brock v. Hishen, 40 Wis. 674; Higgins v. Chicago, 18 Ill. 276.

1. Duncan v. Louisville, 8 Bush (Ky.) 98.

2. Ryan v. Hoffman, 26 Ohio St. 109.

3. Rudisill v. State, 40 Ind. 485.

4. State v. Wilson, 17 Wis. 687.

5. Dodge v. Essex, 3 Met. (Mass.) 380; Carpenter v. Bristol, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 258.

6. Higgins v. Chicago, 18 Ill. 276; People v. Lowell, 9 Mich. 144.

Upon an application for a mandamus, directing the common council of a city to open a street laid out by them, the court will not notice a formal irregularity in the report of the commissioners appointed to assess damages to landowners, not affecting the right which the petition seeks to enforce, although it might, upon certiorari, invalidate the proceedings of the commissioners. State v. Orange, 2 Vroom (N. J.) 131.

7. Higgins v. Chicago, 18 Ill. 276.

8. Com. v. Norfolk, 5 Mass. 435; Com. v. Middlesex, 9 Mass. 388.

9. People v. Scio, 3 Mich. 121.

10. People v. Cortelyou, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 164; Regina v. Sheriff of Middlesex, 5 Q. B. 365; People v. Lake Co., 33 Cal. 487.

11. 2 Abb. L. Dict. 77. The alternative writ issues in the earlier stages of the cause in some cases upon a rule to show cause, in others upon a formal petition or application without such rule. In either event, its purpose is one and the same, namely, to apprise the respondent of the nature and grounds of the relator's claim for relief, and to afford him an opportunity of performing the act required, or of showing cause to the contrary. It therefore concludes with a clause in the alternative, commanding the respondent to perform the duty in question or show cause to the court by a given day why he should not perform it, and it is from this clause that the alternative writ derives its name. It follows, necessarily, from the object as well as the structure of the alternative writ that it admits of an answer or return, in which the respondent may set forth the reasons why he should not yield obedience to the mandate of the court. The peremptory mandamus is the final mandate of the court granted after full hearing and satisfactory proof commanding the respondent forthwith to perform the duty in question. High Ex. L. Rem., § 529.

2. Alternative Writ.—An alternative writ of mandamus is in the nature of a declaration in an ordinary suit at law and is subject to the same rules of pleading.¹ The writ must contain averments of all such facts as are necessary to show that it is the defendant's duty to execute the command of the writ; that the relator is entitled to the relief he asks and cannot have redress by ordinary legal remedies, and that he has made all reasonable efforts to obtain the redress he seeks.² He must distinctly set forth all the material facts on which he relies, so that the same may be admitted or traversed.³ The defendant is called upon to perform the particular act sought to be enforced, or by a return deny the facts alleged in the writ, or state other matters sufficient to defeat relator's application.⁴

1. People v. Supervisors of Westchester, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 607; Canal Trustees v. People, 12 Ill. 254; State v. Union, 43 N. J. L. 518; McKenzie v. Ruth, 22 Ohio St. 371; State v. School District No. 9, 8 Neb. 92; State v. Sheridan, 43 N. J. L. 82; Com. v. Commrs. etc., 37 Pa. St. 277; Commercial Bank v. Canal Commrs., 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 25; People v. Judges of Washington, 1 Cal. (N. Y.) 511; Boone Commrs. v. State, 61 Ind. 379; County Commrs. v. State, 61 Ind. 75.

2. State v. Fletcher, 39 Mo. 388; Rex v. Bishop of Oxford, 7 East 345; Board etc. of Clark Co. v. State, 61 Ind. 75; Board etc. of Boone Co. v. State, 61 Ind. 379; Hambleton v. Dexter, 89 Mo. 188. An allegation, in an alternative writ of mandamus, of a demand for certain prisoners "confined in the jail" of the county "under sentence to imprisonment," and giving their names, and the dates on and periods for which they were sentenced, is a sufficient allegation that they are, at the time of the application for the writ, so confined. Holland v. State, 23 Fla. 123.

3. Canal Trustees v. People, 12 Ill. 254; Peat's Case, 6 Mod. 310; Commercial Bank v. Canal Commrs., 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 25; People v. Supervisors of Westchester, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 607; People v. Columbia Common Pleas, 3 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 30; United States v. Cape Girardeau Co., 16 Fed. Rep. 836; Lavalle v. Soucy, 96 Ill. 467; Houston etc. R. Co. v. Randolph, 24 Tex. 317; Hambleton v. Dexter, 89 Mo. 188; State v. Leon Supervisors, 66 Wis. 199; Commonwealth Bank v. Canal Commrs., 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 25.

A writ which omits a necessary fact cannot be cured by the return. Reg. v. Southeastern R. Co., 17 Jur. 901; 4 H. L. Cas. 471. S. P., London (Mayor etc.) v. Reg. (in error), 13 Q. B. 30; 13 Jur. 33; 17 L. J. Q. B. 330—Exch. Cham. And see Reg. v. Hopkins, 4 P. & D. 550; 1 Q. B. 160.

It is sufficient if in a petition for a writ of mandamus the statement of facts on which the right is made to depend are stated with a precision sufficient to express the right of one and the duty of the other, in such manner that the ordinary mind, disregarding technicality of pleading, may easily apprehend them. Certainty to a common intent is the rule, and that applies as well to the answer as to the petition, and it is sufficient that the former, without ambiguity or evasion, responds to and denies the assertions of the latter. Cent. District & Printing Tel. Co. v. Commonwealth, 114 Pa. St. 592.

4. Hoxie v. County Commissioners, 25 Me. 333; State v. Jones, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 129; Commercial Bank v. Canal Commrs., 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 26; People v. Ransom, 2 Comst. (N. Y.) 490;

The alternative writ should issue first to show cause why a mandamus should not be granted,¹ and is usually granted ex parte, and therefore its issuance is not conclusive on the sufficiency of the application, which may be objected to by the defendant by a motion to quash.² If the relator does not show a clear right to the writ it may be quashed. But he may have leave to amend if his right is left in doubt.³

Where officers are unqualifiedly and unconditionally required to do a specific act the writ should designate specifically the precise act to be performed. But where a discretion is to be exercised by an officer as to the manner in which an act may be done, or rather when the thing desired to be done depends upon the judgment of the officer, the writ should in general terms command the officer to act upon the matter in question without in any way directing him to act in any particular manner or to reach any given result.⁴

3. Refusal to Allow.—When a party prays for a writ of mandamus to enforce a claim substantially broader than the right which he succeeds in establishing, the court is justified in refusing him any writ.⁵ And the refusal to allow an alternative writ of mandamus is not reviewable on error.⁶

4. Peremptory Writ.—A peremptory writ of mandamus is an

Company of Proprietors, 6 Ad. & El. N. S. 898; King v. Margate Pier Co., 3 Barn. & Ald. 220; King v. Bishop of Oxford, 7 East 345.

1. State v. Delfield Supervisors, 64 Wis. 218; Re Devereux Street, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 103.

2. State v. Lean, 9 Wis. 279.

3. State v. Hastings, 10 Wis. 518; State v. Slavan, 11 Wis. 153.

4. Humboldt Co. v. Churchill Co., 6 Nev. 30; People v. Supervisors of Dutchess, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 50; People v. Brennen, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 651. See Cortleyon v. Ten Eyck, 2 Zab. (N. J.) 45; Lloyd v. Brinck, 35 Tex. 1.

If the method of performing the duty is discretionary and optional, a mandamus to compel the defendant to do it in a particular manner is defective unless it shows on its face the impossibility of the defendant exercising the option. State v. Union, 43 N. J. L. 518.

Under the laws of Louisiana, the signing of judgment is a necessary and absolute duty on the part of the judge. Held, that mandamus is the proper remedy to compel the signing of the judgment, the act of affixing the signature being regarded as purely a ministerial duty. Life etc. Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 291.

Auditing Demands Against Municipalities.—Where the writ issues to compel municipal authorities or boards to audit and pass upon demands against the municipality, it should be limited in form to merely setting the officers in motion and requiring them to act without directing them to act in any particular manner or interfering with their discretion. People v. Delaware Co., 45 N. Y. 205; Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 11 Cal. 42; Bright v. Chenango, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 242; Furman v. Knapp, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 248; People v. Supervisors of New York, 32 N. Y. 473; People v. Supervisors of Macomb Co., 3 Mich. 475.

A mandamus to a board of supervisors to issue a warrant for a specified sum is irregular; it should direct them to audit the account and issue warrants accordingly. Toulumne Co. v. Stanislaus Co., 6 Cal. 440.

Mandamus will not lie to compel the Secretary of State to audit and allow a claim against the special trust fund known as "the trespass fund," where the petition does not aver that there are moneys in the State treasury belonging to that fund properly applicable to the payment of the claim. State v. Warner, 55 Wis. 271.

5. Rosenfeld v. Einstein, 46 N. J. L. 479.

6. State v. Capeller, 37 Ohio St. 121.

extraordinary remedy to coerce the performance of a pre-existing duty or clear and specific legal right, and hence should be granted only where the duty or right is clearly established and the facts upon which it is based are undisputed.¹ It only issues in the first instance where the moving papers preclude the possibility of any valid excuse being consistent with the facts therein contained.² So the courts, in exercising their jurisdiction in mandamus, will not award the peremptory writ where the right sought to be enforced is or has become a mere abstract right, the enforcement of which, by reason of some change of circumstances since the commencement of the suit, can be of no substantial or practical benefit to the petitioner.³

A peremptory writ of mandamus may be quashed or set aside if prematurely, improperly, or unnecessarily issued, or if bad in substance, or if it be impossible or illegal to obey it.⁴

5. Must Conform to the Alternative Writ.—A peremptory writ of mandamus must conform strictly to the alternative writ.⁵ The peremptory writ is in the nature of an execution and must

1. State v. Mayor of Manitowoc, 52 Wis. 423; State v. Hastings, 10 Wis. 518; State v. Elwood, 11 Wis. 17; People v. Greene County, 64 N. Y. 600; State v. Common Council, 9 Wis. 254.

2. Harkins v. Supervisors, 2 Minn. 342; Harkins v. Sencerbox, 2 Minn. 344.

In Schend v. Aid Society, 69 Wis. 237, it was held that, "in the circuit courts a rule to show cause why a peremptory mandamus should not issue should be allowed to supersede the alternative writ only in cases where, after a hearing upon the rule, no issue of fact appears to be involved." In giving the opinion of the court, LYON, J., said: "If the cause shown against the issuing of the writ presents an issue of fact on a material averment made in support of the order, we think the court should not try such issue of fact on affidavits, but should award an alternative mandamus, to the end that after return thereto the issue may be duly and regularly tried in the manner prescribed by statute and the rules of court. . . . If the respondent is heard in opposition to the application, and there is no dispute about the facts, the application being well founded in law, a peremptory mandamus may be granted in the first instance." See also State v. Paterson, 35 N. J. L. 196; State v. Freeholders, 35 N. J. L. 269; Cleveland v. Board of Finance, 38 N. J. L. 259; Free Press Assoc. v. Nichols, 45 Vt. 7; People v. Chenango Co., 11 N. Y. 563; Commonwealth v. Allegheny, 37 Pa. St. 277; People v. New York, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 680; People v. Canal Board, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 432; People v. Thompson, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 73; Reese v. Walker, 11 How. (N. Y.) 272; People v. Oldtown, 88 Ill. 202; 2 Dillon Mun. Corp., § 830 (667).

3. Gormley v. Day, 114 Ill. 185; State v. Inspectors of Election, 17 Fla. 26; Ray v. Goodwin, 4 M. & P. 341; People v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 55 Ill. 95; People v. Cline, 63 Ill. 394; Cristman v. Peck, 90 Ill. 150; People v. Lieb, 85 Ill. 484; People v. Trustees of Schools, 86 Ill. 613.

So where an ordinance of a village vacating a street was repealed before it went into effect, but after the filing of a petition for a mandamus to compel the village clerk to post copies of the same or give the relator copies thereof, the court will not award the writ, as to do so would subserve no beneficial purpose. State v. Inspectors of Election, 17 Fla. 26.

4. Weber v. Zimmerman, 23 Md. 45; In State v. Conway, 24 La. An. 132, it is held that the judgment of a court making a writ of mandamus peremptory is a final judgment which cannot be vacated or set aside by the judge on a rule taken by the defendant in mandamus.

5. People v. Dutchess Co., 1 Hill (N. Y.) 50; State v. Co. Judge, 12 Iowa 237; Queen v. East and West India Docks etc. R. Co., 2 El. and Bl. 466; Chance v. Temple, 1 Iowa 179; State v. Cheraw etc. R. Co., 16 S. Car. 324; Price v.

follow the alternative; hence, if the relator is not entitled to require what he demands, the peremptory writ will be denied, although he may be entitled to a part of what he has demanded.¹

When a peremptory writ of mandamus cannot issue in the exact terms of the alternative writ, the latter may be amended so as to preserve the symmetry of the proceedings.²

It is not a sufficient reason for setting aside a peremptory mandamus that a previous alternative writ had not issued.³

6. When Granted.—When a return to an alternative mandamus is deemed insufficient the court will order a peremptory mandamus to issue.⁴ There is strictly no return to the peremptory writ. It is to be obeyed, and a certificate is made of what has been done.⁵ And if the person to whom the writ is directed fails in this perfect and implicit obedience, he is liable to proceedings in attachment for contempt of court.⁶

7. Legal Duty of Respondent.—The relator is bound to satisfy the court that there is a clear legal duty incumbent upon the respondent to comply with all the requirements contained in the alternative writ before the peremptory writ of mandamus will issue.⁷

Cases may arise where the applicant for relief has an undoubted legal right for which mandamus is the proper remedy, but where the court may, in the exercise of a wise judicial discretion, still refuse the relief.⁸

Harned, 1 Iowa 473; State v. Cheraw etc. R. Co., 16 S. Car. 524; State v. Kansas City etc. R. Co., 77 Mo. 143; overruling School District No. 1 v. Board of Education of Lamar, 73 Mo. 627, and Osage Valley etc. R. Co. v. Morgan Co. Ct., 53 Mo. 157.

The peremptory writ need not precisely follow the alternative writ in matters of detail. Upon the hearing the court may grant the relief in any form consistent with the case made by the complaint, presented and embraced within the issues. State v. Weld, 39 Minn. 426.

If the peremptory writ differs from the alternative only in immaterial details as to the mode of performing the duty required, the substance of both being the same and both requiring the performance of the same act, the variance will not be fatal. People v. Dutchess etc. R. Co., 58 N. Y. 152.

1. State v. Union, 43 N. J. L. 518; State v. Gibbs, 13 Fla. 55; State v. Assessors of Taxes of Rahway (N. J.), 17 Atl. Rep. 122.

2. State v. Alderman, 1 S. Car. 30.

3. Knox Co. v. Aspinwall, 24 How. (U. S.) 376; People v. Contracting

Board, 27 N. Y. 378; s. c., 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 254.

4. Runkel v. Winemiller, 4 Har. & M. (Md.) 429; Com. v. Commrs. of Allegheny, 32 Pa. St. 218; Regina v. East and West India Docks etc. Co., 22 Eng. L. & Eq. 113.

5. Tapp. on Man. 61, 389, 445 and 456; State v. Jones, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 414; Queen v. Ledgard, 1 Ad. & E., N. S. 616; State v. Board of Canvassers, 17 Fla. 9; State v. McLin, 16 Fla. 17; People v. Barnett, 91 Ill. 422; State v. Smith, 9 Iowa 334; 3 Black. Com. 111.

6. High on Ex. L. Rem., § 519; State v. Board of Canvassers, 17 Fla. 9.

7. Queen v. Caledonian R. Co., 16 Ad. & E., N. S. 19; People v. Common Council, 3 Keyes (N. Y.) 81; s. c., 3 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 502; 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 473.

The court will not issue the writ of mandamus peremptorily if there be any reason sufficient in fact or in law against it. Devereaux v. Brownsville, 29 Fed. Rep. 742.

8. State v. Kansas City etc. R. Co., 77 Mo. 143. See People v. Seymour, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 579; Queen v. Baldwin, 8 Ad. & E. 947.

8. Ex parte Application.—A peremptory writ of mandamus will not be issued upon the mere ex parte application of the relator. The defendant should be given an opportunity to show cause why it should not issue.¹ But where notice has been given and both parties are heard and there is no dispute about the facts, and the law is with the application, a peremptory mandamus will be granted in the first instance. In such a case the court will not put the party to the useless delay of going through with the forms of an alternative mandamus.²

9. Refusal to Award Mandamus.—At common law a writ of error would not lie to the judgment of an inferior court awarding or refusing an alternative mandamus upon an application for it or in awarding or refusing a peremptory mandamus upon the return to the alternative writ. But in this country the practice is otherwise. The granting or refusing of it is not a matter of mere discretion in the court, and whenever a suitor is entitled to a right which is withheld from him by the decision of the court, it can scarcely be said to be a matter of discretion which is understood to be the action of the court on such matters as are not demandable of right but are accorded to the parties to advance the justice of the case.³

10. Certainty Required.—The precise thing which is required should be set forth in the peremptory writ with great particularity, in order that the respondent may be definitely apprised of all that he is commanded to do.⁴ As to public officers, it is sufficient

1. Swan v. Gray, 44 Miss. 397; Armijo v. Territory, 1 New Mexico 580; Adams v. Duffield, 4 Brewst. (Pa.) 9.

Where a statute expressly authorizes the issue of the peremptory writ in the first instance, it is issued only upon a state of unquestionable facts, leaving no room for doubt as to the right to the performance of the act sought to be compelled, and when it is apparent and manifest that no valid excuse can be given for nonperformance. Home Ins. Co. v. Scheffer, 12 Minn. 382.

2. Ex parte Rogers, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 526; Knox Co. v. Aspinwall, 24 How. (U. S.) 376. See Ex parte Goodell, 14 Johns. Rep. 325.

No peremptory mandamus can issue without notice in some form to the defendant, or a waiver of notice by an appearance. Fairbanks v. Amoskeag Nat. Bank, 30 Fed. Rep. 602.

3. Hardee v. Gibbs, 50 Miss. 805; Ex parte Morris, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 292; Etheridge v. Hall, 7 Port. (Ala.) 47; State v. Lancaster Co., 13 Neb. 223; State v. Lewis, 76 Mo. 370; Griffin v. Wakelee, 42 Tex. 513. A writ of error lies upon refusal of the court to grant a peremp-tory mandamus when judgment is pronounced after issue joined upon plea of demurrer interposed upon the coming in of the return of the alternative mandamus. People v. Brooklyn, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 130; and see People v. Throop, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 183.

In New Jersey the common law rule is preserved. Layton v. State, 4 Dutch. (N. J.) 575.

In Michigan, where the relator institutes proceedings in the district court by alternative mandamus, and that court dismisses the writ, not for any technical defect, but upon a ground which the district court hold shows the relator not entitled to relief, the decision is a bar to another proceeding by mandamus for the same cause. State v. Hard, 25 Minn. 460.

Evidence.—Petition for mandamus dismissed, because the plaintiff was allowed to file a petition in the place of one which was alleged to have been lost, when no proof that the original had ever become a part of the record was made. Baker v. Mayor, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 117.

4. State v. Dubuque, 11 Iowa 155.

to inform them in a general way what their duty is and to command its performance, unless they can justify or excuse the neglect.¹

Where there is any uncertainty in the terms of a mandamus the circuit court may refer to the decree of the supreme court in the case made at the time of issuing the mandamus.²

11. Peremptory Writ Cannot be Stayed by Injunction.—A peremptory writ of mandamus from any court of competent jurisdiction when once issued cannot be stayed by injunction like an ordinary execution upon a judgment at law.³

XVI. PARTIES—1. Relators.—Mandamus is now under existing statutes nearly everywhere in England and America considered as a civil action by and between the real parties thereto, the relator and respondent,⁴ who are denominated the plaintiff and the defendant, and the action is prosecuted in the name of the relator as plaintiff and not in the name of the State as formerly.⁵ Illinois,

Where in a proceeding by mandamus to compel the payment of certain orders by the treasurer of a school district, there was no description of the orders by number or amounts nor a recital of the use to which the money to be drawn thereon should be applied, in either the petition or the alternative or peremptory writs of mandamus, it was held that the proceedings were defective and the peremptory writ should not have been granted. State v. District Township, 9 Iowa 155.

1. People v. Dutchess Co., 1 Hill (N. Y.) 50; People v. Nostrand, 46 N. Y. 375.

A mandatory clause commanding a town supervisor "to call an election of the legal voters of the said township under the laws of this State relating thereto," held, to be too uncertain, and the writ was refused on appeal. People v. Brooks, 57 Ill. 142.

2. West v. Brashear, 14 Pet. 51.

3. Weber v. Zimmerman, 23 Md. 45; Cumberland etc. R. Co. v. Judge of Wash. Co. Court, 10 Bush (Ky.) 568. See Watson v. Avery, 3 Bush (Ky.) 640.

4. Brown v. Crego, 29 Iowa 321; Kendall v. Stokes, 3 How. (U. S.) 87, 100; Arberry v. Bearers, 6 Tex. 457; State v. Marston, 6 Kan. 525; Hagerty v. Arnold, 13 Kan. 367; State v. Faulkner, 20 Kan. 541. See Eden Dist. Twp. v. Templeton Independent Dist., 72 Iowa 687; Brower v. O'Brien, 2 Ind. 423; People v. Lewis, 3 Abb. (N. Y.) App. Dec. 537.

5. State v. Cole, 33 La. An. 1356.

Private persons may, without the intervention of the government law officer, move for a mandamus to enforce a public duty not due to the government as such. Union Pacific R. Co. v. Hall, 91 U. S. (1 Otto) 343; Hall v. Union Pac. R. Co., 3 Dill. 515. See also U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 3 Dill. 524; State v. County of Jefferson, 11 Kan. 69; Moore v. Cort, 43 Iowa 503; State v. County Judge, 2 Iowa 280; State v. Jennings, 56 Wis. 113; Stoddard v. Benton, 6 Colo. 506; Cannon v. Janvier, 3 Houst. (Del.) 27. See Morris v. Womble, 30 La. An., pt. 2, 1312. Compare Bishop v. Marks, 15 La. An. 147; State v. Commrs. of Perry County, 5 Ohio St. 497.

A private citizen may be a party to a proceeding for mandamus to compel public officers to enforce certain city ordinances. State v. Francis, 95 Mo. 44.

The defendant corporation, organized under an act of the legislature approved March 31st, 1863, is a private stock corporation, and not an eleemosynary or public corporation; under the provisions of its charter no one can claim the right to receive instruction in the institution on any terms, and no provision is made for gratuitous instruction; the only restrictions upon it are that no religious tenets shall be required of any trustee or student, and "no sectarianism shall be taught or tolerated" in the institution, and that "persons of both sexes shall be admitted to all advantages; and no violation of these provisions is alleged; but the only object of

Michigan, New York, South Carolina, Wisconsin, and possibly a few other States, constitute an exception to the general practice of the present day.¹

(a) WHO PROPER RELATOR.—The only proper parties to mandamus are the relator or relators claiming to be interested in the performance of the duty and the party upon whom the duty is imposed by law; and it is inconsistent with the nature of the remedy to bring in as defendants parties only collaterally or incidentally interested in the subject of the controversy.²

(b) DEGREE OF INTEREST.—When the remedy is resorted to for the purpose of enforcing a private right, the person interested in having the right enforced must be the relator. The relator is considered the real party, and his right to the relief must clearly appear; but where the object is the enforcement of a public right, the people are regarded as the real party and the relator need not show that he has any legal interest in the result. It is enough that he is interested as a citizen in having the laws executed and the duty in question enforced.³

this proceeding is to determine who are entitled to vote at elections of trustees or at other corporate meetings of the stockholders. Held, that on general principles of public law, the attorney general cannot bring the action, but the remedy is by private action of the parties aggrieved. Atty. Gen. v. Albion Academy, 52 Wis. 469.

1. State v. County of Jefferson, 11 Kan. 69.

Consent of the State.—Where a holder of a certificate, on which a survey had been refused by the surveyor, sued out a writ of mandamus, to compel him to issue the certificate, held, that it was in fact a suit against the State, and that it could not be maintained until the State had given its consent to be sued. League v. De Young, 2 Tex. 497.

2. State v. Smith, 7 S. Car. 275; Hyatt v. Allen, 54 Cal. 353; Boner v. Adams, 65 N. Car. 639. See State v. Haben, 22 Wis. 660; State v. Zanesville etc. T. Co., 16 Ohio St. 308; Holland v. State (Fla.), 1 So. Rep. 521; Waldrom v. Lee, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 323; State v. Burkhardt, 59 Mo. 75; People v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supreme Ct. 1.

In an action by the trustee of a new township, created by the division of a civil township, for a writ of mandate against the county auditor to compel an equitable division and apportionment of the various funds belonging to the original township at the time of the division, it is not error to deny the application of the trustee of the latter to be made a party defendant to the proceeding, he showing no substantial interest in the controversy. Fowle v. State, 110 Ind. 120.

3. State v. Madison Co. Commrs., 92 Ind. 133; Stoddard v. Benton, 6 Colo. 508; Ottawa v. People, 48 Ill. 233; County of Pike v. People, 11 Ill. 202; School Trustees v. People, 71 Ill. 559; Pumphrey v. Mayor of Baltimore, 47 Md. 145; Glencoe v. People, 78 Ill. 382; State v. Gracey, 11 Nev. 223; McConihe v. State, 17 Fla. 238; Moses v. Kearney, 31 Ark. 261; State v. Board of County Commrs., 17 Fla. 707; Harwood v. Case, 37 Iowa 692; Hightower v. Overhauser, 65 Iowa 347; State v. Shropshire, 4 Neb. 411; School Trustees v. Ball, 71 Ill. 559; Hamilton v. State, 3 Ind. 452; People v. Supervisors of Kent Co., 38 Mich. 421; State v. Doyle, 40 Wis. 175; People v. Collins, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 56; Hall v. People, 57 Ill. 307; People v. Halsey, 37 N. Y. 344; Linden v. Alameda Co., 45 Cal. 60; State v. Henderson, 38 Ohio St. 644; Peck v. Booth, 42 Conn. 271; Lyon v. Rice, 41 Conn. 245; State v. County Judge of Marshall, 7 Iowa 186; People v. State Auditors, 42 Mich. 422; People v. Halsey, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 547; Harrington v. Sawyer, 36 Cal. 289; United States, Pollock v. Hall (D. C.), 16 Wash. L. Rep. 782; Thomas v. Carteret County, 66 N. Car. 522; City of Greenfield v. State (Ind.),

(c) DISTINCT INTERESTS CANNOT BE JOINED.—Two or more persons having separate interests seeking redress by mandamus cannot join in one and the same writ, but should have separate writs according to their several interests.¹ So one and the same writ cannot be directed to two or more respondents having separate interests.²

(d) DEATH OF RELATOR.—A petition for a writ of mandamus cannot be prosecuted after the death of the petitioner.³

2. Respondents.—A writ of mandamus runs only against the officer who is to do the particular official act commanded,⁴ and should be addressed to him in his official capacity.⁵ The writ should be directed to all the persons whose duty it is to perform

15 N. E. Rep. 241; Village of Glencoe v. People, 78 Ill. 382; State v. Doyle, 40 Wis. 175. Compare State v. Strong, 25 Me. 297; People v. Regents of University, 4 Mich. 98; Adkins v. Doolen, 23 Kan. 659; Reedy v. Eagle, 23 Kan. 254; Turner v. Commrs., 10 Kan. 16; Babbett v. State, 10 Kan. 9; Sanger v. Co. Commrs. of Kennebec, 25 Me. 291; Heffner v. Comm., 28 Pa. St. 108; People v. Inspectors of State Prison, 4 Mich. 187; State v. Sovereign, 17 Neb. 173.

In Mitchell v. Boardman, 79 Me. 469, it is held that a writ of mandamus will be granted to a private individual only in those cases where he has some private or particular interest to be subserved or some particular right to be protected independent of that which he holds in common with the public at large. It is for the public officers exclusively to apply for the writ when public rights are to be subserved. See Hyatt v. Allen, 54 Cal. 353.

A county has power to act as relator in an application for a writ of mandamus to compel the board of supervisors of another county to raise a tax which is to go into the treasury of the relator. People v. Alameda County, 26 Cal. 641.

Mandamus will not lie in the name of the people at the relation of a private person when the latter is the only real party in interest. People v. Pacheco, 29 Cal. 210.

1. King v. City of Chester, 5 Mod. Rep. 10; King v. Town of Andover, 12 Mod. Rep. 332; King v. Mayor of Kingston-upon-Hull, 8 Mod. Rep. 209. And see Hoxie v. Commrs. of Somerset, 25 Me. 333; Wright v. Gallatin County Commrs., 6 Mont. 29; Haskins v. Supervisors, 51 Miss. 406; State

v. Reno County Commrs., 38 Kan. 317.

Several persons whose bids for county printing have been rejected by the board of commissioners cannot join in a proceeding for a writ of mandate to compel the contract for such printing to be awarded to them. Wright v. Commrs., 6 Mont. 29.

If the respondent to a writ of mandamus which states the grievance of three towns whose several supervisors improperly unite in the writ, submits to answer, the case will be heard upon the merits, and will not be dismissed because of such improper joinder. People v. Ontario County Supervisors, 85 N. Y. 323.

2. State v. Chester, 10 N. J. L. (5 Hals.) 292. See State v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 39 Minn. 219; State v. Reno County (Kan.), 16 Pac. Rep. 337. See State v. Police Jury (La.), 3 So. Rep. 88.

3. Booze v. Humbird, 27 Md. 1.

4. Farrell v. King, 41 Conn. 448; People v. Common Council, 3 Keves (N. Y.) 81; Regina v. Mayor of Derby, 2 Salk. 436. See State v. Smith, 9 Iowa 334; Republica v. Commrs. of Phila. Co., 4 Yeates (Pa.) 181; Hollister v. Judges, 8 Ohio St. 201; People v. Hillard, 29 Ill. 419; People v. Matterson, 17 Ill. 167; Brower v. O'Brien, 2 Ind. 423; Rex v. Harris, 3 Burr. 1421.

Mandamus issued to compel a county board of chosen freeholders to pay a bill. Instead of ordering its payment the board sent it to the county auditor to be audited, whereupon a writ of mandamus against him was applied for. Held, that it should be refused, the remedy being under the writ already issued against the board. State v. Applegate, 49 N. J. L. 376.

5. Chance v. Temple, 1 Iowa 179.

the act required, though some of them may be applicants for the writ.¹ If the petition is against two persons, and it cannot be sustained as to one of them, it must necessarily be denied as to both.²

(a) SUCCESSORS IN OFFICE.—An action for mandamus is to be regarded as a proceeding against the officer and not against the individual; and when proper papers have been once served upon the officer any proceeding which they warrant may be taken against his successors without commencing de novo.³ But the successor of an officer who has been proceeded against by mandamus is not a proper party.⁴

(b) CORPORATIONS.—Mandamus to compel a municipal corporation to perform a duty may properly be directed to the mayor and city council in their official capacity instead of the corporate name of the municipality.⁵ The writ, when directed to a corpo-

1. State v. Jones, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 129; Cullem v. Latimer, 4 Tex. 329; Fisk v. Jefferson Police Jury, 38 La. An. 508.

2. People v. Yeates, 40 Ill. 126.

Evidence.—Facts warranting the exclusion of a respondent in mandamus from office are not to be presumed when not supported by the evidence. Gorman v. Board of Police, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 527; Titus v. Same, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 535.

3. State v. Madison, 15 Wis. 37; People v. Collins, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 56; Clark v. McKenzie, 7 Bush (Ky.) 523; People v. Barnett Supervisors, 100 Ill. 332; State v. Gates, 22 Wis. 214; Graham v. Maddox, 6 Am. L. Reg. 626; Lindsey v. Auditor of Kentucky, 3 Bush (Ky.) 231; Bassett v. Barbin, 11 La. An. 672; Pegram v. Cleaveland Co., 65 N. Car. 114; Columbia Co. v. Bryson, 13 Fla. 281; Maddox v. Graham, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 56; State v. Puckett, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 709; Hardee v. Gibbs, 50 Miss. 802; Clark v. McKenzie, 7 Bush (Ky.) 523; People v. Barnett Supervisors, 100 Ill. 332. But see People v. Squire (N. Y.), 18 N. E. Rep. 362. Compare U. S. v. Boutwell, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 604; People v. Sage, 3 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 56.

Where a peremptory writ of mandamus has been awarded against the supervisor of a town commanding him to execute, in behalf of the town, certain bonds to the relator, and the officer has not obeyed the command of the writ, and his term of office has expired, an alias peremptory writ may properly be awarded against his successor in office to compel him to perform the acts which the former had been by the first writ ordered to perform. This is but a repetition of the writ against the same party represented by another person. It is not making a new party or any amendment to the judgment or record, within any rule not allowing amendments. The duty upon the officer first commanded to execute it is a continuing duty upon him and his successors in office until it is performed. People v. Barnett Supervisors, 100 Ill. 332.

Proceedings against the clerk of a township to enforce its duty of levying the amount of such a judgment are against it, and do not abate by his resignation and the appointment of his successor. Thompson v. U. S., 103 U. S. 480.

4. Beachy v. Lamkin, 1 Idaho 48.

5. People v. Mayor of Bloomington, 63 Ill. 207; Mayor v. Lord, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 409. See People v. Common Council of New York, 3 Keyes (N. Y.) 81; Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595, 628.

Mandamus for the purpose of requiring the officers of a city to perform a corporate act is to be regarded as a proceeding against the corporation, and an appeal from the decision of the court below is properly prosecuted in the name of the city. City of Louisville v. Kean, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 9.

Commissioners of highways being a quasi corporation, the naming of the individuals composing the body in a petition for mandamus may be regarded as surplusage. The proceeding is properly brought against them as "the commissioners of highways of the town ration or ministerial officer, directs the manner in which they shall proceed.¹

3. Who May Intervene.—Any third person having an interest either in the success of the relator or respondent, or opposed to both, may intervene in the mandamus suit.²

XVII. PLEADING.—The general principles of pleading prevail in mandamus proceedings so far as the nature of the proceeding admits of their application.³ The alternative writ stands in the place of the declaration of which the return is an answer.⁴ The title of the relator to the relief asked must be clearly and distinctly stated in the alternative mandamus, so that the facts alleged may be admitted or traversed.⁵

In cases of mandamus the court will look into the whole record and determine whether it is the proper remedy as well as whether the allegations are sufficient to authorize the writ.⁶ Where the issue involves facts outside of the record it must be sent to some circuit court, or other court of appropriate jurisdiction, where the issue can be tried by a jury and the verdict certified back to the supreme court.⁷

of —," naming the town. Sheaff v. People, 87 Ill. 190.

Where a writ was directed to a board of canvassers, held that it was not necessarily erroneous, although one of the former members had become functus officio. State v. Bailey, 7 Iowa 390.

In England it has been held that mandamus not directed to the body politic by its corporate name but to the mayor and aldermen of the municipality it might be quashed. Regina v. Mayor of Hereford, 2 Salk. 701. See King v. Taylor, 3 Salk. 231. But see Mayor of Abingdon, Ltd. Raym. 559.

1. People v. Steele, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 397.

2. State v. Pilsbury, 31 La. An. 1.

In a proceeding by mandamus to compel the state auditor to issue his warrant in favor of the applicant for a sum found due, the latter by a statutory arbitration between him and the state, a creditor of the applicant cannot intervene and ask the court to direct the auditor to issue to him a warrant for the amount of his debt. Hewitt v. Craig, 86 Ky. 23.

3. Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595; Washington etc. Comms. v. Gibson, 7 Ill. App. 231; People v. Hach, 33 Ill. 139; Boody v. Watson (N. H.), 4 N. Eng. Rep. 573; People v. Mayor of Chicago, 51 Ill. 28; Silver v. People, 45 Ill. 227; People v. Hillard, 29 Ill. 418; People v. Salomon, 46 Ill. 336; State v. Sheriden, 43 N. J. L. 82;

See Board etc. of Clark Co. v. State 61 Ind. 75; Jessup v. Carey, 61 Ind. 584; Board etc. of Boone Co. v. State, 61 Ind. 379; Smith v. Johnston, 69 Ind. 55; Ex parte Candee, 48 Ala. 386; Savage v. Holmes, 15 La. An. 334. Compare Smith v. St. Francois Co. Court, 19 Mo. 433.

The pleadings in mandamus have the same effect and are to be construed as in civil actions. Ohio Rev. St., § 6751-2; State v. Haws, 43 Ohio St. 16.

4. Silver v. People, 45 Ill. 224; People v. Ohio Grove, 51 Ill. 191; People v. Order American Star, 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 66; Johnson v. Smith, 64 Ind. 275.

5. Commercial Bank v. Canal Comms., 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 25; Amos v. Burros, 11 Ill. App. 383; State v. Fletcher, 39 Mo. 388; State v. Everitt, 52 Mo. 89; People v. Davis, 93 Ill. 133; Lavalle v. Soucy, 96 Ill. 467; People v. Glann, 70 Ill. 232; Hosier v. Board, 45 Mich. 340; Ex parte Fleming, 2 Wall. 759; Withers v. State, 36 Ala. 252.

It is not enough to refer in the writ to the affidavits and other papers on file, on which the order for the mandamus was made; such reference is allowable to show the amount of a sum of money claimed, but not the right of the relator thereto. Commercial Bank v. Comms., 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 25.

6. Comms. of La Grange Co. v. Cutler, 7 Ind. 6. See Hartshorn v. Ellsworth, 60 Me. 276.

7. People v. Young, 40 Ill. 87.

1. Requisites of Petition.—An application for a mandamus to enforce an alleged right of relator must show the facts constituting such right. A mere allegation that he is entitled to the right is not sufficient.¹ Thus where the gravamen of an action is the

1. People v. German Church, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 434; State v. Hammerstein v. Williams, 95 Mo. 159. See State v. Mobile etc. R. Co., 59 Ala. 321; Pagborn v. Young, 3 Vroom (N. J.) 29; Schwartz v. Wilson, 75 Cal. 502.

It is sufficient that the writ shows facts from which a duty legally results, without stating the statute by force of which the duty arises. State v. County Judge, 7 Clarke (Iowa) 186.

Allegation of Power to Levy Taxes.—In the action by mandamus against the mayor and aldermen of a municipal corporation, where the writ alleges the failure and refusal of the respondents, upon request, to provide for the assessment or collection of a tax, there is sufficient allegation of demand and refusal, and it is unnecessary for the relator to allege that the respondents had not exhausted their power to levy taxes. State v. Mayor, 22 Fla. 21. See Kidder v. More, 26 Vt. 74.

Place of Business.—A petition to the county court for commissioners to appraise the value of certain lands sought to be taken for the company, filed by persons claiming to be a corporation, was dismissed on the ground that the articles did not show sufficiently where the principal place of business of the company was located. The company applied to the supreme court for a writ of certiorari. The writ was refused, and the court held that the county judge had not exceeded his jurisdiction under Cal. act of 1858, and that the proper remedy was by mandamus from the district court. Re Spring Valley etc. Works, 17 Cal. 132.

Location of Railroad.—In an alternative writ of mandate to compel the auditor to place on the duplicate taxes levied in aid of a railroad, it is sufficient to aver as a fact that the railroad has been permanently located in the township, without alleging that the fact has been judicially determined. Coffyn v. State, 91 Ind. 324.

Issuing Warrant.—In a petition to the supreme judicial court for a writ of mandamus, commanding the judge to issue a warrant, if the proceedings in insolvency were commenced on application of a creditor, it is necessary to allege, and to prove, unless it is admitted at the hearing, that the facts required to be set forth in such application appeared to such judge to be true. Kimball v. Morris, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 573.

Issuing of Bonds.—Under an agreement to issue county bonds, "said county to receive for each bond as issued a certificate for the same amount of stock in said company," held, that in a petition for mandamus to compel the issuing of the bonds, relator need aver only readiness to issue certificates on delivery of the bonds. State v. Co. Judge, 9 Iowa 288.

Payment of Warrants.—In an application for a mandamus to compel a county treasurer to pay two warrants, the averment that the auditor drew the warrants is sufficient, as the law will presume that he drew them properly; but the treasurer is at liberty to plead any illegality in them as a defence. Connor v. Morris, 23 Cal. 447.

Generally.—A petition for mandamus to compel a village to levy a tax to pay a judgment rendered in condemnation proceedings for opening a street is defective, if it fails to set forth the ordinance showing that compensation was to be made by the collection of a general tax. Hyde Park v. Thatcher, 13 Ill. App. 613.

A complaint in mandamus against a comptroller is fatally defective if it fails to allege that there are "moneys, not otherwise appropriated by law," out of which the compensation sought for is to be paid. Redding v. Bell, 4 Cal. 333. See Huff v. Kimball, 39 Ind. 411; Miller v. State (Kan.), 22 Pac. Rep. 326.

A petition for a mandamus, alleging a contract between the petitioner and the justices of a county, by which he was to be paid a certain sum for building a court house, and a certain other sum for building a jail, "in monthly instalments for lumber and work," and praying for a writ of mandamus to compel the payment of what is due, without averring that any particular sum is due, is defective. McCoy v. Harnett Co., 5 Jones (N. Car.) L. 265.

A petition for a mandamus to compel a county surveyor to survey certain lands for which the petitioner claims title by virtue of a file of head right certificate, should aver ownership of such defendant's failure to perform a duty, the declaration must allege the facts from which the legal liability results, and the pleading is bad in substance if the duty does not in all cases result from the facts stated in it.¹

2. Verification.—A jurat is necessary to a petition for mandamus.² A verification on information and belief merely, especially where the defendants do not appear, is insufficient.³ The petition and affidavit, however, need not be embodied in two papers.⁴

3. Abatement.—Where a defendant in his return to a writ of mandamus sets forth matter in abatement, and also sets up facts in defence upon the merits and asks judgment upon the merits, he thereby waives the plea in abatement and elects to try the cause upon the merits.⁵ But an application for a peremptory writ of mandamus against a sole incumbent of a city office will abate upon such incumbent ceasing to hold or occupy such office, except in cases where such incumbent may resign such office for the purpose of evading such writ.⁶

4. Statutes.—Courts will take judicial notice of public statutes without their being stated in the pleadings, but when the statute gives the right and establishes a special method of enforcing it, not according to the course of the common law, the facts and circumstances the existence of which is necessary to entitle the party to the aid of the statute, must be specially set out.⁷ The constitutionality of a statute will be considered by the court in mandamus proceedings,⁸ and where the right to the writ depends upon the question whether a public statute appearing in the certificate in the petitioner, and should give a description of the petitioner's entries and of the locality of the land sufficiently certain to apprise the surveyor what land he is required to survey. Winder v. Williams, 23 Tex. 601.

A petition for a mandamus to compel county commissioners to declare the petitioner register of deeds should aver affirmatively that a vacancy existed when the alleged election took place. Rose v. Co. Commrs., 50 Me. 243.

A writ of mandamus issued on a relation of a town must show that the town directed the application therefor. State v. Sauk Co. Supervisors, 70 Wis. 485.

1. School District v. Lauderbaugh, 80 Mo. 190; People v. Earle, 47 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 370; People v. Soucy, 26 Ill. App. 504; People v. Township Board, 14 Mich. 28.

2. Black v. Auditor, 26 Ark. 237; People v. Chicago, 25 Ill. 483; Potts v. State, 75 Ind. 336. Compare Brown v. Reese (Tex.), 7 S. W. Rep. 489.

Under La. Code, art. 840, a petition for mandamus must be sworn to. The omission of the oath cannot be afterwards cured by supplemental petition. State v. Jefferson Police Jury, 33 La. An. 29.

Under the decisions and practice of the supreme court of the United States an application for "a rule to show cause why a mandamus in the nature of a writ of procedendo should not be issued" must be supported by affidavit, or its statements cannot be considered. Ex parte Poultney, 12 Pet. 472.

3. State v. Clay Co. School District, 8 Neb. 98.

4. Golden Canal Co. v. Bright, 8 Colo. 144.

5. Silver v. People, 45 Ill. 224.

6. State v. Guthrie, 17 Neb. 113.

7. Thorpe v. Rankin, 4 Harr. (N. J. L.) 36; Van Riper v. Parsons, 11 Vroom (N. J.) 1; Com. v. Cox, 1 Leg. Chron. (Pa.) 89.

8. State v. Steen, 43 N. J. L. 542.

statute book with all the prescribed forms of authentication is valid or not, the onus of proof is upon the applicants, with a strong presumption against the right asserted by them; and before that right can be recognized and judicially declared in the face of a public statute, having almost a conclusive presumption in its support, the applicants are bound to furnish the most conclusive evidence of the truth of the facts upon which they rely to invalidate the statute.¹

5. Amendment.—In mandamus proceedings the court can grant no relief except what is specified in the alternative writ, and if not warranted in granting that, must refuse any; but the writ is open to amendment.² But no amendment should be allowed to cure a fatal defect in an alternative mandamus after the return day.³ So motion for mandamus may be amended after argument.⁴ So matters arising pendente lite may be set up by answer or plea.⁵

6. Reply to the Answer.—No reply is necessary in mandamus; the answer, so far as inconsistent with the petition, is deemed denied without reply.⁶ So a plea to an answer in mandamus taking issue on immaterial matter is always bad.⁷

7. Demurrer.—When the facts stated in an application for mandamus do not entitle the plaintiff to the relief asked, a demurrer is the proper remedy.⁸ So where an alternative writ of mandamus fails to state facts sufficient to entitle the relator to the performance of the duty sought to be enforced, such defect may be taken advantage of by a demurrer, the same as in any other action, and the same right to answer, in case the demurrer is overruled, will exist in favor of a respondent as in any other proceeding.⁹

1. Legg v. Mayor etc. of Annapolis, 42 Md. 203.

2. State v. Union, 43 N. J. L. 518; Queen v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 10 Ad. & E. 531; Supervisors v. Durant, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 736; State v. Pierce County Supervisors, 71 Wis. 321; State v. Baggott (Mo.), 8 S. W. Rep. 737; Runion v. Latimer, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 126.

3. People v. Metropolitan Police Commrs., 5 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 241.

4. Houston v. Levy Court, 5 Harr. (Del.) 15.

5. People v. Baker, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 105; s. c., 14 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 19.

6. Beckel v. Union Township, 9 Ohio St. 569.

7. State v. Eaton, 11 Wis. 29.

8. Meyer v. Dubuque Co., 43 Iowa 592; State v. Chicago, St. Paul etc. R. Co., 19 Neb. 476; State v. Gibbs, 13 Fla. 55. Compare Brown v. Reese (Tex.), 7 S. W. Rep. 489.

Under the former practice an information for mandamus was not subject to demurrer. State v. Board of Equalization, 10 Iowa 157. The rule that a demurrer reaches back to the first fault in the pleadings of either party is as applicable to pleadings in mandamus cases as it is in ordinary suits at common law. Doolittle v. Cabell Co., 28 W. Va. 158. The demurrer should be to the writ and not to the verified complaint. Johnson v. Smith, 64 Ind. 275.

9. Long v. State, 17 Neb. 60; State v. Sheridan, 43 N. J. L. 82; Same v. Same, 43 N. J. L. 518; People v. Baker, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 105. Compare People v. Harris, 6 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 30.

Application for the writ and answer are the only pleadings allowed in applications for mandamus, and if the respondent file a demurrer and the same is overruled, the writ will issue, and no further pleadings be considered. People v. Hamilton County, 3 Neb. 244.

A demurrer to a complaint for a writ of mandate raises the question of the sufficiency of the facts averred in the complaint, or complaint and affidavit combined, but cannot be carried to the writ unless addressed to it in terms or by implication.¹

8. Joinder of Different Causes.—The remedy by mandamus cannot be joined with other actions under the rule as to the joinder of different causes of action.²

9. Right of Trial by Jury in Proceedings in Mandamus.—The right of trial by jury in proceedings in mandamus is generally determined by constitutional or statutory enactments in the different States.³

10. Jurisdiction.—The writ of mandamus must be applied for and issue in the county where it is intended to operate.⁴

1. Auditor v. State, 62 Ind. 266.

2. Barda v. Inhabitants of Carondelet, 16 Mo. 323.

Certiorari and mandamus cannot be joined in one writ. Fairbanks v. Amoskeag Nat. Bank, 30 Fed. Rep. 602.

Separate claims against a State officer cannot be joined in an application for a mandamus. Hickart v. Roberts, 9 Md. 41.

3. Castle v. Lawler, 47 Conn. 340; Chumaseo v. Potts, 2 Mont. 242; People v. Co. Commrs., 6 Colo. 202. See Dutton v. Hanover, 42 Ohio St. 215.

In Connecticut it is held that the constitutional provision for jury trials has no application to proceedings in mandamus, and that when issues of fact are raised by the pleadings, they are to be tried by the court without a jury. Castle v. Lawlor, 47 Conn. 340. And under the Civil Practice act of Montana it is held that a proceeding in mandamus not being an ordinary action at common law, the relator is not entitled as a matter of right to a trial by jury, and that it rests in the sound discretion of the court to award such trial. Chumaseo v. Potts, 2 Mont. 242.

In proceedings in mandamus to review the action of the exercise commissioners of New York city in refusing an hotel licence, the court may frame an issue of fact to be tried by a jury, under Code Civil Proc. N. Y., § 2083, which enacts "that an issue of fact, joined upon an alternative writ of mandamus, must be tried by jury," and it is not error to refuse to include in such issue conclusions or matters of inference, motive, or intent, or facts either conceded or a matter of record. People v. Woodman, 1 N. Y. Sup. 335. See People v. Order American Star, 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 66.

A general verdict for one party upon issues under a petition for mandamus is a finding on all the issues in favor of that party, and is a verdict which the jury have a right to render under the practice of New York, in the absence of instructions to the contrary. Hanrahan v. Board of Police, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 644; Peck v. Board of Police, 35 Barb. N. Y. 651.

In Pennsylvania, if the return raises a question of fact it must be decided by jury. Smith v. Com., 41 Pa. St. 335. See Treasurer of Jefferson v. Shannon, 51 Pa. St. 221; Childs v. Com., 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 104.

4. Wayne v. Greene. Wright (Ohio) 292; McMillon v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365; Whitmarsh Township v. Railroad Co., 8 Watts & S. (Pa.) 365; People v. Ouray, 4 Cal. 291; Ex parte Gephard, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 10. See Field v. Judge etc., 30 Mich. 10.

Mandamus to compel a surveyor to make a survey and return the field notes to the general land office must be brought in the county of his residence, and not where the land is situated, though several claimants are properly made parties, it not being a suit to try title. Texas Mexican R. Co. v. Locke, 63 Tex. 623.

A petition for a mandamus by a receiver of an insolvent bank to compel payment to him, from the state bank fund, of a sum sufficient to discharge the excess of the bank's indebtedness beyond its assets, held, properly brought in the county where the receiver resides, although a decree of a court of chancery to pay over such sum had been obtained in another county, where the bank was situated. Receiver of Danby Bank v. State Treasurer, 39 Vt. 92.

11. Appeal.—An appeal lies from a judgment of the circuit court awarding or refusing a mandamus.¹ Where, on appeal from a judgment awarding a peremptory mandamus, it appears that the relator is now entitled to such writ, the judgment will be affirmed without regard to the question whether it was correct when rendered.²

12. Variance.—A variance in substance, between a writ of mandamus and the order of court directing it to issue, as to the act to be performed is fatal.³

13. Another Action Pending.—A writ of mandamus cannot be abated or barred by another action pending for the same cause and between the same parties.⁴ But mandamus will not lie to compel the court to enter judgment while a rule is pending in that court to show cause why the report should not be set aside.⁵

14. Nonsuit.—If, upon issues on a petition for a mandamus, the petitioner be nonsuited without any report of the facts on which the nonsuit is based, the case must be sent back for the purpose of ascertaining the facts of the case that the principal court may determine the law.⁶

XVIII. PRACTICE.—1. Generally.—At common law the writ was grounded on a suggestion by the oath of the party injured, and in order to satisfy the court that there was a probable cause for interposition a rule was made directing the party complained of to show cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue, and if he showed no sufficient cause, the writ itself issued at first in the alternative either to do thus or signify some reason to the contrary to which a return or answer was made at a certain day.⁷

The most usual practice in this country is to begin the proceedings by presenting to the court an application in the form of a petition setting forth in detail the grounds upon which the petitioner asks a writ of mandamus. This petition is usually ex parte, no notice that it will be filed being given to the defendants,

A nonresident debtor is entitled to a mandamus to compel trustees to appoint referees, under 1 Rev. Stat. 800, in order to contest the validity of debts claimed by attaching creditors. Titus v. Kent, 1 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 80.

Under the second proviso of Minn. Laws 1881, ch. 40, requiring the supreme court to transmit, on the motion of the respondent, the record of a proceeding in mandamus against a town, pending in such court, and in which issues of fact were not determined, "to the district court of the proper county," the county wherein the town is situated is meant. State v. Lake, 28 Minn. 362.

1. Withers v. State, 36 Ala. 252; see State v. Judge of Sixth District Court, 21 La. An. 741; Justices of Spencer v.

Harcourt, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 499; People v. Church, 20 N. Y. 529; State v. Manitowoc County Clerk, 48 Wis. 112.

No appeal lies from an order of the superior court granting a writ of alternative mandamus. An appeal from such an order is premature. State v. Anson, Busb. (N. Car.) L. 302.

2. State v. Hoeflinger, 31 Wis. 257.

3. Hawkins v. Moore, 3 Ark. 345; see State v. Macdonald, 29 Minn. 440.

4. Calaveras County v. Brockway, 30 Cal. 325.

5. Berry v. Callet, 6 N. J. L. (1 Hals.) 179.

6. Martin v. Board of Police, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 550.

7. Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595, 611; 3 Black. Com. 111.

and it is always supported by affidavit when presented by a private person.¹ If a prima facie case is presented by the petition warranting the relief sought, the court frequently issues a rule which is served on the opposite party, requiring him to show cause why a mandamus should not issue.²

But in some of the States the issuing of this rule is frequently dispensed with, and the most usual practice is to issue the alternative writ immediately on the filing of a proper petition supported by affidavit.³ Where the court thinks proper to issue a rule, and it has been served, if the defendant fails to answer it or files an insufficient answer, the court either issues a peremptory writ of mandamus, enlarges the rule or compels an answer, as may be proper in the particular case. But if the answer denies the facts stated in the petition or shows sufficient cause why the rule should not issue, so that it appears that there is a dispute

1. Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595; Haight v. Turner, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 371; People v. Tioga Common Pleas, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 292; Goshorn v. Ohio Co., 1 W. Va. 312; Mason Co. v. Minturn, 4 W. Va. 302; Shields v. Bennett, 8 W. Va. 76; Barnett v. Meredith, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 651; Sights v. Yarnalls, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 293.

An affidavit to support a rule to show cause why a mandamus should not issue to restore an attorney must show that he was improperly removed. Ex parte Gephard, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 134.

2. People v. Loomis, 94 Ill. 587; Ex parte Skaggs, 19 Mo. 339; Shrever v. Livingston Co., 9 Mo. 196; Keasey v. Bricker, 60 Pa. St. 9; Swan v. Gray, 44 Miss. 393; People v. Thistlewood, 103 Ill. 139; Ex parte Candee, 48 Ala. 386; Speed v. Cocke, 57 Ala. 209; Cook v. Tanner, 40 Conn. 378; Re Devereux Street, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 103; Smith v. Dyer, 1 Call (Va.) 563; Dew v. Judges, 3 Hen. & M. (Va.) 1; Barnett v. Meredith, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 652; Harrison v. Emmerson, 2 Leigh (Va.) 764; Mason Co. v. Minturn, 4 W. Va. 302; Ohio Valley Iron Works v. Moundsville, 11 W. Va. 8; see People v. Judges of Cayuga, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 68; Turner's Cas., 5 Ohio 542; Grimes v. Commrs., Wright (Ohio) 126; Dinwiddie Justices v. Chesterfield Justices, 5 Call. (Va.) 556.

On a rule to show cause why a peremptory mandamus should not issue, only one writ can be granted. State v. Beloit, 20 Wis. 79.

Whether mandamus is the proper remedy in a case is not determined by an order to show cause why the writ should not issue. That point may be finally examined and determined at the hearing on the return of the writ, when both parties can be heard. Olson v. Muskegon Circuit Judge, 49 Mich. 85.

On the hearing of an application for a mandamus, the party showing cause is entitled to open and close the argument. People v. Treasurer, 8 Mich. 392.

Where the order to show cause contains the usual clause, "or for other relief" the relator may have a mandamus for any relief to which he shows himself entitled. People v. Nostrand, 46 N. Y. 375.

3. Childs v. Com., 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 194; Copland v. Lancaster Co. Bank, 5 L. Bar. 14 Feb. 1874; see State v. Todd, 4 Ohio 351; Houston v. Levy Court, 5 Harr. (Del.) 15; State v. Jefferson Police Jury, 33 La. An. 29; State v. Fairchild, 22 Wis. 110; People v. Cloud, 3 Ill. (2 Scam.) 362; Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 628; Potts v. State, 75 Ind. 336; People v. Judges of Cayuga, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 68; Schend v. St. George's German Society, 49 Wis. 237; State v. Board of Supervisors, 64 Wis. 218; Com. v. Tyn dall, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 425; Com. v. Young Men's Hibernian Beneficial Society, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 441; Com. v. Cuncannon, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 344; Tillson v. Putnam Co., 19 Ohio 415; People v. Throop, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 183; Bridges v. Shallcross, 6 W. Va. 662; Shields & Preston v. Bennett, 8 W. Va. 72; Fisher v. Mayor of Charleston, Sleeper v. Franklin Lyceum, 7 R. I. 523; Fitzhugh v. Custer, 4 Tex. 391.

of fact between the parties, an alternative writ of mandamus is ordered to be issued in order that by the return to such alternative writ of mandamus a formal issue may be made up and tried.¹

This alternative writ of mandamus, whether issued immediately on the filing of the petition or after the return of such a rule, here as elsewhere stands in lieu of a declaration in an ordinary suit.²

The facts, however, alleged in this alternative writ may be alleged by way of recital; but it being in the nature of a declaration as well as of a writ, the sufficiency of these facts, to entitle the plaintiff to the redress he seeks; is called in question by a motion to quash the alternative writ or by a demurrer to it, and any defect in the recitals or allegations of this alternative writ cannot be aided by the petition or affidavit thereto, for though they be the foundation on which the writ was issued, they constitute no part of the pleadings in the case.³

If the petition does not state the necessary facts to justify the issuing of an alternative writ or a rule, neither ought to be issued, and if issued on the return day this fatal defect should be taken advantage of, not by demurrer but by a motion to quash the alternative writ or to discharge the rule as improvidently awarded. The petition and affidavit bear to the mandamus nisi a relation similar to that which an affidavit bears to an attachment.⁴

2. Notice.—The writ will never issue without reasonable notice of the application, except in a case of emergency, where the right is clear.⁵

In the case of Bridges v. Shallcross, 6 W. Va. 562, and Shields & Preston v. Bennett, auditor, 8 W. Va. 72, the court awarded alternative writs of mandamus without issuing any previous rule to show cause why a mandamus should not issue. The issuing of such previous rule is ordinarily useless and produces delay without any corresponding benefit.

Requisites of Affidavit.—Where defendants oppose a mandamus sought to enforce the result of an election as officially canvassed, on the allegation that fraudulent and unlawful votes were cast and counted, and ask a continuance to enable them to prepare their case, their affidavit should allege grounds for setting aside the election; and, particularly, should allege what objectionable votes were received, and that they were enough to affect the result. 1876, State v. Thatch, 5 Neb. 94.

1. Dew v. Judges, 3 Hen & M. (Va.) 1; Douglass v. Loomis, Judge, 5 W. Va. 544.

2. People v. Supervisors of West- chester, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 612; Canal Trustees v. People, 12 Ill. 254.

3. Commercial Bank of Albany v. Canal Comms., 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 25; Johnes v. State Auditor, 4 Ohio St. 493; People v. Baker, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 105.

4. Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 612.

5. Harkins v. Supervisors, 2 Minn. 342; Com. v. Brady, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 121. Mandamus cannot issue without notice in some form to the defendant or a waiver of notice by appearance. Fairbanks v. Amoskeag Nat. Bank, 30 Fed. Rep. 602. After making a return to the alternative mandamus sued out against him by a judgment creditor of a township, the township supervisor cannot set up the non-service of any notice in the cause. Edwards v. U. S., 103 U. S. 471.

But see Com. v. Comms. of Allegheny, 6 Pitts. L. J. (Pa.) 12.

After notice to the other party of an intention to apply for an alternative writ of mandamus, ten days' notice, by service of the writ, will be sufficient to compel him to answer. People v. Rickey, 19 Ill. 405.

3. Service of a writ of mandamus must be made on the respondent.¹ The proper mode of service is by delivering the writ, the officer retaining a copy to make his return upon.² And is usually made to the person or officer who is to perform the required act or whose duty it is to make return.³ The service of the writ

The omission of a date to the return of a peremptory mandamus directed to B G, and others, township committee, "to assign and appoint, in writing, to the overseers of the highway, or some of them, their several limits or divisions of the road for opening, clearing out, amendment, and repair," will not vitiate the notice. State v. Griscon, 8 N. J. L. (3 Hals.) 136.

1. Wilson v. Hunt (Cal.), 16 Pac. Rep. 305; Schend v. St. George's German Aid Soc., 49 Wis. 237; Jones v. Gibbs, 51 Miss. 401; Haskins v. Supervisors, 51 Miss. 406.

The county commissioners having viewed certain land, whereas husband and wife were seised in fee in right of the wife, afterwards located the road over the same, and assessed damages for the land so taken, and ordered the damages to be paid to the husband, not knowing that he had deceased; and, upon application for a mandamus to the commissioners to show cause why an order should not issue to the county treasurer to pay over the damages to the widow, it was suggested that the location might have been made in the lifetime of the husband; whereupon the court directed that notice of such application should be given to the administrator on his estate to appear and show cause against the claim of the widow. Kent v. Essex, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 521.

2. Hempstead v. Underhill, 20 Ark. 337; State v. Supervisors, 69 Wis. 264; see St. Louis Co. Court v. Sparks, 10 Mo. 118; Queen v. Birmingham etc. R. Co., 1 El. & Bl. 293; People v. Pearson, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 274; People v. Judges of Westchester, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 73; s. c., 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 403; Ladue v. Spalding, 17 Mo. 159; Haveyreyer v. Mineral Point Sup., 22 Wis. 396; State v. Brady, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 121.

The writ of mandamus in this case was placed in the hands of the sheriff for service, and he served the same upon the mayor and councilmen, who were the defendants, by delivering to each of them a certified copy thereof; and he then returned the original writ to the court, and neither the mayor nor any one of the councilmen ever had the original writ in his possession, and never even saw the same. Held, that the service was void; that the service should have been made by delivering to the defendants the original writ, and not a mere copy thereof; and further held, that the defendants cannot, under such circumstances, be held to have committed a contempt by reason of any failure or refusal on their part to obey the mandates of the writ. State v. King, 29 Kan. 607.

Service of an alternative writ of mandamus may be made in the manner prescribed for the service of a summons. State v. Lincoln Supervisors, 67 Wis. 274.

3. Ely v. Penn. District, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 18; Queen v. Chapman, 6 Mod. Rep. 152; King v. Mayor of Exeter, 12 Mod. Rep. 251; Village of Glencoe v. People, 78 Ill. 382.

A peremptory mandamus commanding a town board of supervisors to levy a tax must be served by leaving the original writ with the chairman and a copy with each supervisor; said original to be returned by the board with their proceedings thereon. State v. Town of Mineral Point, 22 Wis. 396.

A writ of mandamus against a board of supervisors, whether alternative or peremptory, should be served upon the individual members; an acceptance by the clerk, although "by order of the board," is not sufficient. Downs v. Rock Island Co., 4 Biss. (U. S.) 508.

A mandamus directed to a foreign corporation engaged in business in this State, commanding the performance of some duty growing out of that business, may be legally served upon any officer of the company in this State, upon whom lawful service could have been made, according to the ancient common law, if the corporation were domestic. Freeholders of Mercer v. Penna. R. Co., 42 N. J. L. 490.

Where the thing enjoined by the writ was the building of a bridge, service upon a mere financial officer of the company was not sufficient. Freehold- to which the seal of the court is not affixed is a nullity.¹ Where an alternative mandamus has been duly served, the court, on proof of such service, will grant a peremptory mandamus without compelling a return to the first writ.²

4. Return.—The function of the return is not simply to show what would amount to a prima facie right in the respondent in the absence of any allegation to the contrary, but it is to show a right to refuse obedience to the writ in view of the allegations it contains. And if it does not do this it is demurrable.³ The return should, for the purpose of making an issue, set up a positive denial of facts stated, or should state other facts sufficient to defeat relator's right.⁴

Allegations on a return should not be made on information and belief.⁵ If the respondent does not deny the material allegations, his failure is to be treated as an admission of the fact the ers of Mercer v. Penna. R. Co., 42 N. J. L. 490.

Time of Service.—The writ must be served at least eight days before the time specified for showing cause. People v. Rensselaer Common Pleas, 3 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 164.

Where the writ was served on the assessors of taxes, after the duties of the assessors were completed by statute for that year, the writ will not be quashed, but the time for return extended. State v. Assessors of Taxes of Rahway (N. J.), 17 Atl. Rep. 122.

An attachment will not be granted for disobedience to a peremptory mandamus unless it appear that it was served on the persons who ought to have obeyed it. People v. Judges of Washington Col. & C. Cas. (N. Y.) 362; s. c., 2 Cal. (N. Y.) 97.

Continuance—For Want of Service.—It is a sufficient ground for a continuance in a proceeding for mandamus in this court, where the action or conduct of several persons is sought to be affected or controlled by the writ, that some of the persons so to be affected have not been served with the summons. People v. Thistlewood, 103 Ill. 139.

1. People v. Fisk, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 464.

2. People v. Judges of Ulster, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 64.

Motion for peremptory mandamus, made on filing the alternative, denied, without prejudice or costs, because the alternative writ was served in vacation. People v. Essex Common Pleas, 1 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 114.

3. State v. Lean, 9 Wis. 279.

4. Canova v. State, 18 Fla. 512; Levy

v. English, 4 Ark. 65. See Springfield v. Commrs., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 59; People v. Co. Commrs., 6 Colo. 202; U. S. v. Bayard, 5 Mackey (D. C.) 428; Commercial Bank of Albany v. Canal Commrs., 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 25; People v. Commrs. of Fort Edward, 11 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 89; People v. American Institute, 2 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 170; Society for Visitation of the Sick v. Com., 52 Pa. St. 125; Shaw v. Howell, 18 La. An. 195; Goss v. Vermontville Common Council, 44 Mich. 319.

The mandatory part of a writ of mandamus may be very general; but the return must be very minute in showing why the party did not do what he was commanded. [Per CROMPTON and BLACKBURN, JJ.] Regina v. Southampton, 1 Ellis, B. & S. 5.

In mandamus, where the defendants' affidavits merely state the affiant's ignorance of the facts positively alleged in the petition, the allegations of the petition are not put in issue. People v. Board of Supervisors, 6 N. Y. Supp. 591.

Discrepancy Between Return and Statement.—Where a discrepancy exists between the return of a judge and the statement of a relator, credence will be given in preference to the return. State v. Burthe (La.), 1 So. Rep. 652.

5. People v. Morton, 12 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 47; State v. Sumter Co., 22 Fla. 1. See People v. American Institute, 2 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 170. Compare People v. Alameda County, 45 Cal. 395.

The return must be certain to a common intent in general; every allegation same as if admitted in express terms.¹ So the respondent must also show that he has complied with the order of the writ to the extent of his ability.² And his return will be taken as true unless its falsity is shown by the petitioner.³

(a) SUFFICIENCY OF RETURN.—A return to an alternative mandamus is sufficient if it contains a full and certain answer to all the allegations expressly made in the petition for it and discloses a fair legal reason why the mandamus should not be obeyed.⁴ If the return be insufficient the proper mode of proceeding is to demurrer or move for a peremptory must be direct and stated, without qualification, with plainness and certainty. Com. v. Hancock, 4 Leg. Gaz. (Pa.) 110; Com. v. Commrs. of Allegheny, 32 Pa. St. 218; Com. v. Cox, 1 Leg. Chron. (Pa.) 89; Com. v. Commrs. of Allegheny, 37 Pa. St. 237; Com. v. German Society, 15 Pa. St. 251; Society for the Visitation of the Sick v. Com., 52 Pa. St. 125.

1. State v. Haws, 43 Ohio St. 16.

2. Silverthorne v. Warren R. Co., 33 N. Y. L. (4 Vroom) 173.

3. Tucker v. Iredell, 1 Jones (N. Car.) 451; People v. Ovenshire, 41 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 164. See Beard v. Supervisors, 51 Miss. 542; Merrill v. Gladwin County Treasurer, 61 Mich. 95; State v. Monroe, 39 La. An. 664.

In some cases it is held that his return must be accepted as true; if it be false the party aggrieved is left to his action for a false return. Beauman v. Leake County, 42 Miss. 237; Mead v. Treasurer of Ingham, 36 Mich. 416. See People v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 47 Hun (N. Y.) 543; People v. Pritchard, 19 Mich. 470.

4. Springfield v. County Commrs., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 59; People v. Judges of Westchester, Col. & C. Cas. (N. Y.) 135; Sikes v. Ransom, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 279; Benbow v. Iowa City, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 313. See Ex parte Trustees of Williamsburgh, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 34; Snoddy v. Madison Co. Court, Sneed (Tenn.) 74; Bartlett v. Franklin Co. Court, Sneed (Tenn.) 184; Rex v. Faversham Fisherman's Co., 8 T. R. 352; Rex v. Doncaster, 2 Ld. Ken. 391; Rex v. Taunton, Cowp. 113; Rex v. Old Hall, 2 P. & D. 515; Rex v. Round, 5 N. & M. 427; Reg. v. St. Andrew, 10 A. & E. 736; Reg. v. Burslem Board, 5 Jur., N. S. 1394; Com. v. Sheeham, 32 Smith (Pa.) 132; Meriden etc. Co. v. Whedon, 31 Conn. 118; Greene v. African M. E. Soc., 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 254; Brosius v. Reuter, 1 Har. & J. (Md.)

551; People v. Collins, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 549; State v. Board of Public Works, 45 N. J. L. 465; Reichenbach v. Ruddach (Pa.), 15 Atl. Rep. 488; Buffalo, New York etc. R. Co. v. Com., 120 Pa. St. 537; In re Prospect Brewing Co. (Pa.), 17 Atl. Rep. 1090; State v. Jones, 10 Iowa 65; Society of Visitation of the Sick etc. v. Com., 52 Pa. St. 125; State v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 45 N. J. L. 82; Angle v. Runyon, 38 N. J. L. 403.

Every intendment will be made against a return which fails to answer important facts. People v. Ohio Grove, 51 Ill. 191.

To an alternative writ of mandate directed to a county auditor, requiring him to show cause why he should not draw a warrant on the county treasury for the amount of an allowance made by the circuit court, it is a good return that the order of such court directed that such allowance should be paid by another person out of another fund, and that the claim had never been presented to and allowed by the board of county commissioners. State v. Morrison, 103 Ind. 161.

A return of the common council of the city of Madison to an alternative mandamus, directing them to levy a tax for the payment of a judgment against the city, setting forth that they have no "knowledge" of the judgment sufficient to form a belief is insufficient. The denial should be of any "knowledge or information," etc. State v. Madison, 15 Wis. 30.

Upon a writ of mandate to a county board, under 2 Ind. Rev. Stat., p. 297, § 740, on relation of a taxpayer, to compel removal of the records and furniture of the county offices and circuit court to the new county buildings, an answer that the board had set aside its order of removal for fraud in its procurement is insufficient; any defence against making the order comes then writ.¹ If the return be sufficient, whether true or false, writ of peremptory mandamus cannot issue at once, but the return must be falsified by an action.² The issuance of a peremptory writ is not the necessary consequence of the respondent's answer being held insufficient if the insufficiency is in the pleading only and not in the answer. In case the answer is held insufficient the court will, in the first instance, direct the respondent to file a fuller and more perfect answer.³

(b) HOW SUFFICIENCY QUESTIONED.—A respondent in a proceeding for mandamus may question its sufficiency in law by demurrer or motion to quash, or in fact by plea or answer.⁴

(1) Demurrer.—The relator may traverse or demur to the return,⁵ too late. Clarke Co. Commrs. v. State, 61 Ind. 75.

The return of a register of deeds to an alternative writ of mandamus to compel him to hold his office at a place alleged to be the county seat, having been adjudged insufficient on demurrer, and the relator having moved for a peremptory writ, the clerk of the court of the same county presented affidavits alleging collusion between the relator and the register, and that similar suits had been commenced against other officers of the county, to test the same question, in which issues of fact had been joined. Held, that the proceedings against the register should be stayed until after a trial of the issues of fact. State v. Avery, 15 Wis. 18.

Facts Not Stated in the Writ.—The respondent will not be required to make a return as to facts not stated in the writ. People v. Columbia Common Pleas, 3 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 30.

1. Com. v. Commrs. of Allegheny, 32 Pa. St. 218; People v. Byrne, 9 Abb. (N. Y.) N. Cas. 127.

In People v. Assessors of New York, 52 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 140, it is held that upon an application for mandamus, if the substantial allegations in the moving affidavits are not fully met or avoided in the answering affidavits, a peremptory writ should be granted in the first instance. See Rinkel v. Wine-miller, 4 Har. & M. (Md.) 429; People v. Throop, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 183; People v. Brennan, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 522; People v. Assessors of Barton, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 148.

Generally.—A motion for a writ of mandamus will not be entertained unless it is made in the manner prescribed by the practice act for moving for a new trial in the district court. People v. Coon, 25 Cal. 635.

A motion for a peremptory manda-mus, on the coming in of a return to an alternative mandamus, is a non-enumerated motion, if the relator has not formally demurred. People v. Commrs. of Hudson, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 559.

A motion by the applicant for a writ of mandamus, that the writ issue notwithstanding the matters alleged in the defendant's answer, amounts to a general demurrer to the answer. Ward v. Flood, 48 Cal. 36.

An order overruling a motion for a peremptory mandamus only has the effect to defer the question of issuance until the trial on the merits. Booth v. Strippleman, 61 Tex. 378.

2. Dane v. Derby, 54 Me. 95. See Mullanphy v. St. Louis County Court, 6 Mo. 563; Cook v. Tanner, 40 Conn. 378.

3. State v. Jones, 10 Iowa 65. See State v. School Land Commrs., 9 Wis. 200.

Where to a writ of alternative mandamus the defendant exhibited a bill in equity alleging an equitable defence to the demands of the plaintiff, and praying for an injunction to restrain him from prosecuting the writ, and asked that that might be received as a return to the writ, held, not to be error in the court to refuse the injunction, and to order the defendant to make return. Neuse River etc. Co. v. Commrs., 6 Jones (N. Car.) L. 204.

4. State v. Williams, 69 Ala. 311.

5. People v. Champion, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 61; Silverthorne v. Warren R. Co., 33 N. J. L. (4 Vroom) 173; People v. Beebe, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 379; State v. Suwannee Co. Commrs., 21 Fla. 1; Barney v. State, 42 Md. 480; State v. Cole (Neb.), 41 N. W. Rep. 245; Hoskins v. Supervisors, 51 Miss. 406; State v. Lusitanian etc. Society, 15 La. An. 73.

Where a return to an alternative but he cannot do both.¹ He is not allowed to demur specially to the return if dissatisfied; he must obtain a supplementary return.² If the respondent files a demurrer to the petition instead of an answer to the writ and the relator agrees to accept the demurrer as a return to the writ, and thereupon demurs to it, the latter's agreement and subsequent action constitute a waiver of his objections to the technical correctness of the pleadings.³ So if the relator takes issue on the return instead of demurring he cannot afterwards question its legal sufficiency; there can be no judgment non obstante.⁴

After making a return to the alternative mandamus the respondent cannot set up the nonservice of any notice in the cause.⁵

(2) Motion to Quash.—In an action by mandamus it is proper practice for the respondent to move to quash the alternative writ for defects in the application therefor.⁶ Objections to a writ of mandamus, merely technical, must be taken in limine on a motion to quash, and cannot prevail after the return.⁷

Such a motion is in the nature of a demurrer, and on overruling the same the respondent should have leave to answer.⁸ A writ of mandamus does not traverse any of the facts alleged in the writ, a demurrer to the return is superfluous. People v. Salomon, 46 Ill. 333; People v. Miner, Ill. 384.

It is not necessary to traverse the return to a mandamus before going to trial on the merits. Borgstede v. Clark, 5 La. An. 291.

1. People v. Vail, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 38; People v. Beebe, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 379.

2. People v. Common Pleas, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 429. See People v. Champion, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 61; Vail v. People, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 38.

3. Ensworth v. Albin, 46 Mo. 450.

Where, upon motion for a peremptory writ of mandamus, the defendant reads affidavits justifying his action, and controverting the allegations of the relator, and the latter, without introducing further papers or asking for an alternative writ, proceeds to argument, this is equivalent to a demurrer, and he cannot complain if the court pass upon the motion instead of ordering an alternative writ. People v. Fairman, 91 N. Y. 385.

4. People v. Board of Police, 26 N. Y. 316; reversing s.c., 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 644. And see People v. Finger, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 341.

5. Edwards v. U. S., 103 U. S. 471.

6. State v. Ellwood, 11 Wis. 17; State v. Harvey, 11 Wis. 33; State v. Slavan, 11 Wis. 153; State v. Commrs., 19 Wis. 237; Rex v. Cambridge (Mayor), 2 T. R. 456; Rex v. York (Mayor), 5 T. R. 66. See Kahn v. Bauer (Cal.), 12 Pac. Rep. 477; Kahn v. City and County of San Francisco, 12 Pac. Rep. 478.

A peremptory writ of mandamus will not be quashed on the motion of the defendant because no alternative writ has been tried, where he has had an opportunity to be heard upon the rule to show cause. State v. Elkinton, 30 N. J. L. 335.

On motion to quash a mandamus to permit an inspection of the books of the corporation, directed to the person shown to be in possession and control of them, the question whether the corporation should be made a party cannot be considered. State v. Bergenthal, 72 Wis. 314.

7. Fuller v. Plainfield Academic School, 6 Conn. 532. See People v. Batchelor, 53 N. Y. 128; Easton v. Leigh Water Co., 97 Pa. St. 554.

8. State v. Lean, 9 Wis. 279; People College of Physicians, 7 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 290.

A motion to quash the answer, if such a motion is proper, is not equivalent to a motion to make the answer more specific and definite, or to strike motion to quash an alternative writ may be made and heard before the return, and the party making the motion is not bound to present his objection in the form of a return to the writ.¹

If the answer to an application contains or sets up any sufficient reason for refusing the writ, though it is in other respects evasive and irresponsible, it should not be quashed as a whole.² But dubious and important legal questions ought not to be decided on a motion to quash a return.³ So where the relation for a mandamus leaves the right of the relator in doubt and the writ is quashed for that reason, leave will be given to amend the relation.⁴ Where a general motion to quash a writ of mandate has been overruled, no mere technical objections to the writ will be considered on appeal to the supreme court unless it be shown that such objections were distinctly raised in the court below.⁵

(c) DEFENCES BY RETURN.—The return may set up any number of facts constituting valid reasons for not doing the act enjoined.⁶ And where distinct defences are set up in a return to an alternative writ of mandamus one or more may be demurred to out a part of it as redundant and superfluous, or to compel an election between different defences; but it is a challenge of the substance of the defence or defences presented, is equivalent to a demurrer, or a motion for judgment over the answer, and can only be sustained when in fact the answer contains no defence to the plaintiff's cause of action. Crans v. Francis, 24 Kan. 750.

1. Harwood v. Marshall, 10 Md. 451; People v. Judges of Westchester, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 73.

Passing Upon Issues Generally.—In a mandamus proceeding to compel a public officer to receive warrants in payment of a debt, the issue of the genuineness of the warrants may be passed on. State v. Pilsbury, 29 La. An. 787.

Where an officer sets up in justification of his refusal to exercise the functions of his office an act of the legislature abolishing the same, the constitutionality of such act will be considered by the court and mandamus refused. If the officer had continued to exercise his office, the court would not by mandamus compel him to desist; the remedy would be by quo warranto. State v. Steen, 43 N. J. L. 542.

A mandamus in the alternative will lie, in Indiana, to compel the city council to issue precepts for the collection of an assessment for a street improvement; the question of the correctness of the engineer's estimates or of the contractor's demand may be tried on the return under 2 Gav. & H., §§ 741-2. Chapin v. Osborn, 29 Ind. 99.

On a rule for the writ of mandamus to obtain an appeal from a final decree, whether it changes the parties' legal rights as fixed by a former judgment or is merely declaratory of the latter's legal effect is a question which cannot be determined; it can be determined only on the appeal. Little v. Consolidated Association, 2 La. An. 731.

2. Legg v. Mayor etc. of Annapolis, 42 Ind. 203.

3. Silverthorne v. Warren R. Co., 33 N. J. L. (4 Vroom) 173.

Under Code Civil Proc. N. Y., § 2075, providing that an alternative writ of mandamus cannot be quashed or set aside on motion for any matter involving the merits, the questions whether mandamus is the proper remedy and whether the relator has another legal remedy cannot be raised on motion. People v. Board of Supervisors, 3 N. Y. Supp. 751.

4. State v. Hastings, 10 Wis. 518; State v. Elwood, 11 Wis. 17; State v. Slavan, 11 Wis. 153.

5. Auditor v. State, 72 Ind. 266.

6. People v. Supervisors, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 473; People v. Ulster Supervisors, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 473; Wright v. Faucett, 4 Burr. 2041; Ex parte Candee, 48 Ala. 386.

Under the New Jersey law as to mandamus, the respondents may set up in their return as many separate defences as they see fit, if consistent, fairly responsive, and tending to an issue that will procure a final decision of the rights of the parties; but if false, frivolous, or calculated to delay the remedy sought, the return will be quashed on motion. To an alternative writ, commanding the respondents to extend a sewer in a certain line, or show cause, a return showing substantial difficulties in its construction, adequate relief by another sewer, and want of funds or of authority to raise them, will not be quashed. State v. Jersey City Board of Public Works, 45 N. J. L. 465.

Conclusive Answers.—An alternative mandamus was issued to compel the comptroller to draw his warrant upon the treasurer for the payment of a claim upon the treasury. The answer that no appropriation has ever been made by law for the payment of the claim as required by art. 7, § 8, of the constitution, is conclusive. People v. Burrows, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 89.

That there is no funds is a good answer to an alternative mandamus. Dodd v. Miller, 14 Ind. 433; Miller v. State (Kan.), 22 Pac. Rep. 326; Treasurer of Jefferson County v. Shannon, 51 Pa. St. 221; People v. Frink, 32 Mich. 96.

If the entire fund which can be raised by taxation within constitutional limits is required to meet the necessary expenses of an economical administration of the county government, a statement of such facts, supported by proof, will be a due return to a peremptory mandamus directing the county commissioners to levy and collect a sufficient tax to satisfy a judgment in favor of an individual creditor. Cromartie v. Bladen County Comms., 85 N. Car. 211. See Cope v. Collins, 37 Ark. 649.

A county treasurer, in his return to an alternative writ of mandamus, showing cause for refusing to pay a warrant drawn on him as treasurer, alleged as a reason for so doing that it was issued through fraud and misrepresentation and without authority, and that at the time of the service of the writ upon him and since he had not had in his possession any funds with which to pay the warrant. Held, that this was not a sufficient answer when the petition for mandamus alleged frequent demands on the treasurer for payment before it was filed. Hendricks v. Johnson, 45 Miss. 644. So when money has been appropriated for a specific purpose it is not in all cases a sufficient answer to an application for a mandamus to compel its payment for that purpose, to set up that the money has been wrongfully applied to other purposes. It may be regarded in contemplation of law as still in the treasury. People v. N. Y. City Comptroller, 77 N. Y. 45.

The secretary of state may set up in answer to a petition for mandamus to compel him to pay an award that a third person claims the money adversely to the petitioner, and that it is held by the secretary pending the settlement of the controversy between the conflicting claimants. Bayard v. U. S., 127 U. S. 246.

An alternative mandamus was issued directing the defendant to open and improve a certain highway. The answer that the highway had been discontinued in the manner prescribed by law was held sufficient. Clark v. Comms. of Highways, 1 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 193.

On motion for mandamus to open and work a road previously laid out, an order of the highway commissioners, made after the motion and before its decision, discontinuing the road cannot be considered, the relator not having had notice of such order. People v. Mills (N. Y.), 15 N. E. Rep. 886.

Where, under the provisions of the Illinois township organization law, town officers had resigned in order to avoid auditing and paying a judgment against the town, held, that it was not a sufficient return to an alternative writ of mandamus that the respondents, the officers, had resigned. If it does not also appear that their successors have been elected or appointed and qualified, they will be ordered to audit the judgment. U. S. v. Badger, 6 Biss. 308.

To a rule against a county surveyor to show cause why a mandamus should not issue to compel him to make a survey of land upon the application of one claiming the privileges of the pre-emption laws, it is a sufficient answer that it appeared from the records of his office that the land had been previously surveyed and granted to another person. Watkins v. Kirchain, 10 Tex. 375.

A return showing that the person to whom the writ was directed has no legal authority to do the act commanded is good. State v. Perrine, 34 N. J. L. 254.

Where the city council of Wheeling passed an order to issue an innkeeper's licence on the first of May, and the innand issue taken on the other.¹ But argumentative inferences in a return or sworn allegations which are merely constructive deductions, and which if false are not indictable as perjuries, cannot be treated as presenting distinct issues of fact.²

When the respondent elects to obey the writ, it is sufficient to set forth this fact by way of return, averring with sufficient certainty and clearness, his compliance with the mandate of the court, substantially "following the mandatory clause of the writ and stating his performance of the duty as by the writ commanded."³ So where the answer presents an issue of fact as to the true result of an election, this is a proper issue to be submitted to a jury.⁴

(d) OF THE MANNER AND TIME OF MAKING RETURN.—A mandamus to a board of officers to compel them to do a thing in a public capacity requires a return by them as a body.⁵

Writs of mandamus are not term writs returnable only at the next term after they are issued; they may be made returnable keeper before that date sued out a mandamus nisi against the officer whose duty it would be to issue the licence, held, the officer might, in his return, allege a noncompliance, on the part of the innkeeper, with an order subsequently passed by the council taxing the licence. Sights v. Yarnalls, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 292.

Where judgment has been duly obtained against a county upon coupons detached from its bonds, no defence which questions their validity can be pleaded to a mandamus commanding the county court to pay the judgment from moneys in the treasury or raise the means therefor by the levy of a special tax. Ralls Co. Court v. United States, 105 U. S. 733.

When the legality of a tax has been affirmed on certiorari in the court of last resort, the question of the legality of such tax cannot be raised on the return to an alternative writ of mandamus issued to enforce the collection of the tax. Belvidere v. Warren R. Co., 34 N. J. L. 193. So to an alternative writ to show cause why he should not make a supplemental tax list, and extend thereon for collection certain taxes levied to pay a judgment on certain bonds of the county, the county clerk pleaded that the bonds had been adjudged invalid. Held no defence after a judgment on the bonds had been obtained. Hill v. Scotland County Court, 32 Fed. Rep. 716.

Where Causes Are Inconsistent.—When several causes returned are inconsistent, the whole is bad. Rex v. Cambridge (Mayor), 2 T. R. 456; Rex

v. York (Mayor), 5 T. R. 66; Ex parte Candee, 48 Ala. 386.

1. State v. Suwannee Co. Commrs., 21 Fla. 1.

2. Com. v. Commrs. etc., 37 Pa. St. 237; People v. Supervisors of New York, 18 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 152; s. c., 21 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 288; 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 233.

3. State v. Williams, 69 Ala. 311; State v. Sheridan, 43 N. J. L. 82; Johnston v. Cleveland, 67 N. Car. 101; State v. Bonnifield, 10 Nev. 401. See State v. Schofield, 41 Mo. 38.

On a return of full compliance with a writ of mandamus issued to compel a court for the trial of contested elections organized under Comp. Laws, ch. 89, § 13, to sign a bill of exceptions to the decision, the supreme court declined to hear proof that the bill of exceptions was not true. McDonald v. Sheldon, 2 Kan. 322.

4. People v. Grand County Commrs., 6 Colo. 202.

5. McCoy v. Ins. of Harnett, 4 Jones (N. Car.) L. 180. See People v. Police Board, 46 Hun (N. Y.) 296; State v. Shea, 70 Wis. 104.

The proper way for the justices of a county to make return to a mandamus is for them to convene, and, a majority being present, to fix upon the facts they mean to rely on by way of defence, and appoint some one of their body to make affidavit, and to do all other things required by the proceeding. Lander v. McMillan, 8 Jones (N. Car.) L. 174.

The answer of supervisors, in their own names, cannot be regarded as an

during the same term, and the fixing of the time for their return is always within the sound discretion of the court.¹

(e) NEGLECT TO MAKE RETURN.—Upon the neglect of the respondent to make return to the alternative writ the relator is not entitled as of course to the peremptory writ; he should generally proceed to enforce a return.² The fine imposed by statute for not obeying a mandamus cannot be imposed for failure merely to make return to an order to show cause.³

(f) EVASIVE RETURN.—If the return be evasive, a peremptory mandamus will be awarded.⁴ If defendant denies only a part of the averments therein, the relator need prove only the averments denied.⁵

(g) DAMAGES FOR FALSE RETURN.—If a return is found to be false, the relator may recover damages equivalent to the injury sustained, together with a peremptory mandamus to the defendant to do his duty.⁶ Summary recovery of damages on the ground of false return is allowable only when relator traverses the return by plea and establishes its falsity first; not when he demurs and prevails on the ground it is insufficient in law.⁷

(h) AMENDING OR WITHDRAWING RETURN.—The court will allow a return to be amended when no loss of time or other in-answer of the board, in a petition for mandamus against the latter. People v. San Francisco, 27 Cal. 655.

1. Harwood v. Marshall, 10 Md. 451. An alternative mandamus may be made returnable at a special term. People v. New York Common Pleas, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 649.

Under N. C. Code, § 623, when the writ is applied for to enforce a money demand the summons must be returned in term time. Rogers v. Jenkins, 98 N. Car. 129.

2. State v. Baird, 11 Wis. 260. See Hoffman v. Shea, 70 Wis. 104.

Where an alternative mandamus is issued and no answer or return of cause is made, the court, instead of proceeding by attachment for contempt, may direct a peremptory mandamus to issue, simply regarding the alternative mandamus as in the nature of a rule to show cause why an absolute mandamus should not issue, and the court which issues such rule is the exclusive judge of the sufficiency of the service of it, and its judgment upon that matter cannot be revised upon appeal. State v. Jones, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 129.

Where an alternative writ of mandamus was granted to a judge of the circuit court to compel him to sign a bill of exceptions and the writ was delivered to the judge but not returned by him, the supreme court of Illinois granted peremptory writ requiring him to sign the bill of exceptions. People v. Pearson, 2 Scam. (Ill.) 189.

3. People v. Kalamazoo Circuit Judge, 39 Mich. 301.

4. Ex Parte Trustees of Williamsburgh, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 34; State v. City of Cincinnati, 19 Ohio 178; People v. Harris, 9 Cal. 571; See v. Small, 47 Wis. 436.

To a mandamus requiring inspectors of election to return whether the relators did not receive the greatest number of votes, and whether they did not declare them duly elected, a return that they were not duly elected by the greatest number of votes is evasive, and should be quashed on motion. People v. White, 11 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 168.

5. State v. Ferguson, 2 Vroom (N. J.) 107.

6. Tallapoosa v. Tarver, 21 Ala. 661.

Evidence on the trial of an issue, in a mandamus to restore the member of a beneficial society who had been illegally expelled, the relator, being entitled to recover damages, as in an action for a false return to the writ, may give evidence that since his expulsion he had been in a condition which entitled him to the aid of the society, under its constitution and by laws. Marion Beneficial Society v. Commonwealth, 31 Pa. St. 82.

7. State v. Ryan, 2 Mo. App. 303.

jury is occasioned thereby.¹ After a return has been made to a writ any defect in substance may be taken advantage of at any time before the peremptory mandamus is awarded.² So a return to a mandamus may be adopted and made part of the return to a subsequent one, and thus constitute part of the pleadings and evidence in the case.³

(i) ANSWER TO RETURN.—On return to an alternative mandamus denying material allegations thereof, issue is raised without answer to the return.⁴ The papers on which the original motion was made must be presented and the points stated in writing in support of the application.⁵

Leave may be given to withdraw a return by consent.⁶

(j) MOTION FOR PEREMPTORY MANDAMUS.—The relator may move for a peremptory mandamus notwithstanding a rule to plead to the return.⁷ But the court will not on such motion look beyond the return.⁸ So a peremptory mandamus may be set aside on motion if unfairly issued.⁹ When the return presents traversable issues, the court ought not to grant a peremptory writ upon sustaining the relator's demurrer ore tenus to such return.¹⁰

(k) RETURN TO PEREMPTORY MANDAMUS.—A performance of the several specific acts commanded to be done by a peremptory writ of mandamus is the proper response to such a writ.¹¹

Although the general rule is that no return to a peremptory mandamus is sufficient except that it has been obeyed, yet if a statute has been enacted after such peremptory order forbidding obedience and making obedience impossible, such new matter will of necessity constitute a sufficient return provided the statute is constitutional.¹²

5. Discharging Rule to Show Cause.—On a motion to discharge a rule to show cause why a peremptory mandamus should not issue, the court cannot look at any facts outside of the record annexed to the application for such rule.¹³

6. Judgment.—The decree of a court granting a mandamus is a final judgment, but it does not become final on its rendition. The judge may, on his own motion, order a new trial any time

1. Reg. v. Paynter, 9 Jur. 926; Rex v. Marriott, 1 D. & R. 166; State v. Keokuk, 18 Iowa 388; Reg. v. Conyers, 8 Q. B. 981. A clerical mistake may be amended in the return after the return has been filed. Rex v. Lyne Regis (Mayor), 1 Dougal 135; Reg. v. Derbyshire etc. R. Co., 2 C. L. R. 1653.

2. People v. Supervisors of Fulton, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 52. See State v. Board of Equalization, 10 Iowa 157; State v. Weeks, 93 Mo. 499.

3. Rogers v. Mandeville, 20 Ga. 627.

4. State v. Pierce County (Wis.), 37 N. W. Rep. 231.

5. People v. Delaware, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 255.

6. Rex v. Barker, 3 Burr. 1379.

7. People v. Cayuga Common Pleas, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 632.

8. People v. Commrs. of Hudson, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 474.

9. Everett v. People, Col. Cas. (N. Y.) 149; s. c., 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 8.

10. State v. Delafield, 69 Wis. 264.

11. State v. Alachua County Canvassers, 17 Fla. 9.

12. Sedberry v. Choteau County, 66 N. Car. 486.

13. State v. Sheboygan County, 20 Wis. 104.

before the lapse of the time prescribed.¹ So the judgment in a proceeding for a mandamus is subject to review on the same conditions as that in any other action.²

XIX. COSTS.—In petitions for mandamus costs follow the event of the suit.³ The granting of costs to one party or the other is exclusively in the discretion of the court, and they may be awarded or refused according as the equity and justice of each case may require.⁴ And when awarded they cannot be the subject of review or appeal.⁵ Where defendant is solvent plaintiff will not be required to make a deposit to secure the commissioner's costs.⁶

XX. VIOLATION.—The inferior court cannot refuse to obey the mandate to proceed sent from a superior court.⁷ So where a writ of mandamus is delivered to a judge or other person to whom

1. State v. Sixth District Judge, 32 La. An. 207.

2. Hartman v. Greenhow, 102 U. S. 672.

3. Fox v. Whitney, 32 N. H. 408; People v. Colborne, 20 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 378.

4. People v. Densmore, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 557; People v. Ulster County Supervisors, 65 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 327; Ballou v. Smith, 31 N. H. (11 Frost) 413.

The supreme court have not the power by mandamus to review and control the adjudication of full costs of a court of common pleas, made on the ground that, on the trial of a cause in trover had before it, the title to land came in question. Oneida Common Pleas v. People, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 79.

The costs to be allowed, and which are recoverable upon an appeal from an order granting a peremptory mandamus, when such order is affirmed, are regulated by N. Y. Code, § 3240, and, in the discretion of the court, are the same costs which are given on "appeal from a judgment." People v. Ulster County Supervisors, 65 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 327. Compare People v. Ewen, 8 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 359; People v. Lewis, 28 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 159.

Generally.—In suits and proceedings upon writs of mandamus, the court, on awarding a peremptory mandamus, does not grant costs against the judges of subordinate courts, or other public officers entrusted with the discharge of judicial duties. Anon., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 157.

Where the term of a town officer expires while proceedings in mandamus against him are pending, and an alternative mandamus is sued out against his successor, held, that the latter is not liable upon judgment against him for costs incurred before the issue of such alternative mandamus. Ferguson v. State, 31 N. J. L. 289.

Where, on a petition for mandamus, an alternative mandamus issued, and before the return day thereof the petitioner complied with the order, but not within the period therein specified, whereby the petitioner was subjected to delay and expense in another court. Held, that although the failure to comply seasonably with the order was in contempt of the authority of the court, the costs of the delay in another tribunal could not be added to the costs of the proceedings on the petition for mandamus. Fox v. Whitney, 32 N. H. 408.

In North Carolina, under the act concerning writs of quo warranto and mandamus (1 Rev. Stat., ch. 97), the defendant, though judgment is given for him, cannot recover his costs against the relator, where the public only is interested. State v. King, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 22.

In Maine, where process is withdrawn by petitioners the rule is to allow costs unless it is shown that respondent is in fault. Anon., 31 Me. 591.

5. People v. Albright, 14 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 305; State v. Judge of Kenosha County, 3 Wis. 809.

Where, upon an issue in mandamus, the finding is against the defendant, but makes no mention of costs, the omission may be corrected by the postea. Ferguson v. State, 31 N. J. L. 283.

6. United States v. St. Charles County, 31 Fed. Rep. 442.

7. Levin v. Hanley, Wright (Ohio) 589. See Sweeny v. Maynard, 52 Cal. 468.

it is directed and he refuses to obey it, an attachment will issue for contempt.¹

An appeal from an order adjudging the appellant guilty of contempt in not obeying a peremptory writ of mandamus, the question as to the propriety of the order granting the writ is not presented and cannot be considered.²

1. Attachment for Contempt.—When a peremptory writ of mandamus is issued addressed to a county judge, a writ of attachment for contempt in not obeying the order of the court should run against the officer by his individual name and not by his official name alone. So when a writ of mandamus is issued directed to a board of canvassers consisting of a county judge and two justices of the peace, an attachment for contempt in disobeying the writ should run against the justices as well as the judge.³

MANDATE.

- | | |
|---|--|
| I. Definition, 240. | Parties, 243. |
| II. Distinction Between Mandate and Deposit, 241. | 1. Of the Mandator , 243. |
| III. The Consideration for the Contract, 241. | 2. Of the Mandatary , 243. |
| IV. Form, 241. | VII. Who May Maintain Suit, 248. |
| V. Requisites of Mandate, 242. | VIII. Dissolution of Mandate, 248. |
| VI. Duties and Obligations of the | IX. The Measure of Damages for Refusal to Return, 248. |
| | X. Evidence and Pleading, 249. |

I. Definition.—A mandate is a judicial command or precept issued by a court or magistrate directing the proper officer to enforce a judgment, sentence or decree.⁴

1. People v. Pearson, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 270; Commonwealth v. Sheehan, 81½ Pa. St. 132. See United States v. Labette Co., 2 McCrary (U. S.) 25; State v. Harvey, 14 Wis. 152.

Where a petitioner ordered to be restored to his office and functions of pastor under the charter of a religious corporation is subsequently disqualified under said charter from holding said office, such qualification is good cause for discharging parties under attachment for disobeying the same. Weber v. Zimmerman, 23 Md. 45.

Sufficient Obedience.—When a mandamus issues to credit a certain sum of money, it is sufficient obedience to the writ to credit that sum without interest. United States v. Kendall, 5 Cranch C. Ct. 385.

Excuse for Not Obeying the Writ.—A willingness expressed to execute and deliver corporate bonds of a town in pursuance of a writ of mandamus upon receipt of a certificate of stock, and a refusal to give such certificate, it seems will excuse the respondent from obeying the mandate of the writ until the corporation relator is ready and willing to give the town such certificate; but where no offer is made by the respondent to perform, or any willingness expressed to deliver the bonds, and it is evident he would have refused to deliver them if the stock had been tendered, the failure of the relator to tender the stock will furnish no excuse for not obeying the command of the writ. People v. Barnett, 91 Ill. 423.

2. People v. Rochester etc. R. Co., 76 N. Y. 294.

3. State v. Linnett, 7 Iowa 334.

4. Bouv. L. Dict.; Jones on Bailments 52.

Mandate Under New York Code.—The word "mandate" in the provision of the New York Code of Civil Procedure authorizing the court to punish for criminal contempt a person guilty of wilful disobedience to its "lawful mandate," means only a written direction or order. People v. Oyer and Termi-

A mandate is a bailment of personal property in regard to which the bailee engages to do some act without reward.¹

II. Distinction Between Mandate and Deposit.—The great distinction, according to Sir WILLIAM JONES, between one sort of mandate and a deposit is that the former lies in feaseance and the latter simply in custody.² JUDGE STORY, criticising this statement, says that both in deposit and mandate there is custody and labor and service to be performed, the distinction between them being that in the case of deposit the principal object of the parties is the custody of the thing and the service and labor are merely accessorial; in the case of a mandate the labor and services are the principal objects of the parties and the custody is merely accessorial.³

III. The Consideration for the Contract.—It has been held that a mandate is no contract on account of lack of consideration. The delivery and acceptance of the goods constitute a sufficient consideration.⁴

IV. Form.—No particular form or manner of entering into the contract of mandate is prescribed, either by the common law or by the civil law.⁵

ner, 36 Hun (N. Y.) 281. According to the code itself (section 3343, sub. 2) "the word mandate includes a writ, process or other written direction issued pursuant to law out of a court, or made pursuant to law by a court, or a judge, or a person acting as a judicial officer and commanding a court, board or other body, or an officer or other person named or otherwise designated therein, to do or refrain from doing an act therein specified." And see McKelsey v. Lewis, 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 61.

1. Story on Bailments, § 137.

Mandate is when one undertakes without recompense to do some act for another in respect to the thing bailed. 2 Kent's Comm., Lect. 40, *p. 569. A mandate is a contract by which one commits a lawful business to the management of another, who undertakes to perform the service gratuitously. Richardson v. Futrell, 42 Miss. 525. See also Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 909, 913, 1 S. L. C., p. 369 (8th ed.); McCauley v. Davidson, 10 Minn. 421; Eddy v. Livingston, 35 Mo. 492; Bronnenburg v. Charman, 80 Ind. 477; Halifax, Analysis of the Civil Law 70; Wood, Civil Law, bk. 3, ch. 5, 242; Pothier, Traité de Mandat, art. Prelim., n. 1; Erskine, Inst., bk. 3, tit. 3, § 11.

Procuracion.—A mandate or procuracion is an act by which one gives to another a power of doing something for the mandant and in his name. Code Civil of France, bk. 3, tit. 13, ch. 1, art. 1984.

2. Jones on Bailm. 53.

3. Story on Bailm., § 140, 2 Kent's Comm., *p. 569.

4. Pars. on Cont., vol. 2, *100. Riches v. Briggs, Yelv. 41, Cro. E. 883; Wheatley v. Low, Cro. J. 668; Whitehead v. Greetham, McClel. & Y. 205; Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 909; 1 S. L. C., p. 369 (8th ed.); Doorman v. Jenkins, 2 A. & E. 256; Shillibeer v. Glyn, 2 M. & W. 143; Bainbridge v. Firmstone, 8 A. & E. 743; Robinson v. Threadgill, 13 Ired. N. Car. L., 39; Rutgers v. Lucet, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 92; Eddy v. Livingston, 35 Mo. 487; Delaware Bank v. Smith, 1 Edm. Sel. Cas. (N. Y.) 351; Hammond v. Hussey, 51 N. H. 40; Jenkins v. Bacon, 111 Mass. 373; McCauley v. Davidson, 10 Minn. 418.

The instruction by the judge that there was no consideration for the contract (mandate) which was the cause of the action, was held to be erroneous at common law. Ferguson v. Porter, 3 Fla. 27.

5. Story on Bailm., § 160. It may be verbal or in writing; it may be express or implied; it may be in a solemn form or in any other manner. Pothier, Pand., lib. 17, tit. 1, n. 19.

V. Requisites of Mandate.--In every contract of mandate there must be the following requisites:¹

1. At least two parties, the one employing called the mandator and the person employed called the mandatary.² All parties who are capable and willing to enter into contracts may become mandators and mandataries.³
2. Property to be acted upon. This is always personal property.⁴
3. Some act or business to be done by the mandatary to the subject matter for the benefit of the mandator.⁵
4. This act to be done gratuitously.⁶

1. Story on Bailm., § 144.

2. Story on Bailm., § 138. If the thing done concerns only the interest of the mandatary, no contract arises. This is mere advice or recommendation. Pothier, Contrat de Mandat, n. 15; Code of Louisiana of 1820, art. 2955.

3. Married Women and Minors.--The extent to which married women and minors can enter into mandates depends on the general rights and disabilities of married women and minors in respect to contracts generally. Story on Bailm., § 162. Story on Agency, § 485.

4. Story on Bailm., § 141. In civil law real property was also subject to mandate. 1 Pothier, Pand., lib. 17, tit. 1, n. 3-5; Dig., lib. 17, tit. 1, n. 1-2; 1 Brown, Civ. Law 381.

5. Story on Bailm., § 144.

This requisite is pertinent only to an act to be done in futuro and not one already completed. The Roman law would class under this head a request from a third person to a creditor to give time to his debtor at the risk of the mandator. Pothier, Contrat de Mandat, n. 18, n. 6.

It must respect some certain thing. Vagueness prevents the law from acting. Thus where an agent's instructions are so ambiguous as to leave it doubtful whether he should pay a fund to one creditor or to another, and acting in good faith he pays it to the one not intended, the other has no action against him. Dunbar v. Hughes, 6 La. An. 466.

The act to be done must not be vain or absurd. Pothier, Contrat de Mandat, n. 12. If the act be possible, the contract may arise, though the mandatary may not have the proper skill to perform it well. Pothier, Pand., lib. 17, tit. 1, n. 25-30.

The act to be done need not be for the benefit of the mandator, it may be for the benefit of a third person. Pothier, Contrat de Mandat, n. 17; Halifax, Anal. Civ. Law, 70.

6. Compensation.--If there be compensation, express or implied, certain or uncertain in amount, the contract is a contract for hire. Newhall v. Paige, 10 Gray (Mass.) 366; Haigh v. Brooks, 10 Ad. & E. 320; Lawrence v. McCalmont, 2 How. (U. S.) 426; Hubbard v. Coolidge, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 84, 92. A small compensation will not necessarily constitute the contract one for hire. Comp v. Carlisle Deposit Bank, 94 Pa. St. 409.

In Louisiana, mandate may be a form of agency and hence is not necessarily gratuitous. "Under our code, which has modified the principles of the Roman law, it is not of the essence of mandate that it be gratuitous. And, in our opinion, it is not necessary for an agent to establish an express agreement that he should have a pecuniary remuneration for his services. Courts may infer such an agreement from the nature of the employment and the relations of the parties. Waterman v. Gibson, 5 La. An. 672; 7 La. An. 207. See Duranton, lib. 3, tit. 13, n. 197. But where no agreement as to pecuniary remuneration can be inferred from the nature of the employment or the relation of the parties—it is a case of gratuitous procuration. La Fourche Navigation Co. v. Collins, 12 La. An. 119.

A mandatary, however, cannot recover on a quantum meruit. Wilson v. Wilson, 16 La. An. 155.

Gratuitous Agency at Civil Law.--Every case of gratuitous agency gave rise to the obligations of a mandate in the civil law. In our law we should treat it as a case of agency and not of bailment. The obligations in point of law may in many respects be the same, but the classification would be different.

5. The parties to intend voluntarily to enter into the contract.¹

VI. Duties and Obligations of the Parties.—The duties and obligations of the mandator and mandatary grow fairly out of the elements that make up the contract, to be ascertained by the express terms of the contract as explained by all the surrounding and attending facts and circumstances of the case.²

The general duties and obligations of the parties pertaining to almost all cases of mandate may be expressed as follows:

1. Of the Mandator.—To reimburse the mandatary for all necessary expenses and charges,³ and to indemnify the mandatary for incidental contracts.⁴

2. Of the Mandatary.—To do the act which is the object of the mandate after having once entered upon it. He is liable for misfeasance though not for nonfeasance.⁵

Story on Bailm., § 142; Story on Agency, § 4. According to the French law and the law of Louisiana a contract of mandate might intervene though there was no delivery of property in the mandator. Code Civil of France, art. 1884-1891; Code of Louisiana (1825), art. 2954-2964.

1. There must be no duress or constraint, substantial mistake, fraud or imposition, or misconception of the real intention on either side. Story on Bailm., § 155.

2. FREEMAN, J., in Mariner v. Smith, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 203.

3. Harter v. Blanchard, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 617; Devalcourt v. Dillon, 12 La. An. 672.

4. For the preservation and care of the property in his possession, and particularly as to live animals injured as in this case. Harter v. Blanchard, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 617.

Where A deposits in B's hands merchandise to be sold and the proceeds to be applied to the extinguishment of A's debt to B, the transaction is a case of mandate, and B is entitled to all necessary expenses that have been incurred in fulfilling the object of the mandate. Devalcourt v. Dillon, 12 La. An. 672.

Contracts with Third Persons.—The mandator is liable for contracts made with third persons by the mandatary acting within the scope of his authority. And this is so even though the mandatary may also be liable in such a case upon a particular contract. 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 617.

5. Difference Between Liability for Nonfeasance in the Civil Law and in the Common Law.—In civil law the mandatary having accepted the contract is bound to perform it according to his agreement and is liable for all damages sustained by the mandator by his non-performance, in like manner as if sustained by a misfeasance. Digest, lib. 17, tit. 1, 1-5, § 1; 1-27, § 2. SIR WILLIAM JONES contends that the doctrine pertains to the common law as well. This theory is criticised satisfactorily in Thorne v. Deas, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 84. This was a case where one of the owners of a vessel voluntarily offered to get her insured, but neglected to do so. The vessel being lost and action being brought, it was held that no action would lie against the mandatary for his nonfeasance. CH. J. KENT, referring to SIR W. JONES's Essay on the Law of Bailments, says: "This treatise stands high with the profession as a learned and classical performance, and I regret that on this point I find so much reason to question its accuracy. I have carefully examined all the authorities to which he refers. He has not produced a single adjudged case; but only some dicta (and those equivocal) from the Year Books, in support of his opinion, and were it not for the weight which the authority of so respectable a name imposes, I should have supposed the question too well settled to admit of an argument. A short review of the leading cases will show that by the common law a mandatary is not answerable for omitting to do the act, and is only responsible when he attempts to do it and does it amiss." The learned judge then discusses and applies to the question in hand Watson v. Brinth (Year Book, 2 Hen. IV, 3b), 11 Hen. IV, 33a; 3 Hen. VI, 36b; 14 Hen. VI, 18b, pl. 58; 19 Hen. VI, 49a, pl. 5; 20 Hen. VI, 34a, pl. 4; 2 Hen. VII, 11,

To use slight care. He can only be held responsible for bad faith or gross negligence.¹ As to what constitutes slight care and gross negligence, no general rule can be laid down, for much depends upon the circumstances of each particular case, and the character and value of the thing bailed, and its liability to loss or injury.² The question is not whether he omitted that care which very prudent persons usually take of their own property, for the omission of that would be but slight negligence; nor whether he has omitted that care which prudent persons ordinarily take of their own property, for that would be but ordinary negligence; but whether there be a want of that care which men of common sense, however inattentive, usually take or are presumed to take, of their own property, for that is gross negligence.³

To dispose of the property according to the directions which he has received.⁴ If he should deliver the property to a person not authorized to receive it, he would make himself responsible pl. 9; 21 Hen. VII, 41a, pl. 66. See also Elsee v. Gatward, 5 T. R. 143, S. P.; Wilkinson v. Coverdale, 1 Esp. Rep. 75; Smith v. Lascelles, 2 Term Rep. 188; Webster v. De Tastet, 87 Term Rep. 157; Balfé v. West, 13 C. B. 466, 22 Eng. L. & Eq. 506, 17 C. B., N. S. 194; McGee v. Bast, 6 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 455; Samuels v. McDonald, 11 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. J.) 344; Fellowes v. Gordon, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 415.

1. Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 909, 1 S. L. C., p. 369 (8th ed.); French v. Reed, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 308; Steamboat New World v. King, 16 How. (U. S.) 469; First National Bk. v. Graham, 79 Pa. St. 106; Whitney v. Lee, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 92; Foster v. Essex Bank, 17 Mass. 479; Giblin v. McMullen, 21 L. T., N. S. 214; Shiells v. Blackburne, 1 H. Bl. 158.

2. BAY, J., in Eddy v. Livingston, 35 Mo. 487; 88 Am. Dec. 122.

3. STORY, J., in Tracy v. Wood, 3 Mason (U. S.) 135.

When the person who is appointed attorney in fact has the qualifications necessary for the discharge of the ordinary duties of the trust imposed, we are of opinion that on the occurrence of difficulties in the exercise of it, which offer only a choice of measures, the adoption of a course from which loss ensues cannot make the agent responsible, if the error was one into which a prudent man might have fallen. The contrary doctrine seems to us to suppose the possession and require the exercise of perfect wisdom in fallible beings. No man would undertake to render a service to another on such severe conditions. The reason given for the rule, namely, that if the mandatary had not accepted, the office, a person capable of discharging the duty correctly would have been found is quite unsatisfactory. The person who would have accepted, no matter who he might be, must have shared in common with him who did, the imperfections of our nature, and consequently must be presumed just as liable to have mistaken the correct course. The test of responsibility, therefore, should be not the certainty of wisdom in others, but the possession of ordinary knowledge, and by showing that the error of the agent is of so gross a kind that a man of common sense, and ordinary attention, would not have fallen into it. The rule which fixes responsibility, because men of unerring sagacity are supposed to exist, and would have been found by the principal, appears to us essentially erroneous. PORTER, J., in Percy v. Millandon, 8 Mart. (La.), N. S. 32; 20 Mart. (La.), O. S. 68.

4. Fellowes v. Gordon, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 415; Ferguson v. Porter, 3 Fla. 27; Graves v. Ticknor, 6 N. H. 537; Colyar v. Taylor, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 372.

Where in good faith he follows mandatary's directions, he cannot be held liable for what seems to the bailor a deviation from instructions. Eldridge v. Hill, 97 U. S. 92. See also Camoy's v. Scurr, 9 C. & P. 383.

for its value without regard to the question of due care or the degree of negligence.¹

1. Hall v. Boston etc. R. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.) 439; Lichtenheim v. Boston etc. R. Co., 11 Cush. (Mass.) 70; Cass v. Boston etc. R. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.) 448, 453; Jenkins v. Bacon, 111 Mass. 373; Stewart v. Frazier, 5 Ala. 114. This rule holds good even though the unauthorized person be the mandator's wife. Knowing v. Manly, 49 N. Y. 192.

As the problem whether the degree of negligence displayed in any particular case constitutes gross negligence depends on the circumstances of each particular case, a review of the principal cases of mandate, which have been decided on this question under their proper heads will be inserted at this point.

Annuities.—Howard offered to invest a sum of money for Dartnell in the purchase of an annuity. He laid out the money in securities wholly insufficient, and of no value whatever. Held, that it does not necessarily follow from these circumstances that Howard was guilty of gross or corrupt negligence. Dartnell v. Howard, 4 Barn. & C. 345.

Banks.—The plaintiff deposited with the defendant $6,666.75 to be paid to L. Z. Rogers, provided he shall deposit with said bank a good and sufficient warranty deed conveying to plaintiff association the Waterville mill property. Rogers presented the deed and the bank, acting in good faith, paid over the money. It turned out that Rogers was not legally seised of the lands. Held, bank not liable. Cannon River Manufacturers' Assoc. v. First Nat. Bank of Faribault, 37 Minn. 394.

Under very similar circumstances a bank paid $800 on a deed to one purporting to be J. L. Lord. The bank did not know J. L. Lord, and took no steps toward the identification of the stranger who represented himself to be J. L. Lord. The payee turned out not to be J. L. Lord and the deed proved to be a forgery. Held, bank not liable. "This is a different case and different principles rule than in the case of the payment of a check to the wrong person by a bank in the course of business." Metzger v. Franklin Bank, 119 Ind. 359.

Where a bank engages to charge previous endorsers of a note and fails to do so, it is guilty of misfeasance. Smedes v. Bank of Utica, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 372; Bank of Utica v. Smedes, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 662; Bank of Utica v. McKinster, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 473.

Defaults of Notaries.—For liability of banks for the defaults of their notaries and agents see BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 2, 113. See also Bank of Orleans v. Smith, 3 Hill 560, criticised in 7 N. Y. 461, 462, disapproved in 11 N. Y. 212.

Defaults of Correspondents.—For defaults of correspondents see BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 2, 112.

Demand of Payment.—For demand of payment and bank's liability for money collected see BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 2, 112.

A banker has a lien on a note paid into his house and a right to retain it for his general balance. Jourdain v. Lefevre, 1 Esp. Rep. 66, 5 Term Rep. 488, 3 C. B. 531; Australia Bank v. White, 4 App. Cas. 413. But where one bank transmits to another bills for collection, a banking custom of passing the avails to the credit of the transmitting bank and to the debit of the receiving bank cannot affect the claim of a third person. Lawrence v. Stonington Bank, 6 Conn. 521. Somewhat similar is Cent. Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 104 U. S. 54.

Bank Cashiers.—A bank is bound by the certification of a check by its cashier though there be no funds to meet it. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. State Nat. Bank, 10 Wall. 604; Cooke v. State Nat. Bank 52 N. Y. 96. But if an assistant cashier without authority accept a post-dated check, the bank is not liable even to a holder for value. Pope v. Bank of Albion, 57 N. Y. 126.

As to the ability of a cashier or other bank officer to bind his bank, see Case v. Citizens' Bank, 100 U. S. 456; West St. Louis Sav. Bank v. Shawnee Co. Bank, 95 U. S. 557; Morse v. Massachusetts Bank, 1 Holmes (U. S. C. C.) 209; Cochico Bank v. Haskell, 51 N. H. 116; Lloyd v. West Branch Bank, 15 Pa. St. 172; Dorsey v. Abrams, 85 Pa. St. 209; Ziegler v. First Nat. Bank, 93 Pa. St. 393, 397; State v. Commercial Bank, 6 Smed. & M. 218; Goodloe v. Godley, 13 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 233.

Bank Directors.—The directors of banks must exercise ordinary care and attention. It is not contemplated by any of the charters which have come under our observation, that they should devote their whole time and attention to the institution to which they are appointed and guard it from injury by constant superintendence. Other officers on whom compensation is bestowed for the employment of their time in the affairs of the bank have the immediate management. In relation to these officers, the duties of directors are those of control, and the neglect which would render them responsible for not exercising that control properly must depend on circumstances, and in a great measure be tested by the facts of the case. If nothing has come to their knowledge to awaken suspicion of the fidelity of the president and cashier, ordinary attention to the affairs of the institution is sufficient. If they become acquainted with any fact calculated to put prudent men on their guard, a degree of care commensurate with the evil to be avoided is required, and a want of that care certainly makes them responsible. PORTER, J., in Percy v. Millamdon, 8 Mart. (La.), N. S. 32; 20 Mart. (La.), O. S. 68.

All discounts are made under the authority of the directors, and it is for them to fix any conditions which may be proper in loaning money. The Bank of the U. S. v. Dunn, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 51, 60.

Bank Officers.—The recognized and known functionaries of a bank, especially its officers, are held out to the world as having authority to act according to the general usage, practice, and course of business of such institutions. Lloyd v. West Branch Bank, 15 Pa. St. 172.

Bills and Notes.—A gave B a bill of exchange, which the latter promised to return to A on demand. The bill was given as a matter of courtesy, and was entirely for the benefit of A; yet as B did not return the bill on demand he was held liable to A for the amount. Rutgers v. Lucet, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 92.

As to what are post notes, and the rules applicable to them, see Mechanics' Bank v. Merchants' Bank, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 13. Where an action is brought on account of the failure to collect a note, whether the agreement to collect was or was not gratuitous, is a matter of proof. Kincheloe v. Priest, 89 Mo. 240.

Where the defendant received certain notes to collect or return, the delivery of the notes constituted a consideration for the defendant's agreement, and he was held liable for want of ordinary diligence in collecting them. Robinson v. Threadgill, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) L. 39.

Carrier Without Hire.—Where a passenger, carried gratuitously, is injured by an explosion, the result of gross negligence, the steamboat company is liable. Steamboat New World v. King, 16 How. (U. S.) 469.

If a package containing money be handed to the captain of a steamboat, which is in the habit of charging freight for carrying remittances of money, without informing him of its contents, and the package is lost, there being no charge for freight, the owners of the vessel are not liable. Mechanics and Traders' Bank v. Gordon, 5 La. An. 604.

Where a person was to take abroad bonds gratuitously and deposit them for sale for another person, he was held liable only for gross negligence. 32 Gratt. (Va.) 670.

Where one carried gold dust as a favor from California to New Orleans, to be delivered to a third person, and the mandator gave the mandatory the privilege of converting the gold dust into coin, such a conferring of power did not change the relationship of bailor and bailee into that of debtor and creditor. Goodenow v. Snyder, 3 Greene (Ia.) 599.

If a mandatory enter upon the execution of the business submitted to him, he is bound to use a degree of diligence and attention adequate to the performance of his undertaking; if he do not, and damage ensue, he is liable to the mandator for his misfeasance. Kirtland v. Montgomery, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 452.

Where the defendant was to carry gold dust from California to Iowa gratuitously, there dispose of it and turn the proceeds over to plaintiff's wife, he was held liable only for gross negligence. Jourdan v. Reed, 1 Iowa 135.

Where a vessel has a right to compensation for carrying freight, and nothing has been said about the amount of freight to be paid, the common law liability of a common carrier is not created, though there may be the responsibility of a mandatory incurred. Knox v. Rives, 14 Ala. 249.

The U. S. statutes (4 Stat. at L. 104, § 6; 5 Stat. at L. 736, § 13) concerning the liability of steamboats engaged in carrying the mail do not impose upon the owners of steamboats the responsibilities of common carriers in favor of a third person who has contracted for no more than the diligence of a mandatary in the carrying of bank bills. Haynie v. Waring, 29 Ala. 263.

A railroad corporation may lawfully agree with a passenger, who is carried gratuitously in its cars, that it will not be responsible for injuries resulting from the negligence of its servants. Perkins v. New York Cent. R. Co., 24 N. Y. 196; 82 Am. Dec. 282; Bissell v. New York Cent. R. Co., 25 N. Y. 442, reversing 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 602.

A carrier without hire is liable on his express promise to deliver safely. Delaware Bank v. Smith, Edm. Sel. C. (N. Y.) 351.

Collection of Money.—A clerk of the defendants' collected in Salt Lake City for the plaintiffs the sum of fifteen hundred dollars, and being unable to procure a bill of exchange deposited the money with the defendants for safe keeping. The undertaking was a mere act of kindness. The defendants bought a draft, according to the custom, from one Heyward, a marshal of the United States. At the time of purchase Heyward was in good credit; at the time of presentation at the treasury payment was refused. Plaintiffs sued the defendants for the amount. Defendants were held to be not liable. Eddy v. Livingston, 35 Mo. 487; 88 Am. Dec. 122.

Expert.—Where the profession of the bailee implies skill, a want of skill is imputable as gross neglect. Stanton v. Bell, 2 Hawks (N. Car.) 145; 11 Am. Dec. 744.

Where a farrier, without reward, offers to cure a horse of a swelling on the hock joint, and he makes the puncture so unskilfully that the horse becomes worthless, this act is equivalent to gross negligence. Conner v. Winton, 8 Ind. 315; 65 Am. Dec. 761.

"If a person holds himself out to the public as a physician, he must be held to ordinary care and skill (i. e., the ordinary care and skill of physicians of the same general neighborhood) in every case of which he assumes charge, whether in the particular case he has received fees or not. McNevin v. Lowe, 40 Ill. 209; Howard v. Grover, 28 Me. 97; 48 Am. Dec. 479 (see especially note).

One who, without any benefit to himself, rides a horse at the owner's request for the purpose of exhibiting him for sale, is bound to use such skill as he possesses; and if proved to be skilled in horses, is equally liable with a borrower for an injury done to the horse. Wilson v. Brett, 11 M. & W. 113; 12 L. J. Exch. 264.

Insurance.—Where a person, without pecuniary compensation, offers to execute an order of insurance and the execution turns out to be defective, he is liable for the loss. French v. Reed, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 308. See also Moore v. Mourgue, Cowp. 479.

Justice of the Peace.—Where money is paid by a judgment debtor to the judge, and the latter places it in his desk with his own money, and then notifies the judgment creditor that the money is ready for him, and the latter neglects for two days to call for it, during which time the money is stolen, it was held that the judge was not guilty of gross negligence, and hence was not liable. Monteith v. Bissell's Administrator, Wright (Ohio) 411.

Letters.—Where a hotel clerk received and signed a return receipt for a registered letter, delivered to him by a letter carrier for a guest of the hotel, and the letter was lost through his negligence, he was held liable. Joslyn v. King, 42 N. W. Rep. 756.

Where one gratuitously undertakes to carry a letter containing money from one city to another, he is liable for non-delivery. Beardslee v. Richardson, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 25; Graves v. Ticknor, 6 N. H. 537.

Lost and Stolen Goods.—Where one for the accommodation of the owner receives and undertakes to sell a bale of cotton, he is liable if it is lost by his gross negligence. Patterson v. McIves, 90 N. Car. 493; Galledge v. Howard, 23 Neb. 61.

Where an article has been lost, it is not necessary, in order to charge a mandatary, to prove that the delivery had been made to him individually or to one expressly authorized to receive for him. Lloyd v. Barden, 3 Strobb. (S. Car.) 343.

A ring deposited with defendant to be illegally raffled for was lost by his gross carelessness. Held, that he was liable. Woolf v. Bernero, 14 Mo. App. 518.

Where a stage coachman without reward undertakes to carry a parcel and loses it through gross carelessness, he is responsible. Beauchamp v. Powley, 1 M. & Rob. 38.

A carrier of money without reward

VII. Who May Maintain Suit.—Possession is a sufficient title to enable possessor to maintain a suit against a mere wrongdoer for any wrong or injury done to the thing.¹ But a recovery by the bailee against a trespasser is a bar to an action by the bailor for the same injury.²

VIII. Dissolution of Mandate.—The contract of mandate may be dissolved in one of the following ways:

By the death of the mandator or mandatary.

By the renunciation of the mandatary at any time before he has entered upon the execution of the contract.³

By revocation of the authority, either by operation of law or by the act of the mandator.⁴

By the bankruptcy of the mandator.⁵

By a change of the status of the parties.⁶

IX. The Measure of Damages for Refusal to Return.—The rule of damages in an action of trover is the value of the property at the time of the conversion with interest.⁷

is excused, in case of robbery, if he took the same care of it he took of his own. Anderson v. Foresman, Wright (Ohio) 598. To the same point see Brownenberg v. Charman, 80 Ind. 475; Dart v. Lowe, 5 Ind. 131.

But where he lost money belonging to a mandator, while he preserved his own money, he is liable for the loss. Bland v. Womack, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 373.

Where money entrusted to a mandatary to carry to a certain person in a certain place is lost or stolen through his gross negligence, he is liable. Kemp v. Farlow, 5 Ind. 462. See also Storer v. Gowen, 18 Me. 174.

If a person entrusted with money by his superior to give to a third person gives it to a boy whom he has seen but a few times, and who has but recently entered the employ of said third person, and the boy absconds, the mandatary is guilty of gross negligence and is liable to his superior for damages. Skelley v. Kahn, 17 Ill. 169.

1. On this point the rule in the case of a mandate is the same as the rule in the case of a deposit. See DEPOSITS, vol. 2, p. 576; Jones v. McNeil, 2 Bai. (S. Car.) 466; Hare v. Fuller, 7 Ala. 717; Cox v. Easley, 11 Ala. 362. But see Miles v. Cattle, 1 Lloyd & W. 353; 6 Bing. 743.

In this case Miles was entrusted by one Garbut with the carriage of a £50 bank note to the defendant's office, who was a common carrier, to be forwarded by him to London. Instead of obeying instructions plaintiff put the note in his bag intending to convey it himself to London. The bag was lost. It was held that Miles could not recover the £50 from Cattle because he had violated his trust toward Garbut by depriving him of any remedy he might have had against Cattle in case the parcel had been lost while in his custody, and he was a wrongdoer towards the stage company because he had deprived it of the fee it would have earned for carrying the parcel. On this latter point see also Batson v. Donovan, 4 B. & N. 21.

2. Chesley v. St. Clair, 1 N. H. 189; Bissell v. Huntington, 2 N. H. 143.

3. Story on Bailm., p. 192.

4. Story on Bailm., p. 195. Where a person deposits money with another to be appropriated in a certain way he may countermand his instructions and demand back the money at any time before the appropriation has been made. Winkley v. Foye, 33 N. H. 171. The revocation need not be express, but may be implied. Copeland v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 6 Pick (Mass.) 198.

5. Story on Bailm., 197; Minett v. Forrester, 4 Taunt. 541; Parker v. Smith, 16 East 382.

6. The general rules applicable to the law of contracts as to change of status of parties apply also to mandates. See Story on Agency, § 481.

7. Vaughan v. Webster, 5 Harr. (Del.) 256. See also DEPOSIT, vol. 5, 579. A wrongful refusal to deliver up property on reasonable demand will MANDATE—MANDATORY—MANHOOD.

X. Evidence and Pleading.—The burden of proof of negligence is generally on the plaintiff.¹

What is gross negligence is generally a question of fact for the jury.²

In pleading, it is only necessary to aver negligence generally, not the specific facts constituting negligence.³

The concomitant acts of a mandatary immediately before and after the loss of the property bailed are admissible in evidence to disprove his negligence.⁴

The testimony of the defendant is inadmissible in regard to the loss of property entrusted to him as a mandatary.⁵

In an action brought against the bailee by the bailor for conversion, the former cannot set up the title of a third person except by the authorization of that person.⁶

MANDATORY.—In the construction of statutes this word is applied to such as require to be obeyed under penalty of having proceedings under them declared void.⁷

MANHOOD.—See note 8.

support an action of trover. 5 Harr. (Del.) 256.

1. Beardslee v. Richardson, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 25; Lampley v. Scott, 24 Miss. 528; Graves v. Ticknor, 6 N. H. 537; Stewart v. Frazier, 5 Ala. 114; Clark v. Spence, 10 Watts (Pa.) 335; Newstadt v. Adams, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 43; Williams v. East India Co., 3 East 192. But see Platt v. Hibbard, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 550; Cumins v. Wood, 44 Ill. 416; Doorman v. Jenkins, 1 Ad. & E. 256; Smith v. First Nat. Bank, 99 Mass. 605. See DEPOSIT, vol. 2, p. 573.

2. Lancaster Co. Bank v. Smith, 62 Pa. St. 47; Griffith v. Tipperwick, 20 Ohio St. 388. The court sometimes settles the question in its charge to the jury. Smith v. First Nat. Bank, 99 Mass. 60. See also TAUNTON, J., in Doorman v. Jenkins: "A great deal has been said on the point, whether the existence of gross negligence is a question of law or fact. Such a question will always depend on circumstances. There may be cases where the question of gross negligence is matter of law more than of fact and others where it is matter of fact more than of law."

3. McCauley v. Davidson, 10 Minn. 418.

4. Tompkins v. Saltmarsh, 14 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 275; Lampley v. Scott, 24 Miss. 528.

5. McNabb v. Lockhart, 18 Ga. 495.

But where there would be a failure of justice and in the ordinary course of human transactions no other testimony could necessarily be expected, a mandatary could give evidence in his own favor in regard to the loss of the property entrusted to him. Lampley v. Scott, 24 Miss. 528. This necessity must occur not from the natural failure of evidence in a particular case, but in the natural and usual course of human events, as, e. g., where a person is robbed, his testimony is admitted because there is no other evidence. Lampley v. Scott, 24 Miss. 528.

6. Bates v. Stanton, 1 Duer 79; Dodge v. Meyers, 61 Cal. 405.

7. Bouv. L. Dict.

"Where the provision of a statute is the essence of the thing required to be done, it is mandatory; otherwise when it relates to form and manner;—and where an act is incident, or after jurisdiction acquired, it is directory merely." Davis v. Smith, 58 N. H. 17. And see Endlich on Interp. of Statutes, § 431, etc.

8. Where a testator bequeathed as follows: "I lend unto my grandson O. R. a tract of land, three negroes, etc. Now, if, in case the said O. R. should live to arrive at manhood and beget heirs lawfully, the above property to him and his heirs forever; if not, I give and bequeath the above-mentioned property unto my son J. R., to him and his heirs forever;" held, that "manhood" could not be construed to mean "21 years of age," that "and" could not be read "or,"

MANIA—(See also INSANITY).—Mania is that form of insanity where the mental derangement is accompanied with more or less of excitement.¹

MANIFEST—(See also BILL OF LADING).—In commercial navigation, a document signed by the master containing the names of the places where the goods have been laden, and the places for which they are destined, the name and tonnage of the vessel, the name of the master, and the place to which the vessel belongs; a particular description of the packages on board; marks, numbers, etc.; the goods contained in them; and the names of the shippers and consignees, as far as known. The manifest must be made out, dated and signed by the captain at places where the goods, or any part, are taken on board.²

Clearly visible to the eye; obvious to the understanding; not obscure or difficult to be seen or understood; plain; open; apparent; palpable.³

and that the grandson, although attaining 21 years, having died without having been married, the ulterior limitation took effect. Felton v. Billups, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 584.

1. Hall v. Unger, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 510. "Sometimes the excitement amounts to a fury. The individual in such cases is subject to hallucinations and illusions. He is impressed with the reality of events which have never occurred; and of things which do not exist, and acts more or less in conformity with his belief in these particulars. The mania may be general, and affect all or most of the operations of the mind; or it may be partial, and be confined to particular subjects. In the latter case it is generally termed monomania."

"The phrases 'fit of mania' and 'insane delusion' are terms of ambiguous import, just as the generic term insanity, as used in the law books, itself is. . . . What we do say is, that there is a species of insanity, or mental unsoundness, manifested by a temporary depression or aberration of the mind, which sometimes accompanies or follows intoxication, and is often accompanied by delusions, hallucinations, and illusions. This state of transient departure from mental soundness is sometimes called a fit of mania, just as anger itself is often said to be a short madness, and these delusions are said to be insane delusions. But they are not such insanity as confers legal irresponsibility for crime." Gunter v. State, 83 Ala. 108.

2. Wharton's Law Lex.

3. Webs. Dict.

"Manifestly Designed."—A recital in an indictment for making and publishing an obscene composition that certain words were "manifestly designed to corrupt the morals of youth," does not mean that the composition of itself and upon its face must manifestly be of a kind to produce that effect. "We construe these words to refer to the intention—the purpose—of defendants in making and publishing the composition. It must have been manifestly designed, that is intended and purposed by them, to corrupt the morals of youth by making and publishing such composition." Smith v. State (Tex.), 5 S.W. Rep. 510.

"Manifest Errors."—In construing this expression in an act giving power to a board of supervisors to correct "manifest errors" in any assessments or returns, the court said: "The errors which may be corrected are 'manifest' errors; not errors which may be shown to have been committed by extrinsic evidence, or may be proved to the satisfaction of the court. No provision is made for any enquiry, the production of proofs, or any trial. . . . But 'manifest,' as used here, means something which is apparent by an examination of the assessment-roll or return, needing no evidence to make it more clear. That which is open, palpable, and, I might add, incontrovertible. It is synonymous with evident, visible, plain, obvious to the understanding from an examination of the roll or document; or, at the most, only requiring a mathematical calculation to demonstrate it." Matter of Hermance, 71 N. Y. 485-6.

MANNER—(See also LIKE).—Lexicographers give to the word "manner" a broader meaning than that of "method." The derivation of the word "manner" is from the Latin, manus, the hand. "Manner" is literally the handling of a thing, and has a wider sense, embracing both method and mode.¹ It sometimes includes "time" as well.²

"Manifest Impediment."—Where an act provides that "no person shall be liable to be tried and punished by a general court martial for any offence which appears to have been committed more than two years before the issuing of the order for such trial, unless, by reason of having absented himself, or of some other manifest impediment, he shall not have been amenable to justice within that period," the reference is to "such impediments only as operate to prevent the military court from exercising its jurisdiction over him; as, for instance, his being continuously a prisoner in the hands of the enemy, or his being imprisoned under sentence of a civil court for crime, and the like." In re Davison, 4 Fed. Rep. 507.

"Manifest Reasons," such as are required to be shown by affidavit, under a rule of court, to authorize a circuit court commissioner to grant an injunction are "necessarily reasons based on facts shown by persons testifying on knowledge, and punishable for perjury if they swear falsely." Tol. A. A. & N. Mich. R. Co. v. Det. L. & N. R. Co., 61 Mich. 11.

Where a provision that trusts should be "created and manifested" by a writing, was altered by a subsequent statute so as to read "created and declared," this was held to work a change of the law, it being henceforth sufficient that the trust be afterwards declared by a writing. McClellan v. McClellan, 65 Me. 500.

1. Pitcher v. Bd. of Trade of Chicago, 20 Ill. App. 326, quoting Webs. Dict. In this case, in construing the clause in an act "Said corporation shall have the right to admit or expel such persons as they may see fit, in manner to be prescribed by the rules, regulations and by-laws thereof," the court said: "Counsel for appellant seem to suppose that the words 'in manner' have reference to the mere method of doing it, through a majority of all the members of the corporation, but are not broad enough to authorize a delegation of the power to a board of directors. . . . It seems to us, from a consideration of all the provisions of the act, that its framers intended to leave the whole subject matter of the expulsion of members to be regulated, both as to method and tribunal, by rules and by-laws of the body, not inconsistent with the principles of natural justice or the laws of the land. . . . We are of opinion . . . that the trial, conviction and expulsion of appellant were by a tribunal, not only authorized by appellee's charter, but by reason of appellant agreeing to be bound by said by-laws."

Whereas, in Brown v. O'Connell, 36 Conn. 432, in construing the provision in the constitution that the judges "shall be appointed by the general assembly in such manner as shall by law be prescribed," the court said: "The term 'manner' is a comprehensive one, but it is evident that it has reference in that connection to the mode of doing the act prescribed—to the proceedings of the two houses of the general assembly in making the appointment—whether by ballot or by resolution, and whether by joint or concurrent action of the two houses—and could not have been intended to authorize a delegation of the power to appoint any and all the judges to any officer or tribunal to whom they might think proper to delegate it."

The Pa. act of 1868, p. 547, providing for the extension of Fairmount Park, and assessment of damages "in like manner" as prescribed by the act of 1867, has reference merely to the general method. The quarter sessions may appoint six, instead of twelve, viewers. Thirty-fourth Street, Philadelphia, 81 Pa. St. 27.

The word "manner" is one of large signification, but it cannot exceed the subject it belongs to; the incident cannot be extended beyond its principal. Wells v. Bain, 75 Pa. St. 39, 54.

2. Harris v. Doherty, 119 Mass. 142, where it was said: "By ch. 142, § 5, trustee processes must be 'served on the defendant and each of the trustees in the manner prescribed for the service of an original summons without an attachment.' As no time is otherwise prescribed for the service of trustee processes, 'the manner' evidently includes the time, as well as the form, of service."

For its meaning in various phrases, see note I.

In U. S. v. Morris, 1 Curtis (U. S.) 26, the court say: "The time when such order is to be entered may or may not be considered as part of the 'manner' of remitting. Generally, the time of doing an act and the manner of doing it are distinct things. The phrase 'at such times and in such manner' is one of very frequent occurrence in legal language, and is strictly correct. Still, it may be that, though not naturally included, congress intended to embrace the time of entering the order in the words 'in like manner'; and therefore it is necessary to look carefully at the different parts of this statute, and see if such was the intention of congress. . . . It would seem, therefore, that the words 'in like manner' were not intended to embrace the time when the order is to be entered; for in one case it is to be when the indictment is presented, in the other while it is pending."

And so, in construing the section of a mining tax law, providing that the collection shall be enforced in the same manner as on other kinds of personal property, to prevent the collection of such taxes quarterly, it was held that the word "manner" as there used did not mean "time." State of Nev. v. Eureka Co., 14 Morr. Min. Rep. 165; s. c., 8 Nev. 15.

1. In discussing the requisites of a certificate and affidavit for the renewal of a limited partnership, in Fifth Ave. Bank v. Colgate, 54 N. Y. Super. Ct. 196, the court said: "The phrase 'in the manner herein required for its original formation' is the controlling indication of what the statute requires to be the contents of the papers that have been named. . . . What does 'manner' mean? If it means 'form' only, it must be said as to a certificate, as distinguished from the act of signing it, that the form in the original requirement was not particularized, but was a form of any shape that would contain the assertion of the existence of certain facts and intentions. . . . But the word 'manner' has a larger meaning than 'form' has. It includes 'mode, method, or way,' and therefore includes the idea that the documents shall have the same function that was intended for an original formation."

An act regulating the "manner of voting" in a county in questions of railroad taxation applies to votes where the question submitted is "whether or not stocks shall be subscribed," and not merely to votes where the question of levying the tax is submitted. Ky. Union R. Co. v. Bourbon County, 85 Ky. 98; s. c., 8 Ky. L. Repr. 887. "The phrase 'manner of voting,' literally interpreted, applies simply to the act of voting, which is provided for in the constitution, but, by itself, signifies nothing. It is therefore plain that a more comprehensive meaning was intended and should be given to it. And if so, why may it not fairly be applied to the counting of the votes and ascertaining the result of the voting? It seems to us there is a natural connection between 'regulating the manner of voting' and prescribing rules or tests by which to determine and declare the result, which was the object of the clause in question."

In the title of an act "providing for the manner of adopting children," "the word 'manner' is clearly demonstrative that the purpose of the law was to provide for the form to be used for the adoption of minors." Succession of Vollmer, 4 South. Rep. (La.) 256.

The "manner" of appealing held not to include the form of recognizance. Morris v. Horrell, 35 Mo. 470.

"In Any Manner."—A power to appoint by deed or other writing not being a will, is not a power to appoint "in any manner," so as to be exercisable by a will under section 27th of the Wills act. "In any manner" obliges the court to distinguish between writings, deeds and testamentary documents. Phillips v. Cayley, 61 L. T., N. S. 195, 197, affirmed in 62 L. T., N. S. 86.

"In the Same Manner."—In an act providing that damages for the removal of dams on certain streams should be assessed "in the same manner" as in the laying out of highways; the phrase "in the same manner" means "by similar proceedings, so far as such proceedings are applicable to the subject matter." Phillips v. County Commrs., 122 Mass. 258, 260.

An assessor appointed by a common council had power by statute to assess upon the persons and property of the residents, etc., 'in the same manner' as the assessors of townships. This was held to authorize the assessment "not only in the same manner as to form, but also as to the objects to be taxed. . . . This twelfth section directs an assessment upon persons as well as upon property, thus showing that something more was meant by the word 'manner' than the mere form of proceeding." State v. Perkins, 4 Zab. (N. J.) 411.

"In Such Manner."—An act required a constitutional convention to submit amendments to the voters at such time "and in such manner as the convention shall prescribe," and that the election to decide upon the amendments should "be conducted as the general elections now are." By the election laws the election was to be conducted by inspectors. The convention, by an ordinance, appointed persons to have direction of the election, to fill vacancies, appoint judges and inspectors, make report of their action to the president of the convention, etc. Held, that the ordinance was void as contrary to the act. Wells v. Bain, 75 Pa. St. 39. The court said: "The word 'manner' is one of large signification, but one thing is clear—it cannot exceed the subject it qualifies or belongs to. The incident cannot be extended beyond its principal. What then does the word 'manner' qualify or pertain to in this section? Clearly it is the submission—'shall submit the amendments in such manner as the convention shall prescribe, subject to'—subject to what?—the limitation as to the separate submission of amendments. Can language be clearer to express the mode of submitting or placing the amendments before the people for their adoption or rejection? . . . No implication can be drawn from the word 'manner' to contradict the plain and positive enactment that the election shall be conducted according to the laws governing general elections. It would violate the plainest rules for the interpretation of statutes to make the merest inference stand higher than an intent expressed in distinct language."

The constitution of Nevada provides that the legislature shall submit proposed amendments to the people "in such manner and at such time as the legislature may prescribe." A statute provides for the publication of such amendments in a daily newspaper for ninety days preceding the election, and the distribution of copies of such paper. Held, that this act was not unconstitutional. State v. Davis, 19 Pac. Rep. (Nev.) 894, the court saying: "The constitution having unconditionally referred to the legislature the subject matter of the manner of submitting proposed amendments, by declaring that they shall be submitted 'in such manner and at such time as the legislature shall prescribe,' such reasonable requirements may be imposed by the legislature as its discretion may suggest." HAWLEY, J., dissented, saying: "What did the framers of the constitution mean when they declared that 'it shall be the duty of the legislature to submit such proposed amendment or amendments to the people in such manner and at such time as the legislature shall prescribe?' . . . As to the manner, they meant that the legislature should prescribe the method as to how the votes thereon should be cast, whether upon separate ballots or upon the ballots containing the names of officers to be voted for at such election, and prescribing the manner in which the electors should express their votes. The word 'manner,' as used in the constitution, does not necessarily require anything more and was not intended to embrace anything else." Quoting from the above case of Wells v. Bain, 75 Pa. St. 39, 54.

Where a statute provided that in the case of a verdict found or judgment given for a person suing a writ of mandamus "he shall recover his damages and costs in such manner as he might have done in a civil action for a false return," it was contended that the words "in such manner" referred only to the forms or modes of procedure whereby the damages were to be recovered, and did not, in the least degree, qualify or limit the absolute right of recovery. But the court held this view not tenable, saying: "It should also appear that the statutory expression 'in such manner,' etc., means nothing more nor less than under the like conditions and limitations as would apply to a civil action for a false return upon the alternative writ, if there were no statute in the case. It follows that the relator, in this instance, is entitled to the assessment of damages demanded, if he could have recovered them in such an action, and not otherwise." State v. Ryan, 2 Mo. App. 303, 310.

A constitutional provision that certain officers "shall be appointed or elected in such manner as the general assembly may direct," gives to the latter no appointing power. State v. Kenyon, 7 Ohio St. 546. "To make good this claim, it must be made to appear that the power to direct the 'manner,' the mode, the way in which an act shall be done, and the power and authority to do the act itself, are one and the same thing. But that they are not identical or equivalent to each other, is too clear for argument, and almost too clear to admit of illustration. To prescribe the manner of election or appointment to an office is an ordinary legislative function. To make an appointment to office is an administrative function."

MANOR.—In English Law.—A tract of land originally granted by the king to a person of rank, part of which was given by the

A power given to a trustee to distribute "in such manner and proportion as he shall think proper" gives him full discretion to make unequal appointments. Cowles v. Brown, 4 Call (Va.) 477.

"In manner above mentioned," in a statute, construed. Reg. v. Humphery, 10 Ad. & Ell. 335, 372.

"In manner aforesaid," in a will. Woodall v. Woodall, 3 C. B. 350. The court said with reference to the constructions contended for: "The defendant's construction treats the words 'in manner aforesaid' as something inoperative and without any effect, in the meaning of the will, which, on this construction, is the same as if they were left out; whereas, the construction of the plaintiff gives them the appropriate effect of saving a long repetition of the detailed limitations to which they refer."

An agricultural lease contained a covenant on the part of the lessor, his heirs, etc., that he and they would 'drain with proper drain tiles, one rod apart, ten acres of the lands now in rye-grass, at his and their costs, except the carriage of the said drain pipes, which is to be borne and paid by the lessee; and will drain the remainder of the lands hereby demised, in manner aforesaid, upon being paid a further yearly rent of £5 for every £100 so expended." Held, that the words "in manner aforesaid" referred only to the mode of performing the work, viz.: placing the drain tiles one rod apart; and therefore the tenant was not chargeable with the expense of carriage of the drain pipes beyond the first ten acres. Beer v. Santer, 10 C. B., N. S. 435.

"In manner following," in the covenants in a lease, "must, according to the general rules of construction, extend to all the subsequent covenants on the part of the lessees throughout the deed, unless there be something in the nature of the subject to restrain them to the former part of the lease." Duke of Northumberland v. Errington, 5 T. R. 522, 525.

"In Manner and Form"—In Pleading.—The words "in manner and form," etc., which are regularly used in tendering an issue, either general or special, are sometimes of the substance of the issue, and sometimes merely words of form. When they are of the substance of the issue, they put in issue the circumstances, alleged as concomitants of the principal matter denied by the pleader (such as time, place, manner, etc.). When not of the substance of the issue, they do not put in issue such circumstances. They may always be safely used, in tendering an issue, because, in their legal effect, they always put in issue all material circumstances, and no other. Gould Pl. (5th ed.) 292.

In an indictment the words "in manner and form following, that is to say," do not bind the party to recite the instrument, etc., verbatim, nor render mere formal omissions or mistakes fatal. Rex v. May, 1 Doug. 193.

In a Verdict.—Upon an indictment for concealing the death of a bastard child, the jury found the prisoner 'guilty of the concealment in manner and form as she stands indicted.' The verdict was held bad, in consequence of the omission to find the bastardy of the child. Boyles v. Com., 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 40.

In articles of settlement of the wife's estate, power was given to the husband to appoint her estate to the children of the marriage for such estates and in such parts and in such manner and form as he should by deed or will appoint. Held that the words "in such manner and form" authorized him to give equitable interests to the children. Trollope v. Linton, 1 Sim. & S. 477.

In a statute where by a certain act a warrant of attorney to confess judgment not filed "in manner and form" provided by an earlier act, is deemed void, the words "in manner and form" "refer only to the mode in which the thing is to be done, and do not introduce anything from the act referred to, as to the thing which is to be done or the time for doing it." Acraman v. Herniman, 16 Q. B. 998, 1003.

grantee or lord of the manor to his followers, the rest retained by him under the name of his demesnes.¹

In American Law.—A manor is a tract held of a proprietor by a fee-farm rent in money or in kind, and descending to the oldest son of the proprietor, who, in New York, is called a patroon.²

MANSION—(See also ARSON; BURGLARY; DWELLING HOUSE).—"Mansion" and "dwelling-house" are practically synonymous,³ and include not only the principal house, but appurtenant buildings.⁴

MANUAL—See note 5.

1. Bouv. L. Dict. See Elphinstone on Interpretation of Deeds 592.

In Delacherois v. Delacherois, 11 H. L. Cas. 83, it is said: "Without attempting to define a manor in the abstract, it is enough to say that the seisin of a defined district, with the power of subinfeudation therein, and the existence of freeholders holding of the manor, and the right to a court baron, in which the feudatories are judges, does of itself constitute a seignior or manor within the considerations applicable to the present case."

2. Bouv. L. Dict. See People v. Van Rensselaer, 5 Seld. (N. Y.) 291.

3. Bish. Stat. Crime, § 277—"but 'house' is not quite the same. . . . The latter is of meaning somewhat larger than the others, though the difference is not quite definable." See also 1 Chit. Gen. Pr. 167.

In an indictment for burglary, a house was held sufficiently described as a dwelling house by the word mansion. Com. v. Pennock, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 199.

A mansion house held upon the same trusts as lands at a distance was held a "principal mansion house," within the meaning of the Settled Land Act, 1882. In re Thompson's Will, 21 L. R. Ir. 109.

4. Fletcher v. State, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 338; 1 Hale P. C. 558. Bacon's Abr. II. 135, 136. In 4 Com. Dig. 618, it is said: "A church is a mansion house. . . . So, a shop. . . . So, a chamber within the inns of court, if it be inhabited. . . . By the stat. 5 Edw. VI, 2, a booth or tent in a fair or market in which any there remains; an house from which all are occasionally absent. . . . So, if a man inhabits sometimes in one house, sometimes in another, both are mansion houses. . . . If a woman hires an house, and lives separate from her husband, and the lease being in the husband's name he refuses to have it, yet it shall be the mansion house of the husband. . . . A barn or stable disjoined are not mansion houses at this day. . . . Nor a shop let to another, who works there by day, but does not abide there by night; for it is severed by lease from the mansion house to which it is annexed."

5. Manual Labor.—A tram car driver is not a person "engaged in manual labor" to whom the Employers and Workmen act, 1875, applies. Cook v. N. Metropolitan Tramway Co., 18 Co. Ct., 100; s. c., 56 L. T., N. S. 449; 35 W. R. 577 (another report is to be found in 18 Q. B. D. 683; 57 L. T., N. S. 476; 2 Ry. & Corp. L. J. 631). SMITH, J. said: "It is said that manual labor includes any work done with the hands. But writing for instance, is clearly not manual labor within the meaning of the act, but yet it would come under the definition contended for if it were a good one. Again, can it be said that a telegraph clerk is a manual laborer, or a hair cutter? Clearly not. Is, then, a driver to be taken to come within the meaning of the clause merely because he works with his hands? I can see no distinction between his case and those I have taken as examples—namely, a telegraph clerk, a writer, or a hair cutter. All have manual work to do, but that does not necessarily make them come under the term 'laborers,' and I cannot see that a driver is a man 'engaged in manual labor,' to whom the act is intended to apply. . . . Mr. Crispe tells us, however, that the driver of a tram car has not only to drive, but that he has to do other things in the course of his employment, such as putting the brake on, changing the horses, etc. But there is no evidence that he has any other special or substantial duty imposed upon him than that MANUFACTORY.—A building, the main or principal design or use of which is to be a place for producing articles as products of labor. It is something more than a place where things are made.¹ A building or collection of buildings appropriated to the manufacture of goods. It includes not only the building but the machinery necessary to produce the particular goods manu-

of driving. . . . The real substantial business of the plaintiff must be considered, and not other subsidiary duties he may happen to have." GRANTHAM, J., said: "It is very difficult to draw a clear and definite line as to how much and what classes of work are included in the words 'manual labor'; but I think that these words were inserted in the section with a view to being applied to those whose labor is laborious without being intellectual. The ordinary definition of labor is continuous work without any necessity for very much thought. . . . Unless, therefore, driving can be said to be labor of such continuous kind requiring little thought, it does not come within the meaning of the act. Driving, in my judgment, is clearly not mere labor of a continuous kind without any need of intelligent thought. On the contrary, it requires the exercise of skill and mental power in directing the horses." See contra, Wilson v. Glasgow Tramways Co., 5 Ct. Sess. Cas. (S. C.), 4th series, 982. An omnibus conductor is not a person so 'engaged in manual labor.' Morgan v. London Gen. Omnibus Co., 13 Q. B. D. 832, where BRETT, M. R., said: "He is not 'engaged in manual labor,' he does not lift the passengers into and out of the omnibus; it is true that he may help to change the horses, but his real and substantial business is to invite persons to enter the omnibus and to take and keep for his employers the money paid by the passengers as their fares." And BOWEN, L. J. said: "It seems to me that 'manual labor' can only mean labor performed by hand; and it is very plain that the plaintiff is not engaged in work of that kind."

"Manual labor," in cutting, banking or driving logs or timber, "includes the use and earnings of all implements, instrumentalities, or agencies, such as axe, cant hook, team, or the like, which are actually used in and necessary to the performance of such labor by the lumberman or logger." Martin v. Wakefield, 43 N. W. Rep. (Minn.) 967.

1. Franklin Fire Ins. Co. v. Brock, 57 Pa. St. 82, where it was held that a building, the tenant of which kept hay, straw, produce, etc., and, giving this up, kept broom corn and made brooms by hand,—did not come within the prohibition in a policy of insurance against "mills and manufactories." STRONG, J., in his charge to the jury said: "The fact that articles are made or manufactured in a dwelling house or a store does not, of course, make it a manufactory within the meaning of this policy. Had clothes been made in the store, and had a sewing machine been introduced, and worked there, a jury would hardly find that it had become a manufactory, and therefore no longer insured." He then gave the definition in the text, which was quoted and approved by the supreme court.

In People v. Bradt, Rensselaer (N. Y.) Sessions, it was held that a flax mill is not a "manufactory" within the statute of arson, it being only a place where the flax is separated from the husk. Browne's Judicial Interp. 242.

The business of cutting saw logs and driving them to the place of manufacture is not included within the words "works, mines, manufactory, or other business" in a statute giving a labor lien. Pardee's Appeal, 100 Pa. St. 408.

Where one of the upper stories of a building was rented to persons who carried on therein the business of putting together the frames of chairs which had been elsewhere made, it was held ["but apparently without much consideration." Thompson] that the judge ought to have submitted the question to the jury whether this was a manufactory or not, within the meaning of the policy. Appleby v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co., 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 454; Thompson on Trials, § 1303.

A whole block of buildings was held to constitute one "manufactory," in Richards v. Swansea Imp. Co., 9 Ch. D. 425.

And as to the amount of property adjoining the principal building that a railway company is obliged to take as part of the "manufactory," see Furness v. Midland R. Co., 6 Eq. Cas. 473; Reg. v. London & Greenwich R. Co., 3 Q. B.

factured and the engines or other power requisite to propel such machinery.¹

MANUFACTURE—(See also MANUFACTURER; MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS.—The process of making anything by art, or of reducing materials into form fit for use by hand or by machinery; as “an establishment for the manufacture of cloth.” Anything made or manufactured by hand or manual dexterity, or by machinery. To form by manufacture or workmanship by the hand or by machinery; to make by art and labor.²

166; Richards v. Swansea Imp. Co., 9 Ch. D. 425.

1. Schott v. Harvey, 105 Pa. St. 227, 228.

The insurance of a “starch manufactory” includes machinery and fixtures. Peoria Ins. Co. v. Lewis, 18 Ill. 553. But machinery alone does not constitute a “manufactory” or “mill.” Halpin v. Ins. Co. of N. America, 23 N. E. Rep. 989 (N. Y.), where it was held that where a fire insurance policy on mill machinery and apparatus, apart from the building in which it was contained, provided that where a building, “if a mill or manufactory,” should stand idle, without notice and consent, all liability thereunder should cease, the standing idle of the machinery did not create a forfeiture. “A manufactory is ‘a house or place where anything is manufactured’ [Webs. Dict.]” and this definition was regarded as not applicable to the machinery in question.

2. Atty. Gen. v. Lorman, 59 Mich. 163-4, quoting Worcester's Dict.

In Evg. Journ. Assn. v. State Bd. of Assessors, 47 N. J. L. 38, after quoting Worcester's definition, it is said: “Mr. Brande defines ‘manufacture’ as a term employed to designate the changes or modifications made by art or industry in the form or substance of material articles in the view of rendering them capable of satisfying some want or desire of man; and manufacturing industry to consist in the application of art, science or labor, to bring about certain changes or modifications of already existing materials. He includes under the term ‘manufacture’ all branches of industry, with the exceptions of fishing, hunting, mining, and such industries as have for their object to obtain possession of material products in the state in which they are fashioned by nature. He says that the term is generally applied to those departments of industry in which the raw material is fashioned into desirable articles by art or labor without the aid of the soil, but that there is no real good reason for such limitation, and that it is obvious from the slightest consideration that agriculture is nothing but a manufacture, for the business of the agriculturist is so to dispose of the soil, seed, manure or other materials, that they may supply him with other and more desirable products. Brande's Encyclo., tit. Manufacture.”

In Carlin v. West. Assur. Co. of Toronto, 57 Md. 526, it is said: “Whilst, from its derivation, the primary meaning of the word ‘manufacture’ is making with the hand, this definition is too narrow for its present use. Its meaning has expanded as workmanship and art have advanced; so that now nearly all artificial products of human industry, nearly all such materials as have acquired changed conditions or new and specific combinations, whether from the direct action of the human hand, from chemical processes devised and directed by human skill, or by the employment of machinery, which, after all, is but a higher form of the simple implements with which the human hand fashioned its creations in ruder ages, are now commonly designated as ‘manufactured.’ Burrill defines ‘to manufacture’ ‘the process of making a thing by art,’ and cites BUTLER, J., in 2 H. Bl. 463, 471. Abbott gives its meaning as ‘whatever is made by human labor, either directly or through the instrumentality of machinery.’ The definition in Webster is ‘To make or fabricate from raw materials by the hand, by art or machinery, and work into forms convenient for use.’ Worcester has, in substance, the same definition.”

“Such a process . . . is making an article by the hand, which was once the literal meaning of the word manufacture, or manufactum, and in the more modern idea attached to the word it is making an article, either by hand or machinery, into a new form capable "of being used, and designed to be used, in ordinary life." Lawrence v. Allen, 7 How. (U. S.) 794.

In Rex v. Wheeler, 2 B. & Ald. 349, it is said: "The word 'manufactures' has been generally understood to denote either a thing made, which is useful for its own sake, and vendible as such, as a medicine, a stove, a telescope, and many others, or to mean an engine or instrument, or some part of an engine or instrument, to be employed either in the making of some previously known article, or in some other useful purpose, as a stocking frame or a steam engine for raising water from mines. Or it may, perhaps, extend also to a new process to be carried on by known implements, or elements, acting upon known substances, and ultimately producing some other known substance, but producing it in a cheaper or more expeditious manner, or of a better and more useful kind. But no merely philosophical or abstract principle can answer to the word manufactures. Something of a corporeal and substantial nature, something that can be made by man from the matters subjected to his art and skill is requisite to satisfy this word."

And in Murphy v. Arnson, 96 U. S. 134, it is said: "In the present case, the original elements are fluids, and the manipulation and the materials blending with each form a union which is as much a manufacture within the meaning of the statute as where the materials are mechanically joined together. Bouvier thus defines the word 'manufacture': 'The word is used in the English and American patent laws. It includes machinery which is to be used and is not the object of sale, and substances (such, for example, as medicines) formed by chemical processes when the vendible substance is the thing produced, and that which operates preserves no permanent form.' It includes any new combination of old materials constituting a new result or production in the form of a vendible article, not being machinery. The contriver of a new commodity which is not properly a machine or a composition of matter can obtain a patent therefor as for a new manufacture. And, although it might properly be regarded as a machine or a composition of matter, yet if the claim to novelty rests on neither of these grounds, and if it constitutes an essentially new merchantable commodity, it may be patented as a new manufacture."

"The various nostrums vended all over the land, with or without the certificate of the patent office, are manufactures. Beer may well be said to be manufactured from malt and other ingredients, whisky from corn, or cider from apples. The fact that the identity of the original article or articles is lost, and that a new form or a new character is assumed, is not material in determining whether, within the popular idea, as embodied in the Customs act, the article in question is a manufacture from its original elements. We have no doubt that nitro benzole is a manufacture from benzole and nitric acid, falling within the twentieth section of the act of 1842, and that the duty was rightly fixed by the court below." And see Crane v. Price, 4 Man. & G. 580, where it was held that a combination of an old invention with the new one did not prevent the result being a "new manufacture." See also Boulton & Watt v. Bull, 2 Hea. Black. 463; Fess. Pat. 67.

In Fess. Pat. 367, it is said: "The word 'manufacture' is of extensive signification, and applies not only to things made, but to the practice of making, to principles carried into practice in a new manner, to new results of principles carried into practice. Under things made we may class, in the first place, new compositions of things, such as manufactures in the most ordinary sense of the word. Secondly, all mechanical inventions, whether made to produce old or new effects. Under the practice of making we may class all new artificial manners of operating with the hand, or with instruments in common use, new processes in any art producing effects useful to the public. . . . New methods of manufacturing articles in common use, where the whole merit and effect produced are the saving of time and expense, and thereby lowering the price of the article, may be said to be new manufactures according to the spirit and meaning of the act." See also title Patent Law, infra.

In Norris Bros. v. Com., 27 Pa. St. 496, it is said: "What is manufacturing? It is making. To make, in the mechanical sense, does not signify to create out of nothing; for that surpasses all human power. It does not often mean the production of a new article out of materials entirely raw. It generally consists in giving new shapes, new qualities or new combinations to matter which has already gone through some other artificial process. A cunning worker of metals is the maker of the wares he fashions, though he did not dig the ore from the earth, or carry it through every subsequent stage of refinement. A shoemaker is none the less a manufacturer of shoes because he does not also tan the leather. A bureau is made by the cabinet maker, though it consists in part of locks, knobs and screws, bought ready made from a dealer in hardware." It was, therefore, held that locomotives were the exclusive manufactures of a firm, within the meaning of an act, notwithstanding a portion of the materials used in their construction were purchased by the manufacturers.

And so in City of N. O. v. Le Blanc, 34 La. An. 597, it is said: "A manufacturer is not one who creates out of nothing, for that surpasses human power; neither is he one who produces a new article out of materials entirely raw. He is one who gives new shapes, new qualities, new combinations to matter which has already gone through some artificial process. A shoemaker is none the less a manufacturer because he does not also tan the leather; the tanner is none the less a manufacturer of leather because he does not breed and raise the bullocks from which the raw hides are taken. The tanner makes leather to sell, but does not buy hides to sell again. He produces the article of the leather and depends for his profit upon the labor which he bestows upon the raw material."

Mining is not manufacturing. Appeal of Com. (Pa.), 25 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 320; Byers v. Franklin Coal Co., 106 Mass. 131. Nor is the business of an aqueduct company. "Nothing is put into the article which it supplies to change its natural condition, and the whole operation of the water works is designed merely to keep foreign substances from mingling with it." Dudley v. Jamaica etc. Corp., 100 Mass. 183.

A list of special substances follows, in connection with which the word "manufacture" has been used and judicially treated.

Bone.—Animal charcoal produced by the process of burning bone, and bone dust, produced by pulverizing it, are "manufacture of bone." Schriefer v. Wood, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 216, where it is said: "We do not ordinarily apply the term 'manufacturer' to one whose operations are as limited as those of a wood sawer; but when great quantities of salable articles are produced, even by a single operation of a very simple machine, we frequently, if not ordinarily, speak of the operation as a manufacture. When large quantities of kindling wood are made by splitting blocks of wood by machinery adapted to that special purpose, we do not hesitate to speak of it as a manufacture of kindling wood; and an establishment where very large quantities of bone dust are produced by grinding by machinery would by many, in ordinary conversation, be termed a manufactory of bone dust. We speak of the manufacture of salt, when it is produced by the simple operation of boiling, or by solar evaporation; and when any article of manufacture, having a distinct name in the trade and commerce of the country, is produced by machinery, or by a chemical process, from any material or materials having a different commercial name from the article produced, we may generally speak of the operation by which it is produced as a manufacture."

Copper.—Copper plates turned up at the edge are not "manufactured copper." U. S. v. Potts, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 284.

Coral, in the form of a cameo, is "coral, cut or manufactured." Bailey v. Schell, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 195.

Cotton.—The weaving of cotton thread into a covering for strips of steel to be used for making crinoline skirts is a "manufacture of cotton." Whymper v. Harney, 18 C. B., N. S. 243. See Morlot v. Lawrence, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 608; Arthur v. Herman, 96 U. S. 141; Arthur v. Rheims, 96 U. S. 143; Kohlsaat v. Murphy, 96 U. S. 153; Fisk v. Arthur, 103 U. S. 431.

Ebony.—Fancy boxes made of common wood and veneered with ebony are "manufactures of ebony." Sill v. Lawrence, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 605.

Firewood is not a "manufactured article." Correio v. Lynch, 65 Cal. 273.

Gas.—Producing and supplying illuminating gas is a "manufacture." Nassau Gas Light Co. v. Brooklyn, 89 N. Y. 409.

Glass.—Spectacles are "manufactures of glass, or of which glass shall be a component material." Arthur v. Suss- field, 96 U. S. 128. See also Roosevelt v. Maxwell, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 391.

Hair.—See Arthur's Exrs. v. Butterfield, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Thorp v. Lawrence, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 351.

Hay is not a "manufactured article." Frazee v. Moffitt, 20 Blatchf. (U. S.) 267, where the court said: "Many articles are properly called raw which have undergone some manipulation. Cotton is picked from the bolls, and cleaned by ginning and baled. Yet it is raw cotton in the bale. Wheat is cut, and the grains are threshed out, and then subjected to a cleaning machine and then bagged. Yet it is raw wheat in the bag. So with other grains. The cotton and the grains undergo such change and preparation as exposure to light, and natural or artificial heat and air, and the manipulation they receive, produce or allow, be it more or less. Yet neither the cotton nor the grains would be said to be manufactured. Salt and sugar are new articles. Cotton and grain are the same articles they were when on the plant with its roots in the earth. So hay is the same article it was when it was stalks of grass with roots in the earth. It is dried, to be sure; but the drying and any conversion of starch into sugar are the mere incidents of the necessary cutting to enable it to be stored for food in latitudes where grass cannot be found all the year round. Where it can be so found no hay is stored. Dried apples would not be called a manufactured article, though the apple is peeled and cored and sliced and dried by exposure to the sun and manipulation. The substance of dried apples is still apples. The substance of dried grass or hay is still grass. Change of name and manipulation do not necessarily constitute manufacture within the meaning of § 2516."

Hemp.—Semble, that the term "a manufacture of hemp," used in a tariff act, cannot properly include an article generally known in commerce as "hemp carpeting," but in the manufacture of which no hemp is actually used. Baxter v. Maxwell, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 32.

Ice.—"The cutting of ice produced by the agencies of nature on the surface of a pond into pieces of a size convenient for handling, and storing the pieces in a building, cannot in any proper sense be called a manufacture. The material is in no way changed or adapted to any new or different use; it still remains ice to be used simply as ice; it is no more a manufacture than putting of the water from the pond into casks for transportation and use would be a manufacture, or the mining of coal, which has been decided not to be a manufacture. Byers v. Franklin Coal Co., 106 Mass. 131. It is like the harvesting of hay or grain, or other agricultural crops, and the analogy is so strong and obvious that 'the ice crop,' 'the ice harvest' and 'harvesting ice' are terms in common use." Hittinger v. Westford, 135 Mass. 262.

See to the same effect People v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 99 N. Y. 181, where it was said: "No doubt ice may be manufactured and frigorific effects produced by artificial means. Corporations exist for that purpose and come literally within our manufacturing laws. Their methods in no respect resemble those of the defendant. Its tools and implements are for convenience in handling and marketing a product, and not at all for making it."

But see contra Atty. Gen. v. Lorman, 59 Mich. 157; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 287, where ice cutting was held to be "manufacturing." The court said: "Its natural condition is not changed. The article itself is a natural product, as described in the replication. It is ice when it is taken from the river, and it is ice when delivered to consumers. The form alone is changed. It is reduced in size and delivered in quantities to suit the convenience of the patrons of the company. But it is not necessary, to constitute the commodity a manufactured article, that a chemical change should be wrought in the thing manufactured. Iron manufactured from iron ore remains iron. Cotton gathered from the boll and by means of complicated machinery manufactured, becomes the cotton of commerce. Lumber is manufactured from logs or timber simply by changing its form. And it has been held that grinding bones to produce the bone dust of commerce was manufacturing within the meaning of the revenue laws of the United States. Schriefer v. Wood, 5 Blatchf. 215. So it was held by the Supreme Court of the United States that timber split into staves or into long pieces designed for shovel handles, was "manufactured," and not covered by the reciprocity treaty of 1854. U. S. v. Hathaway, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 404, 408."

Iron.—Iron show cards are "manufactures of iron." Forbes Lith. Co. v.

Worthington, 132 U. S. 655. So are hair pins. Robertson v. Rosenthal, 132 U. S. 460.

It is no breach of a covenant prohibiting the erection of a forge or furnace for the "manufacturing of iron" to erect a forge for the purpose of heating iron, and moulding and working it into different articles. Rogers v. Danforth, 9 N. J. Eq. 289. "What is the definition of a forge or furnace for the manufacture of iron? For, if there is a definition comprehended and understood alike by scientific men and by mechanics acquainted with the business referred to, such definition ought to control the court in its construction of this covenant. What is such a forge or furnace? An establishment or mechanical contrivance by which iron is made or manufactured from the ore.

From what is iron manufactured? It is manufactured from the ore. By a blacksmith's forge iron is not manufactured, but by it from iron itself machines or instruments of use are manufactured. It is not the intention of the defendants to erect any forge or furnace for the manufacture of iron. Their object and intention is not to make iron, but to use iron when made, to be worked up into different materials."

A person employed in an establishment where castings, farming implements and machinery are made from melted pig and old iron is not exempt from jury service as a person in actual employment of "an iron manufacturing company." People v. Holdridge, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 511. The court said: "Manufacturing, according to Webster and other lexicographers, is making goods and wares from raw materials. It does not include tailors and blacksmiths, or other persons engaged in making clothing or other articles for use or sale from cloth after it has been manufactured from cotton, flax or wool, or implements and wares from iron after it has been manufactured from ore." See also the opinion in Lawrence v. Allen, 7 How. (U. S.) 785 (quoted at length infra), and U. S. v. Sarchet, Gilp. (U. S.) 273.

Marble.—In U. S. v. Wilson, 1 Hunt's Merchants' Magazine, 167 (cited in Harranft v. Wiegmann, 121 U. S. 615), it was held that marble which had been cut into blocks for the convenience of transportation was not "manufactured marble." The court charged the jury "that the only question for their consideration was, as to whether this marble was or was not manufactured. A thing may be considered manufactured if any labor has been put upon it, changing it from the raw material, as with bar iron. When the term 'manufactured' is applied to a commodity, the question then arises, has it been removed from its character of raw material? Another question is, in what sense or acceptation is the term 'manufactured' used among dealers in marble? From the evidence of the defendant's witnesses, it does not appear that this is a manufactured article. If this was a manufactured article, it is your duty to render a verdict for the United States. If unmanufactured, then for the defendants." The jury, without leaving their seats, found for the defendants.

Metals.—In Meyer v. Arthur, 91 U. S. 570, in construing the words "manufactures of metals" in a tariff act, the court said: "When the act speaks of 'manufactures of metals,' it obviously refers to manufactured articles in which metals form a component part. When we speak of manufactures of wood, of leather, or of iron, we refer to articles that have those substances respectively for their component parts, and not to articles in which they have lost their form entirely, and have become the chemical ingredients of new forms." It was accordingly held that white lead, nitrate of lead, oxide of zinc, and dry and orange mineral, were not "manufactures of metals," within the meaning of the act.

And this case was approved in Murphy v. Arnson, 96 U. S. 131, cited supra.

"Tin plates" were not held to be included in "manufactures of metals," in May v. Simmons, 4 Fed. Rep. 499, the reason given being that they were ordinarily specifically designated in similar acts.

Newspapers.—See MANUFACTURER.

Reeds.—A round reed, from which the outer covering, which made it a rattan, is stripped, is not "manufactured." Otherwise of square reeds, which have been obtained by the further process of cutting the round reeds. Foppes v. Magone, 40 Fed. Rep. 570.

Rocks.—Where two operations are necessary to fit stones, to be placed in a wall, one of reducing them by blows of hammers to a suitable size and degree of smoothness, and the other of dressing them by masons, and the parties to an agreement for blasting and excavating rocks agreed that the rocks so blasted should be "manufactured," it was held that the terms of such agreement were sufficiently complied with by the stones being broken into proper sizes and shapes, and made sufficiently smooth to be submitted to masons for dressing by them, so as to be fit to go into the wall. Tone v. Doelger, 6 Robt. (N. Y.) 251. See also MANUFACTURING PROCESS, infra.

Definition.MANUFACTURE.*Definition.

Shells—Shells cleaned by acid and then ground on an emery wheel and some of them afterwards etched by acid, and all intended to be sold for ornament as shells, are not dutiable as "manufactures of shells." Hartranft v. Wiegmann, 121 U. S. 609.

The court said: "They were still shells. They had not been manufactured into a new and different article, having a distinctive name, character or use from that of a shell. The application of labor to an article, either by hand or by mechanism, does not make the article necessarily a manufactured article, within the meaning of that term as used in the tariff laws. Washing and scouring wool does not make the resulting wool a manufacture of wool. Cleaning and ginning cotton does not make the resulting cotton a manufacture of cotton."

Silk—Chinese shoes, consisting of an upper part of silk or cotton and a sole of felt, and leather, are "manufactures of silk, or cotton," respectively. "A definition adopted and acted upon for a long time should not be regarded as changed by a subsequent act of congress, unless the intention to change is clearly manifest." Swayne v. Hager, 37 Fed. Rep. 780. See also Adams v. Bancroft, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 384; Bernstein v. Baxendale, 6 C. B., N. S. 251.

Textile Fabrics—One engaged in cutting and making coats and trousers out of jeans cloth, which has been already manufactured by another, is not engaged in the "manufacture of textile fabrics." Cohn v. Parker, 6 South Rep. (La.) 718. "To say that the making of coats and pants out of a textile fabric already manufactured is 'the manufacture of textile fabrics,' in the sense of the constitution, would be to confound the terms completely; for the making of the coats and pants presupposes the previous existence of the fabric out of which they are cut and made, and the manufacture of the fabric presupposes the subsequent cutting and making of the coats and pants. Hence, it is quite clear that one cannot be taken for the other, and that the cutting and making of jeans coats and pants out of a previously manufactured article is, in the sense of the law, 'the manufacture of textile fabrics.' We do not regard City v. Arthurs, 36 La. An. 98, as applicable to the question presented here. In that case the payment of the tax demanded by the city was resisted by the defendant on the ground that the property assessed was a 'manufactory of fish-lines, ropes, packing, and other hempen articles,' and therefore exempt as being 'employed in the manufacture of textile fabrics.' The alleged exemption was maintained by this court, and the defendant relieved from the payment of the tax. Such articles as fish-lines and ropes can only be made by being woven from raw material, and are themselves 'textile fabrics;' but net and hammocks made out of lines and ropes would not be textile fabrics."

Wood—Saw mills are not "property employed in the manufacture of wood." Jones v. Raines, 35 La. An. 996.

Wool—Worsted shawls with cotton borders are not "manufactures of wool, or of which wool is a component part." "If, because worsted is made of wool, all manufactures of worsted become wollen manufactures, there would be no propriety in enumerating worsted goods as a distinct class." Elliott v. Swartwout, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 151. See also Lening v. Maxwell, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 125.

"Manufactured Articles, Goods."—Where a railway company were entitled to charge a certain rate for "manufactured goods," this term "must be understood in a popular sense, and must mean not merely goods produced from the raw state by manual skill and labor, but such as are ordinarily produced in manufactories; and we should therefore exclude stationery and include shoes, ironmongery, glass and trapezy. It should be observed, however, that having given what we conceive to be the meaning of the term, the application of that meaning to particular articles is a question of fact, not of law; and what we have suggested in this respect is not to be taken as conclusive." Parker v. G. W. R. Co., 6 El. & Bl. 77, 109.

"Manufactured goods" means "goods the manufacture of which is completed, so that the goods are in a condition to be sold, and so that all that needs to be done, if a purchaser asks for them, is to deliver them." U. S. v. A Quantity of Tobacco, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 129.

So it was held in Rex v. Woodhead, 1 Moody R. 549, that goods remain in "a style, process, or progress of manufacture," within the meaning of a statute, though the texture be complete, if they are not yet brought into a condition fit for sale.

Pattern pieces of paperhanging were held to be "articles of manufacture," within the meaning of stat. 5 & 6 Vict., ch. 100. "It is equally an article of manufacture, and equally an article of trade, whether it be manufactured and sold as a pattern or for actual use; and, if it contains no marks of registration, is just as likely to mislead a purchaser as a larger piece." Heywood v. Potter, 1 El. & Bl. 439, 448. COLERIDGE, J., dissented, saying, "There is a broad distinction, as it seems to me, between the pattern of an article and the article itself, between what is the ordinary subject of trade and what is put forth, as it were, to induce such trade."

India rubber shoes, made by dipping a mould into the gum while in a liquid state, are dutiable as "manufactured articles." Lawrence v. Allen, 7 How. (U. S.) 785. The court said: "What constitutes a manufactured article? In some instances, and for some purposes, it may be one kind of process performed on what is found in a natural state, and in some, another kind. Thus the juice of the maple or of the cane is in some views manufactured when it is made into molasses or syrup, and in others when again made into sugar or spirit from molasses. And so the juice of the grape is one sense manufactured when converted into wine, and in another when made into brandy. And so is lye from ashes, when boiled down to potash or pearlash, manufactured into them. Here, the juice or sap of the india rubber tree, while liquid or in its milky state, whether then called caoutchouc or some other name, is still a natural substance, and in its natural form; and, in one sense, and to a certain extent, its being hardened and changed in color, no less than consistency and bulk, by fire and evaporation, whatever new form it may then be turned into, is a manufacture. It is so as much as butter or cheese is a manufacture from animal milk, or tar from turpentine, and resin from tar. Yet from the words of the law, as well as its design, it is manifest that the india rubber is not meant to be taxed as a manufacture, though so hardened and changed, unless, at the same time, it is put into a shape which is suitable for use, and adapted with a design to be used in a way that is calculated to rival some domestic manufacture here, rather than merely to furnish a raw material in a more portable, useful and convenient form for other manufactures here. In the latter case, within the policy and purpose of the tariff law yielding protection, it is 'unmanufactured,' or, in other words, not made abroad for use in its existing form except as a raw material, like pig iron or pig lead. But in the former case, within that policy and purpose, it is 'manufactured,' as it is made in a shape for use as a manufacture without being afterwards materially changed in form, and is designed to be so used, and hence comes in as a competitor with our own manufactures. After these, what requisite is wanting to bring it within the spirit, no less than the letter, of the provision improving a duty? It has been changed, by fire and labor, in its color, consistency and form, from its natural state as the milk of the india-rubber tree. It has been fashioned into an article of clothing, suitable and customary to be worn in its then shape. It is a rival to other shoes made here. These elements would, on principles of common sense, seem to amount to a manufacture, and one, when imported from abroad, likely to be taxed. . . . This occasional use of the shoes for other purposes than wearing as water-proof shoes would not alter their original character as a manufacture for the latter purpose, nor the importation and present character of them as a manufacture for the same purpose. Thus, the importation of cast iron in kettles or hand irons in a state to be so used, and frequently so used, would not be altered as a manufacture of that kind, and as subject to pay the duty imposed on it in the tariff; because some of it, after imported, might occasionally be melted down and recast, and used for other or similar purposes. Nor is the juice of the cane—converted into a different consistence and color abroad, and shipped here as molasses, ready to be used, and often used as such—any the less a 'manufactured article,' and any less subject to the duty on molasses because some of it, after arriving in this country, may again be manufactured into sugar or spirit. A further illustration as to the distinction between the same article,

MANUFACTURER—(See also MANUFACTURE; MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS).—One who is engaged in the business of put into a shape to be sold for use as it is, and into one not for use as it is, is that of melted iron. In that state it may be run in moulds, either for pots or for pigs, and, in the former case, fitted and sold to be used in that shape, and hence a manufacture; while, in the latter, sold to be made up afterwards into new and different forms, and hence, for some purposes, is then not regarded as a manufacture till so made up. So lead may be melted into the shape of pigs or bars, for exportation and for foreign manufacture, or be run into weights, for use as weights, and then be regarded as already a manufacture for that purpose."

An article designated in a contract as "slops from their distillery" does not constitute a manufactured article, within the meaning of the rule which implies a warranty of merchantable quality. Holden v. Clancy, 58 Barb. (N.Y.) 590. The court there said: "A manufacture is defined as 'the process of making anything by art, or of reducing materials into a form fit for use by the hand or by machinery,' and it seems to imply a proceeding wherein the object or intention of the process is to produce the article in question. The residuum or refuse of various kinds of manufactories is more or less valuable for certain purposes, and may be, and often is, the subject of sale, but it is not expected that the skill and attention of the manufacturer is to be devoted to the quality of the refuse material. This is not the object of the process, and its quality is wholly subordinate, and disregarded when attention to it would interfere with the most profitable mode or material to be used in the process which is the main object of the manufacturer." And see Lening v. Maxwell, 3 Blatchf. (U.S.) 125. See also the cases in the above list under the headings Firewood, Hay, Ice, Marble and Shells.

Manufacturing Establishment.—A flour mill driven by steam and furnished with a middlings purifier, bran duster, belting and other machinery was held to be a "manufacturing establishment," in Carlin v. West. Assur. Co. of Toronto, 57 Md. 515; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 440, 446, n. See the opinion in this case quoted supra. See also Establish.

Manufacturing Process.—The building of a ship does not come within the statutory definition of a "manufacturing process," viz. "Any manual labor incidental to the making of any article or part of an article." Palmer's Ship-building Co. v. Chaytor, L. R., 4 Q. B. 209.

Quere whether splitting rock into slates and shaping them for sale is such a "manufacturing process." Kent v. Astley, L. R., 5 Q. B. 19.

Manufacturing Purposes.—The language in a deed poll that a piece of ground is to be used for "milling or manufacturing purposes only," is not a covenant, expressed or implied, that the grantee will erect a mill of any kind upon the property. Madore's App., 129 Pa. St. 15. The court said incidentally: "A covenant to use property for manufacturing purposes would imply the right to use it for all purposes incident to such object. There must be a house or houses for those who operate the establishment to live in, and we cannot say that a store to supply their wants is not germane."

Manufacture and Keep.—A penalty for "manufacturing and keeping" ammunition containing gun powder held to apply only to the keeping by manufacturers themselves, not by those who sell goods manufactured by others. Webley v. Woolley, L. R., 7 Q. B. 61.

Manufacture and Sell.—A grant by a patentee of "the sole and exclusive right to manufacture and sell" machines of the patented invention in a specified city, gives by implication to a purchaser from such manufacturer the right to use the machine until it is worn out, wherever he pleases. May v. Chaffee, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 385.

Manufactured and Used.—In an action brought to recover a royalty for an article "manufactured and used" by the government without a licence this term, in the case of a hoop attachment for stacking arms, was construed to mean the completion of the combination, so that the firearm with the patented device attached to it was ready for sale or military service. Butler v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cl. 335.

Place of Manufacture.—The "place of manufacture" at which liquors might, under a statute, be sold without licence or tax, was held to be confined to the distillery or to places so near as to be used in the business of distilling. State v. Whissenhunt, 98 N. C. 682.

working raw materials into wares suitable for use.¹

1. People v. N. Y. Floating Dry Dock Co., 63 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 453, quoting Webb's Dict. In that case it was held that the constructor of docks for building and repairing ships was not a "manufacturer." The court said: "Undoubtedly using the words manufacture, manufacturer in their broadest sense, the builder and repairer of a vessel, or a house even, might be called a manufacturer. In either case such builder takes the raw material, and by the hand, or by machinery and tools, fashions it into form and shape for use. But this is not the ordinary and general meaning to be given to the words, and it is such general and ordinary meaning which words are to receive in the construction of statutes. (Potter's Dwaris on Statutes 193.) The builder and repairer of vessels is a ship carpenter or ship builder; his business is ship carpentry, and he and his business are so styled in common speech, and he is no more a manufacturer, and his business no more manufacturing, than is a house carpenter or manufacturer, or his business manufacturing."

The case was affirmed in 92 N. Y. 478.

One who makes barrels, hogsheads, etc., is a manufacturer. City of N. O. v. Le Blanc, 34 La. An. 506. See opinion in this case quoted under Manufacture, supra.

A member of a firm engaged in the manufacture of friction matches is a "manufacturer" of friction matches, with whom the government may deal as such. U. S. v. Weedon, 3 Fed. Rep. 623.

Under Bankrupt Law.—One who prepares lumber, the growth of his own land, for market and sells it, is a manufacturer within the meaning of the Bankrupt act. Re Chandler, 1 Lowell (U. S.) 478. "It is not like the case put in argument of a farmer making cider or cheese, for two reasons: these products, when made by the farmer exclusively from his own farm, are not usually made on so large a scale as to be called a manufacturer, as the word is now commonly used, and the making is one merely incidental to the cultivation of his land, like curing his hay, etc. But in the case of the lumber business, the land may be almost said to be incident to the lumber, which usually forms its chief value, and the manufacture itself is the main source of profit, independently of any cultivation or other use of the land."

And see Burge v. Comer, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 5; 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 85.

The publisher of a newspaper was held to be a "manufacturer" within the meaning of the Bankrupt act in In re Kenyon v. Fenton, 1 Utah T. 47; s. c., 6 Bankr. Reg. 238. The court said: "The term manufacturer, under the Bankrupt act, has a legal meaning, and this legal meaning must be governed by legal rules. It is true that everyone who manufactures is not to be embraced within the legal phrase. A farmer is not to be considered a manufacturer in the commercial sense, when he confines his business to the manufacture of the milk of his cows into butter and cheese, nor when he converts the products of his farm into beef and pork. But it does not follow that when he makes it a part of his business to buy milk and manufacture the same into butter and cheese, or to purchase the products of other farms and other stock than those of his own and manufactures the same into beef and pork, that he is not a manufacturer within the meaning of the act. When the manufacturing becomes the principal part of even, a farmer's business, which requires him to buy articles or products and to manufacture them for sale, he thereby becomes a manufacturer and trader within the meaning of the act. A buyer of leather who makes it his business, or a part of his business, to manufacture the same into boots and shoes or harness, and sells the same, though he be a nurseryman or a gardener or a farmer, is a manufacturer and a trader within the meaning of the act. If other construction than this should be given to the act, the spirit and the letter of the same could be destroyed by assumptions the most frivolous as well as those the most false. If it should be admitted that the publishers of a weekly or daily paper were not manufacturers within the meaning of the act, yet if they should buy paper, ink and other material and make the same into cards or bill heads or blanks and blank books, and conduct a business of this kind, as in this case it is averred the bankrupts have done, they are manufacturers and traders within the meaning of the act; for these articles so manufactured are not necessary parts of the business of publishing a newspaper. . . . Though it is not necessary to decide that the printing and publishing of a daily newspaper is manufacturing in the strict sense of the law, yet my brother judges have expressed the opinion it would be, and I am inclined to the same conviction. A newspaper publication is as much the result of manufacture as that of books or cards or bill heads. To make a distinction between them, when, in fact, there is no distinction, would seem to be an utter disregard of the objects as well as the legal intentment of the law; for they buy, manufacture and sell."

But a contrary opinion was reached in In re The Capital Publishing Co., 3 McArthur (D. C.) 405; s. c., 18 Bankr. Reg. 319. The opinion of the court on this point we quote at length: "The first question raised upon the demurrer is whether the company is a manufacturer within the meaning of the Bankrupt act. Words in a statute are to be taken in their ordinary and familiar signification, and regard is to be had to their general and popular use. The court will presume that they were used to express their meaning in common usage. Keeping in mind this rule of interpretation, we can determine the judicial construction to be placed upon the word 'manufacturer' when it is used in the Bankrupt law. There can be no doubt but the word 'manufacturer' was used in the statute in the limited sense in which it is commonly understood. The agriculturist is engaged in the most extensive industry of this or any other country, and he brings to the market many commodities which are produced without the direct aid of the soil, or of the vegetative powers of nature, but he is never spoken of in common parlance as a manufacturer. The industries to which the dictionaries and the writers on political economy limit this term are where the raw materials or natural substances are wrought by hand, art or machinery into commodities for use; and the examples given are cloths, iron, shoes, cabinet work, glass, cotton and silk goods, etc. This limitation of the term manufacturer is to be adopted as the true meaning of the Bankrupt law. Perhaps there is no substantial difference between the various branches of industry in any respect, except only in regard to the different processes which they employ. To manufacture is to change and modify natural substances so that they become articles of value and use. Chantrey was in the habit of receiving three thousand dollars for a single bust; Bierstadt, twenty-five thousand dollars for a single picture; and the representation of Lincoln's cabinet was purchased at a cost of twenty thousand dollars and presented by a noble hearted American lady to the congress of the United States. These are called works of art, but in a legitimate sense they may be comprised among the productions of manufacturing industry. The artists use material and natural substances. They oftentimes employ a variety of subordinates. They work with their hands and perfect an article of great pecuniary value. It symbolizes their art and genius. In a word, the artist accomplishes all that is implied by, but he is never included in, the term manufacturer. The definitions and rules which obtain in the patent office are not applicable here. A newspaper is not regarded as a manufacture any more than a painting, and an editor a manufacturer as little as an artist. We have been referred to the case In re Kenyon v. Fenton, decided by the supreme court of Utah. It was a case where the bankrupts carried on the business of printing blank books, cards, bill heads, in addition to which they published a paper, and the petition alleged that they published a newspaper, and are 'manufacturers of books, cards, bill heads,' etc. And the court say: 'Though it is not necessary to decide that the printing and publishing of a daily newspaper is manufacturing in the strict sense of the law, yet my brother judges have expressed the opinion that it would be, and I am inclined to the same conviction.' It will be observed that the decision is placed upon the ground of the bankrupts' being manufacturers of books, bill heads, etc., and in this respect they were undoubtedly within the meaning of the act. Having come to this conclusion, the court further say that it is not necessary to decide that the publishing of a newspaper is manufacturing within the strict sense of the law, but express the opinion 'that it would be.' No more weight can be given to this voluntary case than to any other conditional obiter dictum. It might be respectfully suggested that the substantial difference between the strict sense of the term

'manufacturer' in the abstract, and the strict sense it is to receive in the law has been overlooked in this decision. We have already stated the proposition that every branch of industry which converts any material or substance into useful commodities, strictly speaking, comes under the term manufacturers, and in that sense a newspaper or a painting would be included. But we are of opinion that this is not the strict sense of the statute, which only includes those industries which commonly pass under that designation. This is an important distinction; for while all employments rest upon the same faculty in men to labor, to contrive and to mould the refractory elements of matter, common usage and the convenience of society have given a limited signification to the word. The rule already adverted to for the interpretation of statute law limits its import to the sense in which it is usually received. Now no definition of the word manufacturer has ever included the publisher of a weekly newspaper, and the common understanding of mankind excludes it. You may reason by analogy, or reason from the nature of things, that it is; and so you may do the same thing with anybody who himself labors or employs others. But surely a bankrupt law is not to be expanded to cover every employment. It was by express terms limited to certain classes who are designated by names well known in the business world. The husbandman prepares the soil, the inventor his models, the orator his address, for which he receives two hundred dollars a night; the lawyer makes his brief, for which he scarcely ever gets enough; the physician formulates his prescription, and so on through all the divisions of labor and industry. By these means man acquires a certain mastery and is furnished with inestimable results. So of the newspaper. It has grown within a century into the most popular vehicle for the spread of information. Its vigor and influence are felt in every household. Indeed, it may be called the people's storehouse of intelligence. It claims to be an institution, and even our statesmen, with great complacency, have denominated it the fourth estate. It does not come within the popular meaning of the term manufacture, unless, indeed, when its contents are slenderly endowed with the truth, or when its articles appear to be made out of whole cloth. It gives employment to printing presses and types and editors; and yet in the whole history of newspapers from the close of the seventeenth century this word manufacturer has never been applied to them, or appropriated by them, in the whole range of English literature. No author has ever so used it, and it is never so applied by any statute or by any authority, except by way of opinion in the solitary case from Utah."

This case was approved of and followed in Evening Journ. Assn. v. State Bd. of Assessors, 47 N. J. L. 36. The court said: "We agree with the reasoning and with the conclusion of the court in In re Capital Publishing Co. that the publisher of a newspaper is not, in a legal sense, a manufacturer. It is true that, in the production of his papers which he sells, he employs manual labor and mechanical skill. But so does the sculptor who produces, as the result of his handiwork and genius, the statue; so does the painter, who executes his painting with his palette and his brush; so does the lawyer, who prepares his brief, or the author, who writes a book. But neither the sculptor nor the painter is classed as a manufacturer by reason of his works; nor would the lawyer or the author be regarded as a manufacturer, though they employed a printer—the former to print his brief and the latter his book. In the ordinary and general use of the word 'manufacturer,' the publishing of a newspaper does not come within the popular meaning of the term."

See an extract from the opinion in this case quoted supra under MANUFACTURE. See also the opinion in N. O. v. Le Blanc, 34 La. An. 597, quoted under MANUFACTURE.

A book binder and blank book maker is a "manufacturer." See Seeley v. Gwillim, 40 Conn. 106.

The printer of calicoes is not the "maker or manufacturer of them," so as to render them liable when in his hands to seizure under an extent for bygone duties. Rex v. Tregoning, 2 Younge & J. 132. "It is contended that, for the purposes of this act, the printer is the maker and manufacturer of these goods, likening this, as I conceive, to the familiar case of the maker of a picture who is, of course, he who spreads the colors upon the canvas, which produce the impression upon the mind, and not the man upon whose canvas the picture is painted. There is, however, no resemblance whatever between the two cases. The maker and manufacturer of these goods, according to the plain sense and common understanding of those words, is he who manufactures the articles upon which the print is impressed. . . . He who merely puts the stamp upon the goods is not the maker or manufacturer within the common meaning of these words, upon the plain construction of which I can entertain no doubt."

A trade mark representing that certain persons were "manufacturers" of plated spoons and forks was held to contain no substantial misrepresentation, it appearing that those persons superintended the manufactory, directed as to the style and quality of the goods, and had the general supervision of the manufacturing and sale thereof. "Such representation . . . was in an important sense true. All that the public or the trade cared to know was that the goods were the production of their skill and experience." Meriden Britannia Co. v. Parker, 39 Conn. 450.

Taxation.—One who slaughters hogs and converts the flesh into bacon, lard, etc., is taxable as a manufacturer. Engle v. Sohn, 41 Ohio St. 691. The court said: "The occupation of the defendants in error was, we think, essentially that of manufacturers. By the use of tools, implements and mechanical devices; by subjecting the slaughtered animals to divers processes, running, some of them, through several months; by a combination with various materials and ingredients requiring skill, care and attention, products were obtained in the form of pork, lard and cured meats, to which may appropriately be applied the term 'manufactured articles.' The original substance, though not destroyed, was so transformed through art and labor that without previous knowledge it could not have been recognized in the new shape it assumed, or in the new uses to which it was applied. One who produces such results may as correctly be designated a manufacturer as he who buys lumber and planes, tongues, grooves, or otherwise dresses the same; or as he who by a simple process makes sheets of batting from cotton; or as he who buys fruit and preserves the same by canning—all of whom have been held to be manufacturers and taxed as such, under the Internal Revenue laws of the United States. 9 Int. Rev. Rec.

193; 5 Id. 180; Int. Rev. Dec. 117, No. 171. And as to the article of ice, to which reference has been made in argument, he is not inappropriately termed a manufacturer who produces artificial ice by the method of vaporization and expansion. The dressed lumber, cotton batting, canned fruits and artificial ice, though but slightly changed from the original material, could not, we think, be properly classed as manufactured goods. Indeed, the term manufacture has been extended to include every object upon which art or skill can be exercised, so as to afford products fabricated by the hand of man, or by the labor which he directs. Curtis on Pat., § 74. . . . These views, it may be urged, are in conflict with the decision of the court in Jackson v. State, 15 Ohio 652. The facts in that case appear to be meagerly reported. The appellant was a citizen of the State of Pennsylvania, 'engaged in the business of purchasing, slaughtering and packing pork for transportation and sale, at Columbus, Ohio. HITCHCOCK, J., was 'not prepared to say' that a person so engaged was a manufacturer within the meaning of the statute. We are, however, satisfied that if the facts had been the same as in the case at bar, if there had been in the year 1846 the same perfection in the art of packing and curing meats which has since been reached and now exists, Jackson would have been held to be a manufacturer and not a merchant."

An ice cream confectioner is not a manufacturer so as to be exempted from taxation. City of New Orleans v. Manessier, 32 La. An. 1075. "We cannot assent to the proposition that a person making and selling ice cream is a manufacturer in the sense of the law, or in any other sense of the word. The attempt to magnify a confectionery, which is defendant's business, into a manufacture, must fail. We are told that anyone seeing the steam engine, complicated apparatus, and large force needed to produce defendant's goods, would at once conclude that he is a manufacturer. With as much force it might be said that anyone visiting the mammoth kitchen of the Grand Union Hotel at Saratoga, together with their myriads of employes, and their colossal apparatus, would at once magnify the cooks and pantrymen into manufacturers."

MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS.

- I. Definition, 269.
- II. Organization, 270.
 - 1. What Companies May be Formed Under Manufacturing Acts, 270.
 - 2. Compliance with Incorporation Law, 271.
 - 3. Capital Stock, 271.
- III. Powers, 272.
 - 1. Mortgages, 272.
 - 2. Sale and Transfer of Goods, 274.
 - 3. Stock and Stockholders, 274.
 - 4. Assignment for Benefit of Creditors, 275.
 - 5. Other Powers, 275.
- IV. Officers and Agents, 277.
 - 1. Generally, 277.
 - 2. Powers, 277.
 - 3. Individual Liability of Trustees, 279.
 - (a) To Whom Liable, 279.
 - (b) Who Is Liable, and How, 280.
 - (c) For What Trustee Is Liable, 280.
 - (d) Enforcement of Liability, 282.
 - 4. Individual Liability in Respect to Filing Certificates and Reports, 284.
 - (a) Generally, 284.
 - (b) When Liability Is Incurred, 285.
 - (c) What Officers Are Liable—Continuance and Creation of Liability, 289.
 - (d) Who May Enforce Liability, 290.
 - (e) Extent and Nature of Liability, 290.
 - (f) Enforcement of Liability, 291.
- V. Individual Liability of Stockholders, 294.
 - 1. Who Are Liable, 294.
 - 2. Who May Enforce Liability, 298.
 - 3. Extent and Nature of Liability, 299.
 - (a) To Creditors, 299.
 - (b) To Laborers and Servants, 305.
 - 4. Contribution Among Stockholders, 306.
 - 5. Defences, 307.
 - 6. Actions to Enforce Liability, 309.
- VI. Action by Stockholder Against Company, 311.
- VII. Municipal Aid, 311.
- VIII. Taxation, 311.
- IX. Dissolution, 313.

I. DEFINITION.—Literally speaking, a manufacturing corporation is a corporation engaged in the production of some article, thing or object, by skill or labor, out of raw material, or from matter which has already been subjected to artificial forces, or to which something has been added to change its natural condition.¹ The meaning of the words are not always thus confined, however. Several of the States have enacted laws for the incorporation of manufacturing companies; and it is concerning corporations organized under these acts that this article will treat.

1. See People v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 99 N. Y. 181; 9 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 418.

Dock Company.—A corporation created by chapter 170 N. Y. Laws of 1843, "for the purpose of constructing, using and providing one or more dry docks or wet docks or other convenient structure for building, raising and repairing and coppering vessels and steamers of every description," is not a manufacturing company. People v. New York Floating Dry Dock Co., 63 How. (N.

Y.) 451; 92 N. Y. 487; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 455.

A mining corporation is not a manufacturing corporation within Mass. St. 1862, ch. 218, defining and regulating the enforcement of the liabilities of officers and stockholders of manufacturing corporations. Byers v. Franklin Coal Co., 106 Mass. 131.

A corporation organized under the laws of Utah for the purposes of conducting a general mining business in all its branches, mining ore and manufacturing it into bullion, which was first shipped to Chicago and smelted and refined, and then to the city of New York, where it was assayed, for which the company paid two per cent., and the receipts issued for the silver by the assay office were sold, and so much as were not used were transmitted to Utah and Chicago, is not engaged in "manufacturing within this State," so as to exempt it from taxation under the N. Y. act of 1881, ch. 361; People v. Horn Silver Mining Co., 105 N. Y. 76; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 210.

II. ORGANIZATION—1. What Companies May be Formed Under Manufacturing Acts.—The manufacture of lumber, flour and meal, is within the meaning of an act authorizing the formation of corporations for manufacturing, agricultural, mining or mechanical purposes.¹ And the gathering, storing and vending of ice is a manufacturing business within the meaning of such a statute.²

A gas company, organized under chapter 37 N. Y. Laws of 1848, is a manufacturing company within the meaning of the exemption contained in section 3, chapter 542, Laws of 1880. Nassau Gaslight Co. v. City of Brooklyn, 25 Hun (N. Y.) 567; 89 N. Y. 409.

Oil Company.—A corporation organized under Mass. Gen. Stat., ch. 61, for the purpose specified in the articles of association, of "refining and preparing for use oil, coal and other minerals," is a manufacturing corporation within the meaning of Stat. 1862, ch. 218 (which makes members of such corporations liable for corporate debts) without regard to what other purposes are also specified. Hawes v. Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Co., 101 Mass. 385.

Printing and Publishing Company.—A company incorporated for the purpose of carrying on the business of printing and publishing a daily newspaper and general jobbing, printing and publishing, whose capital is wholly employed in publishing a newspaper for circulation, is not a manufacturing company within the meaning of the exemption in the fourth section of the New Jersey act of 1884. But a company incorporated to "conduct and prosecute the business of book printing and job printing, engraving, electrotyping and lithographing," whose capital is invested in the prosecution of that business, and which manufactures on orders only, is a manufacturing company within the meaning of that section. State v. State Board of Assessors, 47 N. J. L. 36; 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 403.

An aqueduct company is not a manufacturing corporation. Dudley v. Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Co., 100 Mass. 183.

See also supra, II 1, WHAT CORPORATIONS MAY BE ORGANIZED UNDER MANUFACTURING ACTS.

1. Cross v. Pinckneyville Mill Co., 17 Ill. 54.

But in Mohr v. Minnesota Elevator Co., 40 Minn. 343; 41 N. W. Rep. 1074; 27 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 303, it was held that where the principal business of a corporation is the storing, buying and selling grain, building and operating grain warehouses, and as incidental, dealing in coal, lime and cement, and the manufacture of flour and feed which the corporation also engaged in formed but an extremely small part of the company's business, the corporation is not one which may be incorporated under the Minnesota statutes relative to the incorporation of companies for manufacturing or mechanical purposes.

2. Under a statute requiring the articles of association of a corporation to state distinctly and definitely the purpose for which the same is formed, articles setting forth that respondents and others are incorporated "for the purpose of putting up, packing and manufacturing for market Detroit river and lake ice, and distributing and selling the same," set forth a purpose such as the statute authorizes the formation of corporations to carry on; and it is not necessary to state the means or methods of manufacture. Atty. Gen. v. Lorman, 59 Mich. 157; 60 Am. Rep. 287. Compare People v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 99 N. Y. 181; 9 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 418.

Ice companies, gas companies and water companies intended to supply a city, respectively, with ice, gas and water, are within the meaning of Cal. act of 1853, providing for the formation of corporations for manufacturing etc. purposes, "or for the purpose of engaging in any species of trade or commerce, foreign or domestic." Heyneman v. Blake, 19 Cal. 579.

Mercantile Corporations.—Pub. Acts

But in Minnesota, no corporation can be organized under such an act except for an exclusively manufacturing or mechanical business.¹

Stockholders in corporations cannot exempt themselves from the rule of personal liability properly applicable to them by organizing under a manufacturing act when it is evident from the character of the business transacted that but a trifling part of it is manufacturing, and that the primary object of the organization is the carrying on of business foreign to manufacturing.²

2. Compliance with Incorporation Law.—When the requirements prescribed by a general incorporation law as necessary to the incorporation of a manufacturing company have been complied with, and a certificate is recorded, the persons signing the same become a body corporate as effectually as if the franchise had been granted directly by the State.³

3. Capital Stock.—Capital stock is usually essential to the existence of a manufacturing corporation.⁴ The integral parts of such a corporation are at least three stockholders.⁵ In New York, the certificate as to the payment of the capital stock must be sworn to; a mere acknowledgment thereof is not sufficient.⁶ It is frequently allowed that stock may be issued for the pur-

Mich. 1881, No. 274, amending Public Acts 1875, No. 187, so as to include corporations for mercantile business, the title of the amended act being "An act for the incorporation of manufacturing companies," and being unchanged, is void as being in violation of const. Mich., art. 4, § 20, providing that no law shall embrace more than one object, which shall be set forth in its title. Eaton v. Walker (Mich.), 43 N. W. Rep. 638; 27 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 310.

1. If the purpose for which a corporation is formed, as stated in its articles of association, is to carry on a manufacturing or mechanical business, and also some other and distinct kind of business not properly incidental to or connected with the former, it will belong to the class of corporations authorized to be formed under title 2, ch. 34, Minn. Gen. Stat. (§§ 109-119), although the articles recite that it is formed under the manufacturing act of 1873. State v. Minnesota Thresher Mfg. Co., 40 Minn. 213; 27 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 286.

2. Mohr v. Minnesota Elevator Co., 40 Minn. 343; 27 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 303.

3. Hager v. Cleveland, 36 Md. 476.

4. But in Massachusetts it has been held not necessary in order to maintain an action on a demand against a company acting as a manufacturing corporation, that the plaintiff should prove that the corporation was organized and divided its stock, etc., conformably to the directions of Mass. Rev. Stat., ch. 38, §§ 4, 9, and ch. 44, § 3. It is, in general, sufficient to give in evidence the act of incorporation, and the actual use of the powers and privileges of an incorporated company, under the name designated in the act. Narragansett Bank v. Atlantic Silk Co., 3 Metc. (Mass.) 282.

The subscribers for, and holders of, stock in a manufacturing corporation, which has been defectively organized, and transacted business under such defective organization, do not thereby become partners, general or special, in such business; and the records of such supposed corporation are not admissible against the members, as evidence of any agreement or understanding among them, as to their own rights and liabilities as members of a partnership, or of the extent of authority given to their general agent, as agent of a partnership. Fay v. Noble, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 188.

5. Stone v. Flagg, 72 Ill. 397.

6. Brown v. Smith, 13 Hun (N. Y.) 408.

chase of property, but this does not dispense with the necessity of filing a certificate of the payment of the whole of the capital stock;¹ nor does it authorize the issue of stock in addition to the capital stock stated in the certificate of organization.² But if the act contemplates payment of subscriptions in money, subscribers are not allowed to pay their subscriptions in property.³ Assessments on the stock can only be made in accordance with the provisions of the charter.⁴

III. POWERS—1. Mortgages.—Manufacturing corporations generally possess the same power to mortgage their property as is given to other corporations.⁵ The particular property which

1. Brown v. Torrey, 10 J. & S. (N. Y.) 1.

A and his associates, having been incorporated by act of the legislature, as a manufacturing corporation, met and agreed to accept the act, and fixed the proportions in which the shares should be distributed, and also agreed that the corporation should purchase certain lands of A, with the buildings and machinery thereon, then unfinished, but to be completed by A. The corporation was afterwards organized, and A conveyed the lands to them; but before he had finished the buildings and machinery, or had paid all the instalments on his shares, and before any certificate had been issued to him, he became insolvent, and proceedings in insolvency were instituted. Held, that the corporation had no lien on the shares of A, for sums expended by them, before or after he became insolvent, in finishing said buildings and machinery. Massachusetts Iron Co. v. Hooper, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 183.

2. The provisions of section 2, of the New York act of 1853 (ch. 333 of the Laws of 1853), amending the act of 1848 (ch. 40 of the Laws of 1848), authorizing the formation of corporations for manufacturing and other purposes, does not authorize the issue of stock, in addition to the capital stock stated in the certificate of organization, and any increase thereof made pursuant to the act of 1848. It simply authorizes the payment for such stock in property necessary for the business of the company instead of in cash; and under its provisions the whole capital stock can be paid for in property, and when so paid for, the owner thereof is not liable to the creditors of the company under section 10 of the act of 1848. Schenck v. Andrews, 46 N. Y. 589.

3 The Pennsylvania act of July 18th,

1863, contemplates a payment of subscriptions in money; an arrangement whereby two of the original promoters put in certain real estate at a large advance on its cost, and are credited with the difference on account of stock, is invalid as against other stockholders. Bailey v. Pittsburgh etc. Co., 69 Pa. St. 334.

4. A clause in the charter of a manufacturing corporation, "that the shares in said capital stock shall not be liable to assessment after the capital stock so fixed in amount as aforesaid has been paid in, except in equal proportions, and by the consent of the stockholders owning at least three fourths of the shares of the capital stock of the corporation," authorizes a further assessment of paid stock, only upon the basis that the capital stock, fixed in amount by the charter, has been subscribed for and actually paid in. Atlantic De Laine Co. v. Mason, 5 R. I. 463.

Compelling Agent to Enforce Contribution.—Where the proper agents of a manufacturing corporation, in New York, neglect to call in debts due by the stockholders, so as to enable it to pay its debts, a creditor of the corporation is entitled to a bill in chancery to compel such agents to enforce contribution from the stockholders according to their subscriptions. Briggs v. Penniman, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 395.

5. A mortgage given to a trustee for the benefit of all the creditors of the corporation, is valid. Astor v. Westchester Co., 33 Hun (N. Y.) 333; Carpenter v. Black Hawk Min. Co., 65 N. Y. 43; Lord v. Yonkers F. & G. Co., 99 N. Y. 547; Central G. M. Co. v. Platt, 3 Daly (N. Y.) 363.

When about to sell its real estate a manufacturing corporation may advance money to the purchaser for the erection of buildings, and take a mort-they may mortgage is usually designated in the act of incorporation.¹ In New York, it is essential to the validity of a mortgage by a manufacturing company that the assent of at least two thirds of the capital stock of such corporation shall first be filed.²

gage for the purchase money and the advance. Greenpoint Sugar Co. v. Whitin, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 44; 69 N. Y. 328.

Where a mortgage is given in good faith, neither the corporation itself nor its stockholders can question its validity. Carpenter v. Black Hawk Min. Co., 65 N. Y. 43; Parish v. Wheeler, 22 N. Y. 494. Neither can the validity of a mortgage be questioned against one who holds in good faith by one who takes with notice, although the assent to the execution of the mortgage required of the stockholders has not been filed. Rochester Savings Bank v. Averell, 96 N. Y. 467. But a receiver of the corporation may question the validity of such a mortgage. Astor v. Westchester Co., 33 Hun (N. Y.) 333; Vail v. Hamilton, 85 N. Y. 453.

The "franchises, privileges, rights and liberties," which under the New York act of 1878, a manufacturing corporation is authorized to mortgage, to secure the payment of a debt, upon consent of the requisite number of stockholders, and which are not included in a consent to mortgage the real and personal estate of the corporation, are the corporate rights and franchises which became vested in the company by virtue of its organization as a corporation. Those deeds do not include patent rights, licences, easements or privileges acquired by the company after its incorporation, either from individuals or other corporations; these are in the nature of property, and are, therefore, included in a consent to mortgage the corporate property. Lord v. Yonkers Fuel and Gas Co., 101 N. Y. 614.

A loan of money to pay debts of a manufacturing corporation where the money is so applied is a debt contracted in the business for which the corporation was organized, and may be secured by mortgage. Rochester Savings Bank v. Averell, 96 N. Y. 467.

1. A mining company organized under the New York act of 1848, chapter 40, upon filing the assent in writing of two thirds of its stockholders may mortgage its real estate to secure payment of its debts, but not to raise money to carry on its operations. If intended to secure bonds raised for both purposes it is only void pro tanto. A separate mortgage need not be made to each creditor. Such mortgage is valid though it purport to cover the franchises and personal property of the corporation, and though it include after acquired real estate. Carpenter v. Black Hawk Gold Min. Co., 65 N. Y. 43.

A franchise to use the streets may be mortgaged. City of Brooklyn v. Jourdain, 7 Abb. (N. Y.) N. C. 23.

2. The filing of the assent of the stockholders and the execution of the mortgage may be contemporaneous, the assent and the mortgage being substantially one transaction. Greenpoint Sugar Co. v. Whitin, 69 N. Y. 328.

The assent is valid although there has been no meeting of the stockholders. Greenpoint Sugar Co. v. Whitin, 69 N. Y. 328.

The New York act required the assent of two thirds of the stockholders, but "two thirds" in this connection means two thirds of the stock issued. Vail v. Hamilton, 85 N. Y. 453; Greenpoint Sugar Co. v. Whitin, 69 N. Y. 328.

It is essential to the validity of the assent of the stockholders that the amount of the mortgage should be stated therein. Greenpoint Sugar Co. v. Whitin, 69 N. Y. 328.

Where a corporation buys real estate it has been held that a purchase money mortgage given by it without the assent of the stockholders is valid. Coman v. Lakey, 80 N. Y. 345; Greenpoint Sugar Co. v. Whitin, 69 N. Y. 328. A chattel mortgage also to secure purchase money given without the assent of the stockholders has been sustained as an equitable lien. Coman v. Lakey, 80 N. Y. 345. But as a general rule the assent of the stockholders is an indispensable condition to the creation of a valid mortgage. Rochester Savings Bank v. Averell, 96 N. Y. 467.

Where a corporation is itself the owner of a portion of its stock, it cannot give assent for the shares so owned by it to make up the requisite two thirds; nor can the assenting stock

2. Sale and Transfer of Goods.—A single and isolated act of selling outside of the legitimate business of the company is not illegal; it will be presumed to have been done in the exercise of its legitimate corporate powers.¹ And where the corporation has borrowed money upon an agreement to secure the same by a pledge of the goods, it may subsequently, while it has but two trustees, transfer such property to the lender, and the latter will acquire a good title.² A manufacturing company has also been held authorized to purchase goods of the kind which it was incorporated to manufacture.³

3. Stock and Stockholders.—It has been held, in New York, that a manufacturing corporation has no implied power to create a lien on its stock for a debt due from a stockholder.⁴ But a holders be deemed to represent a proportional of the stock owned by the corporation. Vail v. Hamilton, 85 N. Y. 453.

Where, however, a mortgage has been executed without such assent it is validated by a subsequent assent where there are no intervening rights; such assent makes the instrument, as of the time it is given, a valid mortgage. The filing of the assent in the office of the clerk of the county where the mortgaged property is situated is not an indispensable condition to the validity of the mortgage; as against a subsequent mortgagee or purchaser with notice, the mortgage is valid. Rochester Savings Bank v. Averell, 96 N. Y. 467.

It will be presumed in the absence of proof that the required assent was obtained and filed; and one who is seeking to set aside a mortgage on the ground that the assent of the stockholders was not obtained must prove that the mortgage was neither given to secure a debt of the company nor that the money obtained, was used to pay debts. A judgment of foreclosure, unless impeached, is conclusive against the corporation and its stockholders as to the validity of the mortgage, and the burden of impeaching it is upon one who denies its validity. Denike v. New York R. L. & C. Co., 80 N. Y. 599.

1. Such a sale may be made upon condition, and the condition will be binding upon the corporation. De Groof v. American Linen Thread Co., 21 N. Y. 124.

Where the corporate powers are the manufacturing every variety of firearms and other implements of war applicable to the use of firearms, and all kinds of machinery adapted to the construction thereof, they do not include a power to manufacture and deliver circular railroad locks. Whitney Arms Co. v. Barlow, 38 N. Y. Super. Ct. 554.

2. Castle v. Lewis, 13 Hun (N. Y.) 298.

3. A company newly incorporated "for the purpose of manufacturing and selling glass," contracted to purchase glassware, for the purpose of keeping up their stock, and supplying customers until the works which they bought from the company preceding them were put in repair; held that the contract was not ultra vires. Lyndeborough Glass Co. v. Massachusetts Glass Co., 111 Mass. 315.

A glass manufacturing company-keeping store and selling goods to employees, is authorized to recover an account for goods sold and delivered. Chester Glass Co. v. Dewey, 16 Mass. 94.

4. In New York, a manufacturing corporation, organized under the general Manufacturing law (Laws 1848, ch. 40) has no power, in the absence of a provision to that effect in its articles of association, to create or declare a lien upon its stock by by-law, or to refuse to permit a transfer until the indebtedness of the stockholder to the company is paid, and a bona fide purchaser of stock, without knowledge or notice of such a by-law, is not bound thereby, and can compel the transfer to him upon the books of the corporation of the stock purchased. The policy of the law is to protect a bona fide vendee of shares of stock against secret or equitable claims thereto of one who has endowed the vendor with the indicia of ownership. And a power to abridge the right of transfer will not be inferred from a statutory provision unless it cannot otherwise have efficacy, and un-manufacturing company may, by agreement with a stockholder, acquire a valid lien upon his stock to secure his obligation to the company.¹ One manufacturing company may take shares of another in payment of a debt.²

It has been held, in Connecticut, that a minority of the stockholders of a manufacturing corporation cannot enjoin the company against erecting a new factory, and compel the distribution of the surplus which it was proposed to use in that way.³

4. Assignment for Benefit of Creditors.—An assignment for the benefit of creditors by a manufacturing corporation in contemplation of insolvency has been held to be void in New York.⁴ But in Massachusetts, the directors of an insolvent manufacturing corporation have authority to convey all the property of the corporation to one of its creditors upon condition that he shall apply the property to the payment of his claim and pay over the surplus, if any, to the treasurer of the corporation; and such conveyance is not fraudulent as against other creditors, by reason of its tendency to give a preference.⁵

5. Other Powers.⁶—Where a company was formed for the purpose of manufacturing a patent machine, it is not ultra vires to less it present so strong a probability of intention that the contrary cannot be supposed. Driscoll v. West Bradley etc. Mfg. Co., 59 N. Y. 96.

1. Buckmaster v. Consumers' Ice Co., 5 Daly (N. Y.) 313.

2. Howe v. Boston Carpet Co., 16 Gray (Mass.) 493.

3. Where a manufacturing corporation had a large surplus above its stated capital, which the directors, with the concurrence of a majority of the stockholders, were about using for the purpose of extending the business of the company and erecting an additional factory against the objection of a minority of the stockholders, but it appeared that the business as extended was within the powers of the corporation, and that the stated capital was much less than the amount actually used and necessary for its ordinary operations. Held, on a bill brought by the dissenting minority praying for an order that the surplus be divided among the stockholders, and that the company be enjoined against erecting the new factory, and that the facts were not such as to require the interposition of the court in behalf of the minority. Pratt v. Pratt, 33 Conn. 446.

Purchase of Company's Own Shares.—A limited company was incorporated under the English Joint Stock Companies acts, with the objects, as stated in its memorandum, of acquiring and carrying on a manufacturing business, and any other business and transactions which the company might consider to be in any way conducive or auxiliary thereto or in any way connected therewith. The articles authorized the company to purchase its own shares. The company having gone into liquidation, a former shareholder made a claim against the company for the balance of the price of his shares sold by him to the company before the liquidation and not wholly paid for. Held, that such a company, having no power under the acts to purchase its own shares, the purchase was ultra vires, and the claim must fail. Trevor v. Whitworth, L. R., 12 App. Cas. 409; 57 L. J., Ch. D. 28; 57 L. T., N. S. 457; 36 Week. Rep. 145.

4. Sibell v. Remsen, 33 N. Y. 95. In this case the court said: "The assignment under which the plaintiff claims was made in contemplation of insolvency by a manufacturing corporation organized under the general act of 1848. It falls directly within the prohibition of the statute which condemns such instruments as utterly void. (1 R. S. 603, § 4; Harris v. Thompson, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 62; Robinson v. Bank of Attica, 21 N. Y. 406.)"

5. Sargent v. Webster, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 497.

6. In Maine, manufacturing corporations "incorporated by general law," purchase the patent.¹ But a manufacturing corporation has been held not authorized to form a partnership with an individual.² The note of a manufacturing company, in the hands of a holder in good faith, for value, who took it before maturity, and without knowledge that the maker had not received full consideration, cannot be enforced against the corporation, although it was made as an accommodation note.³ A manufacturing corporation may temporarily lease its property to some person who will continue and carry on its business.⁴ But as a manufacturing company cannot, by lease from a railroad company, acquire the right of eminent domain, a municipal council cannot authorize it to build a railroad track on a street, such track being shown to be a nuisance.⁵ And a corporation chartered for a manufacturing busiunder the provisions of Me. Rev. Stat., ch. 48, §§ 18, 19, 20, stand on an equality with those "incorporated by a special act" as to the rights and powers conferred, and the duties, obligations and liabilities imposed by Me. Rev. Stat., ch. 46, 48. Poor v. Willoughby, 64 Me. 379.

1. In re British & Foreign Cork Co., L. R., 1 Eq. 231. And see Gleadow v. Hull Glass Co., 19 L. J., Ch. Div. 44; Dorsey etc. Rake Co. v. Marsh, 6 Fish. Pat. Cas. 387.

2. Whittenton Mills v. Upton, 10 Gray (Mass.) 582. A manufacturing corporation and an individual who have actually made a contract of partnership, and, either with or without the assent of all the stockholders of the corporation, acted and held themselves out to third persons as copartners for many years, and contracted debts as such, cannot, upon the petition of such individual, be put into insolvency as a partnership under Stats. 1838, ch. 163, and 1851, ch. 327; and proceedings in insolvency so instituted will be suspended by this court upon the application of the corporation. Whittenton Mills v. Upton, 10 Gray (Mass.) 582.

3. Bird v. Daggett, 97 Mass. 494; Monument Bank v. Globe Works, 101 Mass. 57.

A corporation chartered for the sole purpose of "manufacturing and repairing machinery," and prohibited from contracting any debt without the written consent of its board of directors, assumed to act as A's agent in making sales of A's machinery, and took a note from a purchaser of such machinery. Held, in a suit on the note against the maker, and against the corporation as endorser, that the transaction was ultra vires, and that the note acquired no validity from its endorsement by the corporation to A, who was fully cognizant of all the facts attending its creation. Westinghouse Machine Co. v. Wilkinson, 79 Ala. 312.

Note Not Signed by Secretary.—A by-law of a manufacturing corporation, adopted soon after its organization, but which had never been followed, provided that the obligations of the corporation should be signed by the secretary, but did not provide that the lack of his signature should render the instrument void. Held, that the signature of the secretary was not essential to the validity of a mortgage and notes signed by the president in the name of the corporation. Martin v. Niagara Falls Paper Mfg. Co., 51 N. Y. Supm. (44 Hun) 130.

Notes of Company with Three Trustees.—Notes executed by a manufacturing company are not invalidated by the fact that, when they were given, the company had but two trustees and stockholders—the president and his daughter—notwithstanding a provision of the statute that the affairs of every such corporation shall be managed by not less than three trustees, who shall be stockholders. (N. Y. L. 1848, ch. 40, § 3); such provision being for the protection and benefit of the stockholders, they may dispense with it by unanimous consent. Martin v. Niagara Falls Paper Mfg. Co., 51 N. Y. Supm. (44 Hun) 130.

4. Denike v. New York & R. L. & C. Co., 80 N. Y. 599.

If, however, such a lease is unlawful, it does not give a portion of the stockholders a standing in a court of equity to ask for a dissolution of the corporation. Id.

5. Appeal of Hartman Steel Co., ness has not power to purchase bank stock for the purpose of carrying on or controlling the banking business.¹

There is no legal objection to the manufacture, by a single corporation, of the greatest variety of articles, if the purpose be "distinctly and definitely specified" in the articles of association.²

IV. OFFICERS AND AGENTS—1. Generally.—In Indiana, it is held that the directors of an incorporated manufacturing company are officers and within the meaning of the act providing for the incorporation of such companies.³ Unless the by-laws of a manufacturing company, or a statute, expressly provide otherwise, the same person may be treasurer and director, and a majority of the directors constitute a quorum, and a majority of a quorum have authority to decide any question upon which they can act.⁴ The secretary of a Connecticut manufacturing company is not required to reside within the State.⁵

2. Powers.—It has been held that the president of a manufacturing corporation has no power merely as a president to give a confession of judgment.⁶ Nor can he bind the corporation by a purchase of goods, required in its business, when there is a resolution upon the books of the corporation forbidding the same, even though the seller had no notice thereof.⁷ Nor has the president authority as such to commence an action in the name of the corporation.⁸

The vice president and secretary of a manufacturing corporation, although the active managers of the business of the corporation, superintending the erection of its buildings, making its contracts and signing its drafts, checks and notes, have not, by virtue thereof, authority to bind the corporation by a promise to pay the debts of another and distinct corporation.⁹

Limited. (Penn. 1889), 18 Atl. Rep. 553.

1. Sumner v. Marcy, 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 105.

2. Bird v. Daggett, 97 Mass. 494.

3. Gaff v. Theis, 33 Ind. 307.

Company Must Act by Its Board.—A and B owning a manufacturing establishment obtained an act incorporating a company, and subscribed each for half of the stock, except four shares, which were put in the names of four other persons, for the purpose of having a sufficient number of persons to organize under the act. After the organization of the company, by the election of directors, A and B continued to conduct the business as before the act, by and between themselves as individuals, the company not acting by its board. Held, that they were bound to conduct their business as a corporation, and were to be governed by the law of corporations. Vandyke v. Brown, 8 N. J. Eq. (4 Halst.) 657.

4. Sargent v. Webster, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 497.

5. McCall v. Byram Mfg. Co., 6 Conn. 428.

6. Thew v. Porcelain Mfg. Co., 5 S. Car. 415.

7. This is so unless by a well recognized general course of dealing the president has been held out to the community as possessed of such authority. Westerfield v. Radde, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 326. And see Rathburn v. Snow, 22 N. Y. St. Rep. 227.

8. Ashuelot Mfg. Co. v. Marsh, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 507.

9. Rahm v. King Wrought etc. Mfg., 16 Kan. 277.

Where the vice president of a manufacturing corporation, after it had become insolvent, gave a note to his clerk, under the seal of the corporation, for an alleged debt due to himself, for the purpose of charging the stockholders of the company personally

In Massachusetts, it is held that the treasurer of a manufacturing corporation has authority, by virtue of his office, to give negotiable notes in the prosecution of the business of the company, but not for the accommodation of third persons.¹

The general agent of a manufacturing company is not authorized, without a special power, to transfer by deed the real estate of the company;² and a managing agent of such a company has been held authorized to employ workmen to carry on the business of the corporation, and to pay them with its funds.³ The agent of a manufacturing corporation is not necessarily authorized to make a note on behalf of the corporation. To render such a note valid as against the company, the powers of the agent must be shown.⁴ The general agent may call a meeting of the corpowith the payment of the note, held, that the note was not evidence of a debt due to the officer of the company who affixed the seal of the corporation thereto; and that the persons to whom he had transferred the note by assignment could not recover the amount thereof from the stockholders, after the dissolution of the corporation, without proving that it was given for a debt actually due. Bonaffe v. Fowler, 7 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 576.

1. Ex parte Estabrook, 2 Low. (U. S.) 547.

And a note given by such an officer, without authority, is valid in the hands of an innocent purchaser for value before maturity. Ib.

But the treasurer of a manufacturing corporation has no authority to release a claim for a loss under a policy of insurance obtained by him in behalf of the corporation. E. Carver Co. v. Mfrs. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 214.

2. Therefore, when a person executed a deed in behalf of a manufacturing company, and therein declared that he was empowered, by a vote of the company, to execute such deed, it was held that he was thereby estopped to deny that he was thus empowered. Stow v. Wyse, 7 Conn. 214.

Creation of Lien on Personality.—Where a manufacturing corporation has a board of directors, under whose general supervision and control the business is transacted, and an agent, who attends to the daily routine of business, and its management under all ordinary circumstances, the agent has no authority, by virtue merely of his agency, to conclude a contract creating a general lien upon the personal property of the company, to secure money borrowed, but such contract must receive the approval of the board of directors. Whitwell v. Warner, 20 Vt. 425.

3. The agent of a manufacturing corporation was empowered by its by-laws to manage the affairs of the corporation committed to his care, and to exercise the powers committed to him according to his best ability and discretion, and promptly to collect all assessments and other sums that should become due to the corporation, and to disburse them according to the order of the board of directors, who were made a board of control over him. Held, that the agent, if the board of directors did not interpose to control his proceedings, had authority to employ workmen to carry on the business of the corporation, and to pay them with its funds, or, not being in funds, to give the notes of the corporation in payment. Bates v. Keith Iron Co., 7 Metc. (Mass.) 224.

4. Benedict v. Lansing, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 283.

Where the agent of a manufacturing corporation was authorized, by a vote of the directors, to raise money for his own use, upon the credit of the company, and to give therefor a "company note," it was held that the directors had not exceeded their authority derived from the general statutes regulating manufacturing corporations. Held also, that the term "company notes" was not used in the vote to designate a technical promissory note, and that a bill of exchange drawn by the agent in the name of the company, upon the dishonor of which they could not be liable for any damages, was a company note, within the meaning of the vote. Tripp v. Swanzy Paper Co., 13 Pick. (Mass.) 291.

ration without any special authority, in the absence of any statute or by law providing for the calling of meetings.¹

The directors of a manufacturing corporation, as the best means of continuing the business and pursuant to the votes of a majority of the stockholders, though against the protest of a minority, may sell the whole property of the corporation to a new corporation, taking payment in shares of the new corporation, to be distributed among those of the old stockholders who are willing to take them.²

3. Individual Liability of Trustees—(a) To Whom Liable.—The statutes imposing an individual liability upon the trustees of a manufacturing corporation in certain cases usually provide that such liability is to the creditors of the company.³ Accordingly, a trustee cannot be made liable to one to whom the bonds of the company have been issued as a mere gratuity; he is not a creditor.⁴ A creditor who is also a stockholder may recover against a trustee in the absence of any proof that the plaintiff was personally liable for the debts of the company.⁵

The clerk of a corporation borrowed a sum of money in the name of the corporation, without authority from the corporation, and absconded with it. It appeared that, in two or three previous instances, he had borrowed money of other persons in the name of the corporation, of which the plaintiff had no knowledge, which money was repaid by another clerk, it having been applied to the use of the company. Held, that the corporation was not liable. Martin v. G. F. Mfg. Co., 9 N. H. 51.

The authority of the president, who was also general manager and financial agent of a manufacturing corporation, and who had control of all the corporate stock, to borrow money for the corporation, may be inferred from his exclusive control and management of the affairs of the company as though they were part of his personal and private concerns, for a period sufficiently long to establish a settled course of business; and a contract subsequently made by the corporation, by its president, with the lender, on a new consideration, adjusting the amount due on certain notes given for money so loaned, and recognizing the authority of the president to bind the company in future transactions, which contract is entered into pursuant to a resolution adopted by the board of trustees, who were also the sole stockholders, is a ratification of his act in giving the notes. Martin v. Niagara Falls Paper Mfg. Co., 51 N. Y. Supm. (44 Hun) 130.

Persons dealing with a manufacturing and trading corporation organized under the laws of Massachusetts, are not bound by the specifically enumerated powers of the officers as contained in the by-laws, but as against third persons. Such officers shall be taken to have the authority which their designations ordinarily imply; the treasurer to do acts relating to their finances, the secretary to keep records, the general agent to manage the business, for which the corporation is chartered; and such acts are binding upon a corporation without express authority; and are not invalid merely because certain special and enumerated powers are conferred upon such officers by the by-laws, but which do not exclude other powers. Fay v. Noble, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 1.

1. Stebbins v. Merritt, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 27.

2. Treadwell v. Salisbury Mfg. Co., 7 Gray (Mass.) 393.

3. Both Mass. Stat. 1870, ch. 224, § 69, —repealing a general statute under which a manufacturing corporation has been organized—and Mass. Stat. 1872, ch. 354, dissolving the corporation by name—reserve the rights of its creditors to sue the corporation upon liabilities previously incurred, for the purpose of charging its officers and stockholders. Chamberlin v. Huguenot Mfg. Co., 118 Mass. 532.

4. Norris v. DeWolf, 12 Hun (N. Y.) 606; Affirmed 76 N. Y. 597.

5. Sanborn v. Lefferts, 16 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. N. C. 42.

An action to enforce the individual liability of the trustees must usually be brought for the benefit of all the creditors.¹

(b) Who Is Liable, and How.—In an action against the trustees of a manufacturing corporation to enforce their individual liability, the plaintiff may recover against one or more severally.² The president of the company, though necessarily a trustee, must be sued as trustee and not as president.³ The same persons may be charged both as trustees and stockholders in one suit.⁴ But the recovery of a judgment against the defendant as a stockholder does not merge his liability as a trustee.⁵

In a suit to charge a trustee individually, it is not sufficient to show that he was elected; there must be proof that he assented to the election by some direct and positive act.⁶ A trustee whose term of office expires on a certain day, and who does not hold over, cannot be held liable for a subsequent default.⁷ But a trustee who, after default, retires from office, continues liable for an existing debt, and for an accruing liability, so long as he continues to act as trustee.⁸ And a trustee continues responsible, notwithstanding the expiration of his term, where no successor has been elected, and he has continued to act as trustee.⁹

(c) For What Trustee Is Liable.—An individual liability has been imposed by various statutes upon the officers and trustees of a manufacturing corporation for making a false certificate as

1. To a bill in equity under Mass. Stat. 1862, ch. 218, § 4, to enforce the liability of officers of a manufacturing corporation for its debts, an objection by one of the defendants that the bill was not brought in behalf of all the creditors of the corporation is fatal. Moore v. Reynolds, 109 Mass. 473. And the nonjoinder of the other creditors is not excused by an allegation in the bill that there are no other creditors known to the plaintiff. Pope v. Leonard, 115 Mass. 286.

2. Hoag v. La Mont, 60 N. Y. 96.

3. McHarg v. Eastman, 7 Rob. (N. Y.) 137. But under a Massachusetts statute, it appears to be otherwise. And if the property of the president of a manufacturing corporation, organized under Gen. Stat., ch. 61, is taken in satisfaction of an execution issued on a decree in equity against himself and the other officers, by which they are decreed to be personally liable to a creditor of the corporation, for neglect to file the certificates required by Stat. 1862, ch. 210, he may maintain a bill in equity against the other officers for contribution. Nickerson v. Wheeler, 118 Mass. 295.

4. Sterne v. Herman, 11 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 376. But see Mappier v.

Mortimer, 11 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 455.

Mass. Stat. 1851, ch. 315, § 3, does not authorize the levy of an execution, issued on a judgment recovered against a manufacturing corporation, on the property of an officer of the corporation, unless, if he is also a stockholder, he has been summoned and his liability established, or, if he is not a stockholder, some stockholder has been summoned and the liability of stockholders established, in the action in which judgment was recovered. Dewey v. Baker, 16 Gray (Mass.) 130.

5. Vincent v. Sands, 1 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 511.

6. Osborne & Cheesman v. Croome, 14 Hun (N. Y.) 169. Affirmed 77 N. Y. 629.

To render a stockholder, who has been elected trustee, individually liable, there must be proof of his acceptance of the office. Cameron v. Seaman, 69 N. Y. 396.

7. Wade v. Baker, 14 Hun (N. Y.) 615; 81 N. Y. 46.

8. Vincent v. Sands, 1 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 511; Reed v. Keese, 5 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 269. And see Sanborn v. Lefferts, 16 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 42.

9. Deming v. Puleston, 35 N. Y.

to the payment of the capital stock,¹ for declaring a dividend which impairs the capital,² for unlawfully increasing the company's indebtedness,³ and, under certain circumstances, for the debts of the company.⁴ A trustee cannot, however, be made

Super. Ct. (J. & S.) 309, 55 N. Y. 655.

1. Under Mass. Rev. Stat., ch. 38, § 28, the officers of a manufacturing corporation cannot be made individually liable for its debts for making a false certificate that the capital stock has been paid in, unless it is wilfully false. Stebbins v. Edmonds, 12 Gray (Mass.) 203. See INDIVIDUAL LIABILITY IN RESPECT TO FILING CERTIFICATES AND REPORTS, IV, 4, infra.

2. A common law action will not lie by the corporation against the trustees for declaring a dividend which diminishes the capital stock where they acted in good faith and no question of negligence is raised. Excelsior Petroleum Co. v. Lacey, 63 N. Y. 422.

Under what circumstances a trustee becomes personally liable for the debts of the company in consequence of the declaring of a dividend which impairs its capital. Rorke v. Thomas, 56 N. Y. 559. And as to what constitutes such a withdrawal of the capital of a manufacturing corporation, as to make the directors thereof individually liable to creditors, see Stebbins v. Cowles, 10 Conn. 399.

In Excelsior Petroleum Co. v. Embury, 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 261, the defendants, who were trustees of a manufacturing corporation organized under the act of 1848 (Laws of 1848, ch. 40), and the acts amending the same, were charged with a violation of section two of chapter eighteen, title four of the first part of the Revised Statutes (vol. 1, p. 1175, 4th ed.), in having paid dividends not from the surplus profits of the plaintiff, but by withdrawing and dividing a part of the capital stock without the consent of the legislature. Held, that the two statutes were repugnant to and in conflict with each other; and that it was not the object or meaning of the law makers to apply both statutes to trustees of a corporation created under the act of 1848. Held, also, that the legislature designed to provide, by the act of 1848 itself, for the cases in which individual liability should result from the acts prohibited. Accordingly, held that an action could not be maintained against the defendants as trustees under the provisions of the Revised Statutes.

3. To render a trustee personally liable on the ground that he has assented to an increase of the company's indebtedness beyond the amount of its capital, it must be averred that such excess was equal to the amount of the plaintiff's debt. Chambers v. Lewis, 28 N. Y. 454.

In an action by a bank receiver against certain trustees of a mill company, it appeared that the mill was indebted in excess of its capital stock to the bank; that a contract was made by which the bank agreed to treat the debt as dead or suspended, and thereafter to cash the mill paper when endorsed by one of the defendants, and the bank president individually, and that subsequent mill deposits were to be credited on the new account. They were credited on the old account and the endorsers of the paper under the new account had no notice of its dishonor. Held, that defendants were not liable under § 23, ch. 40, Laws N. Y. 1848, making trustees individually liable for indebtedness to which they may have assented in excess of the capital stock of the company, as the new paper made by the mill under the contract was paid, so far as defendants were concerned. Patterson v. Robinson (N. Y. 1889), 22 N. E. Rep. 372.

4. The trustees can only be held personally liable for debts of the company actually due, at the time of the commencement of the suit against them. Jones v. Barlow, 62 N. Y. 202.

An executory contract for the delivery of goods at a future day, does not create a debt within the meaning of the statute. Garrison v. Howe, 17 N. Y. 458; Nimmons v. Tappan, 2 S. W. (N. Y.) 652.

In proceedings under Mass. Stat. 1862, ch. 218, to enforce personal liability of officers of a manufacturing corporation, the judgment recovered against the corporation is conclusive of the existence of the debt for which it was rendered. Thayer v. New England Lithographic Co., 108 Mass. 523.

A entered into an agreement with a personally liable for the torts of the corporation.¹

(d) Enforcement of Liability.—In order to impose a personal liability upon a trustee, the plaintiff must establish a valid claim against the corporation.² But it appears that the liability of a trustee is not affected by an unsuccessful attempt to collect the corporation, of which the plaintiff was appointed receiver, to sell said corporation certain patents for one thousand shares of the company's stock, but it turned out before the consummation of the transaction that A, to secure a perfect title to one of the patents, must pay to another party $5,000. The company then adopted a resolution to pay $5,000 to A, reserving $10,000 of the preferred stock theretofore directed to issue to him under the agreement for the purchase of his property. Under this resolution the treasurer drew his check to A, and retained the $10,000 of stock. In the books of the company the treasurer entered the transaction as a loan to A. Held, that the transaction was in no sense a loan so as to attach liability upon the officers of the company for its debts, under § 14, ch. 40, New York Laws of 1848. Billings v. Trask, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 314.

The liability of directors of a manufacturing corporation under Rev. Stat., ch. 38, §§ 25, 39, 31, for the excess of its debts over its capital stock must be enforced by bill in equity, and not by action at law, if the debts for which the directors are so liable amount to more than such excess. Merchants' Bank v. Stevenson, 10 Gray (Mass.) 232. See 13 Allen (Mass.) 456.

In a suit in equity under Mass. St. 1862, ch. 218, to charge officers of a manufacturing corporation with personal liability for a debt for which judgment has been rendered against the corporation, parol evidence is admissible in connection with the record of the judgment, to identify the debt and limit it to the time of the officer's default. Norfolk v. American Steam Gas Co., 108 Mass. 404.

A sued B in a trustee process, and summoned a manufacturing corporation as his trustee. Pending this suit, B sued the corporation on the debt owing to him; the action was referred to arbitrators and an award returned for B, to which the corporation made no objection save its liability in the trustee process. A recovered judgment against B and the trustee and afterwards against the trustee in scire facias. In B's action, by agreement of the parties, he took judgment for costs only. Upon failure of the corporation to satisfy these judgments, after due proceedings under Mass. St. 1862, ch. 218, A and B joined in a bill in equity to charge its officers with personal liability thereon. Held, that they were entitled to recover the amount of the judgments, excluding costs in the scire facias; and also to recover costs in the suit in equity. Norfolk v. American Steam Gas Co., 108 Mass. 404.

Evidence of Debt—Due Bill.—In an action to charge trustees of a manufacturing corporation with a debt of the company, plaintiff offered in evidence a certificate or due bill signed for the company by their agent. The agent had been examined as a witness, and had testified to the existence of the debt, but did not recollect the exact amount, and had referred to the certificate as stating it. Held, that the certificate or due bill was admissible. Squires v. Brown, 22 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 35.

1. Esmond v. Bullard, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 65.

Under the Pa. act of 1863 (P. L. 1102), the directors cannot be made individually liable for a tort of the corporation. Roberts v. Reed, 4 W. N. C. (Pa.) 417.

2. Hill v. Frazier, 23 Pa. St. 320. A complaint against trustees is bad on demurrer if it show that the wrongful acts of the defendant were committed before the corporation incurred any obligation to the plaintiff. Ogden v. Rollo, 13 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 300.

Mass. Stat. 1862, ch. 218, § 3, providing that no stockholder or officer in a manufacturing corporation shall be held liable for its debts or contracts unless a judgment is recovered against it, etc., applies to manufacturing corporations organized under general laws as well as to those which have special charters. Peele v. Phillips, 8 Allen (Mass.) 86.

Averments in the complaint in an action against trustees of a corporation for the value of services ren-claim by suit against the corporation;¹ and they can set up no defence to the original cause of action which would not have availed the corporation.² Nor can the acting officers of a manufacturing corporation avail themselves of irregularities or informalities in the meeting at which they were chosen, to avoid personal liability for debts of the corporation.³

After the liability of a trustee has become fixed, the creditor does not release it by taking the promissory notes of the company in renewal.⁴ In Massachusetts, the officers' individual liability cannot be proved against his estate in insolvency.⁵ Whether it is necessary to join the corporation as a party in a suit to enforce an officer's liability has been variously decided in the different States.⁶ The proceedings to enforce the individual liability of the officers of a manufacturing corporation must be in strict accordance with the statute.⁷

dered by plaintiff, that plaintiff has obtained judgment in a district court, and "that the said judgment was obtained for services rendered by the plaintiff to said corporation, in publishing their advertisement," etc., specifying the amount agreed to be paid by the corporation, are merely descriptive of the judgment that was entered, and not an assertion that in fact the services were rendered; and evidence as to such services is not admissible. Tovey v. Culver, 54 N. Y. Super. (22 Jones & S.) 123.

1. Deming v. Puleston, 35 N. Y. Super. Ct. 309; affirmed 55 N. Y. 655. An action against a trustee of a manufacturing company to enforce the statutory individual liability is on the original demand, not on the judgment upon it against the company. McHarg v. Eastman, 35 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 205.

2. Whitney Arms Co. v. Barlow, 63 N. Y. 62.

Where there is proof of user and omission to file in the secretary of state's office a duplicate certificate of organization will not avail a trustee as a defence. Meriden Tool Co. v. Morgan, 1 Abb. (N. Y.) N. C. 125.

3. Thayer v. New England Lithographic Co., 108 Mass. 523.

4. Jones v. Barlow, 6 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 142.

5. Bangs v. Lincoln, 10 Gray (Mass.) 600.

6. In a suit against the directors, under the fourteenth section of the Pa. act of 1849, the company need not be joined as a defendant; the director has no right of subrogation. Hill v. Frazier, 22 Pa. St. 320.

In a bill filed, under the Pa. act of 1863, to enforce the individual liability of the officers of the company, the corporation should not be joined; the bill should be filed on behalf of the complainants and all other creditors. Sheriff v. Globe Oil Co., 1 Brewst. (Pa.) 489; Archer v. Rose, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 264; Young v. Allegheny Oil Co., 30 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 13.

But to a bill in equity under Mass. Stat. 1862, ch. 218, § 4, to enforce the liability of the officers or stockholders of a corporation for its debts, the corporation must be made a party defendant. Pope v. Leonard, 115 Mass. 286.

7. The proceedings under Mass. Stat. 1862, ch. 218, to enforce the liability of the officers of corporations, must be in strict accordance with the statute, and a return of the execution unsatisfied on the same day on which the demand thereon was made, does not make the officers liable; and it is of no avail to show that the corporation neglected to pay the debt, made no attempt to exhibit property, and had none to exhibit. Priest v. Essex Hat Mfg. Co., 115 Mass. 380.

The order of proceedings directed by Mass. Stat. 1862, ch. 218, §§ 3, 4, is to be followed whenever it is sought to charge the officers of a manufacturing corporation with personal liability for its debts, either under § 1 or otherwise. Thayer v. New Eng. Litho. Co., 108 Mass. 523.

In a bill in equity under Mass. Stat. 1862, ch. 218, § 4, to enforce the liability of the officers of a corporation, an allegation that the corporation was organized as a manufacturing corporation under Gen. Stat., ch. 61, and that at a

4. Individual Liability in Respect to Filing Certificates and Reports

—(a) Generally.—The statutes of some of the States, notably New York, impose upon the trustees of manufacturing corporations an individual liability for failure to file an annual report of the affairs of the company or for any false statement in any report or certificate required to be filed.¹ And in an action against certain meeting the said corporation was established in Boston, is a sufficient allegation that the corporation was organized and established in Boston, without showing in detail that all the preliminary steps were taken. Pope v. Salamanca Oil Co., 115 Mass. 286.

1. N. Y. Laws 1848, ch. 40, § 12, as amended by Laws 1875, ch. 510, read as follows: "Every such company shall, within twenty days from the first day of January, if a year from the time of the filing of the certificate of incorporation shall then have expired, and, if so long a time shall not have expired, then within twenty days from the first day of January in each year after the expiration of a year from the time of filing such certificate, make a report which shall be published in some newspaper published in the town, city or village, or if there be no newspaper published in said town, city or village, then in some newspaper published nearest the place where the business of the company is carried on, which shall state the amount of capital, and of the proportion actually paid in, and the amount of its existing debts, which report shall be signed by the president and a majority of the trustees, and shall be verified by the oath of the president or secretary of said company, and filed in the office of the clerk of the county where the business of the company shall be carried on, and if any of said companies shall fail so to do, all the trustees of the company shall be jointly and severally liable for all the debts of the company then existing, and for all that shall be contracted before such report shall be made; but whenever under this section a judgment shall be recovered against a trustee severally, all the trustees of the company shall contribute a ratable share of the amount paid by such trustee on such judgment, and such trustee shall have a right of action against his cotrustees, jointly or severally, to recover from them their proportion of the amount so paid on such judgment; provided that nothing in this act contained shall affect any" action now pending.

"If any certificate or report made, or public notice given, by the officers of any such company, in pursuance of the provisions of this act, shall be false in any material representation, all the officers who shall have signed the same, knowing it to be false, shall be jointly and severally liable for all the debts of the company contracted while they are stockholders or officers thereof." Laws 1848, ch. 40, § 15.

The amendment of section twelve of the New York Manufacturing act in 1875 did not relieve corporations organized, or to be organized, from filing an annual report, the purpose of the amendment being simply to absolve the company, at the occurrence of the period fixed for that purpose, from the duty of making a report, if at such time it was not yet a full year in existence. Vernon v. Palmer, 48 N. Y. Supr. (16 J. & S.) 231.

Section nineteen of the act of New Jersey relating to manufacturing corporations (Nix. Dig. 456), requires that the officers of the company shall within thirty days after the payment of the last instalment of the capital make, file and publish a certificate stating the amount of the capital fixed and paid in. Section twenty contains a like provision in case of an increase of the capital stock. Held, that under section nineteen certificates were required from time to time after the payment of the last instalment of the amount of stock fixed as that on which business should be commenced, and of the last instalment of the increase thereof between that amount and the limit of the original certificate. Quimby v. Waters, 28 N. J. L. (4 Dutch.) 533.

The New York law of 1853, ch. 333, is not affected by the law of 1875, ch. 510, amending the law of 1848, ch. 40, § 12, the cash paid in and the stock for personal property transferred to the corporation must still be specified in the annual report. Pier v. George, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 207.

But in an action to charge a trustee with the debt of a company for failure to file an annual report, it appeared that a trustee, based on an alleged neglect to publish the annual report of a manufacturing corporation, the plaintiff must prove the default and that the debt was incurred previously thereto; an admission of neglect to report in a former year is not sufficient evidence thereof.¹

(b) When Liability Is Incurred.—In order to relieve the trustees of a manufacturing corporation from personal liability in this respect, they must not only make an annual report, but it must be actually made, filed²

the company was organized September, 1865; that the bonds on which the suit was brought were given at that time payable in October, 1868; that defendant was a trustee in January, 1867; and that no report was filed within twenty days of the first day of that month, as required by the New York act of 1848, which provided that every company should "annually," within twenty days from January 1st, make a report (L. 1848, ch. 40, § 12). Held, that the statute of 1875, in amending the act of 1848, so as to require the making of a report within twenty days from January 1st, "if a year from the time of the filing of the certificate of corporation shall then have expired, and if so long a time shall not have expired, then within twenty days from the first of January in each year after the expiration of the year from the time of filing such certificate," and omitting the word "annually," repealed the penalty imposed for a failure to make the report in any one year, and the report having been duly filed in the other years, plaintiff could not recover. Carr v. Risher, 57 N. Y. Supm. (50 Hun) 147.

The defendant loaned a sum of money to the president of a corporation, taking as collateral security bonds of the corporation, of which he was the owner. The indebtedness not being paid the defendant caused the bonds to be sold at auction, and they were purchased by one C for a nominal sum, the purchase being in the interest of and for the defendant. C recovered a judgment against the plaintiff, a trustee of the corporation, for the amount of the bonds, on the ground of a failure of the trustees to file an annual report. This judgment was satisfied by C without the defendant's knowledge, and discharged of record, and a motion to set aside the satisfaction on the ground that the defendant was the real owner of the judgment, was denied. The defendant afterward recovered a judgment against the plaintiff and the other trustees for the amount of the loan, on the ground of the failure to file a report, the fact that the defendant sued in C's name and that both claims in fact belonged to the defendant, being unknown to the plaintiff and his co-trustees until long after both judgments were obtained. Held, that the defendant should be restrained from enforcing the second judgment. Roach v. Duckworth, 65 How. (N. Y.) 303, affirming s. c., 61 How. (N. Y.) 128.

1. Whitney Arms Co. v. Barlow, 68 N. Y. 34.

2. Gildersleeve v. Dixon, 6 Daly (N. Y.) 76; Cameron v. Seaman, 69 N. Y. 396; reversing 7 Hun (N. Y.) 601.

The annual report is duly filed when handed to one of the deputies in the clerk's office. Wyckoff v. Lawson, N. Y. Trans., Aug. 22nd, 1870, p. 2.

Where it appears that the report was made within twenty days, but not filed until thereafter, the enquiry is as to whether the company is in default; while the law requires the filing to be within a reasonable time after the twenty days, and this exacts prompt performance and diligent action, if the company avails itself of the usual method of performing its duty, and the performance is within a reasonable time, having regard to the nature and circumstances thereof, in the absence of anything showing want of good faith and active diligence, the trustees are not liable. Butler v. Smalley, 101 N. Y. 71.

A manufacturing corporation made and published its report within twenty days after the first day of January, 1878, but through a mistake of its secretary, to whom it was delivered for that purpose, it was not filed within that time. Upon application to the supreme court an order was granted February 13th that the report be filed nunc pro tunc, and it was filed on that day. In an action by a creditor of the corpora-and published¹ within the time named by the statute.² A report thus to be filed must comply with the statute, and must contain all the matters therein specified.³ Under the New York act, the trustees in their annual report must specify separately the amount of capital paid in cash and the amount of stock issued for property transferred to the company.⁴

tion against the trustees, held that the order did not relieve the defendants from the consequence of any default on their part, as the duty to file the report was imposed by statute, and over it the court had no jurisdiction; but that the application was an act by defendants in furtherance of their duty, and an indication of good faith; and a finding that there was neither a prompt performance nor diligent action on the part of the company with respect to the filing was error, as was also a refusal to find that whether the report was filed within a reasonable time after the expiration of the twenty days depended upon the circumstances of the case. Butler v. Smalley, 101 N. Y. 71.

If the officers of a manufacturing corporation, after neglecting, during the year succeeding an annual meeting, to make the certificate of its condition at that time, which was required by Mass. Stat. 1862, ch. 210, to be filed within thirty days afterwards, continue to act for more than thirty days after the next annual meeting, without making any certificate of its condition at either time, they are personally liable under Mass. Stat. 1863, ch. 246, § 2, for debts of the corporation contracted during these thirty days. Thayer v. New Eng. Lithographic Co., 108 Mass. 523.

1. Under Mass. Rev. Stat., ch. 38, §§ 17, 22, the notice required to be published annually by the directors of a manufacturing corporation, in order to exempt the stockholders from liability for its debts, may be published at any time within a year from the filing of the certificate of capital stock. Howe v. Boston Carpet Co., 16 Gray (Mass.) 493.

What is sufficient publication under the New York statute when no newspapers are published in the town, city or village where the business of the company is carried on. Cameron v. Seaman, 69 Hun (N. Y.) 396.

2. The requirements of the New York manufacturing act that corporations filed thereunder shall, within twenty days from the first day of January, make a report of its affairs which shall be published and filed in the county clerk's office, are not complied with by filing such report in the month of December previous and within twenty days before the first day of January. Cincinnati Cooperage Co. v. O'Keefe, 51 N. Y. Supm. (44 Hun) 64.

3. Amendment of 1875 to New York Act—Accrual of Cause of Action.—The certificate of a manufacturing company was filed October 6th, 1874. In 1875 the legislature amended the manufacturing act of 1848 so as to require such company to file an annual report within twenty days from the first of January if a year from the time of the filing of the certificate should then have expired, otherwise within twenty days from the first of January in each year after the expiration of a year from the time of the filing of the certificate. In 1878 an action was commenced against the trustees for a failure to file a report upon a cause of action alleged to have accrued against the company in 1875. At the time the above amendment took effect the plaintiff's causes of action had not fully accrued and no action therefor was pending. Held, that no penalty could be recovered for a failure to file a report within twenty days from the 1st day of January, 1875. Victory Webb Printing Co. v. Beecher, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 48.

4. Pier v. George, 14 Hun (N. Y.) 568. And see Glenn's Falls Paper Co. v. White, 18 Ind. 214; Brockway v. Ireland, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 372; Bonnell v. Griswold, 89 N. Y. 122; Blake v. Griswold, 103 N. Y. 429.

The capital stock of a corporation was $300,000; all of which had been issued in payment for patent rights; a report was made and filed stating that "the amount of the capital stock of this company, and which has been issued for the purchase of patent rights, and which has not been paid in cash, is $300,000." Held, that this was a sufficient compliance with the New York statute, requiring the filing of a report, to save the trustees from liability. Whitney Arms Co. v. Barlow, 63 N. Y. 62.

The liability, however, for failure to make and file an annual report as prescribed does not attach if the report is made and filed in terms complying with the statute, although some of the material representations are untrue.¹ The object of the legislature in requiring reports to be made and filed was to secure accessible means of information respecting the financial condition of the corporation wherever it should be actually conducting its operations. The neglect of the trustees to make and file a report, therefore, as required, will be presumed to be intentional, and, in the absence of explanation, will impose upon them the statutory liability.² Where there are five trustees, of whom the president is one, a report signed by the president and two trustees is sufficient, and it is enough that it is sworn to by the president to the best of his knowledge and belief.³

In order to maintain an action against a trustee for signing a false report, the plaintiff must show bad faith and an intent to deceive.⁴ This rule has been applied to representations in the

The penalty does not attach when the stock of the corporation has been issued in payment for property as authorized by the New York Amendment act of 1853, and this fact is not stated in the report as required by said act. Bonnell v. Griswold, 80 N. Y. 128.

A report made and filed by a manufacturing corporation, stated that the "capital stock has been paid up in full." Held, that this was equivalent to a statement that all the capital had been paid in, and so was a compliance with said provision of the New York act of 1848 (§ 12), that the report "shall state . . . the proportion actually paid in" of the capital. Bonnell v. Griswold, 80 N. Y. 128.

Issue of Stock for Property—Excessive Valuation.—Where, on the trial of an action to charge a trustee of a manufacturing corporation with the amount of a certain debt, for not having made the annual report of the corporation as required by section twelve of the New York General Manufacturing act of 1848, it appears that the whole of the capital stock was issued in payment for the property of the corporation, it is not error to submit the case to the jury on the theory that, if the property had been purchased by the corporation for a price in excess of its value, and if the defendant knew at the time when he signed such report that such was the fact, then the plaintiff was entitled to the debt sued for of the defendant, individually. Brockway v. Ireland, 61 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 372.

Amount Paid in Cash and Amount Paid in Property.—An annual report filed by a manufacturing corporation stated the amount of its capital and that all of it had "been paid in in cash, patent rights, merchandise, machinery, accounts, etc., necessary to the business, and for which stock to the amount of the value thereof has been issued by the company." In an action by a creditor of the corporation against the trustees for alleged failure to make the prescribed report, held, that the report made was a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the act; that it was not necessary to specify therein how much of the capital was paid in cash and what amount in property; and that, therefore, the action was not maintainable. Whitaker v. Masterton, 106 N. Y. 277.

1. Bonnell v. Griswold, 80 N. Y. 128.

2. Van Etten v. Eaton, 19 Mich. 187, decided under §§ 5, 18, and 19, Comp. Laws Michigan.

3. Glenn's Falls Paper Co. v. White, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 214.

The verification to a report was as follows: "Sworn to before me this 13th day of January, 1870, Charles W. Anderson, notary public, New York, county." The report was signed by the president of the corporation and was actually verified by him before a proper officer. Held, that the verification was sufficient. Bonnell v. Griswold, 80 N. Y. 128.

4. Bonnell v. Griswold, 68 N. Y. 294; Pier v. Hanmore, 86 N. Y. 95;

report concerning the value of property for which stock has been issued,¹ and to statements alleging that the capital stock has been paid up in full, without stating that all or a portion was paid for in property.² The penalty imposed upon the trustees for signing a report "false in any material representation," with knowledge of its falsity, is not incurred simply because of an omission from the aggregate of indebtedness of certain liabilities

Stebbins v. Edmands, 12 Gray (Mass.) 203.

1. In this action the plaintiff sought to charge the defendant, as one of the trustees of a manufacturing corporation, with the amount of a certain debt of the corporation, under the provisions of section fifteen of the General Manufacturing act, on the grounds that certain reports made by the corporation were false in material representations contained therein, and that the defendant, who had signed the same, knew such reports to be false. It appeared, among other things, on the trial, that the whole capital stock ($300,000) was issued in payment for the mine, manufactory and other property of the corporation. The case was tried and submitted to the jury on the theory that if the property had been purchased by the corporation for a price in excess of its value, and if the defendant knew at the time when he signed such reports that such was the fact, then the plaintiff was entitled to the debt sued for. Held, on the question of the good faith of the trustees in their estimate of the value of the property for which the capital stock was issued, and on the question of their notice of its actual value, that it was competent to show the representations made to them by experts and others competent to judge of the actual value of the property. But it was for the jury to determine whether they, in good faith, acted and relied on the opinions which they so received and believed the value of the property to be as represented. Held, further, that it is not necessary that each trustee should have actual personal knowledge of the property and of its value. That in many cases they must depend upon the representations of experts and others presumed to have a practical knowledge of the property and its value. Brockway v. Ireland, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 372.

2. Where, in an action against the trustees of a manufacturing corporation to enforce the liability imposed by the New York Manufacturing act (§ 15, ch. 40, Laws of 1848), for the making of a false report, the sole falsity of the report alleged is in a statement that the capital stock has been paid up in full, without stating that all or a portion was paid for in property, as is required by the New York act of 1853 (ch. 333, Laws of 1853), when such is the case, to sustain the action proof is necessary of some fact or circumstance indicating bad faith, a wilful fraudulent purpose on the part of defendants; the penalty follows an actual, not a constructive falsehood. Bonnell v. Griswold, 89 N. Y. 122.

Defendant G, as trustee of a manufacturing corporation, joined in making an annual report, which stated that the capital stock of the corporation ($2,000,000) had been paid up in full. In an action by a creditor of the corporation, under the Manufacturing act (§ 15, ch. 40, Laws of 1848), to recover of the trustees signing the report the amount of his claim, on the ground that such statement was false, to the knowledge of the signers, it appeared that the stock of the corporation was issued to one R in payment for certain iron mining property, then undeveloped. The property had been purchased by R of another corporation in which G was a stockholder. G received from R $10,000 of the stock of the new company, given to him without consideration, to enable him to act as trustee. R surrendered to the new company one thousand shares of the stock, which was pledged, with $70,000 of the corporate bonds to secure a loan of $35,000, and gave five hundred shares as a commission to the officer who negotiated the loan. The property was proved to be worth not over $60,000. It was sold to R for $1,000,000 of stock and $200,000 of bonds of the new company, and in his deed to that company the consideration expressed was $600,000. Of all of which facts it appeared G had knowledge. Held, the facts justified a finding that G signed the report in bad faith, knowing it to be false. Blake v. Griswold, 103 N. Y. 429.

of the company, although this was known to the defendants at the time the report was made.¹

(c) What Officers Are Liable—Continuance and Cessation of Liability.—The duty imposed by statute upon manufacturing corporations of making and filing an annual report is a corporate duty; it is not a duty cast upon the trustees as such in their individual capacity.² One who is elected a trustee without authority, and who has not even a colorable title, is not chargeable by reason of the neglect of the company to publish and file such annual report.³ And a newly elected trustee does not become liable for debts previously contracted until after a subsequent neglect to make and publish the annual report.⁴ If a trustee resign, he does not become individually liable by reason of the subsequent neglect of his cotrustees.⁵ And where a trustee's term of office expires before the contracting of the debt for which he is sought to be made liable, the plaintiff must prove that the trustee held over and continued to act after the expiration of his term.⁶ A false statement in the report renders liable

1. Butler v. Smalley, 101 N. Y. 71.

2. Validity of Complaint.—In an action against trustees of a manufacturing corporation to recover a debt of the corporation because of a failure to make and file a report for the year 1877, four of the defendants joined in an answer, one count of which averred that said defendants failed to make a report for the year 1873, and for each year thereafter, and that more than three years had elapsed since any penalty or claim arose against them in favor of plaintiff. The number of trustees of the corporation was not alleged. On demurrer to this court, held, that it was defective, in that it did not aver that defendants were trustees in 1873, or thereafter, previous to 1877; nor did it allege any default by the corporation prior to 1877, as if it was to be assumed that defendants were trustees, still it did not appear and could not be assumed that they constituted a majority of the board, and the corporate duty might have been performed without their joining in the report. Cornell v. Roach, 101 N. Y. 373.

But the liability of trustees is a penalty, and attaches to the delinquent persons, and not to the office, and therefore makes them liable only for debts contracted while they are respectively in office, and not for those contracted by their successors. Shaler etc. Co. v. Bliss, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 309; McHarg v. Eastman, 4 Robt. (N. Y.) 635. 3. Craw v. Easterly, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 513; affirmed 54 N. Y. 679.

Abandonment of Enterprise.—Persons who are induced, by fraudulent representations to sign and file a certificate, but abandon the enterprise, before any stock is subscribed, cannot be personally liable, by a neglect to file the annual report. Squires v. Brown, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 35.

4. Boughton v. Otis, 21 N. Y. 261; Shaler v. Brewster, 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 464; McHarg v. Eastman, 4 Robt. 635; s. c., 7 Ib. 137; 35 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 205. Compare Buck v. Barber, 5 N. Y. St. Rep. 826.

The directors of a corporation whose terms of office began after an indebtedness had been created against the corporation, and after default had been made by the previous board in failing to file, as required by law, a report showing the amount of the corporate indebtedness, are not liable under section 252 of the General Statutes, which provide "that all the directors or trustees of the company shall be jointly and severally liable for all the debts of the company that shall be contracted during the year next preceding the time when such report should . . . have been made and filed, and until such report shall be made." Austin v. Berlin (Colo.), 22 Pac. Rep. 433.

5. Squires v. Brown, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 35; Boughton v. Otis, 21 N. Y. 261; Shaler & Hall Quarry Co. v. Bliss, 27 N. Y. 297; Chandler v. Hoag, 2 Hun (N. Y.) 613.

6. Philadelphia R. C. & I. Co. v. Hotchkiss, 82 N. Y. 471.

only the trustee who signed it.¹ The secretary of a manufacturing corporation cannot make the report in the name of the trustees, nor that of the corporation, the duty being devolved upon the trustees; consequently he is not chargeable with the consequences of an omission to perform it.² Unless the statute so provides, one trustee who has been held individually liable cannot sue his cotrustees for contribution, there being no right to contribution between wrongdoers.³

(d) Who May Enforce Liability.—The cause of action given by statute against a trustee for failing to make a report, or for false statements in such report, is usually given to a creditor of the corporation. Each creditor, therefore, may maintain a separate action. That all the creditors should join in one action is not necessary.⁴ Notwithstanding the general words of the New York statute, the trustees do not become individually liable thereunder by the failure to make an annual report for a debt owing to one of their number.⁵ And one who has acted as trustee, though not legally elected, cannot maintain an action as a creditor of the company against his cotrustees for a failure to report.⁶ Where a husband is a trustee, his wife cannot take advantage of his omission to file an annual report.⁷ In New York, the creditor's right of action dies with him.⁸

(e) Extent and Nature of Liability.—The liability incurred by the trustees for neglecting to make and file an annual report, or for making a false report, is in the nature of a penalty for misconduct in office,⁹ the penalty being a responsibility for the debts

Expiration of Term—Refusal to Act Further.—Defendants, in February, 1874, were elected trustees of a manufacturing corporation for one year. Before the expiration of the year the corporation had become insolvent and discontinued business. It did no business after January 15th, 1875. On that day the trustees passed a resolution that the corporation should cease to transact business and resigned their office, to take effect at the end of their term. Defendants did not act as trustees after that date. In an action under the Manufacturing act (§ 12, ch. 40, Laws of 1848), to recover the amount of a debt due from the corporation because of a failure to file an annual report in January, 1876, held, that defendants were not liable; that while, if they had continued to act as trustees after the expiration of their term, they would have been bound to make the report, they were not bound to hold over, and unless they chose to act, their offices became vacant at the end of the year. Van Amburgh v. Baker, 81 N. Y. 46.

1. Pier v. Hanmore, 86 N. Y. 95.

2. Bolen v. Crosby, 49 N. Y. 183.

3. Andrews v. Murray, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 354.

4. Wiles v. Suydam, 10 Hun (N. Y.) 578. See also s. c., 64 N. Y. 173.

5. Briggs v. Easterly, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 51; Bronson v. Dimock, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 614; Estes v. Burns, 5 J. & S. (N. Y.) 1; Andrews v. Murray, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 354.

But where a debt against such a corporation owned by a trustee thereof is assigned by him absolutely for value, the assignee, on a default in making and filing a report subsequently occurring, may proceed against trustees to recover the debt, although the assignor continues to be a trustee up to the time of the default. Cornell v. Roach, 101 N. Y. 373.

6. Easterly v. Barber, 65 N. Y. 252.

7. Adams v. Mills, 6 J. & S. (N. Y.) 16.

8. Brackett v. Griswold, 103 N. Y. 425.

9. Anderson v. Speers, 8 Abb. (N. Y.) N. C. 382; Gadsdon v. Woodward, 103 N. Y. 242; Dabney v. Stephens, 46 N. Y. 681.

of the corporation.¹ A judgment for costs recovered against a corporation in an action for trespass brought by it is a debt within the meaning of the New York manufacturing act.² The liability also includes claims founded on a judgment of record against the company.³ But it is very doubtful whether causes of action for breaches of contract are debts for which trustees are liable.⁴ Liabilities of a company which may give causes of action against it resulting in judgments, but which do not constitute present debts, are not within the statute.⁵

To charge a trustee individually the debt must have been contracted during a default, or have existed at the time of a subsequent default.⁶ The liability incurred by the omission to file a report is for existing debts, not existing liabilities.⁷ The New York statute makes no distinction as to the place where such debts have been contracted, nor does it distinguish between creditors residing in that or in other States.⁸ Where no annual report is filed, a trustee is liable for a debt contracted whilst he was in office and before his resignation.⁹

(f) Enforcement of Liability.—In an action to enforce the liability of the trustees, the plaintiff must show affirmatively that the debt was contracted by the corporation.¹⁰ It must also be

1. Dabney v. Stephens, 46 N. Y. 681.

For an omission to file the annual report required by statute, the trustees become individually liable for all the debts of the corporation then owing. Miller v. White, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 504; Nimmons v. Tappan, 2 Sw. (N. Y.) 652; Nimmons v. Hennion, 2 Sw. (N. Y.) 663.

2. Allen v. Clarke, 108 N. Y. 269, reversing s. c., 43 Hun (N. Y.) 377. See also Andrews v. Murray, 9 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 8.

3. Lewis v. Armstrong, 8 Abb. (N. Y.) N. C. 385.

4. Victory Webb Printing Co. v. Beecher, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 48; Chambers v. Lewis, 28 N. Y. 454.

Where a manufacturing corporation, by a resolution adopted September 15th, 1855, appointed K the general agent and attorney of the company, he to receive a salary of $1,000 a year for his services besides expenses, the salary to commence September 1st, 1855, but no time being fixed when it was to become due and payable, held that the company did not thereby contract a "debt" within the meaning of the New York act, for the salary of K, nor did they contract a debt for such services from day to day, or month to month, as they were rendered; as the statute speaks of "debts," existing, or contracted, not of liabilities which may ripen into debts. Oviatt v. Hughes, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 541.

5. Lockhart v. Van Alstyne, 31 Mich. 76, decided under Comp. Laws Mich., § 1821, making the directors of manufacturing companies on their neglect or refusal to file the reports, etc., required by the statute individually liable for all debts of the corporation contracted during the period of such neglect or refusal.

6. Garrison v. Howe, 17 N. Y. 458; Nimmons v. Tappan, 2 Sw. (N. Y.) 652.

Upon the default of a corporation, organized under the act of 1848, in filing its annual report, all the trustees in office become jointly and severally liable for all the debts of the company contracted by them or their predecessors, and for all that are subsequently contracted during their continuance in office and the continuance of the default, though not payable until after they have ceased to be trustees. Vernon v. Palmer, 14 Week. Dig. 324; reversing s. c., 62 How. (N. Y.) 425.

7. Oviatt v. Hughes, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 541; Nimmons v. Hennion, 2 Sw. (N. Y.) 663.

8. Sears v. Waters, 51 N. Y. Supm. Ct. (44 Hun) 101.

9. Chandler v. Hoag, 63 N. Y. 624.

10. Dabney v. Stephens, 46 N. Y. 681.

averred that the debt existed at the time of the default or was contracted before the report was published.¹

A cause of action arising out of an omission to report may be joined with one for making a false report.² After the appointment of a receiver,³ or an assignee in bankruptcy,⁴ the trustees are no longer liable for omitting to file the report. The failure of the company to file an annual report does not extend the time within which to commence an action against a trustee to enforce his personal liability for a previous failure to report.⁵ While the

1. Chambers v. Lewis, 28 N. Y. 454; McHarg v. Eastman, 7 Rob. (N. Y.) 137; 35 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 205; Weymouth v. Dimock, 41 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 92.

Allegations Necessary in Complaint.—

The complaint in an action to enforce, against directors of a corporation, their statutory liability for the corporation debts for the preceding year by reason of their failure to file the report of debts and capital required by statute (Col. Gen. Stat. 184, § 16), failed to allege that the corporation was doing business in the county, in the recorder's office of which the report should have been filed, and to set out the contract sued on, the default of the corporation, and the directorship of defendants as of such dates as to show their liability under the statute. Held, that a demurrer to the complaint should be sustained. Anfenger v. Anzeiger Pub. Co., 9 Col. 377.

The amended complaint in an action to enforce the liability of defendants as trustees of a corporation for neglect to file the annual report as required by the New York Manufacturing Companies' act, plaintiff being at the time a creditor of such corporation on account of services rendered, failed to allege that such services were rendered at the request of the corporation. Held, such statute being penal, that, as every fact necessary to establish defendant's liability must be affirmatively proved, the order allowing such amended complaint to be served should be reversed. Tovey v. Culver, 54 N. Y. Super. (22 Jones & S.) 404.

In a suit under the statute, against the directors of the "Neal Manufacturing Company," for failing to make a report of the amount of capital stock of the company, the amount of assessments thereon and actually paid in, and the amount of existing debts of the company, the complaint averred that the defendants were the directors and sole stockholders of the company; "that said Neal Manufacturing Company was organized April 10th, 1866, by articles of association filed and recorded in the Jefferson county recorder's office on said day, a copy of which articles of association is filed herewith as part hereof; and said company carried on said business at said Madison." Held, that this sufficiently showed that said company was a corporation. Traber v. Bright, 32 Ind. 69.

2. Bonnell v. Wheeler, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 332.

The pendency of an action against all the trustees, to enforce their personal liability, for a false certificate of capital, is not a bar to another action against one of them, for an omission to make the annual report. Nimmons v. Tappan, 2 Sw. (N. Y.) 652.

3. Huguenot Bank v. Studwell, 74 N. Y. 621.

The directors of a corporation did not file a report for the year 1881, because the corporate property had gone into the hands of a receiver. Held, that the fact that they did file one in 1882, did not estop them from claiming and showing that it was not their duty to file one in 1881. Cochran v. Smith, 54 N. Y. Super. (22 Jones & S.) 117.

4. A corporation was adjudged a bankrupt in November, 1870, and on January 3rd, 1871, its entire property passed into the hands of an assignee in bankruptcy. Held, that no report subsequent to that of January, 1870, was necessary. Bonnell v. Griswold, 80 N. Y. 128.

5. Rector etc. of Trinity Church v. Vanderbilt, 98 N. Y. 170.

In this case plaintiff leased a corporation, organized, under the General Manufacturing act (ch. 40, Laws of 1848), certain premises for a term of years commencing November 1st, 1872. The lessee, among other things, agreed to pay all taxes and water rates imposed each year, and in case the same nature of the remedy against the trustees varies according to the statutes of the different States,¹ it is apparently well settled that an action against a trustee to impose the statutory liability is local,² and that each act of this character enters into and becomes a separate ground of action.³ In New York, it is held that upon the death of the defendant the action cannot be revived against his personal representatives,⁴ and that the liability is not a "fine"

were not paid before the first day of February next, after they were imposed, it agreed to pay to plaintiff on that day as additional rent the amount necessary to pay and discharge them. The lessee did not pay the taxes and water rates imposed for the years 1873 and 1874. The lessee failed to make annual reports as required by said act (section 12) for the years 1873, 1874 and 1875. Because of such failure this action was brought in January, 1878, against defendant, a trustee of said corporation, to recover the amount of said taxes and water rates. Held, that at the time the reports should have been filed both for the years 1874 and 1875, a debt existed for the taxes and water rates of the preceding year; but as the lessee had the alternative either to pay to the proper authorities or to pay on the first of February thereafter to the plaintiff, no cause of action accrued to it until that time; that, therefore, as to the taxes, etc., for 1873, the three years' statute of limitations began to run February 1st, 1874, and the cause of action was barred, but that for the taxes, etc., of 1874, the action was not barred and plaintiff was entitled to recover.

1. The officers of a manufacturing corporation, who have neglected to file the certificates required by Massachusetts Gen. Stat., ch. 60, § 24, are not liable in an action at law for the debts of the corporation contracted during the continuance of such neglect; but the remedy against them is by a suit in equity. Cochrane v. Reed, 13 Allen (Mass.) 455.

In an action to charge a trustee for a failure to publish the statutory annual statement, a complaint setting out a copy of the report as published, and alleging that it does not comply with the statute, need not set forth the particular defects. Glenn's Falls Paper Co. v. White, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 214.

As the rights and liabilities under the penal provisions of the New York General Manufacturing act (ch. 40, Laws of 1848), are not only "regulated by special provision of law," but have no existence outside of the statute, the right of transfer given by the N. Y. Code of Civil Procedure (section 1910) does not, under said code, give a right of enforcement to the transferee (section 1909), but leaves the question of that right to the existing law. The rule of the common law governs the question as to the survivability of a cause of action, to recover the penalty imposed by said act upon a trustee of a corporation organized under it, who has joined in making a false annual report; it is not affected by any provision of the code, and the action abates upon the death of either party. Blake v. Griswold, 104 N. Y. 613.

Form of a complaint against the trustees, for a neglect to file their annual report. Andrews v. Murray, 9 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 8.

2. Veeder v. Baker, 85 N. Y. 156.

Venue.—Where the cause of action is solely the false report, it arises in the county where said report was made and filed, and the venue should be laid in that county, although the debt against the company may have originated in another. Veeder v. Baker, 83 N. Y. 156.

Action in Another State.—The New York statute of 1848, requires certain corporations to make annual reports within twenty days after the first of January of their condition, and to publish the same; on failure to do so, all the trustees to be liable jointly and severally for all debts then existing, and all contracted before making the report. Held, that this was, in its operation, a penal statute, and that an action, brought by a creditor of the corporation to enforce the statute liability against a trustee, could not be maintained in New Jersey. Derrickson v. Smith, 27 N. J. L. (3 Dutch.) 166.

3. Anderson v. Speers, 8 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 382.

4. An action against a trustee of a corporation, organized under the New York General Manufacturing act (ch. 40, Laws of 1848), to recover the penalty or "penalty" in the sense in which those terms are used in the code¹ so as to subject the party to arrest.² The provisions of acts of this nature are to be construed like other penal statutes; their scope may not be enlarged by construction or implication, and the penalty may not be imposed except in cases where the plain language of the provision requires it.³

V. INDIVIDUAL LIABILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS—1. Who Are Liable.—

In order to impose upon a member of a manufacturing corporation⁴ the statutory liability, he must be, or have been, legally and in fact a stockholder.⁵ And in determining the individual liability imposed by that act (section 12), because of failure to make and file an annual report, is one ex delicto; and is not in any respect based upon the theory of affording compensation to the injured party, for damages sustained by reason of the omission complained of. Such a cause of action, therefore, is not within the provisions of the statute authorizing the survivorship of certain actions for tort (2 Rev. Stat. 448, § 1), as it is not for "wrongs done to the property rights or interests of another;" and upon the death of the defendant the action cannot be revived against his personal representatives. Stakes v. Stickney, 96 N. Y. 323.

1. N. Y. Code, § 549, subd. 1.

2. Glens Falls Paper Co. v. White, 58 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 172.

3. Whitaker v. Masterton, 106 N. Y. 277.

4. The liabilities of the stockholders of a manufacturing corporation, under Mass. Rev. Stat., ch. 38, attached to the stockholders of a corporation subsequently incorporated for the purpose of bleaching goods, and made subject by the charter to Rev. Stat., ch. 38, 44. Johnson v. Somerville Dyeing and Bleaching Co., 15 Gray (Mass.) 216.

5. A person who gives his note for shares of stock and takes a receipt, expressing that the note, when paid, will be in full for such shares, does not become a stockholder until the note matures and is paid. Tracy v. Yates, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 152. But if one person subscribe for stock in his own name, for the benefit of another, he is not exempted from individual liability as a trustee, under the statute. Stover v. Flack, 30 N. Y. 64. And if the name of the defendant appear upon the stock book of the company, this is prima facie evidence of his being a stockholder. Hoagland v. Bell, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 57. And even the charter of incorporation is prima facie evidence that all the persons named therein were, at the commencement, members of the corporation. McHose v. Wheeler, 45 Pa. St. 32. Persons who sign the articles of association are stockholders; and they are presumed to continue stockholders until a surrender or assignment be shown. Strong v. Wheaton, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 616. And the person who appears upon the books of the company as the legal owner of the stock is liable to creditors, though he in fact only held it in collateral security for a debt. Rosevelt v. Brown, 11 N. Y. 148; S. P. Worrall v. Judson, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 210. It is not necessary, in order to constitute a member of a manufacturing corporation, in Massachusetts, that he should have a certificate of his shares. He may have all the rights and be liable to all the duties of a member without such certificate. Chester Glass Company v. Dewey, 16 Mass. 94.

One who has signed and acknowledged the articles of association, and was named a trustee therein, is estopped from denying that he was then a stockholder; and he is presumed to continue such until the contrary is shown. The list of stockholders required to be kept is not the only nor even the best evidence that the defendant is a stockholder. Herries v. Wesley, 13 Hun (N. Y.) 492. So one to whom stock has been apportioned is liable as a stockholder, although no certificate therefor has been issued, and the apportionment was made for him to an agent, who subscribed at his request. Burr v. Wilcox, 22 N. Y. 551. And a person named in the certificate or charter is liable as a stockholder unless he promptly disavow the act. McHose v. Wheeler, 45 Pa. St. 32. And generally there may be a recovery against such of the defendants as are proved to have been stockholders. McHose v. Wheeler, 45 Pa. St. 32.

ity of stockholders, the court will not look beyond the legal title.¹ A completed transfer of the stock entered upon the books of the company is essential to exonerate the original stockholders from liability for the debts of the corporation.² A stockholder who is also a creditor to an amount equal to his stock cannot be made

Giving Proxy.—Where the evidence to show that the defendant, in an action to enforce individual liability was a stockholder when the debt was contracted, was a proxy given by him shortly afterwards, to vote at the ensuing annual election, the time for holding which was less than thirty days from the time when the debt was contracted, and by the charter the stockholders could only vote upon stock which they had held for thirty days preceding the election, held that the evidence was prima facie sufficient. Harger v. McCullough, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 119.

Incorporator, Subscriber to Stock and Secretary.—In an action to charge one with personal liability, as stockholder of a manufacturing company, for an indebtedness alleged to have been incurred by that company to the plaintiff's assignors because of a failure to pay in the amount due upon his stock, it is sufficient to show that the defendant was one of the trustees named in the certificate of incorporation, a subscriber for fifty shares of the stock, and subsequently acting secretary of the company. Wheeler v. Miller, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 541; 90 N. Y. 353.

Previous Appointment of Receiver.—In an action seeking to charge defendant as a stockholder of such a corporation with a judgment against it, on the ground that the whole capital stock was not paid in, or a certificate of payment filed as required by the act, the answer set up among other things, in substance, that more than four years before the commencement of the action a judgment was rendered in an action against the corporation sequestering its property, appointing a permanent receiver thereof and restraining its officers and agents from all interference with it; that said corporation has not since transacted any business, that the receiver took possession of the property and has distributed the proceeds among creditors pursuant to order of the court, the same not being sufficient to pay all of the company's debts, and that defendant by reason thereof ceased to be a stockholder from the date of said judgment. On de-murrer, held that the answer set up a good defence; that by the conceded facts it appeared that when the organization was divested of its rights, privileges, franchises and property by virtue of the appointment of a receiver, it for all practical purposes ceased to exist, and the defendant ceased to be a stockholder within the meaning of the act, and after the expiration of two years he was discharged from all liability. Hollingshead v. Woodward, 107 N. 96.

Allegations in Bill—Par Value of Shares.—A bill in equity, under Mass. Stat. 1862, ch. 218, to charge persons with individual liability as members or stockholders, for the debt of a manufacturing corporation, sufficiently describes such a holding of the stock as would bring the holders within the provisions of the statute by alleging that the defendants were "members of and stockholders in said corporation, holding the stock of the same undivided," and need not allege the par value of shares in the capital stock. Hawes v. Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Co., 101 Mass. 385.

1. Adderly v. Storm, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 624; Richardson v. Abendroth, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 162; Shellington v. Howland, 53 N. Y. 371.

2. Shellington v. Howland, 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 14; 53 N. Y. 371; Rosevelt v. Brown, 11 N. Y. 148.

Exoneration by Transfer of Shares.—Where certificates of stock are issued to a subscriber, stating that the stock is "transferable on the books of the company in person or by attorney on the surrender of this certificate," and he, after making payments on the shares, sells them at a time when there are no calls thereon unpaid, and the transferee surrenders them to the company and receives new certificates, such stockholder is released from liability on his original subscription since the transferee is, under the statute, liable for the amount unpaid thereon, and the company, by entering the transfer upon its books, has consented to it. Billings v. Robinson, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 122. Affirmed 94 N. Y. 415.

Where stock in such a corporation is individually liable.¹ But where a person holds stock in a manufacturing company as trustee, and also holds other property on the same trust, such other property may be taken for the debts of the company.² Generally a suit can only be maintained against those who were stockholders when the debt was contracted.³ A transferred by one acting as agent for the owner, and the assignee receives a certificate and appears as a stockholder on the books of the corporation, he is, as between himself and the creditors of the corporation, a stockholder. Wakefield v. Fargo, 90 N. Y. 213.

If a member of a manufacturing corporation transfers his shares to an insolvent person for the purpose of avoiding his liability to an execution in favor of a creditor of the company, such transfer will be deemed fraudulent and void as to a creditor of the corporation who may levy his execution on the body or estate of such member, pursuant to Mass. Stat. 1808, ch. 65, and Stat. 1817, ch. 183. Marcy v. Clark, 17 Mass. 330.

A holder of shares in a manufacturing company by an absolute certificate thereof is liable for the debts of the company under Mass. Rev. Stat., ch. 38, § 16, in the same manner as any member, although he had agreed to re-transfer said shares to his vendor upon the performance of certain conditions, and although the transfer was intended merely as collateral security. Holyoke Bank v. Burnham, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 183.

The holder of stock in a manufacturing corporation by an absolute transfer is subject to the liability imposed on stockholders by Mass. Rev. Stat., ch. 38, § 22, although he held the stock as collateral security only, and, having been paid his debt, had delivered the certificate to his debtor with a transfer endorsed thereon, signed, but not filled up nor recorded, before the contracting of the debt on which he is sought to be charged. Johnson v. Somerville Dyeing and Bleaching Co., 15 Gray (Mass.) 276.

Under Mass. Stat. 1808, ch. 65, enacting that any share of the property of a manufacturing corporation may be transferred by the proprietor thereof by deed acknowledged and subsequently recorded by the clerk of the corporation, a transfer by a deed not recorded was held to be so far effectual as to render the vendee personally liable to a creditor of the corporation. Eames v. Wheeler, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 442.

A retransfer of shares of stock in a manufacturing company by B to A, in pursuance of an agreement made contemporaneously with the original transfer by A to B terminates B's liability as a stockholder under Mass. Rev. Stat. ch. 38, § 16, for the debts of the company, although made for that very purpose. Holyoke Bank v. Burnham, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 183.

Although the provisions of the statute relating to the sale and transfer of stock of a corporation have been literally complied with, the transfer will not be available as a protection against liability to the company and its stockholders and creditors to pay the balance due on the shares, unless the transaction was an honest one, entered into in entire good faith with the intent and purpose of disposing of the entire interest in the shares and surrendering all dominion over them. Billings v. Robinson, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 122.

1. Mathez v. Neidig, 72 N. Y. 100; Agate v. Sands, 73 N. Y. 620.

2. Stedman v. Evelith, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 114.

3. Moss v. Oakley, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 265.

Stockholders When Debt Was Contracted.—A stockholder is not individually liable for the debts of the company contracted before he became a stockholder. Tracy v. Yates, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 152; Phillips v. Therasson, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 141.

Under Mass. Stat. 1829, ch. 53, one who was a member of a manufacturing corporation which had neglected to publish, an annual statement of the amount of its capital stock at the time a debt was contracted by the corporation was held to be individually liable for such debt though not a member at the time of the trial of the action. Mill Dam Foundry v. Hovey, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 417. See 11 Cush. (Mass.) 183.

In an action against a manufacturing corporation to recover a debt, it appeared that the annual notice published by the corporation next before the debt was contracted, did not certify the amount both of their debts and of their capital stock as required by stockholder who has fully paid his subscription either in cash or in property, after a certificate is duly filed is relieved from personal liability; but evidence is admissible of the value of the property put in for the purpose of impeaching the transaction on the ground of fraud.¹

Mass. Stat. 1829, ch. 53, but of their debts only. Held, that one who was a member of the corporation when the debt was contracted, but who had ceased to be such when the action was tried, was individually liable for the debt. Mill Dam Foundry v. Hovey, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 417. See 11 Cush. (Mass.) 183.

The liability of stockholders for the debts of a manufacturing corporation under Mass. Rev. Stat., ch. 38, § 25, binds a holder of stock at the time of contracting the debts, who ceases to be a stockholder before they are payable, Johnson v. Somerville Dyeing & Bleaching Co., 15 Gray (Mass.) 216.

In an action to enforce the personal liability of a stockholder of a manufacturing company for a debt of the company, it appeared that the debt in question arose upon an agreement of the company made June 10th, 1875, to insert an advertisement in a journal for one year and pay for the privilege $400 payable quarterly, that the defendant became a stockholder October 7th, 1875. Held, that the defendant was not exempt from liability for the instalments falling under the contract after he became and while he remained a stockholder, by the fact that he was not a stockholder when the contract was made. McMaster v. Davidson, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 542.

But the provision of Mass. Rev. Stat., ch. 38, § 16, that all the members of an incorporated manufacturing company shall be liable in certain cases, for the debts of the company, extends to those who are members when the liability of the company is sought to be enforced, and is not confined to those who were members when the debts were contracted. Curtis v. Harlow, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 3. See 11 Cush. (Mass.) 188.

A note given by the company will be presumed to have been made when the debt was contracted unless the contrary be shown. Moss v. Oakley, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 265.

Under Mass. Rev. Stat., ch. 38, § 16, a member of a manufacturing company may be liable for the debts of the corporation contracted while he was a member, although he ceases to be such before the debts become payable; but he is not liable for debts contracted before he became a member if his membership expires before the debts become payable and action brought. Holyoke Bank v. Burnham, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 183.

1. Boynton v. Hatch, 47 N. Y. 225; Schenck v. Andrews, 57 N. Y. 133.

Stock Issued for Property.—One to whom stock is issued in payment for property purchased by the company, without fraud in the valuation, does not become individually liable to creditors, because of a failure on the part of the president and trustees to file the certificate required by the statute. Brown v. Smith, 13 Hun (N. Y.) 408.

Under the N. Y. act of 1853, one who receives stock in payment for property necessary for the purposes of the company, is not individually liable to its creditors, though such stock be part of the capital originally authorized. Schenck v. Andrews, 40 N. Y. 589; s. c., 57 N. Y. 133; and see Lewis v. Ryder, 13 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 1.

Where property is purchased at a gross over-valuation, and stock issued in payment therefor, the holder thereof is personally liable for the debts of the company, as the owner of stock not fully paid. Boynton v. Andrews, 63 N. Y. 93; S. P. Douglass v. Ireland, 73 Ib. 100.

The company being indebted to J, a subscriber, for original stock, for work in constructing its furnaces, the amount of his account was applied as a payment upon his stock. Held, that this was a payment in money within the meaning of the act. Veeder v. Mudgett, 95 N. Y. 295.

To entitle a creditor of a manufacturing company to recover against a stockholder individually for the indebtedness of the company, he must make it appear that an over-valuation was allowed for the property with the knowledge of the party proceeded against. Nat. Tube Works Co. v. Gilfillan, 52 N. Y. Supm. Ct. (46 Hun) 248.

In Massachusetts, it is held that an execution against a manufacturing corporation cannot be levied upon the estate of a corporation who died before the suit was brought,¹ as it created no charge upon the estate of a deceased stockholder.² Nor is the individual liability of a stockholder a "debt" provable against the estate of an insolvent debtor.³

If a creditor of a manufacturing corporation release one of the stockholders, such release does not discharge the others from liability.⁴

2. Who May Enforce Liability.—In New York, an action will not lie by one stockholder against his fellow stockholders to enforce

A corporation having been organized under the New York General Manufacturing act (ch. 40, Laws of 1848, as amended by ch. 333, Laws of 1853) with a nominal capital of $2,500,000, divided into shares of $100 each, a proposition was made to its board of trustees to sell to it certain patents and property for $2,500,000, and to receive in payment the whole capital stock, the vendors, however, to deliver nine thousand of the shares to the trustees; six thousand thereof to be sold for $50 per share. $50,000 of the purchase price to be paid to the vendors, and the balance to be paid over to the treasurer of the company for its use. This proposition was accepted, and subscriptions were opened for the six thousand shares. When all of it was subscribed for, the transfer was made and the whole capital stock issued to the vendors in one certificate. On the same day this was returned and cancelled, certificates for the nine thousand shares were issued to the trustees, and the six thousand shares were transferred to the subscribers. Defendant subscribed and paid for five hundred shares at $50 per share. In an action brought by a creditor of the company to enforce the liability for the company's debts, imposed by said act (§ 10) upon the stockholders, until the whole capital stock has been paid in, all of the trustees were called as witnesses and each testified that he acted in good faith in the transaction, and believed the property purchased to be worth $2,500,000, and other evidence was given tending to show they had good grounds for such belief. Held, that the question was properly submitted to the jury as to whether the purchase and issue of the stock for the property was in good faith, or simply a scheme to evade the statute; and that the evidence justified a verdict for defendant. Lake Superior Iron Co v. Drexel, 90 N. Y. 87.

1. Child v. Coffin, 17 Mass. 64.

If, pending an action against a manufacturing corporation, a stockholder, who has been summoned in pursuant to Mass. Stat. 1951, ch. 315, dies, his executor cannot be required to take upon himself the defence of the action. Dane v. Dane Mfg. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 488.

2. Ripley v. Sampson, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 371. See also Dane v. Dane Mfg. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 488.

3. Estate of Insolvent Debtor.—Kelton v. Phillips, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 61; decided under Mass. Stat. 1838, ch. 163. See also Bangs v. Lincoln, 10 Gray (Mass.) 600.

Since Mass. Stat. 1838, ch. 98, the assignees of an insolvent debtor, a part of whose assets consist of shares in a manufacturing corporation, the stockholders of which are individually liable for its debts, are not liable either in law or in equity to a creditor of the corporation, himself a stockholder, under any statutes of this commonwealth, although such assignees have attended meetings of the corporation and voted as stockholders. Gray v. Coffin, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 192.

4. Release by Creditor.—Bank of Poughkeepsie v. Ipatson, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 461.

If, after the retiring of a stockholder from the corporation by the sale of his stock, and due public notice thereof, as required by the charter, the creditor gives up old notes upon which the stockholder was liable and takes new ones, especially if done for the purpose of absolving him from liability, and imposing it upon his successor in the stock, this operates as a complete release to him of the debt both at law and in equity. New England etc.

a personal liability for a debt of a manufacturing corporation.¹ But it appears to be otherwise in Massachusetts.² The liability of stockholders is a several liability of each stockholder directly to such of the creditors as have complied with the requisities and conditions precedent, and a receiver of a corporation has no authority to enforce or assert that liability.³ A creditor of a corporation may sue alone to enforce a stockholder's liability, although there may be other creditors similarly situated.⁴ The officers who have been compelled to pay corporate debts cannot maintain a bill in equity for contribution against the stockholders.⁵ The endorsee of a promissory note given for a simple contract debt, may maintain an action against a stockholder in his own name.⁶

3. Extent and Nature of Liability—(a) To Creditors.—Statutes providing for the formation of manufacturing corporations usually provide that the stockholders shall be individually liable⁷ to the Bank v. Newport Steam Factory, 6 R. I. 154.

1. Richardson v. Abendroth, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 162.

2. A member of a manufacturing corporation who is a creditor thereof has the same right as any other creditor to secure the payment of his demand by attachment or levy on the property of the corporation, although he may be personally liable by Mass. Stat. 1808, ch. 65, § 6, to satisfy other judgments against the same corporation. Peirce v. Partridge, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 44.

3. Receiver.—Farnsworth v. Wood, 91 N. Y. 308; Mason v. Silk Mfg. Co., 27 Hun (N. Y.) 307.

To entitle a receiver of an insolvent manufacturing company to maintain an action against a subscriber to the stock of the company who has sold and transferred his interest, to collect the amount unpaid upon such shares, the corporation must have had such right of action before the receiver was appointed. Billings v. Robinson, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 122. But see Cuykendall v. Corning, 88 N. Y. 129.

4. Weeks v. Love, 50 N. Y. 568.

The filing of a bill in equity by one creditor for the benefit of all, against the directors and stockholders of a manufacturing corporation, to charge them with personal liability for its debts does not bar an action at law previously brought against the corporation by another creditor, or affect his right to levy upon the stockholders summoned in that action. Johnson v. Somerville Dyeing & Bleaching Co., 15 Gray (Mass.) 216.

5. Stone v. Fenno, 6 Allen (Mass.) 579.

Allowing Stockholders to Forfeit Shares.—A resolution allowing stockholders, on paying thirty per cent. on their shares, to forfeit their stock is void as against creditors; and a creditor who was also a trustee and protested against the resolution, did not ratify it, by accepting the money raised under it. Slee v. Bloom, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 456; reversing s. c., 5 Johns. N. Y. Ch. 366. But a creditor who was present and assented to a resolution that any stockholder paying fifty per cent. on his shares should be discharged from all future calls, except by way of forfeiture, is bound by it, so far as respects those who complied with its terms before a dissolution. Slee v. Bloom, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 456; reversing s. c., 5 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 366.

6. Freeland v. McCullough, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 414.

7. By Maine Rev. Stat. of 1857, ch. 48, § 9, manufacturing corporations are prohibited to contract debts exceeding, at any one time, the amount of the capital invested within the State in real estate and fixtures thereon, including machinery; and from becoming indebted to an amount exceeding one-half their capital paid in and remaining undivided, and of their other property and assets. When they comply with these prohibitions and limitations, their stockholders are relieved from all individual liability for their debts. When either of these limitations is violated, their stockholders become individually liable for the debts of the corporation in the manner provided in chapter 46. The liability creditors of the company to an amount equal to the amount of the stock held by them, for the debts and contracts of the company,¹ until the whole amount of capital stock shall have been arising under chapter 48, section 9, is to be made available to creditors of the corporation in the manner prescribed in chapter 46, section 24. Lovegrove v. Hunt, 58 Me. 9.

Massachusetts Stat. 1851, ch. 315, § 3, forbids the property of stockholders in a manufacturing corporation, though incorporated since the revised statutes, and before said act took effect, to be taken on execution against the corporation, if there are officers liable, upon whose property the execution may be levied; although the execution was issued on a judgment recovered on a debt payable before that act took effect. Denny v. Richardson, 4 Gray (Mass.) 274.

The New York Act of 1848, § 10, provides that the stockholders shall be liable to the creditors to an amount equal to the amount of stock held by them respectively for all debts and contracts of the company until the whole amount of capital stock shall have been paid in, and a certificate thereof made and recorded.

Pennsylvania.—Where the certificate of a company, organized in Pennsylvania, under the general manufacturing law of April 7th, 1849, shows stock subscribed for and unpaid, a creditor of the company, failing to obtain payment from the company, may recover against the stockholders individually, to the extent of the unpaid stock. Allibone v. Hager, 46 Pa. St. 48.

Pennsylvania act of March 27th, 1854, § 5, relative to the individual liability of the stockholders in manufacturing companies, is not retroactive, and does not apply to companies which were incorporated, and had paid up their stock under the provisions of act of April 7th, 1849. Megargee v. Wakefield Mfg. Co., 48 Pa. St. 442.

1. Debts for Which Stockholder Is Liable.—Costs of an action by a manufacturing corporation, are not contracted as a "debt" until judgment is rendered for them against the corporation. Mill Dam Foundry v. Hovey, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 417. And an unliquidated claim for damages against a manufacturing corporation is a debt within the meaning of Massachusetts Stat. 1829, ch. 53, making individual members liable. Mill Dam Foundry v.

Hovey, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 417. But the liability of a stockholder does not extend to a promissory note held by a third person, though given for materials. Weigley v. Coal Oil Co., 5 Phila. (Pa.) 67. And a stockholder in a slate company is not individually liable for hay furnished for feeding the company's mules; it is not "materials furnished," within the meaning of the act of 1854. Featherman v. Wolle, 3 Leg. Gaz. (Pa.) 86.

Where a merchant furnishes provisions to the hands of a manufacturing company, upon their orders, which they take up monthly, by giving their notes, the stockholders are liable therefor. Reading Industrial Mfg. Co. v. Graeff, 64 Pa. St. 395. But they are not individually liable for the breach of a contract to deliver stock, in exchange for certain specific articles; they are only so liable where an action of debt will lie. Weiss v. Mauch Chunk Iron Co., 58 Pa. St. 295.

A purchase of property, for the purpose of carrying on the company's business, is not void because it includes some articles not needed for the business, if made in good faith; and the stockholders are individually liable therefor. Moss v. Averell, 10 N. Y. 449.

A stockholder is liable for interest upon an amount equal to his stock, from the time of the commencement of suit against him. Burr v. Wilcox, 22 N. Y. 551. But, in an action against a stockholder, the plaintiff cannot recover the costs of a former action against the company. Bailey v. Bancker, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 188. See Fisk v. Keeseville Woollen & Cotton Mfg. Co., 10 Paige (N. Y.) 592.

One manufacturing corporation may take shares of another in payment of a debt; and neither the first corporation, nor any person taking from it, with knowledge of all the facts, a negotiable promissory note of the second corporation, can, in an action thereon against the latter, summon in other stockholders and have execution against them, under Stat. 1851, ch. 315. Howe v. Boston Carpet Co., 16 Gray (Mass.) 493.

Though a creditor, who has two or more demands against a manufacturing paid in¹ and a certificate thereof made and recorded.² The stockholder's liability is not confined to the original capital stock, but attaches to an increase of the capital if authorized by the statute.³ The individual liability of a stockholder is extincompany, one only of which the stockholders are liable to pay, recovers a single judgment on all the demands, yet he may levy his execution on the personal property of a stockholder, to the amount of the demand which the stockholders are liable to pay. Stedman v. Eveleth, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 114.

Bringing Suit Within a Year.—Among the claims presented was one in favor of a bank which had discounted a note dated October 2nd, 1876, payable in four months. Upon maturity it was renewed for four months, and again renewed for five months. Suit was brought against the company on November 3rd, 1877. Held, that this was a debt to be paid within one year from the time it was contracted, and that suit was brought within one year after it became due, within the meaning of the provision of the statute exempting stockholders from liability from claims not contracted to be paid or not sued within the year, and that the claim was properly allowed. Veeder v. Mudgett, 95 N. Y. 295.

1. A stockholder is liable, under the Pennsylvania act of 1853, for the debts of the company incurred whilst he is a stockholder, though he has paid up the whole of his stock. Patterson v. Wyomissing Mfg. Co., 40 Pa. St. 117.

2. Making and Recording Certificate.—The certificate of the officers of a manufacturing company, prescribed by Massachusetts Rev. Stat., ch. 38, § 17, stating the amount of the capital fixed and paid in, sworn to and recorded, within thirty days, in the registry of deeds, is conclusive evidence, for the stockholders, of the facts therein stated, so far as to exempt them from personal liability for the subsequent debts of the company. Stedman v. Eveleth, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 114. See 127 Mass. 569.

But in New York it is held that the liability to creditors imposed upon the stockholders is not taken away by the making and recording of a certificate as is required by the statute stating the amount of the capital stock, and that the whole thereof has been paid in. To end the liability both the stock must be paid in and the certificate must be recorded; the certificate is not conclusive as to the payment. Veeder v. Mudgett, 95 N. Y. 295.

The provision requiring the recording of the certificate within thirty days is directory merely, and where a certificate is properly made and given to the county clerk for record, the duty imposed upon the stockholders is performed, and they are not liable because of an omission to record, which is wholly the fault of that officer. Id.

3. Increase of Capital.—Veeder v. Mudgett, 95 N. Y. 295.

Where, however, the original capital is paid in in full, and a certificate made and recorded, the liability of the stockholders thus far is ended and cannot be revived by an increase of the capital; the liability rests solely upon the holders of the increased stock and is limited by the par value of such stock.

The R. I. Co. was organized in 1868, with a capital of $200,000, which was paid in, but no certificate thereof was made and recorded. In 1869 the trustees passed a resolution increasing the stock to $300,000, and at a meeting of the stockholders, by a vote of two-thirds, the increase was ratified; no notice of such meeting was published, nor was a certificate of its proceedings made and filed, as required by the New York act (sections 21, 22). The increased stock was issued, but not fully paid in; holders thereof voted at stockholders' meetings, shared in dividends, and in all respects were treated and acted as holders of legal stock. In 1873 a certificate was made by the proper officers and delivered to the county clerk for record, which stated the capital to be $300,000, and that it was actually paid in. In an action brought by a creditor to enforce the liability imposed upon stockholders because of failure to pay in the capital stock, held, that the certificate was sufficient to exonerate the holders of the original stock, but was not conclusive, as against the creditors, that the increased stock had been paid in; and that the holders thereof were estopped from questioning the validity of the increase; also that, as the indebtedness provable under said act (section 24)

guished by a payment of debts of the corporation equal in amount to his stock.¹

A creditor of a manufacturing corporation cannot maintain an action against a stockholder to enforce the liability to creditors imposed by statute, until he has obtained a judgment upon his claim against the corporation, and an execution has been issued thereon and returned unsatisfied.² The statute of limitations, therefore, does not begin to run in favor of a stockholder until was more than the amount of the increase, such holders were liable to the extent of the par value of the increased stock. Veeder v. Mudgett, 95 N. Y. 295.

1. Garrison v. Howe, 17 N. Y. 458; Woodruff etc. Works v. Chittenden, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 406.

Advances for Benefit of Company.—On a bill against the stockholders, they are to be allowed for advances made for the benefit of the company, beyond the value of their stock, whether made before or after dissolution. Briggs v. Penniman, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 387. See Brinckerhoff v. Brown, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 217. See Skinner v. White, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 107; Tallmadge v. Fishkill Iron Co., 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 382.

Trustees Who Have Already Been Held Personally Liable.—In an action to enforce the individual liability of the stockholders of a manufacturing corporation it appeared that defendants, M and T, were trustees of said company for the years of 1875 and 1876. No annual reports for those years were filed as required by the statute. A creditor, after judgment against the company in an action brought more than a year after his claim fell due, sued said trustees because of the omission to comply with such requirement, and recovered judgment for the amount of his claim, which they paid. They claimed to be allowed the amount so paid in reduction of their liability. Held, that said claim was properly rejected. Veeder v. Mudgett, 95 N. Y. 295.

2. Handy v. Draper, 89 N. Y. 334; Lindsley v. Simonds, 2 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr., N. S. 69.

Judgment and Execution Against Corporation.—The return of an execution unsatisfied against a manufacturing corporation is a condition precedent to the right of a creditor to bring an action against a stockholder, and the recovery of a judgment and return of an execution unsatisfied in a foreign State is not sufficient. Rocky Mountain Nat.

Bank v. Bliss, 14 Week. Dig. (N. Y.) 553.

This condition applies to a continuing stockholder as well as to one who has ceased to be such. Rocky Mountain Nat. Bank v. Bliss, 14 Week. Dig. (N. Y.) 553.

The commencement of a suit against the company, for a part of the plaintiff's claim, is not sufficient to render a stockholder liable for the residue. Shellington v. Howland, 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 14; s. c., 53 N. Y. 371.

After the return of an execution unsatisfied, a bill may be filed in equity against the corporation and the stockholders jointly, to enforce their individual liability. The decree may subject them all to the debt, with leave to apply to enforce contribution among each other. Masters v. Rossie Lead Mining Co., 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 301.

A mere return of nulla bona is not sufficient to found a bill against the stockholders; the return must be special. Bacon v. Morris, 30 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 392.

To hold a stockholder personally liable, on the ground that the capital stock has not been paid in full, a suit must be commenced against the corporation within one year after the debt became due; and this notwithstanding proceedings against it in bankruptcy, in which the creditor proved his claim. Birmingham Bank v. Mosser, 14 Hun (N. Y.) 605.

To maintain an action against a stockholder of a manufacturing corporation the necessity of a previous execution unsatisfied against the corporation is dispensed with, where it is rendered impossible by proceedings under the bankrupt act instituted by the stockholder himself. And proof of the debt against the corporation in bankruptcy is not a bar to an action thereon against the stockholder. Shellington v. Howland, 53 N. Y. 371.

The complaint alleged that a judgment was obtained against the company

the return of the execution against the corporation.¹ In New York a judgment against the company is not even prima facie evidence of the validity of the debt, in an action to enforce the individual liability of a stockholder.² The stockholder's liability within a year after the debt became due. Held, upon demurrer, sufficient to indicate that the recovery was for the same debt as that set forth in the complaint, and that such recovery of the whole debt included the instalments for which the defendant was liable. McMaster v. Davidson, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 542.

Though a creditor who has two demands against a manufacturing company, one only of which the stockholders are liable to pay, recovers a single judgment on both demands, yet he may levy his execution on the personal property of a stockholder, to the amount of the demand which the stockholders are liable to pay. Stedman v. Eveleth, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 114.

Expiration of Charter—Formation of New Company.—Where the charter of a manufacturing company expires by lapse of time, and a new company is formed by the stockholders, or some of them, under the same name, to which all the assets are transferred, the new company and the personal liability of its stockholders, constitute the primary fund for the payment of a judgment recovered against it, for a debt of the original company, which must be exhausted before recourse can be had to the individual liability of the stockholders of the latter. Cushman v. Shepard, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 113.

Demand Upon Officer of Corporation.—Under Mass. Stat. 1808, ch. 65, § 6, and Stat. 1817, ch. 183, an execution against a manufacturing corporation cannot be levied on the property of its members, unless there has first been a demand on the president, treasurer or clerk of the corporation, by the officer who holds the execution, to show to him property sufficient to satisfy and pay the sum due thereon; although on the original writ property of the members was attached, after a default of the corporation to show to the officer, who held the writ, property sufficient to satisfy the judgment which might be recovered thereon. Stone v. Wiggin, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 316.

A supersedeas, annexed to an execution issued on a judgment against a manufacturing corporation, as to certain stockholders who had been summoned in the action in which the judgment was recovered, pursuant to Mass. Stat. 1851, ch. 315, § 2, does not exonerate such stockholders from any liability as officers of that corporation. And such execution and supersedeas afford no protection to an officer against another stockholder upon whose property he levies the execution, when there are such persons, liable as officers, and having property upon which the execution might be levied. Denny v. Richardson, 4 Gray (Mass.) 274.

Independent Action at Law.—A state statute making stockholders of a manufacturing corporation liable for debts of the company, provided for the enforcement of the liability against them on writs of attachment or execution issued against the company, or by bill in equity against the stockholders (R. I. Act 1847, §§ 1, 14); but a subsequent statute enacted that "all proceedings to enforce the liability of a stockholder for the debt of a corporation shall be either by suit in equity . . . or by an action of debt upon the judgment obtained against such corporation" (Act 1877, ch. 600). Held, that under either statute the debt must be established by a judgment against the corporation, before the creditor could proceed against the stockholders; that the liability imposed upon the stockholders by statute could not be enforced even by a court out of the State without a compliance with the statutory conditions; and an independent action at law could not be maintained by a creditor of the corporation, having no judgment against it, in a circuit court of the United States in another State, to enforce such liability against a stockholder, even though the corporation was bankrupt. Fourth Nat. Bank v. Francklyn, 120 U. S. 747; 30 Lawyers' ed. 825; 7 Supr. Ct. Rep. 757.

1. Handy v. Draper, 89 N. Y. 334. See DEFENCES, V. 5, infra.

2. Judgment as Prima Facie Evidence.—Moss v. McCullough, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 131; Conant v. Van Schaick, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 87; Strong v. Wheaton, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 616; Miller v. White, 50 N. Y. 137; Squires v. Brown, 22 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 35; Peckham v. Smith, 9 is limited to the amount of his stock with interest from time of the commencement of the action. The allowance of interest from the date of recovery of judgment against the corporation is, therefore, improper.¹

The stockholders are only individually liable to creditors to an amount equal to the stock held by them; if the plaintiff be also a stockholder the defendant is only entitled to an abatement of the sum equal to the amount of the stock held by the plaintiff; it is not a bar to the action.² On the dissolution of a manufacturing company, an action lies against an individual stockholder for a debt of the company, and he is liable to the extent of his stock.³

Ib. 436; Moss v. McCullough, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 279; Nimmons v. Tappan, 2 Sw. (N. Y.) 652; Conklin v. Furman, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 484; Hall v. Seigel, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 206.

A judgment against the company is not even prima facie evidence of the validity of a promissory note, upon which it was obtained. Moss v. McCullough, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 131. See Moss v. Oakley, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 265.

But in Massachusetts it appears to be otherwise. In an action on an account annexed, against a manufacturing corporation, under Mass. Gen. Stat., ch. 61, begun more than a year after the signing of the articles of association, and nearly a year after the first meeting of the signers and their choice of officers, the corporation filed an affidavit of merits and an answer, and afterwards submitted to a default and judgment thereon. In a suit in equity brought by the creditor, under Mass. Stat. 1862, ch. 218, § 4, to recover from the stockholders individually the amount of this judgment, held, that the judgment, if not conclusive, was at least prima facie evidence that the account was one on which the corporation was liable, even though the account bore date three days before said meeting. Hawes v. Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Co., 101 Mass. 385.

But in an action against a manufacturing corporation, on a promissory note, if they admit the debt sued on, it cannot be disputed by a stockholder summoned in under Mass. Stat. 1851, ch. 315, § 1. Johnson v. Somerville Dyeing and Bleaching Co., 15 Gray (Mass.) 216.

And in Pennsylvania the Massachusetts rule is followed. It is accordingly held that in a scire facias against a stockholder, the judgment against the company is conclusive; the defendant can only show that he is not a stockholder, or that the judgment was recovered for a claim for which stockholders are not personally liable. Wilson v. Pittsburgh & Youghiogheny Coal Co., 43 Pa. St. 424.

1. Allowance of Interest.—Handy v. Draper, 89 N. Y. 334.

In Wheeler v. Millar, 90 N. Y. 353, the referee computed the interest on plaintiff's demand from the date on which it became due from the company instead of from the date of the commencement of the action; the indebtedness was less than defendant's liability as a stockholder, and the allowance of interest did not swell it beyond that limit. Held, no error.

2. Woodruff & Beach Iron Works v. Chittenden, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 406.

But such deductions would not avail the party in a subsequent suit by another creditor. Woodruff & Beach Iron Works v. Chittenden, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 406.

The creditors may enforce their claims by suit against the corporation, though they be stockholders therein; and obtain contribution in the mode prescribed by the statute. Brinham v. Wellersburg Coal Co., 47 Pa. St. 43.

3. Dissolution.—Bank of Poughkeepsie v. Ibbotson, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 473.

In the event of a dissolution, the stockholders are individually liable for a bond executed by the trustees under the corporate seal, upon which judgment has been entered, unless they can impeach it for fraud or mistake. Slee v. Bloom, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 669.

A manufacturing company which has ceased to do business, and is without funds, is held to be dissolved without any judgment of ouster, so far as to give a remedy to its creditors against

(b) To Laborers and Servants.—The New York manufacturing act provides that the stockholders of companies organized thereunder shall be jointly and severally individually liable for all the debts which may be due and owing to all their laborers, servants and apprentices for services performed for the corporation.¹ The word "servant" as used in this act is, it seems, not restricted to one who performs menial service.² A reporter employed by a newspaper company is a servant within the meaning of this act; and so is a city or assistant editor if not an officer of the company.³ But the secretary of a manufacturing company is not a servant or laborer within the meaning of the act;⁴ nor is a contractor for the construction of part of a railroad.⁵ Nor does the act include one who contracts for and furnishes laborers and servants for others, or who contracts for and furnishes teams for work whether with or without his own services.⁶ An overseer and bookkeeper is a servant within the meaning of the act.⁷ But it has been held that one employed at a yearly salary as a bookkeeper and general manager is not a laborer, servant or apprentice.⁸

In an action against a stockholder, who is personally liable for wages, where the same were payable monthly, only so much thereof can be recovered as become due within one year prior to the commencement of the action.⁹ It is also held that an action the individual stock holders; and a colorable election of trustees will not prevent such dissolution. Briggs v. Penniman, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 387. See Brinckerhoff v. Brown, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 217.

1. Laws of 1848, ch. 40, § 18.

2. It includes, therefore, one acting as an engineer and fireman, and sometimes the superintendent of a mining company. Vincent v. Bamford, 1 J. & S. (N. Y.) 566. But in Wakefield v. Fargo, 90 N. Y. 213, the court of appeals were inclined to the opinion, although it was not decided, that the services referred to are menial or manual services performed by one of a class whose number usually look to the reward of the day's service for immediate or present support. And the agent of a mining corporation employed to take charge of its mines in another country has been held not to be a servant within the meaning of the act so as to render the stockholders individually liable for his services. Hill v. Spencer, 61 N. Y. 274; reversing s. c., 2 J. & Sp. 304; Dean v. DeWolf, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 186. And see Krauser v. Ruckel, 17 Ib. 463.

3. Harris v. Norvell, 1 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 127.

4. Coffin v. Reynolds, 37 N. Y. 640.

5. Aikin v. Wasson, 24 N. Y. 482.

6. Balch v. New York etc. R. Co., 46 N. Y. 521.

7. The stockholders are individually liable to an overseer and bookkeeper for wages which became due to him within one year prior to a recovery against the company, though the hiring was for a longer term than one year. Hovey v. Ten Broock, 3 Rob. (N. Y.) 116.

The plaintiff's assignor acted as foreman of a corporation rendering manual service of the same kind as that performed by the other laborers, kept the time of the men, solicited orders, collected bills and did whatever was required of him by the secretary and treasurer of the company, who acted as general superintendent. Held, that he was a laborer or servant within the meaning of the act. Short v. Medberry, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 39.

8. Wakefield v. Fargo, 90 N. Y. 213.

9. Short v. Medberry, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 39. And this is so although the employment of the plaintiff's assignor was upon the condition of his obtaining a loan of money for the company. Short v. Medberry, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 39.

will not lie by one stockholder against a fellow stockholder to enforce a personal liability under this section of the New York act.¹ The liability of the stockholders is joint and several,² and the complaint must show that the money was payable by the terms of the contract within twelve months from the time of making the contract.³

4. Contribution Among Stockholders.—When a stockholder of a manufacturing corporation has been compelled to pay a corporate debt he may have an action for contribution against the remaining stockholders who were originally liable with him for such debt.⁴ In New York, it is held that a stockholder who has paid

1. Richardson v. Abendroth, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 142.

2. Dean v. Whiton, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 203.

3. Hill v. Conkling, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 397.

What is a sufficient complaint in an action against the stockholders of a manufacturing company to enforce a personal liability for the wages of laborers. Dempsey v. Willett, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 264.

4. Aspinwall v. Torrance, 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 381; Stover v. Flack, 30 N. Y. 64; Masters v. Rosie Lead Mining Co., 2 Sands Ch. (N. Y.) 301. But in Massachusetts, a member of a manufacturing corporation who has voluntarily paid a debt of the corporation for which the members were by Mass. Stat. 1808, ch. 65 and 1817, ch. 183, personally liable, has no remedy at law against the other members for a contribution. Andrews v. Callender, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 484. See Stat. 1829, ch. 53, § 11; Gen. Stat., ch. 60, § 35.

A creditor who is also a stockholder individually liable for its debts, cannot take, under Mass. Rev. Stat., ch. 38, §§ 16, 30, upon attachment or execution against the corporation, the property of other stockholders equally so liable; but must resort to a bill in equity against them for contribution under Rev. Stat., ch. 38, § 32, and ch. 81, § 8. Thayer v. Union Tool Co., 4 Gray (Mass.) 75. See Thompson v. Bemis Paper Co., 127 Mass. 595.

The stockholders of a mining company are individually liable for its debts, only in proportion to the number of shares held; if one stockholder pays a debt he can only recover from another such proportionate part thereof. Thomas v. Bevans, 2 Luz. L. Obs. (Pa.) 99.

A bill for contribution by one stockholder of a manufacturing corporation who has paid debts of the corporation under legal process is open to a demurrer by one of the respondents not shown to have been a stockholder in said corporation. Heath v. Ellis, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 601.

Apportionment of Liability.—In a suit in equity on Mass. Rev. Stat., ch. 38, § 32, by a stockholder of a manufacturing corporation who has paid a debt of the corporation, for which the stockholders are liable, to compel contribution by the other stockholders, the amount of the liability of each stockholder is to be determined by an apportionment of the debt among the shares held by solvent stockholders within the jurisdiction of the court. Cary v. Holmes, 16 Gray (Mass.) 127.

Agreement Among Stockholders—Remedy.—If the members of a manufacturing corporation, which is regulated by Mass. Stat. 1808, ch. 65, and Mass. Stat. 1817, ch. 183, enter into an indenture under seal, by which they agree to reimburse each other proportionally for such sums as they shall respectively be obliged to pay in consequence of endorsing the notes of the corporation, the remedy for a contribution should be sought by the proper form of action under the indenture; assumpsit will not lie. Andrews v. Callender, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 484.

Stockholders Compelling Payment of Subscriptions.—When the property of a manufacturing company, incorporated under the general corporation law of Maryland, has been assigned in trust and creditors are seeking their statutory remedy against the stockholders, thus compelling them to pay the debts contracted and due by the company, a court of equity has the right, at the instance of such stockholders, to compel subscribers to pay the amounts of their several subscriptions, in order that the common assets of the company may be realized and the claims of laborers, on a recovery against him, in a suit for contribution must join all the other stockholders.¹ If a stockholder, after a sale of his stock, with a power of attorney to transfer the same, which has not been executed by a transfer upon the books of the company, be compelled to pay a debt of the corporation, he has a right of action over against his vendee; as between the parties, the title passes with all its obligations.²

5. Defences.—As in the case of other corporations, there are certain defences which the stockholders of a manufacturing corporation may set up when sued to enforce their individual liability to the creditors of the company. But the courts do not favor such defences, especially if the corporation has become insolvent.³ If a stockholder invokes the process of a bankrupt court to stay proceedings in an action against the corporation he cannot avail himself of the lapse of time in a suit to enforce his individual liability.⁴ It is no defence, also, that the defendant was induced to become a stockholder by certain promises made by others in behalf of the company.⁵ Stockholders individually liable are principal debtors, not sureties, and therefore the giving of time to the corporation does not release them.⁶ They are severally and not jointly liable for the debts of the company; and accordingly a release to one of them does not discharge the others.⁷ Where the defendant sets up, as an equitable offset, an alleged indebtedness of the corporation to him, and it appears that the amount of his claim is less than the amount due upon his subscription, he is not entitled to the offset claim.⁸ A stockholder applied to their legitimate purposes and the stockholders relieved to that extent from a liability to which they are exposed, and which every principle of justice required should be borne alike by each. Fiery v. Emmert, 36 Md. 464.

1. Clark v. Myers, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 605.

2. Johnson v. Underhill, 52 N. Y. 203.

3. Cook on Stock and Stockholders, § 210.

4. Plaintiff, a creditor of a manufacturing corporation, sued it within one year after the maturity of the debt, but an order of the United States district court procured by defendant in proceedings in bankruptcy commenced by him against the corporation, forbade the further prosecution of the action and prevented judgment. In an action to charge defendant as a stockholder, held, that plaintiff was excused from prosecuting to judgment. Shellington v. Howland, 53 N. Y. 371.

5. Collins v. Swann, 7 Rob. (N. Y.) 623.

6. Hager v. McCullough, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 119.

7. Bank of Poughkeepsie v. Ibbotson, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 461.

8. This was decided in Wheeler v. Millar, 90 N. Y. 353. The court held that the defendant was bound first to pay his own debt to the corporation, and only in case there was a balance due him after such payment was he entitled to an allowance to the extent of that balance; that it was immaterial that his claim had not been actually applied on the subscription, as plaintiff had a right to insist that equitably it should be so applied when defendant stands upon an equitable right. Also held that it was not necessary that defendant's indebtedness to the corporation should have been pleaded, as it was not required of plaintiff to anticipate the defence. Also held that it was no answer that defendant's liability upon his subscription could not be asserted in this action; that plaintiff had the right to contend that as defendant's claim could apply only on one liability, the other remained, and could in a manufacturing company, who, with full knowledge that the whole capital stock has not been subscribed, as required by the statute under which the company was incorporated, participates in the organization of such company, attends its meetings, accepts the office of director, and is privy to the contracting of a debt by the company, cannot, in an action against him to enforce his individual liability for the debt, set up as a defence irregularity in the organization of the company, or that the entire capital stock had not been paid in.¹ And a person summoned as a stockholder cannot appear and plead to the merits or make any defence which goes to defeat the action as between the original parties.² His defence must be confined to matters which tend to show that he is not liable as a stockholder for the debts of the corporation.³

In Massachusetts, it has been held that stockholders in a manufacturing corporation with whom a summons has been left,⁴ in an action against the corporation on a promissory note, may defend against the action by showing that the plaintiff took the note when overdue and without consideration and holds it for the sole use and benefit of the payee, who was a stockholder in the corporation and equally liable with the defendants for its debts.⁵ In the same State stockholders need not show, in order to exempt themselves from liability, that they were not officers of the corporation, and as such liable for its debts.⁶ A person who is summoned as a stockholder, and defaulted, cannot afterwards deny the existence of the corporation or his liability to be arrested as a stockholder upon an execution against the corporation.⁷ The stockholder cannot defend himself from judgment against him in an action against the corporation by showing that the officers of the company have sufficient property to pay the judgment.⁸

The individual members sued cannot set up their own defaults or mistakes of organization as a defence against creditors.⁹ And it is no defence to an action against the stockholders that the company has not paid to the State the bonus on its capital stock required by law.¹⁰ Proving the debt in bankruptcy against the insist that no equitable right arose against the statutory liability.

1. Hager v. Cleveland, 36 Md. 476.

2. Holyoke Bank v. Goodwin Paper Mfg. Co., 9 Cush. (Mass.) 576, 582.

Prior to Mass. Stat. 1851, ch. 315, if a manufacturing corporation was defaulted in an action, the stockholders therein who had been summoned in as being individually liable could not deny the liability of the corporation but were confined to the question of their individual liability. And if that statute allows a different course it does not affect a case pending when it was enacted. Farnum v. Ballard Vale Ma- chine Shop, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 507.

3. Hobbs v. Dane Mfg. Co., 5 Allen (Mass.) 581.

4. Pursuant to Mass. Stat. 1851, ch. 315.

5. Thayer v. Union Tool Co., 4 Gray (Mass.) 75.

6. Thayer v. Union Tool Co., 4 Gray (Mass.) 75.

7. Richmond v. Willis, 13 Gray (Mass.) 182.

8. Brayton v. New England Coal Min. Co., 11 Gray (Mass.) 493.

9. McHose v. Wheeler, 45 Pa. St. 32.

10. Patterson v. Wyomissing Mfg. Co., 40 P. St. 117.

corporation is not a bar to an action against a stockholder.¹ Nor can the statute of limitations be pleaded in an action to enforce the individual liability of a stockholder to the extent of his subscription; it is a continuing liability until the whole amount of capital stock is paid in.² If the certificate show stock subscribed for, but unpaid, it is conclusive as to the liability of the stockholders to that extent.³

6. Actions to Enforce Liability.—The individual liability of stockholders can only be enforced in the mode provided by statute.⁴ In an action against an alleged manufacturing corporation, the plaintiff, in order to charge as stockholders the persons summoned, must prove the legal existence of the corporation, although it has never been defaulted.⁵ And in an action against a stockholder, the plaintiff must show affirmatively that the whole of the capital

1. Shellington v. Howland, 53 N. Y. 371.

2. Allibone v. Hager, 46 Pa. St. 48.

3. They cannot be permitted to show that such stock was subscribed for by them as agents of the company, and that the stock owned by them individually was fully paid. Allibone v. Hager, 46 Pa. St. 48.

4. Brinham v. Wellersburg Coal Co., 47 Pa. St. 43. Hoard v. Wilcox, 47 Pa. St. 51; Youghiogeny V. Shaft Co. v. Evans, 72 Pa. St. 331.

The only remedy against stockholders of a manufacturing corporation, who are jointly and severally liable for the debts of the corporation, under Massachusetts Rev. Stat., ch. 38, § 16, is either to take their persons and property on a writ of attachment or execution issued against the corporation, according to section 30, or to bring a bill in equity against them, under section 31; and no action at law will lie against the stockholders on a contract originally made with the corporation. Knowlton v. Ackley, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 93.

Under the New Jersey statute of 14th February, 1846, the individual liability of stockholders who have not paid up their subscriptions in full, is only enforceable by an equitable action, in which the corporation and all the delinquent stockholders are made defendants. Griffith v. Mangam, 10 J. & Sp. 369; s. c., 73 N. Y. 611.

Form of a complaint against the stockholders of a manufacturing company, for a debt of the corporation. Linsley v. Simonds, 2 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. N. S. 69.

Time of commencing an action of sci. fa. brought against stockholders in a manufacturing corporation, may be commenced as soon as the officer has ascertained, and certified upon the execution, that he cannot find corporate property or estate. Whitney v. Hammond, 44 Me. 305.

Action in Another State.—An action at law cannot be maintained in Massachusetts to enforce the personal liability of a stockholder of a corporation established in another State for a debt of the corporation, if the laws of the other State provide that the remedy against a stockholder upon a debt of the corporation in that State shall be by bill in chancery, and not otherwise. Erickson v. Nesmith, 15 Gray (Mass.) 221.

Where a decree is sought against the stockholders of a corporation for manufacturing purposes, formed under New York act of March 22nd, 1811, on a bill filed by a creditor subsequent to the dissolution of the corporation, to compel the payment, by the defendants of a debt owing by the corporation, held, that there should be a reference to ascertain the debts due by the company, the stockholders who are liable, and if any of them have paid, on the debts due by the company, over and above the amount of their stock paid in, so as to reduce their respective liabilities, to ascertain such sum in each case, and to apportion among the stockholders who are liable the amounts respectively chargeable on each; and the decree should first require the payment of all unpaid instalments of stock, which are collectible and then duly apportion the residue. Cushman v. Shepard, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 113.

5. Utley v. Union Tool Co., 11 Gray (Mass.) 139.

stock has not been paid in.¹ An admission in the stockholder's answer that the defendant is a holder of stock coupled with an averment that it was such as to exempt him from further liability puts the plaintiff upon further proof.² In Pennsylvania, there may be separate actions against the company and the stockholders; and a claim not included in an action against the company may be recovered in a subsequent suit against the stockholders.³ An injunction, after a receiver has been appointed in an action to compel the officers and trustees to account, restraining creditors of the corporation from prosecuting actions against it, when the object of such actions is to obtain judgments and executions against it, to enable the creditors to proceed against the stockholders and trustees to enforce their individual liability, is unauthorized.⁴ The books of a corporation relating to its private transactions are not admissible in evidence, in an action against a stockholder in a manufacturing corporation incorporated under the general incorporation law of Maryland, by a creditor, to enforce the stockholder's individual liability for a debt contracted by the company.⁵

Where it is intended to hold the stockholders individually liable, they, or a portion of them, should be joined in the original action against the company.⁶ But a creditor cannot maintain a suit against a part of the stockholders without joining the corporation, even though he may have previously obtained a judgment against it; and the nonjoinder may be pleaded in the action.⁷ In a suit

1. Bruce v. Driggs, 25 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 71.

Allegations Necessary.—It is not necessary, in the declaration, to charge specially the grounds relied on as evidence of dissolution; a general averment is enough. Bank of Poughkeepsie v. Ibbotson, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 473.

In an action against a manufacturing corporation, in which individuals are summoned in as stockholders, according to Stat. 1851, ch. 315, their liability as stockholders need not be alleged in the declaration. Johnson v. Somerville Dyeing & Bleaching Co., 15 Gray (Mass.) 216.

An answer, setting up the plaintiff's liability as a stockholder of a manufacturing company, by way of counter claim, must aver that he held an amount of stock equal to the debt for which he is sought to be made personally liable. Chambers v. Lewis, 28 N. Y. 454.

The plaintiff must show on the trial that the capital stock had not been paid in when the debt was contracted. Bruce v. Driggs, 25 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 71.

In an action of assumpsit by the creditors of an association incorporated under Pennsylvania manufacturing law 1849, against the stockholders under the personal liability clause of that statute, it is competent for the plaintiffs to show: 1. That the certificate required by law in order to obtain the charter is essentially untrue; or, 2. That a portion of the stock was not paid in money according to law, if the declaration recognizes the validity of the charter as granted. Paterson v. Arnold, 45 Pa. St. 410.

2. Lewis v. Ryder, 13 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 1.

3. Patterson v. Wyomissing Mfg. Co., 40 Pa. St. 117, decided under act of 1853.

4. Mason v. New York Silk Mfg. Co., 27 Hun (N. Y.) 307.

5. Hager v. Cleveland, 36 Md. 476.

6. Mansfield Iron Works v. Wilcox, 52 Pa. St. 377.

7. Hoard v. Wilcox, 47 Pa. St. 51.

A creditor may file his bill in equity against the company and such stockholders as he knows, in order to charge them with payment of his debt, and at to charge a stockholder with a debt of the company the trustees are not necessarily parties.¹

VI. ACTION BY STOCKHOLDER AGAINST COMPANY.—A stockholder in a manufacturing corporation may maintain an action against the company for an indebtedness to him, although the company has ceased to do business and a new one has been organized with a larger capital and additional members, to which its property has been transferred.²

VII. MUNICIPAL AID.—The power to levy and collect taxes conferred in the charter of a municipal corporation does not authorize the purchase by the municipality of stock in a manufacturing corporation, or the issuance of bonds for the payment thereof, and bonds issued for such purpose are void.³

VIII. TAXATION.—A statute abolishing taxes⁴ laid upon manufacturing corporations exempts from taxation only the capital actually employed by such corporations in manufacturing. Accordingly the mining of iron ore has been held not to be manufacturing within the meaning of an act exempting manufacturing the same time pray a discovery of the names and residences of the unknown stockholders, with the amount of their stock, in order to make them parties by amendment. Bogardus v. Rosendale Mfg. Co., 7 N. Y. 147.

1. Harris v. Norvell, 1 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 127.

2. Cary v. Schoharie V. M. Co., 2 Hun (N. Y.) 110.

3. Cook v. Sumner S. & N. Co., 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 698.

The legislature of a State has no authority to authorize taxation in aid of private enterprises or objects; and municipal bonds issued under legislative authority, to be paid by taxation, as a bonus or donation to secure the location or aid in the erection of a manufactory or foundry owned by private individuals, are void even in the hands of holders for value. Commercial Nat. Bank of Cleveland v. City of Iola, 2 Dill. (C. C.) 353.

4. Local Taxation.—The "revenue laws of the commonwealth" referred to in section 20 of the Pennsylvania act of June 30th, 1885, which exempts manufacturing corporations from taxation thereunder, are those which provide revenue for the commonwealth as distinguished from those which provide revenue for county, borough, school and township purposes. Appeal of Hawes Mfg. Co. (Pa. 1889), 17 Atl. Rep. 219.

Validity of Exemption—Consideration.—The municipality of a town agreed with T to exempt from taxation for a series of years two of T's manufacturing establishments already in operation, in consideration of his assuming their place in an arrangement made by them with a railway company, by which they were bound to pay the latter $1,800, and also to find the railway company the right of way free upon the company constructing a switch from the latter's station into the town. The law in force when the agreement in question was passed was section 368 of the Consolidated Municipal act, 1883, as amended by the Municipal Amendment act, 1884, section 8, which read: "Every municipal council shall, by a two-thirds vote of the members thereof, have the power of exempting any manufacturing establishment, or any water works or water company, in whole or in part, from taxation for any period not longer than ten years, and to renew this exemption for a further period not exceeding ten years." Held, that the case was not within this section; that there was not a proper public consideration from T for granting the exemption, and that the arrangement was in effect a purchase by T and a sale to him of an exemption from taxation; and a by-law passed by the municipality for the purpose, but not submitted to the rate payers, was therefore quashed, with costs. In re Scott et al., 10 Ont. Rep. (Q. B. Div.) 119.

Carrying on Business in the State.—Under the New Jersey Tax law of 1884, manufacturing companies or mining corporations carrying on business in corporations from taxation.¹ The capital invested by a rolling mill company in building houses for the purpose of leasing the same to its employees is not within such an exemption.²

Under a statute which subjects to taxation as real estate "manufactories of all descriptions," an unfinished factory and the lot upon which it is erected is taxable.³

the State were excepted from the operation of the act. Held, that the term "carrying on business in the State," as applied to manufacturing companies, meant the establishing of a factory in the State, the bringing of new material thereto, and converting it into wares. State v. American Glucose Co. (N. J.), 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 112.

Gas Companies—State Board of Equalization.—Gas companies are assessable by the State board of equalization under sections 32 and 33 of the Illinois Revenue act (Rev. Stat. Ill., ch. 120), providing that banking, bridge, express, ferry, gravel road, gas, insurance, mining, plank road, savings bank, stage, steamboat, street railroad, transportation and turnpike companies shall be assessed in a particular manner by the State board, although a previous section of the same act provides that companies and associations organized for purely manufacturing purposes shall be assessed by the local assessors in like manner as the property of individuals. Ottawa Gas Light & Coke Co. v. Downey (Ill. 1889), 20 N. E. Rep. 20.

1. Appeal of Com. (Pa. 1889), 25 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 320. And a corporation engaged in the manufacture of steel rails is assessable upon the value of coal and iron ore mines owned by it, and used for the purpose of supplying raw material for the manufacture of rails. The fact that, by its charter, the corporation is authorized to own and operate its own coal and iron ore mines, does not bring it within the exemption. Id.

2. Com. v. Mahoning Rolling Mill Co. (Pa. 1889), 18 Atl. Rep. 135. In this case the court said: "While the tenant houses in which about $2,000 of the company's capital is invested, are in a certain sense 'reasonably necessary for the use of its employees,' the evidence clearly shows that they are not a necessary part of its manufacturing plant, and have no necessary connection with the business for which the company was incorporated. They are a convenience and advantage both to the company and its employees, and doubtless a profitable investment for the former; but, in principle, the employment of its capital in building houses, for the purpose of leasing the same to its employees, does not differ materially from any other investment that might be made outside of its business as a manufacturing corporation. The only question is whether capital thus employed or invested is within the exemption of the section above quoted. We are of opinion that it is not. In some respects the question is similar to one that was presented in Appeal of Com. (May term, 1889), in which opinion has just been filed. In that case we held that the section in question was intended to operate solely on capital actually employed in manufacturing, and not on capital employed in any other business or pursuit. In Gas Co. v. Chester Co., 30 Pa. St. 232, the question was whether houses erected by the company for its workmen were a part of the plant, and, as such, exempt from taxation. MR. JUSTICE PORTER, speaking for this court, said: 'The gas works are clearly exempted, but the dwelling houses do not appear necessary to the performance of the company's proper work. On the other hand, they are stated to have been erected for the accommodation of their workmen. This is convenience, not necessity. For anything that appears, these workmen might be able to discharge their duties as satisfactorily if they lived elsewhere.'

"It may be difficult in some cases to determine just where necessity ends and mere convenience begins. In the case before us, however, it appears to be quite clear that the investment of part of the company's capital in dwelling houses for the use of its employees was a measure of mutual convenience and advantage, and not of necessity."

3. Appeal of Hawes Mfg. Co. (Pa. 1889), 17 Atl. Rep. 219.

IX. DISSOLUTION.—A manufacturing corporation may, by suspending, and failing to carry on its business, or by the manner in which it carries it on, effect a dissolution.¹ And the statutes frequently give the courts power, upon proper cause being shown, to dissolve such corporations.² A portion of the stockholders, however, cannot maintain an action to dissolve the corporation; nor have they, in the absence of proof of fraud, mismanagement, or wrongdoing on the part of the directors, an absolute right to have a receiver of its property appointed; and this, although the corporation be utterly insolvent, is at least discretionary with the court.³

1. When Dissolution Is Effected.—Under N. Y. act of March 22nd, 1811, a manufacturing corporation, having ceased to act as a manufacturing company, and being without funds, and indebted, is dissolved so far as to give its creditors a remedy against the individual stockholders. Briggs v. Penniman, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 387.

A corporation, incorporated under New York act in relation to manufacturing corporations, for twenty years allowed all the corporate property to be sold on execution, and had wholly ceased to act in any manner for nearly two years, and had utterly abandoned the objects of the corporation; the stockholders also, upon a bill against them, under the statute, either suffered the bill to be taken pro confesso, or denied that they were corporators. Held, that the corporation was dissolved, though but a small part of the time for which it was incorporated had elapsed. Slee v. Bloom, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 456.

But under the statutes of New York, a manufacturing corporation which has become actually insolvent, and suspended business by a resolution for less than a year, having, however, buildings, machinery, etc., by which to carry on its business, is not dissolved. Bradt v. Benedict, 17 N. Y. 93. And a lease by the stockholders of a manufacturing corporation of all its property, to its president for two years, though the business was carried on as before, held a suspension of its ordinary business for the period of more than one year, in violation of 2 N. Y. Rev. Stat. 4634, §§ 38, 56, and a forfeiture of its franchise. Conro v. Gray, 4 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 166.

2. Pa. act of April 9th, 1856, does not restrict the power of the courts of common pleas to dissolve corporations to any class of corporations. Act of July 18th, 1863, being an act to provide for incorporating companies for mechanical and other purposes, expressly confers power on these courts to dissolve such corporations. Com. v. Slifer, 53 Pa. St. 71.

3. Denike v. New York R. L. & C. Co., 80 N. Y. 599.

Grounds for Dissolution.—It is no ground for dissolving a manufacturing corporation on the petition of a majority in number of the stockholders owning a minority of the stock, that one owner of the majority of the stock has for many years controlled the election of officers and elected himself agent and clerk; that he has for a long time managed the business "according to his own will and choice, regardless of the wishes and interests of the petitioners"; that, according to his statement, the corporation has been doing a losing business for many years; that he has refused to make any change in the business or to purchase the shares of the petitioners; and that, if the business were skilfully and properly managed it might be made a source of profit to all concerned. Pratt v. Jewett, 9 Gray (Mass.) 34.

Neglect on the part of a corporation for a greater period than one year to pay its debts is sufficient to justify an action for its dissolution. And such an action may be maintained by a stockholder of a manufacturing corporation organized and existing under the laws of this State. Kittredge v. Kellogg Bridge Co., 8 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 168.

Defendant, a corporation formed under the New York General Manufacturing act of 1848, to manufacture etc. certain machines under letters patent specified in the certificate of its incorporation, in order to prevent ruinous competition and litigation, entered into an agreement with a rival company under which the patents of both com-

An assignment by a manufacturing corporation of its entire business to creditors for the purpose of preferring them made at the request of the debtor and not the creditor, and not in any way brought about by legal proceedings, is within the meaning of a statute giving to employees a prior lien for wages to a certain amount when such business "shall be suspended by the action of creditors or be put into the hands of an assignee, receiver, or trustee."¹

MANUMISSION.—The giving of liberty to one who has been in just servitude, with the power of acting except as restrained by law.²

MANUFACTURES OF METALS (as used in an act regulating duties), means manufactured articles in which metals form a component part, and not articles in which they have lost their form entirely, and have become the chemical ingredients of new forms.³

MANURE.—This name may be applied to all substances which panies were placed in a new corporation, the stock of which was assigned to the two companies. Defendant kept up its organization and continued to receive royalties, etc., and prosecute and defend actions to which it was a party, and its assets largely exceeded its indebtedness. Held, that a judgment of dissolution on the ground that defendant had suspended its ordinary and lawful business would not be sustained. Kelsey v. Pfaudler Process Fermentation Co., 52 N. Y. Sup. (45 Hun) 10; 19 Abb. N. Cas. 427.

Action by Receiver.—In an action brought against a manufacturing corporation after recovery of judgment and return of execution unsatisfied, a receiver of its property and effects was appointed. An order was subsequently granted by the court directing that on payment of the judgment and satisfaction thereof, the order appointing the receiver should be vacated; thereupon the corporation turned out to the judgment creditor a note owned by it in payment; this was accepted, the judgment satisfied and said order vacated. The note was left by said creditor in the hands of defendant, who was president of the corporation, and he afterwards collected the same. Another receiver of said corporation having been appointed in another action, brought an action to recover the money paid on the note as money belonging to the corporation. Held, that the action was not maintainable; that the note became the property of the creditor, not only by the act of the company, but by the direction and with the approval of the court; that the new receiver gained no right in regard thereto except to question the validity of the payment, and this could only be done in an action against the creditor, not in an action against his agent. Prentiss v. Nichols, 100 N. Y. 227.

1. Bass v. Doerman, 112 Ind. 390.

2. Lenwick v. Chapman, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 472. And see State v. Emmons, Penn. (N. J.) 10, and State v. Admrs. of Prall, Cox (N. J.) 4.

"In the absence of statutory regulations, it has been held in this country, in accordance with the principles of the common law, that no formal mode or prescribed words were necessary to effect manumission; it could be by parol; and any words were sufficient which evinced a renunciation of dominion on the part of the master. . . . But mere declarations of intention were insufficient unless subsequently carried into effect. . . . Manumission could be made to take effect in future. . . . In the meantime the slaves were called statu liberi. See Cobb, Law of slavery." Bouv. L. Dict.

The term is also used to denote that a parent has released his child before majority, from its duty to serve in such capacity. Bell v. Bumpus, 63 Mich. 375. Also title PARENT AND CHILD.

3. Thus white lead, nitrate of lead, oxide of zinc, and dry and orange mineral, are not manufactures of metals within the meaning of the phrase. Meyer v. Arthur, 91 U. S. (1 Otto) 570.

subserve the purpose of enriching the soil and thus increasing the crops to be raised upon it.¹

MANUSCRIPT.—As to what constitutes a manuscript and the property rights of the author, see LITERARY PROPERTY; LETTERS; COPYRIGHT.

MANY does not mean a mere excess above a "few." "Many" denotes "multitude," and while it is not the synonym of the word "majority," it means a relatively large number as compared with the whole.²

MAP.—(See also BOUNDARIES, vol. 2, p. 502; CHART, vol. 3, p. 138; DEDICATION, vol. 5, pp. 405, 407; EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 622; EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 76; REGISTRATION OF INSTRUMENTS.)—A transcript of the region which it portrays narrowed in compass so as to facilitate an understanding of the original.³

MARAUDER.—A marauder is defined in the law to be "one who, while employed in the army as a soldier, commits larceny or robbery in the neighborhood of the camp or while wandering away from the army;"⁴ but in the modern and metaphorical sense of the word as now sometimes used in common speech, it seems to be applied to a class of persons who are not a part of any regular army, and are not answerable to any military discipline, but who are mere lawless banditti, engaged in plundering, robbery, murder, and all conceivable crimes.⁵

1. Heller v. Magone, 38 Fed. Rep. 911, where the clause in the tariff act admitting free of duty "guano, manures and all substances expressly used for manure," was so interpreted.

Where an act exempted from tolls carts employed in carrying "mould, dung, soil, marl, manure, or compost employed in husbandry for manuring or improving land," it was held that this exemption included soil carried by the owner to be deposited in a place belonging to himself and there sold for the purpose of its being employed as manure by others. Reg. v. Freke, 5 El. & Bl. 944.

Manure, in a heap, before it is spread on the land is a personal chattel. Toll. Ex. 150; Pinkham v. Gear, 3 N. H. 484. But manure lying upon the land passes to a grantee as an incident to the land, unless it is reserved in the deed. Kittredge v. Woods, 3 N. H. 503; Goodrich v. Jones, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 142; Parsons v. Camp, 11 Conn. 525; Plummer v. Plummer, 30 N. H. 558; Connor v. Coffins, 22 N. H. 538, where the fact that it is in heaps was not considered material.

But manure in a stable cellar unconnected with any farm was held not to pass by the conveyance of the house and stable. Proctor v. Gilson, 49 N. H. 62; 21 Pick. (Mass.) 222. See also LANDLORD AND TENANT, vol. 12, p. 713. When manure is made in the ordinary course of husbandry on farming lands it is considered a part of the real estate and cannot be attached or sold on an execution separately from the land. Sawyer v. Twiss, 26 N. H. 345.

2. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hall, 6 South. Rep. 282 (Ala.); 6 S. C., 4 Law. Rep. An. 710.

In Miller v. Beates, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 490, it was said that where "many years" had elapsed without hearing from a person, a jury might presume his death. "Many years is an indefinite expression. I am not for fixing, at present, any precise period after which a presumption of death arises," but it was held that fourteen years and nine months in the present instance was a sufficient period.

3. Anderson's Law Dict. Banker v. Caldwell, 3 Minn. 103.

4. 2 Bouv. L. Dict. 133.

5. Curry v. Collins, 37 Mo. 328. "But we cannot say that the word has yet received any such fixed, definite and generally received sense in the popular MARE.—See note 1.

MARGIN.—A sum of money or its equivalent placed in the hands of a stock broker by the principal or person on whose account the purchase is to be made as a security to the former against losses to which he may be exposed by a subsequent depression in the market value of the stock.²

mind, much less in any critical use of the language, that it can be declared as a matter of law, by its own force, to convey a direct imputation of any specific indictable offence."

1. In Ware v. Juda, 2 Car. & P. 351, an allegation in the declaration that the plaintiff lent a horse is supported by evidence that what he lent was a "mare."

"Mare" Not Included in "Cattle."—2 W. Bl. 721; 2 East Pl. Cr. 1074.

Mare.—The Sea. Rap. & Law. L. Dict.

Mare Clausum.—The sea closed, or close.

Mare Liberum.—The sea free.

The statute 9 Geo. I, ch. 22, was designed to extend the offences described in 22 and 23 Car. II, ch. 7, and therefore horses, mares and colts, are included in the word cattle. The words of the statute are: "That if any person shall unlawfully and maliciously kill, maim or wound any cattle, he shall suffer death without benefit of clergy." Paty's Case, 1 Leach, C. C. 72.

2. Bouv. L. Dict. The effect of the contract is that the broker, upon the performance of certain conditions by the customer, will buy and hold a certain number of shares, and in case any advance accrues and is secured by a sale, made under the direction or authority of the customer, he shall enjoy the benefit of it, and in case a loss ensues, the broker having performed the contract on his part, the customer shall bear it. Markham v. Jandon, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 462.

In Baker v. Drake, 66 N. Y. 518. Plaintiff employed defendants to purchase stocks for him upon margin, he agreeing that all transactions in stocks should be in every way subject to the usages of defendants' office. In an action for conversion, by an alleged sale without notice, of stock purchased, defendants offered to prove that it was the custom of their office to sell on account of failure to furnish sufficient margin at the Stock Exchange without giving notice to the customer of the time and place of sale. This offer was rejected.

Held (CHURCH, C. J., ANDREWS and MILLER, JJ., dissenting) error. See also Gregory v. Wendall, 40 Mich. 432.

In McNeil v. The Tenth Nat. Bank of New York, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 59, the court held that where certificates of stock are deposited with a broker, by a customer, as margin, or additional security against loss to him while carrying other stock for the depositor, the transaction is in law a pledge; and being such, annexing to the scrip pledged a power of attorney from the owner authorizing the transfer of the scrip does not change the character of the transaction, but is merely a necessary act to put the pledge in a condition to be available as such, in case of the pledgor's default. As between the pledgor and the pledgee, in such a case, the latter has no legal right, secretly or without the knowledge of, or notice to, the pledgor, to sell the stock pledged. The use of the certificates of stock by the pledgee, beyond the mere purpose of a pledge, or margin, is tortious, if not felonious. And a transfer of the certificates by the broker to a third person gives no title to the latter as purchaser, though he pays a valuable consideration therefor, and though the scrip has a blank power of attorney attached; and even though such person believed he was dealing with a person who had authority to sell. This is the rule in regard to every species of personal property, except commercial paper.

Purchase and Sale of Stock on Margins.—In purchases and sales of stock on "margins," the customer deposits with the broker as security a sum of money equal to but a small part of the value of the stock involved. This sum of money is the "margin." In these purchases and sales on margins, frequently no stock passes, nor is intended to pass, but merely the ultimate profit or loss called "differences" is paid; the losing customer loses the whole or part of his margin, the winning customer getting back his margin and also the profits, less commissions. Cook on Stock (2nd ed.) 457.

The border, brink, edge or verge of anything; the boundary line or contour of a body;¹ the blank edge of a leaf or page.²

MARINE.—Belonging to the sea; relating to the sea; naval. A soldier employed or liable to be employed on vessels of war under the command of an officer of marines, who acts under the direction of the commander of the ship.

This is a gambling contract, and, whether in or out of the stock exchange, is not enforceable where there is proof of an intent not to actually deliver the stock. McBurney v. Martin, 6 Conn. 502. See generally GAMBING CONTRACTS, vol. 8, p. 1013.

But a "Margin" Transaction is not Necessarily Gambling and Invalid.—In Hatch v. Douglas, 48 Conn. 116, the court observes: "It is pretty evident that the parties did not contemplate that the stock should be actually transferred to the defendant. The defendant (customer) through his agents, the plaintiffs, actually purchased the stock, and there was an actual delivery, not to the principal, but to the agents for the principal. The brokers knew that the defendant was speculating, and that they advanced him money for that purpose. But that was neither illegal nor immoral. No case has been decided which declares such a contract illegal. If we should so hold it would be difficult if not impossible to draw the line between legal and illegal transactions."

The broker is bound to keep on hand the amount of stock so held on margin, i. e. pledged. Taussig v. Hart, 58 N. Y. 425; Rogers v. Gould, 6 Hun (N. Y.) 229. See generally STOCK BROKERS.

1. Margin of a Creek.—A boundary on the margin of a creek, or river, seems to be the very dividing line between the water and the land, the line touching both. It is synonymous with shore, which PARSONS, C. J., says in Storer v. Freeman, 6 Mass. Rep. 439, when applied to the sea, "must be understood to mean the margin of the sea in its usual and ordinary state. Thus, when the tide is out, low water mark is the margin of the sea, and when the sea is full, the margin is high water mark. In analogy to the margin of the sea, it would seem that the margin of a fresh water river or creek must be the ordinary water mark. Ex parte Jennings, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 547.

In The Indiana Central Canal Co. v.

The State, 53 Ind. 589, the court held that the governor, having been directed by law to execute and deliver to the purchaser a "deed for the bed for the Northern Division of the Central Canal, including its banks, margins, tow-paths, side cuts, feeders, basins, right of way, dams, water power, structures, and all the appurtenances thereunto belonging," these words contain a specification of things included in the sale, and are each to be so construed as, if possible, to have effect, and the word "margins" is to be interpreted as embracing something distinct from the banks, tow-paths, side cuts, feeders, basins, right of way, dams, water power, and structures, and to embrace something adjacent to the canal, but distinct from these, and the purchaser had a right to suppose, if not otherwise informed, that any property belonging to the State adjacent and on the margin of the canal which had been appropriated or set apart or occupied by the State for canal uses, or was reasonably necessary for such uses, was included within his purchase.

In a suit to reform a deed to land sold as "bounded on" an artificial lake, and simultaneously resold with like description to defendant, who thereupon claimed an interest in the lake, evidence that defendant had, by an antecedent contract with the first vendor, agreed to buy the land under the lake, was proof of the intention of the parties to convey only to the margin of the lake, and the deeds should be reformed accordingly. Fowler v. Vreeland, 14 Atl. Rep. (N. J.) 116.

2. Marginal Note.—An abstract of a reported case, a summary of the facts, or brief statement of the principle decided which is prefixed to the report of the case, sometimes in the margin, is spoken of by this name. The marginal notes which appear in the statute books have not the authority of the legislature, and cannot alter the interpretation of the text. Rap. & Law. L. Dict. See also Marriage v. Great Eastern R. Co., 9 H. L. Cas. 32, and 31 L. J. Ex. 73.

It is also used as a general term to denote the whole naval power of a state or country.¹

1. Bouv. L. Dict.

Marine Corps.—A body of officers and soldiers under an organization separate and distinct from that of the army, and intended for service in detached portions, on board ships of war.

Marine Causes.—An action for wages as master of a canal boat is not a marine cause, within the meaning of Code Civil Proc., § 317 (New York), declaring an action in favor of a person belonging to a vessel in the merchant service for services during a voyage to be a marine cause, and is not triable forthwith at chambers. Warn v. Easton & McMahon Transit Co., 2 N. Y. Supp. 620.

Marines Included in "Persons Enlisted for the Navy."—The act of congress passed on the 2nd of March, 1837 (5 Stat. at Large 153), authorized a reenlistment of marines to serve during the cruise then about to take place, they being included in the denomination of "persons enlisted for the navy." Prior laws recognize marines as a part of the navy. Under the same act the commander of the squadron had power to detain a marine after the term of his enlistment expired, if, in the opinion of the commander, public interest required it. Wilker v. Dinsman, 7 How. (U. S.) 89.

Marine League.—A measure equal to the twentieth part of a degree of latitude. Bouv. Inst. N. 1845.

Three geographical miles. U. S. Laws, act June 5th, 1794; April 20th, 1818; 1 Story's Laws 352; 3 ib. 1694.

It is generally conceded that a nation has exclusive territorial jurisdiction upon the high seas for a marine league from its own shores. 1 Kent 29; The Franconia, 2 Ex. Div. 63.

Marine Contract.—Is one which relates to business done or transacted upon the sea and in seaports, and over which the courts of admiralty have jurisdiction concurrent with the courts of common law. De Lovio v. Boit, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 398; Ins. Co. v. Dunham, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 1.

A contract for the transportation of passengers by a steamship on the ocean is a maritime contract, and there is no distinction in principle between it and a contract for the like transportation of merchandise. The same liability attaches upon its execution both to the owner and the steamship. The Moses Taylor, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 411. See also The Schooner Titian, 5 Mason (U. S.) 465; Plummer v. Webb, 4 Mason (U. S.) 380; Drinkwater v. The Brig Spartan, Ware (U. S.) 91; The Sloop Mary, 1 Paine (U. S.) 673; New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. (U. S.) 344; Bazin v. Liverpool Steamship Co., 5 Am. Law Reg. 465; The Eddy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 481.

What Is Not a Marine Contract.—Contracts for building ships or vessels, or for labor done, or materials furnished in their construction, are not maritime contracts. The scow M. Tuttle v. Buck, 23 Ohio St. 565. See also Peyroux et al. v. Howard et al., 7 Pet. (U. S.) 343; Roach et al. v. Chapman et al., 22 How. (U. S.) 129. See generally ADMIRALTY, vol. 1, p. 197-8.

Marine Court in the City of New York.—A local court originally erected for the determination of controversies between seamen, but now a court of record, possessing general jurisdiction of controversies involving not more than $2,000, and special jurisdiction of civil actions for injuries to person or character without regard to the amount of damages claimed. Rap. & Law. L. Dict.

Marine Interest.—A compensation paid for the use of money loaned on bottomry or respondentia. Provided the money be loaned and put at risk, there is no fixed limit to the rate which may be lawfully charged by the lender; but courts of admiralty, in enforcing the contract, will mitigate the rate when it is extortionate and unconscionable. Bouv. L. Dict. See also Sm. Merc. Law (8th ed.) 410; BOTTOMRY BOND, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 483; RESPONDENTIA, infra.

MARINE INSURANCE.—See GENERAL AVERAGE; JETTISON; INSURANCE; SHIPPING.

- I. Definition, 319.
- II. What May be Insured, 319.
- III. Who May be Insured, 323.
 1. Alien Enemies, 323.
 2. Insurable Interest, 323.
- IV. The Policy, 328.
 1. Interpreted with Reference to Usages of the Trade, 329.
 2. Voyage and Time Policies, 334.
- V. The Amount of the Insurable Interest, 335.
 1. Open Policies, 335.
 2. Valued Policies, 337.
- VI. Double Insurance and Priority, 341.
- VII. Duration of the Risk, 343.
 1. Upon the Ship, 343.
 2. Upon the Cargo, 348.
 3. Upon Freight, 350.
- VIII. Matters Avoiding the Policy, 351.
 1. Misrepresentation, 351.
 2. Concealment, 354.
 3. Breach of Warranties, 362.
 4. Violation of Covenants, 372.
 5. Deviation and Change of Voyage, 373.
 6. Illegality, 374.
- IX. Perils Insured Against, 375.
- X. Losses Not Covered by the Policy, 385.
- XI. Total Loss and Abandonment, 385.
 1. Absolute Total Loss, 385.
 2. Constructive Total Loss, 389.
 3. Abandonment, 394.
- XII. Return of Premium, 400.
- XIII. Particular Average, 402.
 1. Definition, 402.
 2. Distinction Between Particular Average and Partial Loss, 402.
 3. On the Ship, 403.
 - (a) Repairs, 403.
 - (b) Extraordinary Expenses, 404.
 - (c) Wages and Provisions of Crew, 404.
 - (d) Risks Excluded by Memorandum, 405.
 4. On Freight, 405.
 5. On the Cargo, 407.
 6. Excepted by Terms of Policy, 408.

See also AGENCY; GENERAL AVERAGE.

I Definition.—Marine insurance is “a contract whereby one party, for a stipulated sum, undertakes to indemnify the other against loss arising from certain perils or sea risks to which his ship, merchandise or other interest may be exposed during a certain voyage or a certain period of time.”¹

II. What May be Insured.—Insurance may be effected upon the vessel, goods on board the vessel, the freight, a profit expected, a commission, passage money, bottomry and respondentia, salvage, on general average, a lien for disbursements, advances, the master's wages, an insurance premium, the solvency of an insurance company.²

1. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 16. This is the ordinary definition. 1 Phillips Ins. 1; 1 Duer Ins. 1; Marshall Ins. 1; 3 Kent Com. *253.

Perhaps the most accurate definition is that of Laundes Mar. Ins. (1st ed.) 1: “A contract whereby one who has an expectation of pecuniary gain . . . depending on the safety of property exposed to hazard at sea, may secure himself by paying beforehand a fixed sum as the price of the risk.”

2. The Vessel.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 18.

The words of the policy, “and also the body, tackle, apparel, ordnance, munition, artillery, boats, and other furniture of and in the good ship or vessel called the,” etc., include—

Provisions.—Brough v. Whitmore, 4 T. R. 206.

Boats.—Hoskins v. Pickersgill, 3 Doug. 222; Hall v. Ocean Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 472.

Whatever Is Appurtenant to the Ship—3 Kent Com. (13th ed.) 258; Plantamour v. Staples, 1 T. R. 611, n.

In some places they include instruments for navigation belonging to the ship owners. 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 525; 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 468.

Outfit.—Hill v. Patten, 8 East 375; Forbes v. Aspinall, 13 East 323.

But in whaling voyages where the implements for trying out blubber, harpoons, etc., are technically spoken of as "outfit," an insurance merely on the ship does not cover such "outfit." Hoskins v. Pickersgill, 3 Doug. 222; Gale v. Laurie, 5 B. & C. 156; Taber v. China Ins. Co., 131 Mass. 239 at 251; Lewis v. Manufacturers' Fire etc. Ins. Co., 131 Mass. 364.

The words include the interest of captors. Routh v. Thompson, 11 East 433; 13 East 274.

But do not cover loss by collision for which the body of the vessel is liable. De Vaux v. Salvador, 4 Ad. & El. 420.

The case of Peters v. Warren Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 389; 14 Pet. (U. S.) 99, is contra, but is opposed by General Mar. Ins. Co. v. Sherwood, 14 How. (U. S.) 352.

Insurance on the ship while it is being built does not include timber or materials intended for the vessel, but not as yet incorporated with it. 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 524; Mason v. Franklin F. Ins. Co., 12 Gill & J. (Md.) 468; Hood v. Manhattan F. Ins. Co., 11 N. Y. 532.

The identity of the vessel insured is not affected by repairing, no matter how extensive. Le Cheminant v. Pearson, 4 Taunt. 367; Livie v. Janson, 12 East 648.

Prior total loss may be insured against. Hughes v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 44 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 351; Insurance Co. v. Folsom, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 237; Continental Ins. Co. v. Allen, 26 Ill. App. 576.

Goods.—This covers such articles as are on the vessel for the purposes of commerce. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 27; Brown v. Stapylton, 4 Bing. 121, per BEST, C. J.; Hill v. Patten, 8 East 374, per LD. ELLENBOROUGH; Thwing v. Great Western Ins. Co., 103 Mass. 401 at 406.

So it includes bullion, coin, jewels, etc., on board for purposes of commerce. Da Costa v. Firth, 4 Burr. 1066; Wolcott v. Eagle Ins. Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 429; American Ins. Co.

v. Griswold, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 399. See Seton v. Delaware Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 175 at 178, per WASHINGTON, J.

But not such articles worn on the person. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 27.

It covers also an immigrant's equipments. Wilkinson v. Hyde, 3 C. B., N. S. 30; 27 L. J. (C. P.) 116.

The catch of a whaling vessel is covered by insurance of "goods." Hill v. Patten, 8 East 373; Wolcott v. Eagle Ins. Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 429.

"Goods" does not include ship's provisions. Ross v. Thwaites, 1 Park Ins. 23.

Nor its outfit for whaling. Hill v. Patten, 8 East 373. But see Paddock v. Franklin Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 227.

Nor provender for live stock. Wolcott v. Eagle Ins. Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 429.

Nor live stock itself. Wolcott v. Eagle Ins. Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 429.

Unless live stock is the usual cargo carried in the trade for which the insurance is made. Allegre v. Maryland Ins. Co., 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 136; Chesapeake Ins. Co. v. Allegre, 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 164.

Nor the captain's clothing. Duff v. Mackenzie, 3 C. B., N. S. 16, 26 L. J. (C. P.) 313.

Nor bank notes. Palmer v. Pratt, 2 Bing. 185.

Nor (semble) bills of exchange. Thomas v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 1 Price 95.

Profits, however, have been held properly insured as "goods." Pritchett v. Ins. Co. of N. A., 3 Yeates (Pa.) 458.

Where the word "property" was used it has been held to include bank bills carried for purposes of trade. Whiton v. Old Colony Ins. Co., 2 Met. (Mass.) 1.

And commissions of the master. Holbrook v. Brown, 2 Mass. 280; Wiggin v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 7 Pick. (Mass.) 271.

The phrase "goods, specie and effects" has been held to cover money advanced by the master for the benefit of the ship. Gregory v. Christie, 3 Doug. 419.

Whether goods laden on deck are included in an ordinary policy on goods, see under title JETTISON.

Freight.—The French law does not allow insurance of freight, and some other Continental laws are in accord.

1 Arnould (6th ed.) 33; Lowndes Mar. Ins. (2nd ed.) 12.

But the English and American law permits freight to be insured. 3 Kent Com. 270; Lucena v. Craufurd, 3 B. & P. 102; Michael v. Gillespy, 26 L. J., C. P. 306; 2 C. B., N. S. 627; McGaw v. Ocean Ins. Co., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 405.

"The word comprises all that is implied in the benefit derived by the ship owner from the employment of his ship." 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 31; Flint v. Flemyng, 1 B. & Ad. 45; Riley v. Delafield, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 522.

Thus, besides ordinary freight, it includes chartered hire. Winter v. Haldimand, 2 B. & Ad. 649, per LORD TENNENT; Forbes v. Aspinall, 13 East 323, per LORD ELLENBOROUGH; Etches v. Aldan, 1 Man. & Ry. 157; Clark v. Ocean Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 289; Cheriot v. Barker, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 346; Huth v. N. Y. etc. Ins. Co., 8 Bosw. (N. Y.) 538; Robbins v. N. Y. Ins. Co., 1 Hall (N. Y.) 325; Mellen v. Nat. Ins. Co., 1 Hall (N. Y.) 452. And the benefit to the owner of both ship and cargo accruing from the transportation of her goods to a market. Flint v. Flemyng, 1 B. & Ad. 45; De Vaux v. J'Anson, 5 Bing. N. C. 519; Miller v. Woodfall, 8 E. & B. 493; 27 L. J. (Q. B.) 120; Paradise v. Sun Mutual Ins. Co., 6 La. An. 596; Hart v. Delaware Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 346; Wolcott v. Eagle Ins. Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 429; Dumas v. Jones, 4 Mass. 647; Stillwell v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Mo. App. 22.

A charterer may insure his interest in freight under the general term "freight." 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 174; 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. 35; 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 480; Clark v. Ocean Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 289; Higginson v. Dall, 13 Mass. 96; Sansom v. Ball, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 459.

The contra has been held in New York. Riley v. Delafield, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 522; Robbins v. New York Ins. Co., 1 Hall (N. Y.) 325. Where also it was held that when a person had sold a vessel reserving the right to receive the freight due at the end of the voyage assured this would not be covered as freight. Mellen v. National Ins. Co., 1 Hall (N. Y.) 452. This is disapproved by 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 174, and by 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 480.

"Freight on board" is equivalent to "freight" simply. Robinson v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 1 Met. (Mass.) 143.

It has been held that "freight" alone would not cover the freight on live animals. Wolcott v. Eagle Ins. Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 429; Allegre v. Maryland Ins. Co., 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 136; 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 408.

The freight insured may be for either the whole or any part of a voyage. Violett v. Allnutt, 3 Taunt. 419; Taylor v. Wilson, 15 East 324; Leathely v. Hunter, 7 Bing. 529; Barclay v. Stirling, 5 M. & S. 6; Hall v. Brown, 2 Dow's P. C. 367; Michael v. Gillespy, 26 L. J. (C. P.) 306; 12 C. B., N. S. 627.

The case of Murdock v. Pott, 2 Park Ins. 399, contra, is overruled.

"Freight" does not include passage money. Denoon v. Home & Col. Ass. Co., L. R., 7 C. P. 341.

Profits.—Insurance of profits, though not allowed in France, Lowndes Ins. (2nd ed.) 15, is valid in England and the United States. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 37; 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 191; 1 Phillips Ins., § 181; 3 Kent Com. *271; Grant v. Parkinson, 6 T. R. 483; Barclay v. Cousins, 2 East. 544; Eyre v. Glover, 3 Camp. 276; 16 East 218; Fosdick v. Norwich Mar. Ins. Co., 3 Day (Conn.) 108; French v. Hope Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 397; Mumford v. Hallett, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 433, 439; Abbott v. Sebor, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 39; Tom v. Smith, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 245. But not on a bare expectation that a profit will be earned by a cargo not yet contracted for. Knox v. Wood, 1 Camp. 543; and see Lucena v. Craufurd, 3 B. & P. 84; Anderson v. Morrice, L. R., 10 C. P. 621, per BLACKBURN, J.

They may also be insured as part of the value of the goods. Ionides v. Pender, L. R., 9 Q. B. 531 at 535.

Profits expected from his investment by a shareholder in a company formed to lay an Atlantic cable are insurable. Wilson v. Jones, L. R., 1 Ex. 193; 2 Ex. 129; Paterson v. Harris, 30 L. J. (Q. B.) 354.

The goods from which the profit is expected must have been actually exposed to risk. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 38; McSwiney v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 14 Q. B. 634, 646; Halhead v. Young, 6 E. & B. 312; 25 L. J. (Q. B.) 290. And, in England, the assured must be legally interested in the goods at the time of the loss. Stockdale v. Dunlop, 6 M. & W. 224. But not so in the United States. French v. Hope Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 397; 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 192.

The English law is clear that there can be no recovery unless there would in fact have been a profit on the goods, 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 38; Grant v. Parkinson, 3 Doug. 16; Hendrickson v. Margitson, 2 East 549; Hodgson v. Glover, 6 East 316; Eyre v. Glover, 16 East 218.

The law of the United States is otherwise, there being a conclusive presumption that there would have been a profit. 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 318; 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 281; Patapasco Ins. Co. v. Coulter, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 222; Alsop v. Commercial Ins. Co., 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 451; Fosdick v. Norwich Mar. Ins. Co., 3 Day (Conn.) 108; Mumford v. Hallett, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 433; Loomis v. Shaw, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 36; Abbott v. Sebor, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 39; Locke v. North American Ins. Co., 13 Mass. 61.

Profit must be named in the policy. Lucena v. Craufurd, 2 B. & P. N. R. 315; Anderson v. Morrice, L. R., 10 C. P. 609, 622, 624; cf. Niblo v. North Amer. Fire Ins. Co., 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 551; but were held covered as "property" in Holbrook v. Brown, 2 Mass. 280.

Commissions.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 39; Lowndes Ins. (2nd ed.) 18; 3 Kent Com. *271; Flint v. Le Mesurier, 2 Park. Ins. 563; Barclay v. Cousins, 2 East 544; King v. Glover, 2 B. & P., N. R. 206; Wells v. Philadelphia Ins. Co., 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 103; Putnam v. Mercantile Mar. Ins. Co., 5 Met. (Mass.) 386; Holbrook v. Brown, 2 Mass. 280.

The goods on which the commissions are to be paid must be actually on board at the time of the loss. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. 39; Knox v. Wood, 2 Park. Ins. 563; 1 Camp. 543.

Passage Money.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 36; Lowndes Ins. (2nd ed.) 58; Truscott v. Christie, 2 B. & B. 320; Gibson v. Bradford, 4 E. & B. 586; 24 L. J. (Q. B.) 159; Willis v. Cooke, 5 E. & B. 641; 25 L. J. (Q. B.) 16.

Bottomry and Respondentia.—These interests are insurable. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 40, Lowndes Ins. (2nd ed.) 19; 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 210; Glover v. Black, 3 Burr. 1394; 1 W. Bl. 396; Kenney v. Clarkson, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 385.

They must be named. Glover v. Black, 3 Burr. 1394; 1 W. Bl. 396; Simonds v. Hodgson, 3 B. & A. 50; Robinson v. United Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 250; cf. 1 Phillips Ins., § 427. But only the lender can properly insure. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 40; 1 Phillips Ins., § 307; Williams v. Smith, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 138; Cai. Cas. in Error (N. Y.) 119.

Salvage.—Lowndes Ins. (2nd ed.) 21. General Average.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 68; Lowndes Mar. Ins. (2nd ed.) 21; Briggs v. Merchant Traders' Ass., 13 Q. B. 167.

Lien.—Lowndes Mar. Ins. (2nd ed.) 9. 21; Ebsworth v. Alliance Mar. Ins. Co., L. R., 8 C. P. 596; Donath v. Ins. Co., 4 Dall. 463; Russell v. Ins. Co., 4 Dall. 421; Murray v. Columbian Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 302.

Advances.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (5th ed.) 62; Lowndes Ins. (2nd ed.) 21; 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 204; Anon., 2 Shaw 283; DeSilvale v. Kendall, 4 M. & S. 37; Wilson v. Martin, 2 Exch. 684; Hicks v. Shield, 7 E. & B. 633; 25 L. J. (Q. B.) 205; Allison v. Bristol Mar. Ins. Co., 1 App. Cas. 209; Williams v. North China Ins. Co., 35 L. T., N. S. 384; The Karnac, L. R., 2 P. C. 505, 514; Currie v. Bombay Native Ins. Co., L. R., 3 P. C. 72, 83; cf. Watson v. Shankland, L. R., 2 S. & D. App. Cas. H. L. 304; Russel v. Union Ins. Co., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 409; Seamans v. Loring, 1 Mason (U. S.) 127; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Chadbourne, 31 Fed. Rep. 300; Burnham v. Boston Marine Ins. Co., 139 Mass. 399; Wright v. Williams, 20 Hun (N. Y.) 320; cf. The Thyatria, 8 Pro. Div. 155.

But advances are insurable only when the debt or the security will be extinguished by the loss. Lowry v. Bourdieu, 2 Doug. 468.

Thus, if the owners of a fishing vessel have a lien on the catch for money expended for bait, such money may be insured under the term "advances." Burnham v. Boston Ins. Co., 189 Mass. 399; Swift v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 113 Mass. 287.

A shipowner who is liable to refund advanced freight may insure it. Hall v. Janson, 4 E. & B. 500; 24 L. J. (Q. B.) 97.

A part owner of a vessel, who makes advances and disbursements on a venture engaged in by himself and the other owners, is in the position of a partner making advances to his firm, and has a lien on the vessel and cargo for his reimbursement, which constitutes an insurable interest. International Mar. Ins. Co. v. Winsmore (Pa.), 16 A. 516.

Where the agents, in New York, of the owners of a vessel in Georgia advanced, at the request of the owners, the necessary money to enable the vessel to proceed upon a voyage, taking out a policy of insurance to secure the money advanced, and on the loss of the vessel collected the insurance money,

But the wages of seamen or officers other than the master cannot be insured.¹

III. Who May be Insured—1. Alien Enemies.—Insurance effected by an alien enemy is void.²

2. Insurable Interest.—No policy of insurance is valid unless the assured has an interest in the property or thing insured, such that the loss of that property will be a pecuniary damage to him.³

the receipt thereof operated at once as an extinguishment of the debt, and a formal assignment of the claim by the agents to the libellant passed nothing; nor, by paying the loss, did the libellant acquire a right by way of subrogation to enforce the debt against the owners. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Chadbourne (Mass.), 31 Fed. Rep. 300.

Master's Wages.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 45, 89; 1 Phillips Mar. Ins. (5th ed.), § 213; King v. Glover, 5 B. & P. 206; Hawkins v. Twizell, 5 E. & B. 883; 25 L. J. (Q. B.) 160; Foster v. Hort, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 327.

The master may also insure his "effects." Duff v. Mackenzie, 3 C. B., N. S. 16; 26 L. J. (C. P.) 313; Buck v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 163.

Premium.—Glaser v. Corrie, 1 M. & S. 52.

The Solvency of a Company.—1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 205, citing Emerigon, tom. 1, ch. 1, § 2.

1. 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 212; The Lady Durham, 3 Hagg. 201; The Neptune, 1 Hagg. 222 at 239; Webster v. De Tastet, 7 T. R. 157.

While conceding this to be probable law, Mr. Arnould points out that under modern practice the seaman's wages should be insurable. No recent case has passed upon the subject. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 42-45, 89.

A seaman who has the privilege of carrying goods may insure those goods. Galloway v. Morris, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 445.

A supercargo who is to receive as his compensation a gross sum out of the proceeds of the return cargo has an insurable interest. New York Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 616.

2. The early cases allowed such insurance without actually deciding it to be legal. See 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 131, et seq.; 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 18, n. 3. But the law is now definitely settled as stated in the text. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 131; 1 Parsons Mar.

Ins. 18-23; 1 Phillips, § 147, et seq.; 1 Duer Mar. Ins. 463; Brandon v. Nesbitt, 6 T. R. 23; Bristow v. Towers, 6 T. R. 35; Furtado v. Rogers, 3 B. & P. 191; McConnell v. Hector, 3 B. & P. 114; Le Luneville v. Phillips, 2 B. & P., N. R. 97; Warin v. Scott, 4 Taunt. 604; Kellner v. Le Mesurier, 4 East 396; Gamba v. Le Mesurier, 4 East 407; Brandon v. Curling, 4 East 410; The Hoop, 1 Rob. Admr. 196.

An alien enemy who has been licenced to trade may make a valid insurance. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 134; Wells v. Williams, 1 Salk. 45; Kensington v. Inglis, 8 East 273; Canway v. Gray, 10 East 536; De Tastet v. Taylor, 4 Taunt. 233; Usparicha v. Noble, 13 East 332.

If the loss occurs before the assured becomes an alien enemy he can recover after the hostilities are over. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 135; Flindt v. Waters, 15 East 260; Harman v. Kingston, 3 Camp. 150.

If the policy is made in ignorance of the existence of hostilities, although the insurance is void, the premium may be recovered. Cone v. Bruce, 12 East 225; Hentig v. Staniforth, 5 M. & S. 122. And so if the risk has not attached, although the policy is bad, if the contract is renounced. Palyart v. Leckie, 6 M. & S. 290 (semble). See 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 134.

The premium cannot be recovered if the contract was legal at its inception. Furtado v. Rogers, 3 B. & P. 191.

3. Insurable Interest—An exact definition of insurable interest is difficult to obtain. 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 161, defines it as stated in the text, "any such interest as shall make the loss of that property a pecuniary damage to the insured." Perhaps the best, certainly the most celebrated statement is that of LAWRENCE, J., in Lucena v. Craufurd, 2 B. & P., N. S. 269, at 302: "A man is interested in a thing to whom advantage may arise or prejudice happen from the circumstances which attend it, and whom it importeth that its condition as to safety or other quality should continue. Interest does not necessarily imply a right to the whole or part of the thing, nor necessarily and exclusively that which may be the subject of privation, but the having some relation to, or concern in, the subject of the insurance, which relation or concern, by the happening of the perils insured against, may be so affected as to produce a damage, detriment or prejudice to the person insuring. . . . The property of the thing and the interest derivable from it may be very different. . . . By interest in a thing, every benefit and advantage arising out of or depending on such thing may be considered as being comprehended."

By the early common law insurance without interest was invalid. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 126; Lucena v. Craufurd, 3 B. & P. 75; 2 B. & P., N. R. 269; Barclay v. Cousins, 2 East 244. But a class of policies in course of time came into use which contained clauses dispensing with proof of interest by the use of the phrases "interest or no interest," "without further proof of interest than the policy," or "this policy to be deemed sufficient proof of interest," or similar forms of words, which were purely wager policies yet were declared to be valid. Asseviedo v. Cambridge, 10 Mod. 77; De Paiba v. Ludlow, 1 Comyns 361; Dean v. Decker, 2 Stra. 1251; 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 123. The statute of 19 Geo. II, ch. 37, § 1, however, declared all insurance on ships belonging to his majesty or his subjects, or on goods laden on board them "interest or no interest, or without further proof of interest than the policy, or by way of wagering or gaming, or without benefit of salvage to the assurer." null and void. Berridge v. Mau On Ins. Co., 18 Q. B. Div. 346.

The result of the law and the statute is that an insurance of British property without interest is invalid, but insurance of foreign property without interest is valid. Thellusson v. Fletcher, 1 Doug. 315; provided the policy on its face shows that the insurance is made without interest. Cousins v. Nantes, 3 Taunt. 513; Nantes v. Thompson, 2 East 385; Craufurd v. Hunter, 8 T. R. 13.

The law of the United States clearly requires the assured to have an interest. 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 160 and notes; Buck v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 163; Hancock v. Fishery Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 132.

But one whose interest was not intended to be insured cannot claim the benefit of an insurance effected by others, although by the terms of the policy his interest would seem to be covered. Pacific Ins. Co. v. Catlett, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 75.

Policies for Whom It May Concern.—An insurance for whom it may concern is limited to those who have an insurable interest, who may be lawfully insured, and for whom it was intended. Frierson v. Brenham, 5 La. An. 540; Haynes v. Rowe, 40 Me. 181; Stephenson v. Piscataqua etc. Ins. Co., 54 Me. 55; Newson v. Douglass, 7 Har. & J. (Md.) 417; Augusta Ins. etc. Co. v. Abbott, 12 Md. 348; Seamens v. Loving, 1 Mass. 127; Shearer v. Louisiana etc. Ins. Co., 14 La. An. 797.

Whether or not an insurable interest exists always depends upon the circumstances of the particular case, but the decisions have established the existence of such interest in certain classes of cases.

Owner.—The owner of property, of course, has an insurable interest in it. Marsh v. Robinson, 4 Esp. 98; Hutchinson v. Wright, 25 Beav. 444; 27 L. J., ch. 834; Provincial Ins. Co. of Canada v. Le Duc, L. R. 6, P. C. 224; Gray v. Buck, 78 Me. 477; The Sydney, 27 Fed. Rep. 119; International Mar. Ins. Co. v. Winsmore, 124 Pa. St. 61; Walls v. Helfenstein, 28 Wis. 632; Sturm v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 63 N. Y. 77. Though he owns only as trustee. Rhind v. Wilkinson, 2 Taunt. 237; Ex parte Houghton, 17 Ves. 253, 258; Hughes v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 44 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 351; Sleeper v. Union Ins. Co., 65 Me. 385; Home Ins. Co. v. Baltimore Warehouse Co., 93 U. S. 527; Johnson v. Campbell, 120 Mass. 449.

This interest remains although he has conveyed the property as security. Smith v. Lascelles, 2 T. R. 187; Carr v. Providence Washington Ins. Co., 109 N. Y. 504; Oliver v. Greene, 3 Mass. 133; Bartlet v. Walter, 13 Mass. 267; Gordon v. Mass. Ins. Co., 2 Pick. (Mass.) 249; Locke v. North American Ins. Co., 13 Mass. 61; Higginson v. Dall, 13 Mass. 96, 99; Lazarus v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 19 Pick. (Mass.) 81; Worthington v. Bearse, 12 Allen (Mass.) 382; Williams v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., Wright (Ohio) 542; Strong v. Manufac. Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 40; Curry v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 535. Although the conveyance be absolute on its face. Alston

v. Campbell, 4 Bro. P. C. 476; Hutchinson v. Wright, 25 Beav. 444; 27 L. J., ch. 834; Ward v. Beck, 32 L. J. C. P. 113; Provincial Ins. Co. of Canada v. Le Duc, L. R. 6 P. C. 224; 43 L. J., P. C. 49; 31 L. T., N. S. 142; Lazarus v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 19 Pick. (Mass.) 81.

If the owner has chartered the vessel, the charterer to pay its value if lost, he retains an insurable interest. Hobbs v. Hannam, 3 Camp. 93.

A vendor who has sold under an agreement to pay £500 if the vessel is lost within three months, and who is liable for six months to contribute to a mutual insurance company for loss, still retains an insurable interest. Reed v. Cole, 3 Burr. 1512, and though the only case on the point, Riley v. Delafield, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 522, is contra, there can be little doubt that a vendor who retains an interest in a particular voyage can insure that interest. 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 186; 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.).

The mortgagor of a vessel covenanting to repay the debt and to insure the vessel has an insurable interest. Wilke v. People's Fire Ins. Co., 19 N. Y. 184.

One who has contracted to purchase a vessel has an insurable interest if the title becomes absolute before loss, or if by the agreement the risk of loss becomes his. 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 166; Rider v. Ocean Ins. Co., 20 Pick. (Mass.) 259; Warder v. Horton, 4 Binn. (Pa.) 529; Simmes v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Cranch (U. S.) 618; Williams v. Smith, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 13.

As to the interest of the seller, see Stuart v. Columbian Ins. Co., 2 Cranch (U. S.) 442; Fernandez v. Great Western Ins. Co., 3 Rob. (N. Y.) 457. Although the agreement be oral, and so voidable under the statute of frauds. Amsinck v. American Ins. Co., 129 Mass. 185.

The contrary was held in England in the case of an oral sale of cargo. Stockdale v. Dunlap, 6 M. & W. 224.

Insurance itself is an insurable interest which may be covered by a re-insurance. Philadelphia Ins. Co. v. Washington Ins. Co., 23 Pa. St. 250.

A person with merely an equitable title has a valid insurable interest. Hemel v. Providence Washington Ins. Co., 23 S. Car. 190.

A stockholder in a company has an insurable interest in a vessel owned by the company. Riggs v. Commercial Mut. Ins. Co., 5 N. Y. Supp. 183.

The purchaser of unspecified goods has no insurable interest before the goods are appropriated to him. Stock v. Inglis, 9 Q. B. D. 708; L. R., 7 App. Cas. 345; 47 L. T., N. S. 417; 52 L. J., Q. B. 30; Anderson v. Morice, L. R., 10 C. P. 58, 609; L. R., 1 App. Cas. 713.

After the appropriation he has such interest. Sparkes v. Marshall, 2 Bing. N. Car. 76; Colonial Ins. Co. of New Zealand v. Adelaide Mar. Ins. Co., L. R., 12 App. Cas. 128.

If the title has passed it is immaterial that the bill of lading has not been endorsed to the purchaser before the loss. Joyce v. Swann, 17 C. B., N. S. 84; Seagrove v. Union Mar. Ins. Co., L. R., 1 C. P. 305; 1 H. & R. 302; 35 L. J., C. P. 172.

Although a vessel may be liable to forfeiture, for a cause not connected with the policy, she is nevertheless a subject of lawful insurance. Polleys v. Ocean Ins. Co., 14 Me. 141.

Charterer.—A charterer has an insurable interest in the ship. Oliver v. Greene, 3 Mass. 133; Clark v. Ocean Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 289; Robbins v. New York Ins. Co., 1 Hall (N. Y.) 325.

Lender on Bottomry.—But one who has loaned on bottomry has no such interest in the ship. Goddard v. Garret, 2 Vern. 269; 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 553.

Mortgagee.—A mortgagee has an insurable interest. Irving v. Richardson, 2 B. & Ad. 193; 1 Moo. & R. 153; Roussel v. St. Nicholas Ins. Co., 52 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 495; 9 Jones & T. (N. Y.) 279; Sclocovich v. Oriental Mut. Ins. Co., 13 Daly (N. Y.) 264; Ins. Co. of Pennsylvania v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 71 Pa. 31.

A transferred his title to a vessel to a British subject and took a mortgage for the price. No money passed in the transaction and the transfer was intended to enable the vessel to be run as a British vessel. It was held that A retained, to the extent of the mortgage, an insurable interest in the vessel. Sclocovich v. Oriental Mut. Ins. Co., 13 Daly (N. Y.) 264.

An owner of cargo who has paid money to reclaim cargo, and insured the money so paid, "loss to be paid in case ship does not arrive," has no insurable interest in the ship. Kulen Kernp v. Vigne, 1 T. R. 304. See also Buchanan v. Ocean Ins. Co., 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 319.

Consignee.—A consignee of goods has an insurable interest in them. Flindt v. Le Mesurier, 2 Park Ins. 563; Aldrich v. Equitable etc. Ins. Co., 1 Woodb. & M. 272. Especially if he has made advances upon them. Godin v. London Ass. Co., 1 Burr. 489; Carruthers v. Shedden, 6 Taunt. 14; Wolff v. Horncastle, 1 B. & P. 316; Robertson v. Hamilton, 14 East 522. See Conway v. Gray, 10 East 536; Ebbsworth v. Alliance Mar. Ins. Co., L. R., 8 C. P. 596.

Or if the consignment is made to secure a debt due him. Smith v. Lascelles, 2 T. R. 187.

One for whose benefit the consignment is made has an insurable interest. Hill v. Secretan, 1 B. & P. 315.

The consignee has no interest, however, after a stoppage in transitu. Clay v. Harrison, 10 B. & C. 99; 5 M. & R. 17.

Carrier.—A carrier responsible for the goods under his charge has an insurable interest. Crowley v. Cohn, 3 B. & Ad. 478; Stephens v. Australasian Ins. Co., L. R., 8 C. P. 18; Tate v. Hyslop, 15 Q. B. Div. 368. See Joyce v. Kennard, L. R., 7 Q. B. 78.

Warehouseman.—So also has a warehouseman or wharfinger. Waters v. Monarch Life & Fire Co., 5 E. & B. 870; 25 L. J., Q. B. 102.

Interest in Freight.—An interest in freight gives an insurable interest, but this can arise only when the goods are actually shipped. Montgomery v. Eginton, 3 T. R. 362; Tonze v. Watts, 2 Stra. 1251; Michael v. Gillespy, 2 C. B. (N. S.) 627; 26 L. J., C. P. 306; Melcher v. Ocean Ins. Co., 60 Mo. 77. Or the performance of a binding contract entered upon so that but for the peril insured against the freight would have been earned. Thompson v. Taylor, 5 T. R. 478; Horncastle v. Suart, 7 East 400; Moses v. Pratt, 4 Camp. 297; Warre v. Miller, 4 B. & C. 538; Williamson v. Innes, 1 M. & Rob. 88; 8 Bing. 80, n.; Davidson v. Willasey, 1 M. & S. 313; Foley v. United F. & M. Ins. Co., L. R., 5 C. P. 155; Barber v. Fleming, L. R., 5 Q. B. 59; Mercantile S. S. Co. v. Tyser, 7 Q. B. Div. 73; Stone v. National Ins. Co., 19 Pick. (Mass.) 34; Adams v. Warren Ins. Co., 22 Pick. (Mass.) 163; Robinson v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 1 Met. (Mass.) 143; Cheviot v. Barker, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 346; Griswold v. New York Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 321; Livingston v. Columbian Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 49; De Longuemere v. N. Y. Fire Ins.

Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 202; De Longuemere v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 128; cf. Gordon v. American Ins. Co., 4 Denio (N. Y.) 360.

While the vessel is a mere "seeking ship" there is no insurable interest in freight to be earned. Forbes v. Aspinall, 13 East 323; Hart v. Delaware Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 346; Riley v. Hartford Ins. Co., 2 Conn. 368.

Where a cargo was partially shipped and no binding contract had been made for the balance, it was held that the insurable interest extended only to the freight of that actually on board. Patrick v. Eames, 3 Camp. 441.

A shipowner has an insurable interest in "freight" of his own goods. Flint v. Flemyng, 1 B. & Ad. 45.

And the interest arises as soon as the goods are ready to be put on board. Devaux v. l'Anson, 5 Bing. (N. C.) 519; 7 Scott 507; Montgomery v. Eggington, 3 T. R. 362.

One who has made advances in part payment of freight which cannot be recovered if the vessel is lost has an insurable interest in the freight to this extent. Currie v. Bombay Native Ins. Co., L. R., 3 P. C. 72; Allison v. Bristol Mar. Ins. Co., L. R., 1 App. Cas. 209; Ellis v. Lafoul, 8 Exch. 546; Williams v. North China Ins. Co., 1 C. P. Div. 757; Sansom v. Ball, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 459.

But not so if the advance is a mere loan, and is recoverable although the vessel be lost. Mansfield v. Matland, 4 B. & Ald 582.

A shipowner has an insurable interest in advances made for freight which he must return if the freight is not earned. Hall v. Janson, 4 E. & B. 500; 24 L. J., Q. B. 97.

A charterer who has agreed to pay a lump sum as dead freight in the event of the voyage being prevented by a peril insured against has an insurable interest in freight. Puller v. Staniforth, 11 East 232; Puller v. Glover, 12 East 124; Puller v. Halliday, 12 East 494.

Interest in Profits.—The owner of goods has an insurable interest in the profit expected on them. Grant v. Parkinson, 3 Doug. 16; 3 B. & P. 85, n. Barclay v. Causius, 2 East 544; Eyre v. Glover, 16 East 218; 3 Camp. 276; Halhead v. Young, 6 E. & B. 312; 25 L. J., Q. B. 200; French v. Hope Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 397.

But not when the cargo has not even been contracted for at the time of loss. Knox v. Wood, 1 Camp. 543.

If, however, the goods are ready to be shipped and a legal certainty of profit exists, there is an insurable interest. McSwinney v. Royal Exch. Assoc., 14 Q. B. 634, 646; 18 L. J., Q. B. 193; 19 L. J., Q. B. 222.

Yet not if the contract is voidable under the statute of frauds. Stockdale v. Dunlop, 6 M. & W. 224.

Interest in Bottomry or Respondentia.—A lender on bottomry or respondentia has an insurable interest in his loan. Stainbank v. Fenning, 11 C. B. 51; Stainbank v. Shepherd, 13 C. B. 418. But the borrower on bottomry has not. Glover v. Black, 3 Burr. 1394; Simmons v. Hodgson, 3 B. & Ad. 50.

Interest in Commissions.—One to whom goods are regularly consigned has an insurable interest in the commissions expected to be received on a consignment, and can insure them even while still not certain that the particular goods at risk will in fact be consigned to him. Putnam v. Mercantile Mar. Ins. Co., 5 Met. (Mass.) 386.

Interest in Prize.—The government has an insurable interest in prizes taken during hostilities. Lucena v. Crawford, 2 B. & P., N. R. 269; Sterling v. Vaughan, 11 East 619; Routh v. Thompson, 13 East 274.

The captors, however, have none. Lucena v. Crawford, 2 B. & P., N. R. 269.

Unless in possession under circumstances in which a grant from the crown is an invariable custom. Le Cros v. Hughes, 3 Doug. 274; Boehm v. Bell, 8 T. R. 154; Sterling v. Vaughan, 11 East 617; 2 Camp. 225.

In the United States there is no insurable interest in prizes unless a law gives a share in them or a grant has actually been made. See The Joseph, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 545 at 558. per STORY, J.

Interest in Passage Money or Bounty.—A shipowner has an insurable interest in passage money. Truscott v. Christie, 2 B. & B. 320; Gibson v. Bradford, 4 E. & B. 586; 24 L. J., Q. B. 159.

And in a bounty paid by a government, provided it is the uniform custom to pay the bounty on mere proof of performance. Devaux v. Steele, 6 Bing. N. C. 358; 8 Scott 637.

Interest in Master's Earnings and Commissions.—A master has an insurable interest in his own earnings. King v. Glover, 2 B. & B., N. R. 206; Hawkins v. Twizell, 5 E. & B. 883; 25 L. J., Q. B. 160.

And his commissions. King v. Glover, 2 B. & P., N. R. 206.

One who has placed goods upon a vessel to be taken by seamen as needed and paid for out of the share of the catch of such seamen has an insurable interest in such shares. Hancox v. Fishing Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 132.

Interest in Insurance.—An underwriter has an insurable interest in his risks. Bradford v. Symondson, 7 Q. B. D. 456; 50 L. J., Q. B. 583; 45 L. T., N. S. 364.

Reinsurance is therefore a valid contract. Merry v. Prince, 2 Mass. 176; New York S. & M. Ins. Co. v. Protective Ins. Co., 1 Story (U. S.) 458; Bowery Ins. Co. v. Fire Ins. Co., 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 359.

Interest in a Lien.—The fact that one has a lien on either ship or cargo gives an insurable interest. Briggs v. Merchant Traders' S. L. & A. Assn., 13 Q. B. 167; 18 L. J., Q. B. 178.

Part Owners.—A part owner of a vessel and its cargo engaged in a joint venture has an insurable interest in the venture to the extent of his advancements and disbursements made or liabilities incurred before the vessel is destroyed, and for which it would have been liable had the loss not occurred. Internat. Marine Ins. Co. v. Winsmore, 124 Pa. St. 81.

Where two of several plaintiffs, in an action on a policy of insurance on a vessel, were owners of the vessel, and all were in copartnership and joint owners of the cargo, it was held that a sufficient interest in the plaintiffs was shown to enable them to sustain the action. Bulkley v. Derby Fishing Co., 1 Conn. 571.

One owning one half of a vessel and hiring the other half with a covenant to pay a fixed sum, in case of loss, may procure insurance on the whole vessel as his own property. Oliver v. Greene, 8 Mass. 133.

But one tenant in common of a vessel has no right, merely in virtue of such relation, to cause insurance to be made on property on board for his cotenant. Foster v. United States Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 86.

See also as to the interest of part owners Blanchard v. Waite, 28 Me. 51; Finney v. Fairhaven Ins. Co., 5 Metc. (Mass.) 192; Garrel v. Hanna, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 412; Finney v. Warren Ins. Co., 1 Metc. (Mass.) 16; Reed v. Pacific Ins. Co., 1 Metc. (Mass.) 166; Turner v. Burrows, 5 Wend. (N. Y.)

IV. The Policy.—The contract between the insurer and assured is embodied in the policy. A policy is necessary,¹ and must specify the particular adventure, the names of the underwriters, and the sum insured. If it lacks either it is void.² The English law also requires that it contain the name or firm of one or more persons interested, or of the consignor or consignee, or of the person receiving and effecting the order to insure, or of the person or persons giving the order to effect the insurance.³

In England, it must be stamped,⁴ and cannot be made for a period greater than one year.⁵

An oral contract of insurance is valid.⁶

541; Murray v. Columbian Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 302; Williams v. Ins. Co. etc., 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 345.

Nature of Interest.—The interest must be a pecuniary interest. 1 Phil. Ins. 174; 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 162, n. 1; The Aurora, 4 Ch. Rob. 218; Warder v. Horton, 4 Binn. (Pa.) 529.

It must exist at time of loss. Powles v. Innes, 11 M. & W. 10. But need not at the time the policy is made. Rhind v. Wilkinson, 2 Taunt. 237; 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 59.

Change of interest after loss is immaterial. Sparkes v. Marshall, 2 Bing. N. C. 774.

It is not necessary that the subject matter be indefeasible. Stirling v. Vaughan, 11 East 619, 629.

1. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 227; 30 Vict., ch. 23, §§ 12, 7; cf. Bhugwandass v. Netherlands etc. Ins. Co., L. R., 14 App. Cas. 83.

2. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 227; 30 Vict., ch. 23, § 7; In re The Arthur Average Assoc., L. R., 10 Ch. App. 542; In re Padstow Total Loss Assoc., 20 Ch. Div. 137.

In De Grove v. Metropolitan Ins. Co., 61 N. Y. 594, an agent of a marine insurance company, upon application for a marine insurance, instead of delivering a policy, executed and delivered to the applicant a receipt for a premium, which contained a brief statement of the risk insured. Held, that the receipt was simply evidence that the assured was entitled to an insurance in the usual form, and that the policy used by the company was to be looked to to ascertain the limitations and conditions of the contract, and the liability of the company.

Where goods are insured on "memorandum" or open policy entries of shipments, made on the blank book to which the policy is attached, are as valid as if made on the sheet on which the policy is written. Edwards v. Mississippi Valley Ins. Co., 1 Mo. App. 192.

Plaintiff, wishing to obtain insurance on his interest in the barque P. his agents, L. C. & Co., employed F., an insurance broker, who obtained from W., agent of the company, this paper, dated June 20th, 1878: "No. 1002—$1,200, D. S. F. & M. Ins. Co., Wilmington, Del. This certifies that we have this day entered in the name of L. C. & Co., for whom it may concern, on our open policy No. 1002, with (said company) a risk of $1,200 on barque P., at and from June 20th, 1878, to June 20th, 1879, loss, if any, payable in current funds, to Messrs. L. C. & Co., or order, according to the terms and conditions of the policy." (Signed) "J. S. W., agent." The paper was delivered to the broker to L. C. & Co., and by them assigned in writing to plaintiff. No policy was ever prepared or issued by the company. In suit on said paper for a loss on said vessel, held, that the same did not constitute a valid and binding contract of insurance, nor could an action be maintained on it as such. Delaware State Fire & Mar. Ins. Co. v. Shaw, 54 Md. 546.

3. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 229; 28 Geo. III, ch. 56, §§ 1 and 2.

4. For the law and cases in regard to the necessity and amount of stamps see 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 228.

This is law only in England. 30 Vict. ch. 23.

5. Sanborn v. Fireman's Ins. Co., 16 Gray (Mass.) 448; Relief Ins. Co. v. Shaw, 94 U. S. 574; Emery v. Boston Marine Ins. Co., 138 Mass. 398; King v. Enterprise Ins. Co., 45 Ind. 43; Dodd v. Gloucester Mut. Fishing Ins. Co., 120 Mass. 408.

6. In the United States it is held that the contract may be oral. Emery v. Boston Mar. Ins. Co., 138 Mass. 398;

In the construction of the policy written words are to be given more force than the mere printed words of the form.¹

Any ambiguity in its provisions inserted for the safety of the underwriter will be construed most strictly against him.²

Any alteration in a material part made after the execution of the policy avoids it.³

1. Interpreted with Reference to Ways of the Trade.—The policy must always be interpreted with reference to the general, settled and well known usages of the trade.⁴

Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Ryland, 69 Md. 437.

1. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 293; Robertson v. French, 4 East 130; Joyce v. Realm Ins. Co., L. R., 7 Q. B. 580; Dudgeon v. Pembroke, L. R., 9 Q. B. 581; L. R., 1 Q. B. D. 96; L. R., 2 App. Cas. 284; Nelson v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 71 N. Y. 453; Bert v. Brewers' etc. Ins. Co., 16 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 383; Dole v. New England etc. Ins. Co., 2 Cliff 394; Kratzenstein v. Western Assurance Co., 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 505; Leeds v. Mechanics' Ins. Co., 8 N. Y. 351.

2. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 295; Blackett v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 2 Cr. & J. 244; Carr v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 33 L.J. (Q. B.) 63; 5 B. & S. 433; Stewart v. Merchants' Mar. Ins. Co., 14 Q. B. D. 555; Melcher v. Ocean Ins. Co., 59 Me. 217; Palmer v. Warren Ins. Co., 1 Story (U. S.) 360; Seriba v. Ins. Co. of N. America, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 107; Donnell v. Columbian Ins. Co., 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 366; Cross v. Shutcliffe, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 220; cf. Brooks v. Oriental Ins. Co., 7 Pick. (Mass.) 259.

An endorsement on the back of a policy—in the body of which the vessel was permitted, with certain exceptions, to prosecute voyages anywhere upon the globe—that the "vessel to be employed on the Gulf of California, and captain privileged to act as his own pilot without prejudice to this insurance," held, not to restrict the vessel to the Gulf of California. Gulf of California Nav. & Exp. Co. v. State Investment & Ins. Co., 70 Cal. 586.

3. Alteration.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.), 261 and note.

An alteration in the place of destination is material. Laird v. Robertson, 4 Bro. P. C. 488; Campbell v. Christie, 2 Stark. 64; Forshaw v. Chabert, 3 Br. & B. 158.

So in the subject of the insurance. Langhorn v. Cologan, 4 Taunt. 330.

So of the day of sailing, where there is a warranty to sail before a certain day. Fairlie v. Christie, 7 Taunt. 416.

An alteration made on the back of the policy does not vitiate the policy unless in an endorsement made and assented to by the underwriters; for unless so made and assented to, writing upon the back of the policy is immaterial and does not affect the policy. 1 Duer Ins. 82; 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 266. Which refers to Henderson v. Stevenson, L. R., 2 H. L. (Sc.) 470. See also Hounick v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 22 Mo. 52.

An oral promise not to take advantage of the fact of alteration is not binding. Campbell v. Christie, 2 Stark. 64.

Until the full amount of the policy is underwritten it is in fieri, and an alteration is immaterial so far as persons underwriting it after the change are concerned. Robinson v. Tobin, 1 Stark. 336.

4. Usage.—Very many cases have been decided in regard to the effect of trade usages upon the interpretation of the policy, all supporting the broad statement of the text. The contract of marine insurance is said to be especially open to the influence of usages. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 277, et seq.; 1 Parsons Mar. Ins.; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Catlett, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 383; Marine Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 332; Mobile Marine Dock etc. Ins. Co. v. McMillan, 27 Ala. 77; Rolker v. Great Western Ins. Co., 2 Sweeney (N. Y.) 275; Allen v. St. Louis Ins. Co., 85 N. Y. 473; Coit v. Com. Ins. Co., 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 385; Hancock v. Fishing Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 132; Eyre v. Marine Ins. Co., 5 Watts & Serg. (Pa.) 116.

Thus evidence is admissible to show what place is understood by a particular "port." Constable v. Noble, 2 Taunt. 402; Payne v. Hutchinson, 2 Taunt. 405, note; Cockey v. Atkinson, 2 B. & Ald. 460; Brown v. Tayleur, 4 A. & E. 241.

To show that Mauritius is regarded as an "Indian" Island. Robertson v. Clarke, 1 Bing. 445. That the Gulf of Finland is part of the Baltic. Uhde v. Walters, 3 Camp. 16. That a vessel loaded at Tigre Island is regarded as loaded at Amelia Island. Mason v. Atkins, 3 Camp. 200. That "corn" includes all grains and beans and peas. Mason v. Skurray, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 245. And also malt. Moody v. Surridge, 1 Park. Ins. (8th ed.) 245. But not rice. Scott v. Bourdillion, 2 B. & P., N. R. 213. That "salt" does not include "saltpetre." Janame v. Bourdieu, 1 Park. Ins. 245; 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.), note. That "roots" do not include sarsaparilla. Coit v. Commercial Ins. Co., 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 385. Nor "skins," bear skins which are properly furs. Astor v. Union Ins. Co., 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 202. That insurance on "outfits" covers one quarter of the catch in the whale trade. Macy v. Whaling Ins. Co., 9 Met. (Mass.) 354. And protects the "blubber," or pieces of whale flesh, cut off from the whale and on deck. Rogers v. Mechanics' Ins. Co., 1 Story (U. S.) 603.

"Underwriters are presumed to know the usages of foreign ports to which vessels are destined; also the usages of trade and the political condition of foreign nations." Per McLEAN, J., in Hazard v. New England Mar. Ins. Co., 8 Pet. (U. S.) 557, 582; Hartshorne v. Union etc. Ins. Co., 36 N. Y. 172; Gracie v. Marine Ins. Co., 8 Cranch (U. S.) 75.

Evidence of a usage of vessels engaged in China trade to place their rigging and furniture upon sand banks and store them there, is admissible to show that while so stored they are still covered by the policy. Pelly v. Royal Exch. Assoc. Co., 1 Burr. 341; Brough v. Whitmore, 4 T. R. 206.

So also a usage to stop at certain ports while on a certain voyage to show that touching there is not a deviation. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 282; 1 Marsh. Ins. 186; 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 133 et seq.

A usage to load outside the bar of the Tagus is admissible to show the meaning of "at and from Oporto." Kingston v. Knibbs, 1 Camp. 508. note.

A usage to land goods for Leghorn at Lazaretto is admissible to show that such landing is equivalent to discharge at Leghorn. Gracie v. Marine Ins. Co., 8 Cranch (U. S.) 75.

An insurance company is bound by a general usage, in the trade between Tuspan and Galveston, to carry honey on deck in the summer. Orient Mut. Ins. Co. v. Reymershoffer, 56 Tex. 234.

So usage is admissible to prove that a vessel at the bell buoy outside Port Louis has "arrived at" Mauritius. Janson v. Lindsay, 4 H. & N. 699.

As to proof of usage to carry deck cargo, to charge the underwriter for loss of goods laden on deck, see JETTISON; Lapham v. Atlas Ins. Co., 24 Pick. (Mass.) 1.

Evidence of usage is admissible to show that "liberty to touch" includes liberty to take in salt. Urquhart v. Bernard, 1 Taunt. 450.

So usage is admissible to show that vessels in the East India trade remain covered by the policy while engaged on intermediate voyages on which it is customary for the East India Company to send them. Salvador v. Hopkins, 3 Burr. 1707; Gregory v. Christie, 3 Doug. 419; Farquharson v. Hunter, 1 Park. Ins. 105.

And in Newfoundland trade while on intermediate voyages to American ports. Vallance v. Dewar, 1 Camp. 503, Ougier v. Jennings, 1 Camp. 505, note.

And to show that outward cargo on vessels engaged in the Newfoundland and Labrador trade is not at once unloaded on arrival, but remains covered by the policy while carried about on the vessel until finally landed or used. Noble v. Kennaway, 2 Doug. 510.

The question, said LORD MANSFIELD, at page 512, is "not analogous to a question concerning a common law custom." So also a usage to take sea elephants was admitted to show that vessel was still covered by policy while engaged in such taking. Child v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 26.

Evidence of usage as to the method of paying partial losses on valued policies of tobacco is admissible. Fulton Ins. Co. v. Milner, 23 Ala. 420.

Proof of usage of "double tripping" in towing barges on the Mississippi is admissible to show policy not avoided. Pittsburgh Ins. Co. v. Dravo, 2 W. N. C. 194.

A navigable bayou emptying into a river which empties into the Mississippi is a tributary of the Mississippi within the meaning of a policy of marine insurance. Miller v. Citizens' etc. Ins. Co., 12 W. Va. 116.

The meaning of words in the policy may be a question for the jury, as depending on usage. Houghton v. Gilbert, 7 C. & P. 701 (cargo); St. Nicholas Ins. Co. v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 18 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 108.

But evidence of usage is not admissible to contradict the plain words of the policy, or to deprive the assured of his apparent rights. Thus the court refused to allow it to be shown by parol that in a particular trade the words "till discharged and safely landed," meant "until the ship was moored twenty-four hours in safety." Parkinson v. Collier, 2 Park. Ins. 653. And that "free from average" meant "fore from average unless general." Bargett v. Orient Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 385.

Nor was such evidence allowed in these cases to show that a boat hung at a ship's davits was not within a policy on "the body, tackle, apparel, ordnance, munition, boat and other furniture of" a certain ship. Blackett v. Royal Exch. Assoc. Co., 2 Cr. & J. 244.

To show a usage not to pay a general average contribution on a policy "on money advanced on account of freight." Hall v. Janson, 4 E. & B. 500.

To show a usage not to pay for a loss by leakage caused by the vessel straining in a cross sea unless the cargo shifted or the casks were damaged. Crafts v. Marshall, 7 C. & P. 597.

To show the insurer not liable unless the cargo is inspected by port wardens and the damage ascertained by them. Rankin v. American Ins. Co., 1 Hall (N. Y.) 619.

To show an open policy to be a valued one. Williams v. Continental Ins. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 767.

To show goods on the wharf to be regarded as goods on board. Smith v. Mobile M. & M. Ins. Co., 30 Ala. 167.

To show that a policy "to a port in Cuba and at and from thence to a port of advice in Europe" authorized going to two ports on the same island. Hearne v. Mar. Ins. Co., 20 Wall. (U. S.) 488.

Nor will the usage be admitted where it is unreasonable. As a custom in a policy on freight to strike off one third of the gross freight as charges and pay only two-thirds to the assured. McGregor v. Ins. Co. of Pennsylvania, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 39.

Or a custom for the captain to sell the cargo without necessity. Bryant v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 6 Pick. (Mass.) 131.

The usage must be general. Martin

v. Delaware Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 254.

But it need not be invariably followed without exception. Vallance v. Dewar, 1 Camp. 503; 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.), 283.

Nor need it have been long in existence if general. Noble v. Kennoway, 1 Doug 510.

Usages will not be binding unless the person is actually cognizant of them, or from his mode of dealing, habits of life, or place of business cannot be supposed ignorant of them. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 286; Bartlett v. Pentland, 10 B. & C. 760; Scott v. Irving, 1 B. & Ad. 605; Stewart v. Aberdeen, 4 M. & W. 211; Sweeting v. Pearce, 7 C. B., N. S. 449; 9 C. B., N. S. 534; Gabay v. Lloyd, 3 B. & C. 793.

The usages of a single port are not admissible to explain a policy made at another where no such usage is proved to exist. Thus a usage of marine underwriters of Boston to except barratry of the master from the risks assumed when the assured is the owner of the vessel does not import such an exception by implication in a policy underwritten at Gloucester. Parkhurst v. Gloucester etc. Ins. Co., 100 Mass. 301. See also Rogers v. Mechanics' Ins. Co., 1 Story (U. S.) 603; Hazleton v. Manhattan Ins. Co., 11 Biss. (U. S.) 210; Cobb v. Lime Rock F. & M. Ins. Co., 58 Me. 326; Mason v. Franklin Fire Ins. Co., 12 Gill & J. (Md.) 468; Eager v. Atlas Ins. Co., 14 Pick. (Mass.) 141; Macy v. Whaling Ins. Co., 9 Metc. (Mass.) 354; Natchez Ins. Co. v. Stanton, 2 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 340; Child v. Sun Mutual Ins. Co., 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 26.

A policy referring to the usages of a particular port as the standard by which its liabilities are to be fixed, will be construed according to those usages only. Union Bank v. Union Ins. Co., Dudley (S. Car.) 171.

Various Terms Construed. — The words "loading off shore prohibited," in a policy of marine insurance, are capable of being construed by the court without the aid of extrinsic evidence; and where the plaintiff puts such a policy in evidence in an action thereon, without extrinsic evidence of its meaning, there is no error in denying a nonsuit on that ground. In the absence of extrinsic evidence, the court would construe such words as merely intended to prohibit loading the vessel while lying at anchor away from the shore, and not to prohibit loading at a bridge pier. Johnson v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co., 39 Wis. 88.

"Lying at Anchor."—A vessel was lost while lying beached by the policy holder, with holes opened in her hull to allow the water to run in and out with the tide, and a cable from her bow fastened to a piece of iron sunk in the beach and another cable from her stern attached to an anchor. Held, that this was not "lying at anchor" within the meaning of the policy. Reid v. Lancaster Fire Co., 19 Hun (N. Y.) 284.

"Leakage."—A clause in a marine policy providing that the insurer is "not liable for leakage of molasses or other liquids, unless occasioned by stranding or collision with another vessel," comprises leakage caused, by sea perils insured against as well as ordinary leakage, and from whatever receptacle it may occur. Borland v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co., 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. 433.

"Directly by a Sea."—Where animals are injured by the tossing and rolling of a vessel in a heavy sea, the injuries are not covered by a clause in a policy whereby the insurers become liable only for a loss of animals caused "directly by a sea." Snowdon v. Guion, 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. 137.

"Inboard Cargo."—A canal cargo certificate insured certain property, "inboard cargo" of boat A. Held, that this did not mean necessarily under deck, but a cargo not projecting over the rail of the vessel; and where the property was stowed on deck and covered with a tarpaulin, in the manner usual and customary with such vessels, held to be covered by the policy, especially where the company's agent was called upon to come and look at it, and said he thought it was all right. Allen v. St. Louis Ins. Co., 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. 175.

"Registered Tonnage."—A warranty not to load a vessel more than her "registered tonnage" is a warranty not to load more tons of weight than the ship could carry, as entered upon the official record as the ship's tonnage. Reck v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 7 N. Y. 492.

"Held in Trust."—A policy describing the goods insured as "merchandise held in trust" by warehousemen covers goods entrusted to them for keeping. The phrase "held in trust" is to be understood in its mercantile sense. Home Ins. Co. v. Baltimore Warehouse Co., 93 U. S. 527.

Particular phrases were considered and construed in the following cases: Pollock v. Donaldson, 3 Dall. 570; Insurance Co. v. Mordecai, 22 How. (U. S.) 111; Barney v. Ins. Co., 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 139; Hemmenway v. Eaton, 13 Mass. 108; Wood v. New England Ins. Co., 14 Mass. 31; Archbald v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 3 Pick. (Mass.) 70 ("Capture," "Detention"); Tudor v. New Eng. etc. Ins. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 554 ("Ice melting"); Le Roy v. United Ins. Co., 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 343 ("Invoice Price"); Strong v. Sun Ins. Co., 31 N. Y. 103 ("Bursting of the boilers"); Frichette v. State etc. Ins. Co., 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 190 ("While being safely launched"); West Ins. Co. v. Cropper ("Breakage"), 32 Pa. St. 351; Harris v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 17 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 188 ("Thieves," etc.); Monongahela Ins. Co. v. Chester, 43 Pa. St. 491 ("Thieves," etc.); Orient etc. Ins. Co. v. Wright, 23 How. (U. S.) 401; Sun etc. Ins. Co. v. Wright, 23 How. 412; Ins. Co. v. Wright, 1 Wall. 456; Hurlburt v. Ins. Co., 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 471; Andrews v. Essex etc. Ins. Co., 3 Mass. 6; Ocean Ins. Co. v. Carrington, 3 Conn. 357; Grant v. Lexington Ins. Co., 5 Ind. 23; Douville v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 12 La. An. 259; Libby v. Gage, 14 Allen (Mass.) 261; Roe v. Columbus Ins. Co., 17 Mo. 301; McAllister v. Tennessee etc. Ins. Co., 17 Mo. 306; Mercantile Ins. Co. v. State Ins. Co., 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 319; Savage v. Corn Exchange etc. Ins. Co., 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 1; Hartshorne v. Union etc. Ins. Co., 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 538; Rolker v. Western Ins. Co., 8 Bosw. (N. Y.) 222; Ogden v. New York etc. Ins. Co., 8 Bosw. (N. Y.) 248; Mallory v. Commercial Ins. Co., 9 Bosw. (N. Y.) 101; Swinnerton v. Columbian Ins. Co., 9 Bosw. (N. Y.) 361; Hood v. Manhattan Ins. Co., 2 Duer (N. Y.) 191; Ogden v. General Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Duer (N. Y.) 204; Dow v. Whetten, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 160; Holbrook v. Brown ("Property on board"), 2 Mass. 280; Faris v. Newburyport Ins. Co., 3 Mass. 476; Haven v. Gray ("Proceeds"), 12 Mass. 71; Locke v. North American Ins. Co., 13 Mass. 61; ("Property"); Tyler v. Aetna Ins. Co., 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 507 ("Property"); Wolcott v. Eagle Ins. Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 429 ("Cargo and freight."); Wiggin v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 7 Pick. (Mass.) 271 ("Cargo"); Paddock v. Franklin Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 227 ("Cargo"); Allegre v. Ins. Co., 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 136 ("Cargo");

The policy, if on goods, must give the name of the ship and of the master in order to identify the subject matter.¹ A mistake in the name is not important if the minds of the parties contemplate the same vessel.²

The insurance will be valid where the goods are merely stated to be "on board ship or ships," provided the name be declared as soon as known.³

Chesapeake Ins. Co. v. Allegre (Md.) 164 ("Cargo"); Whetton v. Old Colony Ins. Co., 2 Metc. (Mass.) 1 ("Property on board"); Bakewell v. United Ins. Co., 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 246 ("Skins"); Baker v. Ludlow, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 289 ("Pickled fish"); Lenore v. United States Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 178 ("The goods and cargo"); Duffanty v. Com. Ins. Co., Anth. (N. Y.) 114 ("Merchandise," "Curricule"); Huth v. New York etc. Ins. Co., 8 Bosw. (N. Y.) 538 ("Freight earned or not earned"); Patrick v. Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 9 ("No risk in port but sea risk"); Wood v. New England Ins. Co., 14 Mass. 31 ("at sea").

1. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 333.

2. Thus when the policy named "The Leonard," by mistake for "The Leopard." Hall v. Molineux, 6 East 358; or set out "The President" as "The American Ship President." Le Mesurier v. Vaughan, 6 East 382. Or gave "Las Tres Hermanas" as "The Three Sisters." Clapham v. Cologan, 3 Camp. 382.

So when the policy was on goods on "the brig Abeona," evidence was admitted to prove that there were two Abeonas, one a brig, the other a half brig or schooner, and that the latter was the one both parties had in mind. Sea Ins. Co. v. Fowler, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 600.

The important thing is the meeting of the minds of the parties upon the particular risk. Accordingly a jury was held to be justified in holding that where a slip had been initialed for hides by ship or ships, and subsequently another slip intended to be substituted for the first was made out which ran for hides by "The Socrates," it was the intent of the parties to be bound whatever might be the ship by which the hides were sent. Ionides v. Pacific F. & M. Ins. Co., L. R., 6 Q. B. 674; L. R., 7 Q. B. 517.

If the ship, however, is important as affecting the risk, the mistake may prevent the policy from attaching. Thus in the case just cited when the name "The Socrates" was given, the underwriter asked whether it was the "Socrates," a new Norwegian vessel, or "Socrate," an old French one. The broker replied he thought it was the former. In fact it was the latter, and the court held that the policy was not binding.

The word "steamship" has been held to import a three masted, square rigged vessel, capable of being propelled by steam or sails. Howard v. Orient Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Rob. (N. Y.) 539.

The fact that by law the particular vessel in the minds of the parties is not entitled to her register is immaterial. Ocean Ins. Co. v. Polleys, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 157.

3. Ship or ships.—This has long been the law. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. Co. (6th ed.) 337; Kewley v. Ryan, 2 H Bl. 343.

It is not essential that the declaration be made before the loss. Harmon v. Kingston, 3 Camp. 150; Gledstanes v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 34 L. J. (Q. B.) 30; Ionides v. Pacific F. & M. Ins. Co., L. R., 6 Q. B. 674; L. R., 7 Q. B. 517; E. Carver Co. v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 214.

Nor is it necessary that it be in writing. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 337, or signed by the underwriter. Robinson v. Touray, 3 Camp. 158; 1 M. & S. 217.

Where, however, the declaration is essential to the existence of the contract, declaration made after the loss does not bind the underwriter. Thus where the policy provided for insurance on shipments by vessel or steamboats during a period of six months, "endorsements to be evidence of the property at risk of the company," it was held that the assured could not endorse a shipment when he learned of the shipment and of its loss at the same time. Edwards v. St. Louis Perpetual Ins. Co., 7 Mo. 382; Douville v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 12 La. An. 259; 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 227.

Where the policy was on goods

Where there are more than one such policy, the assured, in the event of a loss, may declare the ship on any policy he pleases, if it be fairly within the terms of the policy. The underwriter cannot defend by proving the arrival of a ship or ships in safety.¹ In the absence of a declaration, the policy applies to all subjects included in the description.²

2. Voyage and Time Policies.—A "voyage" policy is one in which the duration of the risk is limited by local termini; a "time" policy, one in which it is limited by time.³

The voyage policy must designate a terminus a quo and a terminus ad quem.⁴

The time policy simply designates fixed dates between which the risk shall continue and has no necessary reference to any voyage.⁵

Under a time policy the risk continues whether the property is at sea or in port.⁶

Such a policy may be retrospective.⁷ It may cover freight not due until after the expiration of the policy.⁸

"shipped on board of the Great Western Steamship Company" but no vessel was named, it was held that goods shipped on a steamer chartered by the company and placed regularly on the line, though not owned by it, were covered. Croswell v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co., 19 Fed. Rep. 24.

But when the shipment was to be by the "State Line," it was held that the policy did not cover goods sent on a steamer chartered by the line for one trip, and left in possession of her owners. Red Wing Mills v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 19 Fed. Rep. 115.

1. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 340; Kewley v. Ryan, 2 H. Bl. 343; Henchman v. Offley, 2 H. Bl. 345 n.; 3 Doug. 135.

2. 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 439.

3. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 365. As to voyage policies see Columbian Ins. Co. v. Catlett, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 383; Patapasco Ins. Co. v. Briscoe, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 293; Perkins v. Augusta etc. Ins. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 312; Sea Ins. Co. v. Fowler, 21 Wend. (N.Y.) 600; Ferguson v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 5 Binn. (Pa.) 544; Marine Ins. Co. v. Stras, 1 Munf. (Va.) 408; Steinbach v. Col. Ins. Co., 2 Cai. (N.Y.) 129; De Longuemere v. N. Y. Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N.Y.) 120; Bell v. Marine Ins. Co., 8 Serg. & Rawle (Pa.) 98; Ritchie v. Ins. Co., 5 Serg. & Rawle (Pa.) 501; May v. S. C. Ins. Co., 3 Brev. (So. C.) 329.

4. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 365; Uhde v. Walters, 3 Camp. 16.

It may, of course, include a voyage out and home as a single risk. Berm n v. Woodbridge, 2 Doug. 781.

5. 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 304; Bradlie v. Maryland Ins. Co., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 378.

Coggeshall v. American Ins. Co., 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 283; Grausset v. Sea Ins. Co., 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 209; Henshaw v. Mutual Safety Ins. Co., 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 99.

In Gamble v. Ocean Mar. Ins. Co., 1 Ex. Div. 141, reversing 1 Ex. Div. 8, a policy read at and from Bomarron to Newcastle-on-Tyne, and for fifteen days while there after arrival. The vessel arrived, discharged, took a new cargo and dropped to a new loading point within the port of Newcastle, and was injured there, all within the fifteen days after arrival. It was held to be a time policy, and the company to be liable.

Of course, geographical limits can be prescribed in a time policy and the insurance cease if the limits are transgressed. Birrell v. Dryer, 9 App. Cas. 345.

6. Syers v. Bridge, 2 Doug. 527; North Amer. Ins. Co. v. Rogers, 78 Me. 191; Manly v. United Ins. Co., 9 Mass. 85.

7. Hucks v. Thornton, Holt N. P. 30. Mead v. Davidson, 4 H. & N. 701; 3 A. & E. 303; 1 H. & W. 156; Folsom v. Mercantile etc. Ins. Co., 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 170.

Paddock v. Franklin Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 227.

8. Michael v. Gillespie, 2 C. B., N. S. 627.

It is enough to entitle the assured to recover that the damage took place during the time limited, although the extent of the damage was not ascertained until after the time has expired.¹

The day stated as the termination of the time is not included within the period covered.²

In computing the time, the meridian of the place of contract governs.³

In England, risks are limited to one year.⁴

"Mixed" policies set out termini but limit the risk by time.⁵

Some policies contain a provision that they shall continue in force after the date of expiration until notice is given of discontinuance.⁶

V. The Amount of the Insurable Interest.—The value of the interest, the amount recoverable in case of loss, depends upon the form of the policy; if "open," one set of principles govern; if "valued," another.

1. Under Open Policies.—An "open" policy is one in which the parties have stated no sum as the value of the interest, but have left the amount to be proved in the event of a loss.

1 Knight v. Faith, 15 Q. B. 649; Hoit v. Smith, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 15; Howell v. Protection Ins. Co., 7 Ohio 384; Peters v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 25.

The jury may decide whether the loss did or did not occur within the time. Brown v. Neilson, 1 Cal. (N. Y.) 525.

2. Thus on coffee to be shipped between February 1st and July 15th, it was held that coffee shipped on July 15th was not protected. Atkins v. Boylston F. & M. Ins. Co., 5 Metc. (Mass.) 439.

3. In Walker v. Protection Ins. Co., 29 Me. 317, where a policy for one year was made on December 17th, to end at 12 o'clock noon, the loss occurred on December 17th of the following year. The defendant contended that it took place after noon at the place of loss, but the court ruled that the time of the place of contract governed, and as the loss took place before noon there, upheld a verdict for the plaintiff.

4. 30 Vict., ch. 23, § 8.

5. 1 Arnold Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 373. A policy insured a vessel for a specified time for a particular voyage outward. After the voyage was made, but before the time had expired, the same underwriters insured the vessel for the return voyage, by a certificate made "under and subject to the conditions" of the existing policy. It was held that no liability accrued for a loss occurring after the time specified in the original policy. Pitt v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 10 Dalv. (N. Y.) 281.

Such a policy does not attach unless the vessel is on the voyage set out. May v. Modigliani, 2 T. R. 30.

But if on that voyage the policy attaches wherever the vessel may be at the date set for beginning, it is not essential that she be at one terminus. 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 928; Manly v. United M. & F. Ins. Co., 9 Mass. 85; Kent v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 19; Martin v. Fishing Ins. Co., 20 Pick. (Mass.) 389.

6. Thus a marine policy provided that it should "continue in force from the date of expiration until notice is given to this company of its discontinuance, the assured to pay for such privilege pro rata for the time used." The term of the policy expired October 5th. The assured sent on October 9th a month's premium, stating that it was "one monthly premium from October 5th to November 5th," on the insurance "as specified in the policy." Held, for the loss occurring November 6th the company was liable. Greenwich Ins. Co. v. Provident & Stonington S. S. Co., 119 U. S. 481. In this case MR. JUSTICE BRADLEY criticised policies of this kind as follows: "We cannot say that such a contract is a desirable one for insurers to make. Ordinarily, on an insurance for a specified time or adventure, such as a year, for example, or a voyage, they get their premium in advance for the risk of the whole period of adventure; and if a loss happen ever so soon after the insurance is effected, no abatement of the premium is made. This gives them the benefit of average losses in determinate times or adventures, which is the solid basis on which all insurance rests. But the insurance company saw fit to make the contract in the form it did; and having made it, it is bound by its terms. And according to that contract, we think that it continued to be liable for a loss, although it happened after the time covered by the premiums already paid, the assured being only liable to pay pro rata for the time used and not yet paid for." See also North American Ins. Co. v. Rogers (Me.) 1 N. E. 792.

On such a policy the value of the ship is its worth to the owner at the port where the voyage commences, including stores, provisions, outfit and wages paid in advance, together with the premium of insurance and the premiums on that premium, as well as stamp duty, if any, and commissions for effecting the insurance.¹

The value of freight is the sum payable to the owner for freight with premiums and commissions.²

The value of goods is the amount of the prime cost with the charges of shipping on board, stamp duty, if any, commissions and premiums, including premium on premium.³

1. Open Policies—The Ship.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 320; Parsons Mar. Ins. 243.

Snell v. Delaware Ins. Co., 4 Dall. (U. S.) 430. Where the blanks in the "value" clause in a marine insurance policy are not filled up, the policy is an open and not a valued policy. Snowden v. Guion, 101 N. Y. 458. See also Williams v. Continental Ins. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 767.

That the value includes premiums is well established. Carson v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 468; Clark v. United F. & M. Ins. Co., 7 Mass. 365; Coffin v. Newburyport Mar. Ins. Co., 9 Mass. 436.

2. Freight.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 321; 2 Phillips Mar. Ins. (5th ed.), § 1238, note; Forbes v. Aspinall, 13 East 323; Palmer v. Blackburn, 1 Bing. 61; McGregor v. Ins. Co. of Pennsylvania, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 39; Stevens v. Columbian Ins. Co., 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 43.

If the insurance is on freight, part of which is payable on the passage out and part on the passage home, the whole is recoverable if a loss occurs before any is due. Meech v. Philadelphia F. & In- land Ins. Co., 3 Whart. (Pa.) 473. But if part has become due and been paid, that amount is to be deducted. Hughes v. Union Ins. Co. of Baltimore, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 294.

3. Goods.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 321; 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 251; Usher v. Noble, 12 East 646; Tuite v. Royal Exch. Co., 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 224; Gahn v. Broome, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 120; Stevens v. Columbian Ins. Co., 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 43; Anon., 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 312; Suydam v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 138; Le Roy v. United Ins. Co., 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 343; Fontaine v. Columbian Ins. Co., 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 29; E. Carver Co. v. Manuf. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 214; Hartshorn v. Shoe etc. Ins. Co., 15 Gray (Mass.) 240.

In England, the prime cost is settled generally, but not conclusively, by the invoices. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 321; 2 Phillips Ins., § 1229.

In the United States, the rule varies. 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 246.

In New York, the actual cost has been held to determine the prime cost. Le Roy v. United Ins. Co., 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 343.

In Massachusetts, the invoice price. Coffin v. Newburyport Mar. Ins. Co., 9 Mass. 436.

In the United States courts, the actual market value. Snell v. Delaware Ins. Co., 4 Dall. (U. S.) 430; 1 Wash. (U. S.) 509; Carson v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 468.

In Warren v. Franklin Ins. Co., 104 Mass. 518, it was held that, in estimating a loss under an open policy of marine insurance, evidence of the usage of a particular port is inadmissible to vary the rule that the damages are to be based on the market value of the goods at the inception of the risk, and not on the invoice price. In that case

Of course, the amount recoverable is limited to the amount of the interest at the time of the loss.¹

2. Under Valued Policies.—A “valued” policy is one in which the parties have stated a particular sum as the value of the interest insured.²

a policy of insurance provided that, in case of the loss, all sums due to the insurers when the loss became due should be first deducted, and all sums coming due should be paid or satisfactorily secured before payment of the loss. It was held that, in making up judgment in an action on the policy for the amount of the loss, the defendants could deduct the amounts of the notes due to them from the insured although they were not due at the beginning of the action; and the loss being payable in gold and the notes in currency, that the value of the notes in gold at the time they fell due should be ascertained, and such value deducted from the amount of the loss.

Where the price of the goods is expressed in foreign currency, and there is no current rate of exchange, Mr. Arnould, citing 1 Magens Ins. 41, § 40, and Benecke Prin. of Indem. 119, says the rule is to estimate the value of specie to the amount stated in the foreign currency, and value as though the cargo had been specie. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 322.

If there is a current rate of exchange the value is the value at the port of the invoice price at the rate of exchange current at the beginning of the risk. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 322; 2 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 1231; 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 249.

The case of Shellusson v. Bewick, 1 Esp. 77, contra, where the rate of exchange current at the time of adjustment was taken, is condemned by all the writers cited.

Where a policy of marine insurance provided that a loss, if any, should be payable to the Bank of Montreal, in funds current in the city of New York, it was held that in estimating the liability of the insurers upon the occurrence of a loss the premium upon gold should not be allowed in favor of the assured. Lamar Ins. Co. v. McGlashen, 54 Ill. 513.

Where a drawback is paid on goods exported, it is not to be deducted from the invoice or actual price. 2 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 1235; 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 323; Gahn v. Broome, 1

Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 120; Minturn v. Columbian Ins. Co., 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 122; 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 75.

Continuing Policy.—Where the policy is a continuing policy, covering various shipments made at various times, the amount payable in case of any particular loss is such proportion of the actual loss as the whole sum assured bears to the whole amount of insurable interest at risk at the time of this loss. Crowley v. Cohen, 3 B. & A. 478; Joyce v. Kennard, L. R., 7 Q. B. 78; 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 327; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Catlett, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 383; 2 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 1228.

1. Carroll v. Boston Mar. Ins. Co., 8 Mass. 515; Copeland v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 6 Pick. (Mass.) 108.

2. Valued Policies.—The valuation is properly stated in the blank left in the printed form after the words “valued at ———.”

It must clearly appear from the policy that the parties agreed on the amount stated as the value of the interest.

Thus where no sum was inserted in the space after the words “valued at,” but the words “as under” were written in, and further down the figures £1,300 were written in the margin, it was held not to be a valued policy. Wilson v. Nelson, 5 B. & S. 354. In full accord are Williams v. Continental Ins. Co. of New York City, 4 Fed. Rep. 767; Snowden v. Guion, 101 N. Y. 458.

Where the policy was for $10,000 on vessel and freight, the vessel valued at $8,000, it was held an open policy as to the freight. Riley v. Hartford Ins. Co., 2 Conn. 368.

Where the policy in the margin was stated to be “on profits,” and the blank following the description of the cargo was filled in with “valued at $2,500,” parol evidence was not allowed to show that it had been the intent to value the profits at $2,500. Munford v. Hallett, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 434.

A running policy of marine insurance contained a stipulation that no shipments should be considered as insured until approved and endorsed on

Under such a policy the valuation stated is conclusive, except in case of fraud, and the assured may recover the full sum in the event of a loss, although in truth his actual interest was much less valuable.¹

The court may, however, enquire whether the assured had any the policy, the valuation to be fixed by the endorsement. It was held that the policy was not an open but a valued one; that endorsement of a shipment and the valuation thereof constituted a separate and distinct contract of insurance; and that the contract was not complete as to any specific shipment until the valuation thereof was endorsed on the policy. Schaefer v. Baltimore etc. Ins. Co., 33 Md. 109.

The provision "no proof of property shall be required in case of loss" does not amount to a valuation. Hemmenway v. Eaton, 13 Mass. 108.

As to the form see also Howes v. Union Ins. Co., 16 La. An. 235.

The valuation is presumed to be the valuation of the assured's interest in the property, not that of the property itself. Thus where the policy was on one-fourth of a vessel valued at $5,000 it was held that the valuation applied to the one-fourth interest, not to the whole vessel. Post v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 79; Feise v. Aquilar, 3 Taunt. 506; Allison v. Bristol Mar. Ins. Co., 1 App. Cas. 209.

"This agreement is in general conclusive between the parties to the policy, not of the value of the property at risk, but of the interest which that valuation is sufficient to cover." Per WASHINGTON, J., in Watson v. Ins. Co. of North America, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 1.

An agreement between the parties to reduce foreign currency to domestic at certain fixed rates has been held not to render the policy valued. Ogden v. Columbian Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 273. But see Benecke Prin. of Indem. 159.

1. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 299; 3 Kent Com. 274; 2 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 1189 et seq.; Kidd v. Greenwich Ins. Co., 35 Fed. Rep. 351; Lewis v. Rucker, 2 Burr. 1167; Shaws v. Fenton, 2 East 109; Marshall v. Parker, 2 Camp. 69; Barker v. Janson, L. R., 3 C. P. 303; North of England Ins. Assoc. v. Armstrong, L. R., 5 Q. B. 244; Lidgett v. Secretan, L. R., 6 C.

P. 616; MacNair v. Caulter, 4 Bro. P. C. (S. Car.) 450; Aubert v. Jacobs, Wightwick 118; Wilson v. Wordil, Fac. Dec. (1781-1789), p. 207; Young v. Dear, Fac. Dec. (1796-1801), p. 140; Rhand v. Robb, Fac. Dec. (1801-1807), p. 433; Smith v. Flemming, 12 C. C. S. 138; 22 Scot. Jur. 7; Cole v. Louisiana Ins. Co., 2 Martin (La.) N. S. 165; Brook v. Louisiana State Ins. Co., 4 Martin (La.) N. S. 640, 681; Akin v. Mississippi M. & F. Ins. Co., 4 Martin (La.) N. S. 661; Hinck v. Home Ins. Co., 19 La. An. 527; Cushman v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 34 Me. 487; Patapsco Ins. Co. v. Briscoe, 7 G. & J. (Md.) 293; Coolidge v. Gloucester Mar. Ins. Co., 15 Mass. 341; Lovering v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 12 Pick. (Mass.) 348; Clark v. Ocean Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 289; Forbes v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 1 Gray (Mass.) 371; Mutual Mar. Ins. Co. v. Munro, 7 Gray (Mass.) 246; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. McLoon, 100 Mass. 475; Boardman v. Boston Ins. Co., 146 Mass. 442; Lockwood v. Sangamo Ins. Co., 46 Mo. 71; Dumas v. United States Ins. Co., 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 437; Pritchett v. Ins. Co. of North America, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 458.

"The very object of putting the contract into the form of a valued instead of an open policy is to prevent disputes as to the amount to be recovered by the assured in case of a total loss by the perils insured against, and the premium paid to the insurers is regulated accordingly." GRAY, J., in Phoenix Ins. Co. v. McCoon, 100 Mass. 475. In this case the excess of the bona fide valuation of the ship was $10,000, and the excess of that of the freight and outfit proportionate.

The fact that the valuation is very greatly in excess of the actual value may be evidence of fraud. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (5th ed.) 302; Ionides v. Pender, L. R., 9 Q. B. 531.

Overvaluation is simply presumptive evidence of fraudulent intent strong in proportion to the excess, which presumption may be repelled by proof. Sturm v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 63 N. Y. 77; Catron v. Tennessee Ins. Co., 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 176.

interest in the property valued,¹ or whether the true subject matter is properly insured under the subject insured;² or whether all the property valued has ever been at risk.³

The valuation is not to be opened in case of a partial loss.⁴

Where there is prior insurance, the assured, although his policy be valued, cannot recover upon it more than will, with what has been received on the prior policies, make up his whole loss.⁵

1. Williams v. N. China Ins. Co., 1 C. P. D. 757.

2. Denoon v. Home & Colonial Ass. Co., L. R., 7 C. P. 341.

Here the policy was on valued freight, and the court enquired whether passage money for coolies, which had been considered in fixing the valuation, could properly be insured as freight.

3. The assured can recover only for what has been at risk, and if, in fact, part of the property has not been at risk he cannot recover the full valuation. The court can always enquire on this point. The valuation is conclusive only when all has been at risk. Le Pyre v. Farr, 2 Vern. 716; Amery v. Rogers, 1 Esp. 207; Patrick v. Eames, 3 Camp. 441; Forbes v. Aspinall, 13 East 327; Rickman v. Carstairs, 5 B. & Ad. 651; Tobin v. Harford, 13 C. B., N. S. 791; 17 C. B., N. S. 528; Brooke v. Louisiana State Ins. Co., 4 Martin (La.) N. S. 640; Cooledge v. Gloucester Mar. Ins. Co., 15 Mass. 341; Wolcott v. Eagle Ins. Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 429; Atlantic Ins. Co. v. Lunar, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 91.

4. The law in England is well settled in accord with the text. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (5th ed.) 299; Lewis v. Rucker, 2 Burr. 1167; Usher v. Noble, 12 East 639; Tunno v. Edwards, 12 East 438; Forbes v. Aspinall, 13 East 323; Goldsmid v. Gillies, 4 Taunt. 803; Irving v. Manning, 1 H. L. C. 817; 6 C. B. 391; 2 C. B. 784; 1 C. B. 168.

In the United States the law is not so well settled. The general rule is in accord with the English law. Bentaloe v. Pratt, Wall, (C. C.) 58; Griswold v. Union Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 231; 2 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 1203.

The rule in Massachusetts is otherwise. In case of partial loss the valuation is opened. Clark v. United F. & M. Ins. Co., 7 Mass. 365; Bedford Commercial Ins. Co. v. Parker, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 1; Brewer v. American Ins. Co., 123 Mass. 78; cf. Forbes v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 1 Gray (Mass.) 371.

In Natchez Ins. Co. v. Buckner, 5

Miss. 63, and Stanton v. Natchez Ins. Co., 6 Miss. 744, the valuation was held to open.

5. Thus in Craig v. Murgatroyd, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 161, where there had been a total loss of a cargo of coffee insured by one policy for $12,000, and in a subsequent policy at a valuation of twenty cents per pound, it was held that on the subsequent policy only the value of as many pounds at twenty cents per pound could be recovered as the amount received on the first policy did not pay for at the actual price of the coffee.

The same rule was followed in similar circumstances in McKim v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 189.

The law is clear as stated in the text. Watson v. Ins. Co. of North America, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 1; Murray v. Ins. Co. of Pennsylvania, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 186; Stephenson v. Piscataqua F. & M. Ins. Co., 54 Me. 55 at 71.

The valuation stated in the policy has been held conclusive of the true value of the property in Kenny v. Union Mar. Ins. Co., 1 Russ. & G. (N. S.) 313, where in a suit on a policy on a vessel valued at $16,000, it was held that no recovery could be had, since that sum had already been received from prior insurance; and no enquiry into the true value, and consequently into the actual loss, was made.

The contra was held in Kenny v. Clarkson, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 385, where the true value, $5,000, was shown, and the valuation in the policy, $2,000, was limited to the remainder after the amount received on another policy, $3,000, had been deducted.

In Pleasants v. Maryland Ins. Co., 8 Cranch (U. S.) 55, nine policies had been made in Philadelphia on a cargo from Cronstadt or St. Petersburg. In seven no value had been set upon the ruble in which the cargo was valued; in the eighth it was valued at forty cents, and in the ninth, that in suit, at forty-six cents. It was held that the full value of the cargo in rubles at forty-six cents, less the amount of insurance

The valuation is not conclusive in determining the value to settle a constructive total loss. The actual and not the stated value is to govern in that case.¹

In estimating the value for the purpose of the valuation, the same rules hold as in the case of open policies.

Policies on the ship are now generally valued, and the amount is determined by estimating the worth to the owner at the outset of the risk, including stores, outfit, advance wages, premiums of insurance and commissions.²

So in the case of cargo, the valuation may include the first cost, freight, premiums, expected profit, duty and landing charges.³ The valuation is generally distributed among the articles constituting the cargo, a specific value being assigned each class of articles.⁴

already received, was the amount recoverable.

In England, the law is well settled that the valuation is conclusive between the parties, and only the difference between the agreed value and the amount paid under other policies can be recovered. The true value is not to be considered. Bruce v. Jones, 1 H. & C. 769; Irving v. Richardson, 1 Moo. & R. 153; Morgan v. Price, 4 Exch. 615.

Bonsfield v. Barnes, 4 Camp. 228, contra, is overruled.

1. This is the English law. Irving v. Manning, 6 C. B. 422; Manning v. Irving, 1 C. B. 168; Cambridge v. Anderson, 2 B. & C. 691; Allen v. Sugrue, 8 B. & C. 561; Young v. Turing, 2 Man. & Gr. 593.

And generally that of the United States. Bradlie v. Maryland Ins. Co., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 378; Boardman v. Boston Mar. Ins. Co., 146 Mass. 442.

The law in Massachusetts is otherwise. There the valuation stated in the policy is held to govern. Deblois v. Ocean Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 303; Crook v. Com. Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 456; Allen v. Commercial Ins. Co., 1 Gray (Mass.) 154; Heebner v. Eagle Ins. Co. of Cincinnati, 10 Gray (Mass.) 131.

These cases related to a total loss of the vessel, but in a late case the court, while recognising the rule, refused to apply it in the case of valued freight, and held the actual value to govern. Boardman v. Boston Mar. Ins. Co., 146 Mass. 442.

The early rule will not be extended. Per HOLMES, J., at p. 452: "We have no disposition to depart from the rule so far as it is settled, but in the existing state of the decisions elsewhere it should not be extended."

The valuation was held conclusive in Sherlock v. Globe Ins. Co., 1 Cin. Sup. Ct. Rep. 193.

2. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 311; Stevens Ave. 190; Star of Hope, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 203.

The value cannot be diminished by proof of wear and tear, and of the consumption of stores, etc., since the beginning of the risk. Shawe v. Felton, 2 East 109.

3. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 303; Usher v. Noble, 12 East 639 at 647; Forbes v. Aspinall, 13 East 323 at 327.

4. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 314. This is not essential, for if the kinds of goods are unknown a policy may be taken out on "goods thereafter to be declared and valued." 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 315. But it will be regarded as an open policy unless a declaration and valuation is made before the loss. Harman v. Kingston, 3 Camp. 150; Craufurd v. Hunter, 8 T. R. 13, 15, n.

Where the proceeds of the outward cargo are to purchase the homeward, and the insurance is for the voyage out and home, the valuation of the outward cargo is presumed to be the valuation of its whole proceeds for the return voyage or for subsequent passages. 2 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), §§ 1197, 1198; 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 316; McKim v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 89; Haven v. Gray, 12 Mass. 71; Whitney v. American Ins. Co., 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 610; 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 712.

The value is to be taken with reference to the port of shipment, and so cannot include the amount of freight

Where freight is insured by a valued policy, the assured can recover the full valuation if the risk has ever attached.¹

A valuation at a round sum is presumed to include premiums of insurance.²

Where the valuation is a round sum on more than one subject, as on ship and freight, or ship, cargo and freight, it seems that the valuation may be distributed among them in the proportion which the actual value of each bears to their combined actual value.³

VI Double Insurance and Priority.—Double insurance exists whenever the same risk, interest and subject matter are covered by more than one policy.⁴

payable on delivery. Tamvaco v. Lucas, 1 B. & S. 185, 3 B. & S. 89.

Where a number of boxes of lemons, composing the cargo of a ship, were insured by a single contract of insurance on the whole number of boxes, held, that the valuation of the lemons in the policy of insurance, at so much per box, did not make the insurance an insurance on each box. Hernandez v. Sun etc. Ins. Co., 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 317.

1. Freight.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 312; Hart v. Delaware Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 346; Williams v. London Ass. Co., 1 M. & S. 318; Coolidge v. Gloucester Mar. Ins. Co., 15 Mass. 341; Davy v. Hallett, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 16.

There can be no deduction from the valuation although all the expense of earning the freight was prevented by the loss. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 311.

Where the voyage consists of successive stages, the valuation is to be taken as that of each successive freight. It may, however, be shown to be the aggregate of the successive freight. 2 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 1208; Thwing v. Washington Ins. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 443.

In the event that the insured has received any freight before the loss this amount must be deducted from the valuation. Robertson v. Majoribanks, 2 Stark. 573.

In Davy v. Hallett, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 16, where freight out and back was insured, and a double premium paid, it was held that the amount of the outward freight which had been received was not to be deducted from the valuation.

In Dumas v. United States Ins. Co., 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 437, freight was valued at $7,500. The shipowner also owned two thirds of the cargo. He abandoned to the underwriters, who claimed of him the difference between the freight of one third and $7,500. It was held that he was bound to pay only the regular rate of freight for his two thirds the cargo, and that the amount of the valuation was immaterial on this point.

2. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 316; 2 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 1201; Brooks v. Oriental Ins. Co., 7 Pick. (Mass.) 259; but the contrary may be shown, or inferred, from facts appearing in the case. Mayo v. Maine F. & M. Ins. Co., 12 Mass. 259.

3. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 317.

In Stocker v. Harris, 3 Mass. 409, the court was equally divided whether or not a valuation in a lump sum on ship, freight and cargo was void for uncertainty. But in the subsequent case of Faris v. Newburyport Mar. Ins. Co., 3 Mass. 476, where the insurance was on "cargo or freight or both or either," the court distributed the valuation.

4. Double Insurance.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 327; Perkins v. N. England Ins. Co., 12 Mass. 214.

A mere difference in the date of the policies does not prevent the insurance from being double. Peters v. Delaware Ins. Co., 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 479.

Nor does a mere difference as to the extent of the liability in the several policies.

Thus in Bank of British North America v. Western Ass. Co., 7 Ont. 166, two policies on a shipment of cattle were made which covered the same risk, the same interest and the same subject, but one excepted twenty-five per cent. mortality from the protection of the policy, while the other was against all perils. It was held that the insurance was double, nevertheless.

The insurance is not double where

If the double insurance is fraudulent there can be no recovery, but if without fraud the underwriters are liable.¹

In England, every underwriter, without regard to the time of the execution of his contract, is liable to the full amount insured, and if compelled to pay in full can recover contribution from the other underwriters. This is law in the United States in the absence of special agreement, but American policies generally provide that the subsequent underwriter shall be liable only to the extent that prior policies do not cover.²

the risks are different. Lidgett v. Secreten, L. R., 6 C. P. 616.

Although they overlap. Godin v. London Ass. Co., 1 W. Bl. 103; Australian Agricultural Co. v. Saunders, L. R., 10 C. P. 668; Kent v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 19.

As if made by different persons and for the benefit of different persons. Wells v. Philadelphia Ins. Co., 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 103; Ins. Co. v. Drake, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 47.

Or where the interests differ, as of owner and of carrier. Royster v. Roanoke N. & B. S. B. Co., 26 Fed. Rep. 492.

A covenant limiting other insurance or interests in a vessel, or any other insurable interest in said interest, is not broken by insurance on freight to be earned by the voyage. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 30 U. S. L. Ed. 1209.

Where owners of cotton ship it by a carrier and obtain an insurance on it, and the carrier, at the time, has annual policies covering the cargoes of its steamer, which policies contain a clause limiting the insurance to the interest of the insured, and a fire occurs, this does not constitute double insurance, and the shipper's insurers cannot make the carrier's insurers contribute to their loss. Royster v. Roanoke etc. Steamboat Co., 26 Fed. Rep. 492. In this case BOND, J., said: "The complainants had insured, as owners, the cotton in their own names, to the extent of their estimate of its value to them. The defendant company had a policy for a year covering all cargoes on board, limiting the liability of insurers to the extent of the interest of the insured in the cargo. The steamboat company had no interest in the complainant's cotton, and, when it was consumed was paid nothing on account of its loss. The company was under no obligation to insure its cargoes, and did not do so further than to protect its interest for freight, charges, and loss accruing from the negligence of its employees. This is not double insurance which makes a proper case of contribution between the several insurance companies. To make such a case the property insured and the interest insured must be identical." See also Williams v. Crescent Mut. Ins. Co., 15 La. An. 651.

1. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 331; Hogan v. Del. Ins. Co., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 419; Murray v. Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 186; Kane v. Com. Ins. Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 229; Mentum v. Columbian Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 75; Pratt v. Union Ins. Co., 9 Bosw. (N. Y.) 97.

2. The English law was at first held to be that the underwriters were liable only in the order of the execution of their policies. African Co. v. Bull, 1 Shaw. 132. But this rule was overthrown by LORD MANSFIELD in Godin v. London Ass. Co., 1 Burr. 492; Newby v. Reid, 1 W. Bl. 416; Rogers v. Davis, and Davis v. Gildart, 1 Marshall Ins. 140, 141; 2 Park. Ins. 600, 607. And the law established that all the policies are to be regarded as one assurance for the full extent of the value, and each underwriter is to be held liable to the full amount of the loss, or of his risk if less than that amount; but in case of payment by him he is entitled to contribution from the others.

The American common law was declared to be in accord with that laid down by LORD MANSFIELD in the leading case of Thurston v. Koch, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 348. And this decision has been followed. 3 Kent Com. 280, 281; Cromil v. Kentucky & Louisville Ins. Co., 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 432; Millandon v. Western M. & F. Ins. Co., 9 La. 27; Combat v. Barrell, 2 Dane Abr. 144; Wiggin v. Suffolk Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 145; American Ins. Co. v. Griswold, 14 Wend. (N.

VII. Duration of Risk—1. Upon the Ship.—Insurance “from” a port does not begin until the vessel breaks ground ready for sea upon the voyage insured.¹

Where the words are “at and from” the port, the risk begins

Y.) 399 at 461; Craig v. Murgatroyd, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 161.

It seems also to be the law of Canada. Bank of British North America v. Western Ass. Co., 7 Ont. 166.

In practice the common law has been neutralized by the “American clause” in the policy, which provides substantially: “It is further agreed that if the assured shall have made any other assurance upon the premises prior in date to this policy, the assurers shall be answerable only for so much as the amount of such prior insurance may be deficient toward fully covering the property at risk.” See e.g. Lewis v. Manufacturers’ F. & M. Ins. Co., 131 Mass. 364.

Where the American clause is inserted and the several policies are dated on the same day, the court must determine the order in which in fact the underwriters executed them. Potter v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Mason (U. S.) 475; Brown v. Hartford Ins. Co., 3 Day (Conn.) 58.

In an action for the premium due upon a marine insurance policy in the name of a part owner, for the benefit of whom it may concern, the defendant offered evidence to show other insurance which would make an overinsurance upon his part of the vessel, and claimed to be liable for only a ratable proportion of the premium. Held, that if this proposition is sound in law, the burden is upon the defendant to show that the policies were simultaneous, and not intended to cover the interests of some other owners. North America Ins. Co. v. Rogers (Me.), 1 N. E. Rep. 792.

The second underwriter is liable only to the extent of the value above the first policy, and this although the first underwriter, a corporation, is dissolved insolvent before the loss. Ryder v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 98 Mass. 185.

Where, however, the prior policy has expired of its own limitation before the loss, the second is liable for the full amount. Kent v. Manufacturers’ Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 19.

The assured cannot cancel a prior insurance so as to render the subsequent liable as though the first had not existed, without the assent of the subsequent underwriter. Macy v. Whaling Ins. Co., 9 Met. (Mass.) 354.

Where the total insurance does not exceed the total value, the American clause does not relieve subsequent insurers from liability for contribution to a partial loss less than the amount of the prior insurance.

Thus where three policies for \$7,300, \$7,400 and \$7,300 respectively on an interest valued in each at \$22,000 had been made, all with the American clause, and a partial loss had occurred; it was held that the second and third were not exonerated, but were liable for $\frac{1}{3}$ of the loss. Whiting v. Independent Mut. Ins. Co., 15 Md. 297.

For the rules which obtain where the subsequent policy is valued, see ante under VALUED POLICIES. See also, as to the general subject of double insurance, Carpenter v. Providence Wash. Ins. Co., 16 Pet. (U. S.) 495; Seamans v. Loring, 1 Mass. 127; Stephenson v. Piscataqua Ins. Co., 54 Me. 55; Davis v. Boardman, 12 Mass. 80; Jackson v. Mass. Ins. Co., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 418; Traders’ Ins. Co. v. Robert, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 404; Buffalo Steam Engine Works v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 17 N. Y. 401; Harris v. Ohio Ins. Co., 5 Ohio 466; Craig v. Murgatroyd, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 161; Wells v. Phila. Ins. Co., 9 Serg. & Rawle (Pa.) 103.

1. Duration—Ship.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 404; Pittigrew v. Pringle, 3 B. & Ad. 514; Maryland Ins. Co. v. Bossiere, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 121.

It must be upon the voyage insured. Haselton v. Allnutt, 1 M. & S. 46; Tasker v. Cunningham, 1 Bli. 87; Lord v. Robinson, 6 L. J. (K. B.) 212; Murray v. Columbian Ins. Co., 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 443.

The fact that a deviation in the course of the voyage is intended will not prevent the voyage from being the voyage insured. Marine Ins. Co. v. Tucker, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 357.

Nor will the fact that the vessel clears for a port other than the one she in fact intends to visit. Planché v. Fletcher, 1 Doug. 251; McFee v. South Carolina Ins. Co., 2 McCord (S. Car.) 503.

the moment the policy is executed, if the vessel is then at the port named; if not, then from the moment of her arrival at the port in good safety.¹

Any special terms of the policy must, of course, be complied with before it will attach.²

The risk on the vessel terminates when she is moored at the port of discharge in such a state of physical safety that she can

1. Matteux v. London Ass. Co., 1 Atk. 548; Palmer v. Marshall, 8 Bing. 79; Patrick v. Ludlow, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 10; Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Clapp, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 56; Cobb v. New England Mut. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 192.

These words do not imply that the vessel is at the moment of insuring at the port named. Hull v. Cooper, 14 East 479. But they do imply that she is shortly to be there, if not there already. Per LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C. J.: "When a broker proposes a policy to an underwriter on a ship at and from a certain place, it imports either that the ship is there at the time, or shortly will be there." Hull v. Cooper, 14 East 479.

If there is such delay in reaching the port as to change the risk, the policy does not attach, whether the delay be voluntary. Mount v. Larkins, 8 Bing. 108. Or involuntary. DeWolf v. Archangel Marit. Bk. & Ins. Co., L. R., 9 Q. B. 451.

The words "at and from" imply the words "first arrival." Matteux v. London Ass. Co., 1 Atk. 548; Forbes v. Wilson, 1 Marshall Ins. 148; Smith v. Surridge, 4 Esp. 25; but see Vallance v. Dewar, 1 Camp. 503, when, in the Newfoundland trade, it was the usage to run in and out of a port several times.

The vessel must at least once have been at the port in good safety. Parmenter v. Cousins, 2 Camp. 235. But in the case of a time policy this may be immaterial. Martin v. Fishing Ins. Co., 20 Pick. (Mass.) 389.

The vessel must arrive at the port in safety; that is, "in such condition as to enable her to lie there in reasonable security till she is properly repaired and equipped for her voyage." Per LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C. J., in Parmenter v. Cousins, 2 Camp. 235 at 237.

It is enough that she can keep afloat until repaired. Annen v. Woodman, 3 Taunt. 299.

If she arrives safely it is immaterial that she is injured while being moved about the harbor. Haughton v. Mar. Ins. Co., L. R., 1 Ex. 206.

Safety means physical safety. The fact that the vessel is liable to seizure will not prevent the policy from attaching. Bell v. Bell, 2 Camp. 475.

Delay in the port from necessity or for the purposes of the voyage will not prevent attaching. Matteux v. London Ass. Co., 1 Atk. 548; Smith v. Surridge, 4 Esp. 25; Grant v. King, 4 Esp. 174; Langhorn v. Allnutt, 4 Taunt. 511; Raine v. Bell, 9 East 195; McLanahan v. Universal Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 170; Seamans v. Loring, 1 Mason (U. S.) 427; Taylor v. Lowell, 3 Mass. 331.

If the vessel is already at the port stated, her departure must be shortly commenced, or in near contemplation. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 408, citing TINDAL, C. J., in Palmer v. Marshall, 8 Bing. 317 at 318; PARK J., in Palmer v. Fenning, 9 Bing. 462.

If lying in port without reference to any voyage, the policy attaches only from the time preparation for the voyage insured begins. Seamans v. Loring, 1 Mason (U. S.) 127, per STORY.

A policy "at and from" a West Indian island attaches from the moment of arrival in any harbor of the island. Camden v. Cowley, 1 W. Bl. 417; Cruickshank v. Janson, 2 Taunt. 301; Wayne v. Miller, 4 B. & C. 538.

Where a policy on a vessel cruising in the South Atlantic was to begin "on preparing for her voyage to London" at and from Pernambuco, it was held it attached on the vessel's putting into Pernambuco for a homeward cargo and sailing thence on her failure to seek one at St. Salvador. Lambert v. Liddard, 5 Taunt. 479.

2. Thus, where the policy provided that the vessel was "to go out in tow," it was held not to attach unless the vessel was towed out of the harbor limits. Provincial Ins. Co. v. Connolly, 3 Can. Sup. Ct. 258. And so where the policy gave liberty to sail not later than December 15th, but the vessel did not sail until December 17th, it was held that the risk had not attached. Duncan v. British American Ins. Co., 1 Prince Edward Is. 370.

keep afloat while her cargo is being unloaded; in such political safety as not within the time allowed to have been subjected to embargo, seizure or capture, and under such circumstances as to have had an opportunity of unloading and discharging.¹

Where the policy gave leave to sail "when clear of ice," it was held to mean when the course between the termini was almost free from ice, not when the vessel was clear where it was lying. Hyndman v. Montreal Ins. Co., 2 Prince Edward Is. 132.

Courts cannot extend a risk beyond what is plainly written in the policy, as, for instance, where an open policy provides that the property shall be at a certain place or shall belong to a certain person. Waxahachie Bank v. Lancashire Ins. Co., 62 Tex. 461.

A policy of marine insurance on a boat provided that the insurance was to commence "whenever she was in safety on the 26th day of March, 1868, . . . with permission to navigate the Mississippi from the city of St. Louis to Helena," etc. Held, that the permission to navigate was not a provision for the commencement of the risk, but a limitation on the assured. It was an exception in favor of the insurance company, to be construed most strongly against it, and not applicable to contradict the express agreement as to the time of the commencement of the risk. Schröder v. Stock etc. Ins. Co., 46 Mo. 174.

1. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 413.

Physical Safety.—Thus, where a vessel arrived in port a wreck, only kept afloat by being lashed to a hulk, and sank a few days after when an attempt was made to move her, it was held she had never been moored in good safety. Shawe v. Felton, 2 East 109. But when she arrived much shattered, but discharged cargo, and, more than thirty days after, was burned in dry dock, it was held she had been safely moored. Lidgett v. Secretan, L. R., 5 C. P. 190.

Political Safety.—When, on the day after arrival, the vessel was laid under an embargo then existing, and the captain and crew treated as prisoners of war, it was held the vessel had not been moved twenty-four hours in good safety. Minett v. Anderson, Peake 211.

So where immediately on arrival the hatches were sealed and papers taken, and later the vessel was seized and condemned. Horney v. Lushington, 15 East 46.

But when, although liable to seizure for a breach of law, the vessel was not in fact taken till she had lain safely in port for some days, it was held she had been moored in good safety and the risk was at an end. Lockyer v. Offley, 1 T. R. 252; Mariatique v. Louisiana Ins. Co., 8 La. (O. S.) 65.

Opportunity to Unload.—Where a vessel arrived in port but was ordered back to quarantine, which she did not reach for more than twenty days, and was burned more than a month later while still at quarantine, it was held the policy had not terminated, since the vessel had not been so moored that she had a chance to unload. Waples v. Eames, 2 Stra. 1243.

So when shallow water prevents reaching the intended wharf and the vessel is injured while lightering, she is not moored in good safety. Whitwell v. Harrison, 2 Exch. 127; Meigs v. Mutual M. Ins. Co., 2 Cush. (Mass.) 439; Simpson v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Holmes (U. S.) 126. Or when for any reason she cannot enter her dock. Samuel v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 8 B. & C. 119. Or is lost before she can unload. Dickey v. United Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 358.

If, however, she is moored, and her only duty is to await her turn in unloading, she is moored in good safety. Angerstein v. Bell, 1 Park Ins. 54; 1 Marshall Ins. 263.

Arrival.—Whether or not the vessel has arrived is for the jury. Lindsay v. Janson, 4 H. & N. 699.

Where the vessel had arrived at an anchorage ground outside the bar of the port of destination and had lain at anchor more than twenty-four hours lightering to get over the bar, it was held she had not arrived at her port of discharge and been moored twenty-four hours in good safety. Simpson v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Holmes (U. S.) 136.

Time After Arrival.—Policies generally provide that the risk shall continue for twenty-four hours after mooring in good safety. If nothing is said the risk terminates immediately on mooring. Anon., Skin. 243; Dickey v. United Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 358.

Cf. Stone v. Marine Ins. Co., 1 Exch. Div. 81, at 85, per BRAMWELL, J.; cited 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 418.

Where the policy provides that the risk shall continue "for thirty days after arrival and until she shall have been moored twenty-four hours in good safety," the twenty-four hours precede the thirty days. Mercantile Mar. Ins. Co. v. Titherington, 5 B. & S. 765; Bell v. Mason, 6 Mass. 313.

Of course when a loss occurs within the twenty-four hours the underwriter is liable. Zacherie v. New Orleans Ins. Co., 5 Martin (La.) N. S. 637.

Port of Discharge.—If the vessel is insured to "a port of discharge," it means the port at which she originally intended to discharge her cargo. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 424; Clason v. Simmonds, 6 T. R. 533, n.; Wales v. China Mutual Ins. Co., 8 Allen (Mass.) 380.

In Coolidge v. Gray, 8 Mass. 527, it was held that if no definite port was in mind at time of departure, the policy continues while the master is proceeding to that port which promises the best sales.

A policy of insurance on a vessel to a port of discharge and until she be moored twenty-four hours in safety, was held, not to cover a loss occurring after she had lain three weeks at a place to which she was destined as a place of discharge, where she had discharged a substantial part of her cargo, and at which similar vessels uniformly discharged in whole or in part. Bramhall v. Sun etc. Ins. Co., 104 Mass. 510.

A policy of insurance on a vessel, expressed as to terminate on arrival at a certain port, and being twenty-four hours at anchor in safety, is not determined by her arrival and lying at anchor in safety more than twenty-four hours at the anchorage ground outside the harbor of the port, and there, according to the custom of vessels of her draught bound for the port, discharging part of her cargo by lighters, in order to enable her to pass over a bar at the entrance to the harbor. Simpson v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Holmes (U. S.) 136. See also Upton v. Salem Commercial Ins. Co., 8 Metc. (Mass.) 605; King v. Hartford Ins. Co., 1 Conn. 333; Dodge v. Essex Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 65.

Where the insurance is to a final port of discharge, it means the port at which she discharges the bulk of her outward cargo, although she proceeds further. Moffat v. Ward, 4 Doug. 29, note a, 31, note b.

But if part is discharged at an intermediate port, and the vessel proceeds with the rest to a port originally contemplated, the risk continues until this is discharged. Preston v. Greenwood, 4 Doug. 29.

If the policy reads to "a port or ports of discharge," it terminates at the port where the great bulk is discharged. Upton v. Salem Commercial Ins. Co., 8 Metc. (Mass.) 605; Moore v. Taylor, 1 A. & E. 25; Sage v. Middleton Ins. Co., 1 Conn. 239; King v. Middleton Ins. Co., 1 Conn. 184.

The fact that part of the outward cargo is still on board does not continue the risk after the bulk is discharged and she has begun to ship homeward cargo. Leigh v. Mather, 1 Marshall Ins. 266; Inglis v. Naux, 3 Camp. 437.

Where the insurance is to a specified region and a market, the risk continues from port to port within that region till the cargo is disposed of. Debloes v. Ocean Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 303; Maxwell v. Robinson, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 333.

Merely putting into a port with the intent to discharge there if the market is good, otherwise not, does not render that port the first port of discharge. Lapham v. Atlas Ins. Co., 24 Pick. (Mass.) 1.

Where, however, policy was "to Bilbao or a port of discharge," and the vessel discharged part of cargo at Bilbao and then went on to Lisbon, it was held that the risk terminated at Bilbao. Stephens v. Beverly Ins. Co., 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 963.

Where the insurance to an island, or a port with several places for discharging, the risk ends on being moored in good safety at the first place at which the vessel stops. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 419; Camden v. Cowley, 1 W. Bl. 417; Barras v. London Ass. Co., 1 Park. Ins. 74; Cruickshank v. Janson, 2 Taunt. 301; Melville v. Stewart, 3 Fac. Dec. 254.

If the "last port of discharge" intended cannot be entered owing to an embargo, and part of the cargo is discharged at another port, without, however, abandoning the intention to enter the first if possible, the substituted port is the last port of discharge. Brown v. Vigne, 12 East 283.

The "last port" means the last "friendly port of discharge." 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 426.

Thus in Neilson v. Delacour, 2 Esp. 619, a vessel insured to a port in the Windward or Leeward Islands, on

If the intention to proceed to the final destination originally designed is abandoned, the risk ends the moment this abandonment is definitely decided upon.¹

A port risk ends immediately upon a vessel's departure on a voyage.²

The risk may, of course, be made to end at any time or on any event agreed upon.³

reaching D. and learning that one island, held by the French at the time the policy was made, had been taken by the English, proceeded thither, but on arriving was seized by the French, who had recaptured the island. It was held that the policy did not cover the voyage to this island, since the parties could not have intended to include it as a port in the islands which the vessel would visit.

Where the assured and the consignees of cargo agreed on an earlier port of delivery than the one at first intended, it was held the risk ended on discharge at this port. Shapley v. Tappan, 9 Mass. 20.

What constitutes an "arrival" is explained by GRAY, J., in Bramhall v. Sun Ins. Co., 104 Mass. 510, as follows: "A vessel arrives at a port of discharge when she arrives at any place at which it is usual to discharge cargo, and to which she is destined for the purpose of discharging cargo. Upon her arrival at that place, a policy insuring her until arrival at a port of discharge terminates, and cannot be extended or revived, after she has discharged part of her cargo there, by her removal to another port, or to another place in the same port, either for the purpose of discharging the rest of her cargo or for any other purpose."

1. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 427; Blackenhagen v. London Ass. Co., 1 Camp. 454; Stone v. Marine Ins. Co., Ocean Limited of Gothenburg, 1 Ex. Div. 81.

In Alexander v. Baltimore Ins. Co., 4 Cranch (U. S.) 370, a vessel which was insured from Charleston to Port Republic was taken by a privateer who seized the cargo and promised payment in coffee, which was to be obtained at Cape François. It was held the risk terminated the moment she sailed for Cape François for the coffee.

The risk may end for this cause before any voyage is begun. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 408; Chitty v. Selwyn, 2 Atk. 539, per LORD HARDWICKE.

If the vessel, deterred for some reason from at once proceeding to the intended destination, merely lies by to wait for a favorable opportunity to go on, the risk continues. Brown v. Vigne, 12 East 283, 286.

If the original voyage is abandoned, the risk does not continue while the vessel is on the way to a different port, even though necessity compels her to go there. Parkin v. Tunno, 11 East 22.

In Phillips v. Champion, 6 Taunt. 3, it was held that a fishing voyage was not ended by sending home part of the fare by another vessel.

2. Nelson v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 71 N. Y. 453.

In marine insurance policies issued in New York, "port risk" means risk upon the vessel lying in port and before departure upon another voyage. Slocovich v. Orient Mut. Ins. Co., 108 N. Y. 56; Nelson v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 417.

3. Where the policy provided for the "risk to end at the place and time the voyage is stopped" by ice, it was held that the risk ended only with the actual stopping. The master has a right to push on as far as he can, and the risk continues, even though the loss is caused by the pushing on. Sherwood v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co., 66 N. Y. 630.

Where the policy was "to continue in force from the date of expiration until notice is given to this company of its discontinuance, the assured to pay for such privilege pro rata for the time used," the term expired October 5th. On October 9th a premium for one month was sent company with a statement that it was "one monthly premium from October 5th to November 5th." It was held that the policy continued and covered a loss on November 6th. Greenwich Ins. Co. v. Providence etc. S. S. Co., 119 U. S. 481.

A policy covering the risk of fire on shore for ten days prior to shipment, held to mean that, if the property insured is burned while on shore awaiting shipment, within ten days after the insurance is effected, the policy shall cover the loss; but if burned after such ten days, the risk does not attach. England F. Ins. Assoc. v. Merchants & M. Transp. Co. (Md.), 6 Cent. 437.

2. Upon the Cargo.—The risk upon the cargo begins when it is loaded on board.¹

Where the policy is stated to be "from the loading thereof on board the said ship," at and from a particular place, the risk attaches only upon goods placed on board at that place.²

An open policy on the cargo of a canal boat provided that "if, in consequence of ice, or the closing of navigation, the said voyage cannot be finished the same season, the risk to end at the place and at the time the voyage is stopped, three days being given to discharge." The canal was formally closed to navigation, but by subsequent action of the canal commissioners it was reopened so that the voyage could be continued, and it was continued during the same season. It was held that there was no such interference of ice, etc., that the voyage could not be finished the same season. Delahunt v. Etna Ins. Co., 26 Hun (N. Y.) 668. See also Sherwood v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co., 66 N. Y. 630.

1. Cargo.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 378; Colonial Ins. Co. of New Zealand v. Adelaide Mar. Ins. Co., L. R., 12 App. Cas. 128; Cuttam v. Mechanics' Ins. Co., 40 La. An. 259.

It attaches although the vessel at the time of loading needs repairs to render her seaworthy. Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Clapp, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 56.

In Lewis v. Manufacturers' F. & M. Ins. Co., 131 Mass. 364, where the insurance was on oil, bone and other takings for the homeward voyage, it was held that the risk began immediately on receiving them on board, whether on the outward or homeward course of the vessel.

Where the policy was on cargo "to be shipped to insured during six months from and after the first day of August," it was held to cover goods laden on August 1st, when the vessel did not sail until August 6th. Sorbé v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 6 La. (O. S.) 185.

Unless there are special words the policy does not cover the risk of putting on board. Hurry v. Royal Exchange Ass. Co., 2 B. & P. 430.

2. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 379. The law was thus established by the early cases in England. Robertson v.

French, 4 East 130; Horneyer v. Lushington, 15 East 46; Spitta v. Woodman, 2 Taunt. 416; 16 East 188, note; Langhorn v. Hardy, 4 Taunt. 628; Mellish v. Allnutt, 2 M. & S. 106; Rickman v. Carstairs, 5 B. & Ad. 651.

And it was further held immaterial that the underwriter knew that the goods were already on board at the time of the vessel's arrival at the terminus a quo, and were intended to be covered by the assured. Gladstone v. Clay, 1 M. & S. at 424, per BAYLEY, J.

Later cases have disapproved these decisions, though not overruling them, and have seized on any point to distinguish the case in hand from them. Thus in Bell v. Hobson, 16 East 240, where the policy in suit was stated to be in continuation of five earlier policies which gave the actual port of loading, it was held that the goods were covered, although not loaded on board at the terminus named; and LORD ELLENBOROUGH declared the principle was not to be extended.

So also in Joyce v. Realm Ins. Co., L. R., 7 Q. B. 580, where the policy was stated to be "subject to all the clauses and conditions of the original policy."

So where the policy contained the word "wheresoever" loaded, it was held that goods loaded at Liverpool and still on board at Pernambuco, were covered by the policy "at and from Pernambuco to Maranham, and at and from thence to Liverpool." Gladstone v. Clay, 1 M. & S. 415.

If the goods have been unladen and reladen at the terminus a quo it has been held sufficient to make the policy attach. Nonnea v. Kittlewell, 16 East 176; Carr v. Monétfiore, 5 B. & S. 408.

The English rule was disapproved and disregarded in Creighton v. Union Marine Ins. Co., 1 James (Nova Sco.) 195.

In the United States, the English rule has been followed. Scriba v. Ins. Co. of North America, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 107; Graves v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Cal. (N. Y.) 339; Richards v. Marine Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 307. But in New York the policy is held to attach if the underwriter knew that the goods were loaded at a prior port and intended to be covered. Vredenberg v. Gracie, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 444, note.

The policy attaches only to goods shipped on the one voyage designated.¹

The risk continues until the goods are safely landed, that is, placed upon the ordinary wharves, quays or customary landing places.²

In Massachusetts, if the policy contains merely the words "at and from" the terminus a quo, it is immaterial that the goods were not loaded on board there. Silloway v. Neptune Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 73; Clark v. Higgins, 132 Mass. 586. See also Cleveland v. Fettyplace, 3 Mass. 392.

Merely hoisting the goods on deck for the purpose of loading other goods is not sufficient to constitute such a re-landing that the policy will attach. Murray v. Columbian Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 302.

It has been held that the loading must be at the very terminus a quo named, and that goods laden at another place within the legal limits of the port will not be covered. Constable v. Noble, 2 Taunt. 403; Payne v. Hutchinson, 2 Taunt. 405, note; but see Harrower v. Hutchinson, L. R., 5 Q. B. 584, and cases cited under "usage" as to limits of port.

The rule does not apply where liberty to touch and trade is given in the policy, the intent being clearly in such case to cover goods wherever laden. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 384, citing Violet v. Allnutt, 3 Taunt. 419; Grant v. Delacour, 1 Taunt. 466; Grant v. Paxton, 1 Taunt. 463; Barclay v. Sterling, 5 M. & S. 6; Hunter v. Leathley, 10 P. & C. 858.

1. Thus in Courtney v. Mississippi M. & F. Ins. Co., 12 La. (O. S.) 233, the policy was on 143 hogsheads of sugar at and from New Orleans to Louisville in the steamer Belfast. Twenty-six were shipped on one trip and the balance on the next. It was held that only the first 26 were covered by the policy. Martin v. Fishing Ins. Co., 20 Pick. (Mass.) 389; Boylston v. Ins. Co., 5 Metc. (Mass.) 439; Brown v. Neilson, 1 Cal. (N. Y.) 525; Richards v. Marine Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 307; American Ins. Co. v. Hutton, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 330; Union Ins. Co. v. Tyson, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 118; Meech v. Phila. Ins. Co., 3 Whart. (Pa.) 473; Eyre v. Marine Ins. Co., 6 Whart. (Pa.) 247.

2. Harrison v. Ellis, 7 E. & B. 465;

Mansur v. New England Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 520; Dodge v. Essex Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 65; Gray v. Gardner, 17 Mass. 188; Cole v. Union etc. Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 501; Gooker v. New England etc. Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 506; Fletcher v. St. Louis Mar. Ins. Co., 18 Mo. 193; Sage v. Middletown Ins. Co., 1 Conn. 239; King v. Hartford Ins. Co., 1 Conn. 333.

If the ordinary method of unloading is by lighters the goods are protected while in the lighters. Tiernay v. Etherington, 1 Burr. 348; Rucker v. London Ass. Co., 2 B. & P. 432, note; Hurry v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 2 B. & P. 430; Matthie v. Potts, 3 B. & P. 23; Stewart v. Bell, 5 B. & Ald. 238; Wadsworth v. Pacific Ins. Co., 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 38; Osacar v. Louisiana State Ins. Co., 5 Martin (La.) N. S. 386.

Where the goods were in lighters simply for transshipment and not for landing, it was held they were not protected under a policy covering all risk of craft until discharged and safely landed. Houlder v. Merchants' Mar. Ins. Co., 17 Q. B. Div. 354.

If the goods are landed the risk is at an end, even though they are not in the consignee's hands, or even if seized and confiscated. Brown v. Carstairs, 3 Camp. 161.

If the goods are landed merely for a temporary purpose the risk continues. Parsons v. Massachusetts F. & M. Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 197.

Where opium, part of cargo, was taken ashore for the purpose of trading with it and was seized, yet the underwriter was held liable.

There is no fixed time within which the landing must be completed; it is enough if within a reasonable time. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 395; Parkinson v. Collier, 2 Park Ins. 653.

Where the power to ship and transship is given the goods are protected during the transshipment. Tierney v. Etherington, 1 Burr. 348.

But not if they are landed and held to await transshipment. Australian Agricultural Co. v. Saunders, L. R., 10 C. P. 668.

An open cargo policy was issued by

It ceases, however, on delivery to the assured, if he assumes control before the actual landing.¹

The landing must be at the place of destination named as the port of discharge.²

The risk, of course, may be made to terminate on any event agreed upon.³

3. Upon Freight.—The risk upon freight attaches only from the moment when such a relation is established between the ship and cargo that but for the perils insured against freight would have been earned; and it continues until the freight is paid or the policy is avoided.⁴

an insurance company, and the assured reported a shipment on a steamboat named, which was accordingly entered upon the book annexed to the policy as insured thereby. During the voyage the property was, without necessity, reshipped and lost. Held, that the insurance company not assenting to the reshipment was discharged from liability on the policy. Malinckrodt v. Jefferson Fire Ins. Co., 1 Mo. App. 205.

1. Thus, where the goods were received by the assured in his own lighters, it was held the risk had ended. Sparrow v. Carruthers, 2 Stra. 1236. And so where he gave orders to the lightermen and said he would attend to landing the goods, it was held he had taken possession and the risk had ended. Strong v. Nataly, 1 B. P. 16.

2. Barrass v. London Ass. Co., 1 Marshall Ins. 266; Leigh v. Mather, 1 Esp. 412.

The risk will terminate on a landing at a place which by commercial usage is held equivalent to the place named. Gracie v. Marine Ins. Co., 8 Cranch (U. S.) 75.

The risk ceases on all with the unloading of the bulk at the place intended. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. 397, 398; Barrass v. London Ass. Co., 1 Marshall Ins. 266; Leigh v. Mather, 1 Marshall Ins. 266; Richardson v. London Ass. Co., 4 Camp. 94.

The risk may be determined at any intermediate point by agreement. Ionides v. Hartford, 29 L. J., Ex. 36. And by similar agreement may be continued to cover an overland transport. Rodonachi v. Elliott, L. R., 8 C. P. 649.

If the cargo is insured to its "final port of destination," the risk continues while the vessel is waiting an opportunity to reach its destined port which is closed by pending hostilities. Aliverson v. Brightman, 8 Q. B. 781.

But where the parties anticipated delay from such a cause, and gave liberty to wait two months if needful at an intermediate port, it was held that the risk terminated on the expiration of the two months of waiting. Doyle v. Powell, 4 B. & Ad. 267.

Where the voyage was stated to be from Lawrenceburg to New Orleans, the vessel discharged and paid off most of its hands on reaching Freeport, a few miles from New Orleans, and stopped there and exhibited its cargo. It was the custom to do this, obtain a purchaser and then drop down to New Orleans and discharge. It was held the risk continued until the discharge at New Orleans. Grant v. Lexington F. & M. Ins. Co., 5 Ind. 23.

3. Thus in Delahunt v. Aetna Ins. Co., 97 N. Y. 537; 26 Hun (N. Y.) 668, goods on a canal boat were insured the risk to end, if the voyage could not be completed in the season, at the time and place the voyage was stopped, allowing three days for discharging. The boat was stopped by ice for more than three days, but a way was cut through the ice and the boat went on. She sank later. It was held that the risk did not end with this stop.

4. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 432, et seq. The question when such a relation is established is identical with the enquiry when an insurable interest in freight exists, and the cases cited upon that subject are in point here, and to them reference is made.

This relation may exist and the policy attach before any goods are actually shipped if the cargo is contracted for and the vessel is preparing to load it but is prevented by the perils insured against. Williamson v. Innis, cited 8 Bing. 81, note.

VIII Matters Avoiding the Policy.—A policy is rendered voidable by a misrepresentation as to a material fact connected with the risk; by a concealment of a material fact; by a breach of an express or implied warranty; by a deviation or change of voyage; by illegality.

1. Misrepresentation.—"A misrepresentation, whether from mistake, ignorance or accident, of any material fact, however innocently made, avoids the policy."¹

Thus if she is lost while going from place to place completing her lading. Parke v. Hibson, 2 B. & B. 329.

Or while being put in order to receive the cargo. Touscott v. Christie, 2 B. & B. 320.

In Devaux v. J'Anson, 5 Bing. N. C. 519, it was held the policy had attached although the vessel was injured in getting her out of a dry dock and the cargo was several miles inland awaiting the vessel.

It will not attach, however, if the vessel is not ready to receive the cargo or not in process of being specially prepared to take it. Tongue v. Watts, 2 Stra. 1251.

If the cargo is not contracted for the risk does not attach until the cargo is actually on board. Patrick v. Eames, 3 Camp. 441.

If the vessel freight is the chartered hire of the vessel, the risk attaches from the moment the ship breaks ground to perform the charter party. Thompson v. Taylor, 6 T. R. 478; Horncastle v. Suart, 7 East 400; Davidson v. Willaer, 1 M. & S. 313; Atty v. Lindo, 1 B. & P. N. R. 236; Ellis v. Lafone, 8 Exch. 546.

It is immaterial that the vessel at the time is at another port than that named in the policy. Barker v. Fleming, L. R., 5 Q. B. 59; Potter v. Rankin, L. R., 6 H. L. 83.

Or that she is at the time engaged in another voyage, if the agreement for hire contemplated that she should complete this. Foley v. United F. & M. Ins. Co. of Sydney, L. R., 5 Ch. 155.

Of course the risk will not attach under such circumstances, if the language of the policy prevents. Thus, where the risk was stated to begin "from the loading of the goods on board at" the terminus a quo, it was held it did not attach before any goods were loaded, although the vessel was at the port and preparing to load. Beckett v. West of England Ins. Co., 25 L. T., N. S. 739.

And where the risk was to begin

"from the loading of the vessel," it was held to mean from the time she was completely loaded. Jones v. Neptune Ins. Co., L. R., 7 Q. B. 702; Hopper v. Wear Mar. Ins. Co., 46 L. T., N. S. 107.

In Barnes v. Akers, Peake, Add. Cas. 22, the policy read, "at and from all or any of the Windward and Leeward Islands to London on freight from the time that any part of the whale cargo should be put on board." Certain wine was laden on the outward voyage to be taken to London. The vessel was captured after the arrival at the islands before any cargo was laden there. It was held that the policy did not attach to the wine, as it was intended to apply only to cargo laden at the islands.

1. Misrepresentation.—A misrepresentation is a false statement of a fact made in regard to a proposed insurance. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 520. It is enough to avoid a policy that a representation, if material, is false. The law is settled by many cases. Fillis v. Bruton, 1 Park Ins. 414; Fitzherbert v. Mather, 1 T. R. 12; M'Dowell v. Fraser, 1 Doug. 260; Steele v. Lacy, 3 Taunt. 285; Feise v. Parkinson, 4 Taunt. 640; Darby v. Newton, 6 Taunt. 544; Edwards v. Footner, 1 Camp. 530; Dennistown v. Lillie, 3 Bligh P. C. 202; Price v. Dupeau, 1 Brev. 452; Chaurand v. Angerstein, Peake N. P. 4; Arnot v. Steward, 5 Dow 274; Kinloch v. Duguid, Fac. Dec. (1812-1814) 108; Hazard v. New England Ins. Co., 8 Pet. (U. S.) 557; 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 211; Higgie v. National Lloyds, 14 Fed. Rep. 143; 11 Biss. (U. S.) 395; Carpenter v. American Ins. Co., 1 Story (U. S.) 57; Bulkley v. Protection Ins. Co., 2 Paine (U. S.) 82; Folsom v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 9 Blatchf. (U. S.) 201; Livingstone v. Maryland Ins. Co., 7 Cranch (U. S.) 506; King v. Del. Ins. Co., 6 Cranch (U. S.) 71; Clason v. Smith, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 156; Alsop v. Coit, 12 Mass. 40; Sawyer v. Coasters' Mut. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 221; Ohl v. Eagle Ins. Co., 4 Mass. 390; Martin v. Fishing

Ins. Co., 20 Pick. (Mass.) 389; Fosdick v. Norwich Ins. Co., 3 Day (Conn.) 108; Kemble v. Bowne, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 75; Ely v. Hallett, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 57; Suckley v. Delafield, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 222; Vandenheuvel v. United Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 127; Murray v. Alsop, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 47; Callaghan v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 64.

It is immaterial that though false it is not fraudulent. Anderson v. Thornton, 8 Exch. 420; Lewis v. Eagle Ins. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 508.

Where the statement is false to the knowledge of the assured, this has been held evidence that it is fraudulent. Stewart v. Morrison, Miller Ins. 39; Roberts v. Fonnereau, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 405.

And so where the policy is affected after knowledge of the loss. Tyler v. Horne, 1 Park Ins. 455; Chapman v. Fraser, 1 Park Ins. 455.

Although the policy is made to read "lost or not lost." People v. Dimick, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 616.

Future Condition.—It has been held that a representation as to a future condition of things, though false, does not vitiate the policy. Flinn v. Tobin, 1 Mood. & Malk. 367; Augusta Ins. & Bank Co. v. Abbott, 12 Md. 348; Bryant v. Ocean Ins. Co., 22 Pick. (Mass.) 200; Alston v. Mechanics' Mut. Ins. Co., 4 Hill (N. Y.) 329, 330.

But Mr. Arnould, 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 523, declares this irreconcilable with authority, and refers to the facts in the cases of Steele v. Lacy, 3 Taunt. 285; Feise v. Parkinson, 4 Taunt. 639; Edwards v. Footner, 1 Camp. 530; Dennistown v. Lillie, 3 Bligh P. C. 102. In all of these a representation as to a future condition of things which proved to be false was held to vitiate the policy. JUDGE DUER, 2 Duer Ins. 741, 743, 749-769, is strongly of the same opinion.

Expectation or Belief.—A representation as to expectation or belief is immaterial unless fraudulent. Barber v. Fletcher, 1 Doug. 306; Hubbard v. Glover, 3 Camp. 313; Bowden v. Vaughan, 10 East 415; Brine v. Featherstone, 4 Taunt. 867; Anderson v. Pacific F. & M. Ins. Co., L. R., 7 C. P. 65; Rice v. New England Mar. Ins. Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 439; Hubbard v. Coolidge, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 353; Allegre v. Maryland Ins. Co., 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 36.

Intention.—And so is a statement of intention. Bryant v. Ocean Ins. Co., 22

Pick. (Mass.) 200; Irvin v. Sea Ins. Co., 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 380.

Information.—Where the statement is given merely as information which the assured has received, or where he gives all the information he has and leaves the underwriter to act on it as he thinks best, the policy is not avoided even if the statements prove untrue. Rice v. New England Ins. Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 439; 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 530; 2 Duer Ins. 707.

Intent to Deceive.—Of course if the statement is made with intent to deceive the policy is avoided by the fraud. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 520, and authorities cited.

Construction.—The language used must be given the meaning the words would have in their ordinary sense to a person acquainted with the subject matter. Ratcliffe v. Schoalbred, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 413; Kirby v. Smith, 1 B. & Ald. 672.

Thus in Hazard v. New England Mar. Ins. Co., 8 Pet. (U. S.) 557, where the statement was made that a vessel was "coppered," it was held that the word must be given the meaning it had in New York where it was used, and not in Boston, in which place it had a different implication.

In Lyon v. Stadacona Ins. Co., 44 Up. Can., Q. B. 472, in answer to the underwriter's question whether "stoves, funnels, flues, etc., employed for heating and using fire were properly secured," the word "none" was written. It was held not to mean that there was no galley stove on the vessel.

If ambiguous or such as to provoke further enquiry, the underwriter cannot set up as a defense that the statement was not true in the sense in which he understood it. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 540; Brine v. Featherstone, 4 Taunt. 867; Freeland v. Glover, 7 East 462; Livingstone v. Maryland Ins. Co., 7 Cranch (U. S.) 506.

A representation may be gathered from the language of the policy. Thus in Hodgson v. Richardson, 1 W. Bl. 463, in a policy at and from Genoa to Dublin, "the adventure to begin from the loading to equip for the voyage," these words were held to imply a loading at Genoa. In fact the vessel loaded at Leghorn, which changed the risk, and the policy was declared avoided. So the words "to return five per cent. for convoy and arrival" were held to amount to a representation that probably the vessel would sail with con-

The misrepresentation, to avoid the policy, must be in regard to a material fact.¹

Where a representation material to the risk is not exactly true, but is substantially so, the policy will not be avoided.²

voy, when in fact the assured knew she had already sailed without convoy. Reid v. Harvey, 4 Dow's Rep. 97.

So a policy on goods on "ship or ships" is a representation that the assured does not know what ship. If he does, the policy is void. Lynch v. Hamilton, 3 Taunt. 37. See Fowler v. Graves, 13 L. T., N. S. 476.

Although the truth could be learned from Lloyd's list, the presumption will be that the underwriter relied on the representation, unless it is proved that he inspected the list. Mackintosh v. Marshall, 11 M. & W. 116; cf. Foley v. Tabor, 2 F. & F. 662, per EARL, C. J., semble contra.

The statements may be withdrawn at any time before the policy is actually executed. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 538; Carter v. Boehm, 3 Burr. 1905; Edwards v. Footner, 1 Camp. 530; Dawson v. Atty. 7 East 366.

1. Material Facts.—Every representation is to be presumed material which would be likely to induce a fair and reasonable underwriter to take the risk or lower the premium. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 530; Hodgson v. Marine Ins. Co., 5 Cranch (U. S.) 100; Alsop v. Ins. Co., 1 Sumn. 458.

"Every misrepresentation is fatal to a contract which is made under such circumstances and in such a way as to gain the confidence of the other party, and induce him to act when otherwise he would not." Per LORD ELDON, in Sibbald v. Hill, 2 Dow. P. C. 263; Stetson v. Mass. Ins. Co., 4 Mass. 330.

Thus a false statement as to the rate at which other underwriters were willing to insure. Sibbald v. Hill, 2 Dow. P. C. 263; Clason v. Smjth, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 156.

As to the nature of the cargo. Flinn v. Headlam, 9 B. & C. 690; Vasse v. Ball, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 178.

As to the date of sailing. Dennistown v. Lillie, 3 Bligh P. C. 202.

As to the presence of a French bill of sale on board. Murray v. Alsop, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 47.

The exact time of sailing has been held immaterial in Williams v. Delafield, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 329; Mackay v. Rhineland, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 408.

In time policies a mistaken statement as to the position of the ship on a particular day, and a false description of the voyage to be taken have been held immaterial. Vigoreaux v. Lime Rock Ins. Co., 59 Me. 457; Harvey v. Seligman, 10 Sc. Sess. Cas. (4th ed.) 680.

So a statement as to the value of the vessel is immaterial. Hodgson v. Marine Ins. Co., 5 Cranch (U. S.) 100.

For other cases see Livingston v. Maryland Ins. Co., 7 Cranch (U. S.) 506; Buck v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 151.

Whether the statement is material or not is always for the jury. M'Dowell v. Fraser, 1 Doug. 260; Shirley v. Wilkinson, 1 Doug. 306, note; Willes v. Glover, 1 B. & P. N. R. 14; Hull v. Cooper, 14 East 479; Mackintosh v. Marshall, 11 M. & W. 116; McLanahan v. Universal Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 170; Schroeder v. Stock & Mut. Ins. Co., 46 Mo. 174.

2. Substantial Compliance.—Herein the effect of a representation differs from that of a warranty, which must be exactly complied with. Thus where a vessel was stated to be at Limerick when in fact she was at Grass Island. Bell v. Marine Ins. Co., 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 98.

Where the vessel was stated to mount twelve guns and carry twenty men, when in fact the number of men was less and of guns was more. Pawson v. Watson, 1 Cowp. 785.

Where the statement made was that the vessel was last metalled in 1867, and the truth was that she was only overhauled then and new metal put on where it seemed necessary. Alexander v. Campbell, 41 L. J. (Ch.) 478.

So it was held that the fact that a vessel stated to sail in ballast actually took a very small amount of cargo did not avoid the policy. Suckley v. Delafield, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 222.

A statement that no spirits were on board was held sufficiently complied with if, although there was some liquor on board, it was not for the use of the officers and crew. Irvin v. Sea Ins. Co., 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 380.

So where a vessel was stated to carry her registered tonnage of coal, but in

By an old rule, statements made to a prior underwriter relating to the risk as it appears in the policy may be taken advantage of by subsequent underwriters.¹

It is immaterial that the loss does not arise from any cause connected with the fact in regard to which the misrepresentation was made.²

2. Concealment.—Concealment is the suppression, at the time of making the contract, of a material fact within the knowledge of one party, which the other has not the means of knowing or is not presumed to know.³

A concealment, although not fraudulent, renders the contract wholly void. The insured is bound to communicate every fact within his own knowledge or that of agents whose duty it is to inform him, and who have had opportunity to do so, which would lead a reasonable underwriter to refuse the risk or to demand a higher premium.⁴

fact carried more. Hearn v. Equitable Safety Ins. Co., 4 Cliff. (U. S.) 192.

So where it was represented that the vessel would be repaired at Y, it was held that this was sufficiently complied with if she was examined at Y and pronounced seaworthy, and accordingly not repaired there. Lunt v. Boston Mar. Ins. Co., 17 Fed. Rep. 411; 6 Fed. Rep. 562; 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 151. See also Driscoll v. Passmore, 1 B. & P. 200; Von Tugelu v. Dubois, 2 Camp. 151; Nonneu v. Kettlewell, 16 East 176; Christian v. Ditchell, Peake Add. Cas. 141.

1. Statements to Prior Underwriters.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 544.

The law is so stated in a series of early cases. Pawson v. Watson, 2 Cowp. 785; Barber v. Fletcher, 1 Doug. 305; Marsden v. Reid, 3 East 572; Feise v. Parkinson, 4 Taunt. 640; Forrester v. Pigon, 1 M. & S. 13; Bell v. Carstairs, 2 Camp. 543.

The representation must be one that affects the risk as it appears in the policy. Pawson v. Watson, 2 Cowp. 785.

The rule is not favored, and, probably, would not be upheld today. Per LORD ELLENBOROUGH, in Bell v. Carstairs, 2 Camp. 543: "It is difficult to see on what principle of law a representation to the first underwriter is considered as made to all who afterwards underwrite the policy. The rule being established, I will abide by it; but I will by no means allow it to be extended."

And in Forrester v. Pigon, 1 M. & S. at 13, he says: "Whenever the question comes distinctly before the court, whether a communication to the first underwriter is virtually a notice to all, I shall not scruple to remark that that proposition is to be received with great qualification." See also Robertson v. Majoribanks, 2 Stark. N. P. 503.

And per HEATH, J., in Brine v. Featherstone, 4 Taunt. at 871: "The evidence of representations made to the first underwriter had been admitted; but that was rather on precedent than reason."

If the first underwriter signs under a secret agreement that he shall be excused from liability in case of loss, this constitutes a distinct fraud on subsequent underwriters, and they are not bound. Whittingham v. Thornburgh, 2 Vern. 206; Wilson v. Duckett, 3 Burr. 1361.

2. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.); Lynch v. Hamilton, 3 Taunt. 36; Lynch v. Dunsford, 14 East 494.

3. Concealment.—1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 548, citing Ionides v. Pender, L. R., 9 Q. B. 531; Rivaz v. Gerussi, 6 Q. B. D. 222; 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 495; 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 531; Hart v. British etc. F. & M. Ins. Co., 22 Pac. Rep. 302; People v. Demick, 107 N. Y. 13; Locke v. North American Ins. Co., 13 Mass. 61.

4. This is established by a multitude of cases in which a failure to disclose such a material fact has been held to avoid the policy. A failure to disclose the presence of enemy's vessels. Beckwith v. Nalgrove, Holt N. P. 288, note; Durrell v. Bederley, Holt N. P. 283.

The fact a belligerent was interested in the cargo or the vessel. Campbell

v. Innes, 4 B. & Ald. 423; Baudery v. Union Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 391. See Buck v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 151; Maryland Ins. Co. v. Ruden, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 338.

Or the former belligerent character of the vessel. Bates v. Hewitt, L. R., 2 Q. B. 595; 4 F. & F. 1023.

Any fact showing property liable to seizure. Moyne v. Walter, 1 Park Ins. 431; Kohne v. Ins. Co. of North America, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 219; 1 Wash. (U. S.) 93, 158; Cunningham v. Craigie, Bell's Sel. Cas. 268; Stocker v. Merrimack M. & F. Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 220; Archibald v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 3 Pick. (Mass.) 701.

The fact that the vessel containing the cargo or freight insured was a prize returning for condemnation. Reid v. McMillan, Fac. Dec. (1812-1814) 407; Reid v. Harvey, 4 Dow 97.

The fact of a peril from a severe storm unknown to the underwriter. Mahoney v. Provincial Ins. Co., 1 Han. (N. B.) 633; Moses v. Delaware Ins. Co., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 385; Ely v. Hallett, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 57.

The fact that the vessel is a wreck at the time the policy is effected. Hamblet v. City Ins. Co., 36 Fed. Rep. 188; cf. Rosenheim v. American Ins. Co., 33 Mo. 230.

Or has put into the port where the insurance is to begin, for repairs. Boak v. Merchants' Marine Ins. Co., 1 Russ. & C. (Nova Sc.) 288.

Or has put in to an intermediate port for repairs. Uzielli v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 12 L. T. 399.

The existence of any special contract, agreement, or orders by which the usual risk is varied or affected. Ocean Ins. Co. v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 8 Ben. (U. S.) 272.

Thus where after reaching a certain point on the voyage insured it was usual for the master to take that one of three possible courses which seemed at that moment safest; but the master sailed under instructions to take one particular course, and was left no option. Middlewood v. Blakes, 7 T. R. 162; cf. Houston v. New England Ins. Co., 5 Pick. (Mass.) 89.

Where by a special agreement with a lighterman he was relieved of liability as a carrier, and the underwriter's recourse to him by subrogation was thus impaired. Tate v. Hyslop, 15 Q. B. Div. 368.

Where the charter party contained an agreement that it might be cancelled if the vessel failed to reach a specified point in a fixed time, the policy being on freight. Mercantile Steamship Co. v. Tyser, 7 Q. B. Div. 73.

Where there was an agreement to carry cotton from Smyrna to Leghorn under false papers stating it to be the property of the owners of the ship, when in fact it belonged to a belligerent. Stocker v. Merrimack M. & F. Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 220.

Where an insurance company knew that A was insured on his interest in a vessel, and for double the amount of its possible earnings, held that it was bound to disclose that fact to another company from which it sought reinsurance. Sun Mut. Ins. Co. v. Ocean Ins. Co., 107 U. S. 485.

The fact that the vessel has sailed, or will sail without convoy, where convoy is usual, or is required by a fair construction of the policy. Reid v. Harvey, 4 Dow 97; Sawtell v. London, 5 Taunt. 359.

The insured is bound to communicate any facts which lead him to fear a loss has occurred; and policies have been held void for failure to communicate such facts in the following cases: Durell v. Bederley, Holt N. P. 283; De Costa v. Scandret, 2 P. Wms. 170; Murrison v. Gibbon, Fac. Dec. (1810-1812) 148; Kinloch v. Campbell, Fac. Dec. (1814-1815) 421; Nicholson v. Power, 20 L. T. (N. S.) 580. See Symers v. Glasgow Ins. Co., 19 Scot. Jur. 49; Mechanics' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Lyman, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 664; Vale v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 283; Johnson v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 378; Snow v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 61 N. Y. 160; Hart v. British etc. F. & M. Ins. Co., 80 Cal. 440; Horter v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 28 La. An. 730; Graham v. General Mut. Ins. Co., 6 La. An. 432; Burr v. Foster, 2 Dane Abr. 122; Vasse v. Ball, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 270; Livingston v. Maryland Ins. Co., 6 Cranch (U. S.) 274; Murgatroyd v. Crawford, 3 Dall. (Pa.) 491; M'Lanahan v. Universal Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 185; General Interest Ins. Co. v. Ruggles, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 408; Kohne v. Ins. Co., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 93; Mar. Ins. Co. v. Ruden, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 338; Biays v. Union Ins. Co., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 506; Oliver v. Green, 3 Mass. 133; Hoyt v. Gilman, 8 Mass. 336; Stocker v. Merrimack Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 220; Fiske v. New England Ins. Co., 15 Pick. (Mass.) 310; Watson v. Delafield, 2 Cai. (N. Y.)

224; Livingston v. Delafield, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 49; Burrett v. Saratoga Ins. Co., 5 Hill (N. Y.) 189; Howell v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., 7 Ohio 276; Ingraham v. S. C. Ins. Co., Treadw. (S. Car.) Const. 707; Graham v. Gen. Ins. Co., 6 La. An. 432; Green v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 402. Dickenson v. Commercial Ins. Co. of New York, Anthon' N. P. (N. Y.) 92; cf. on this case, 2 Duer. Ins. 486, note a; People v. Dimick, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 616. Cf. Rosenheim v. Amer. Ins. Co., 33 Mo. 230, where, although the assured knew the vessel on which his goods were laden was aground and in danger of loss at the time he effected the insurance, it was left to the jury to say whether the failure to disclose the facts was material. Clearly the underwriter was entitled to know the facts which were concealed here. See also Graham v. General Ins. Co., 6 La. An. 432; Oliver v. Newburyport Ins. Co., 3 Mass. 37.

It is immaterial that the information received by the assured be in fact untrue, the policy will be void if he has suppressed it. Seaman v. Fonereau, 2 Stra. 1183; Lynch v. Dunsford, 14 East 494; Lynch v. Hamilton, 3 Taunt. 37; Murrison v. Gibbon, Fac. Div. (1810-1812) 148; Hoyt v. Gilman, 8 Mass. 336, 339; Union Ins. Co. v. Stoney, Harp. (S. Car.) 235.

The policy will be void, although the assured has sought to verify the information and has concluded it to be untrue. Morrison v. Universal Mar. Ins. Co., L. R., 8 Ex. 197.

A failure to communicate the port of loading and the fact that other underwriters had refused to take the risk from that port has been held fatal. Harrower v. Hutchinson, L. R., 5 Q. B. 584.

That the agent of the underwriter was a part owner in the vessel insured. Ritt v. Washington M. & F. Ins. Co., 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 353.

A change of the vessel's nationality. Hutchinson v. Aberdeen Sea Ins. Co., 3 Sc. Sess. Cas., 4th ser., 682.

That trade to the port of destination is prohibited by proclamation, if unknown to the underwriter. Marsh v. Muir, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 134; Hoyte v. Gilman, 8 Mass. 336.

That the people of the coast of Africa had promised to cut off the master if he came to the coast again. Ingraham v. South Carolina Ins. Co., 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 522.

That by an anonymous letter it had been stated that the owners of the vessel on which the goods insured were laden intended to sink her. Leigh v. Adams, 25 L. T., N. S. 566.

Where goods declared on earlier policies had been fraudulently undervalued in order that more goods might be declared on later ones, this was held a concealment which vitiated the policies. Rivaz, v. Gerussi, 6 Q. B. Div. 222.

And so where a cargo was very greatly overvalued, it was held a fatal concealment not to disclose that the difference between the actual and stated value was expected profits from traffic with a port in Russia not within the Russian custom house jurisdiction at that time. Ionides v. Pender, L. R., 9 Q. B. 531.

Where the policy is made on goods by "ship or ships," or "on any steamer," it is a fatal concealment if the assured knows at the time the particular vessel. and fails to disclose it. Fowler v. Graves, 13 L. T. 476.

But not if he only expects them to be on a particular vessel. Knight v. Catesworth, 1 Cababé & Ellis 48.

If the assured knows of a loss, or is aware of facts which render a loss probable, he is not relieved from the necessity of communicating his knowledge by making the policy "lost or not lost." Kinlock v. Campbell, Fac. Dec. (1814-1815) 421; People v. Dimick, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 616.

Where a party obtained from the agent of an insurance company a marine policy on goods, "lost or not lost," it appeared that the vessel on which they had been shipped was lost two days prior to the date of the policy, and the party procuring the insurance knew of the loss at the time, but did not inform the agent, held, that the fact that the daily papers at the place where the policy was issued, announcing the loss of the vessel, were received at the office of the company on the morning of the day the policy was issued, did not show necessarily that the information was received by the company. The particular agent effecting the insurance should have had the information; and as his business was outside of the office, information there was not the same as information to him, or to the company. Nor would notice to one of the agents of the company necessarily import notice to another. Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Paine, 60 Ill. 448.

The assured is not bound to disclose anything which the underwriter either in fact knows or is in law presumed to know, or which is implied in the statement of the risk or which is immaterial to the risk.¹ Nor need he disclose mere apprehen-

The owner of a vessel, knowing that his vessel had been lost on the 8th of January, 1870, but concealing his knowledge of the fact, applied for, on the 15th following, and got a written policy of insurance dated on that day, on her, "lost or not lost," from the 1st of January, 1870, to the 1st of April following. The insurance company discovering afterwards that when he applied for this policy he knew of the loss, refused to pay; he brought suit, setting out his written policy, but declaring on it in such a way as was meant to show that the execution of it was but "a compliance with and a formal statement" of an agreement to make the insurance, which he alleged had been entered into between himself and the insurers on the 31st of December, 1869, and before the loss. Held, that the company was not liable on the policy. MR. JUSTICE MILLER, in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Counsel for the defendants in error here relies on two propositions, namely, that the policy, though executed January 5th, is really but the expression of a verbal contract, made the 31st day of December previous, and that the loss of the vessel between those two dates does not invalidate the contract, though known to be assured and kept secret from the insurers; and secondly, that they can abandon the written contract altogether and recover on the parol contract. We do not think that either of these propositions are sound. Whatever may have been the precise facts concerning the negotiations for a renewal of the insurance previous to the execution of the policy, they evidently had reference to a written contract, to be made by the company. When the company came to make this instrument, they were entitled to the information which the plaintiffs had of the loss of the vessel. If they had made the policy it would have bound them, and no question would have been raised of the validity of the instrument or of fraud practiced by the insured. On the other hand, if they had refused to make the policy, no injury would have been done to the plaintiffs, and they would have stood on their parol contract if they had one, and did not need a policy procured by fraudulent concealment of a material fact at the time it was executed and the premium paid. To permit the plaintiffs, therefore, to prove by parol that the contract of insurance was actually made before the loss occurred, though executed and delivered and paid for afterward, is to contradict and vary the terms of the policy in a matter material to the contract, which we understand to be opposed to the rule on that subject in the law of Louisiana as well as at the common law."

1. What Need Not be Disclosed.—The underwriter is presumed to know the usages of trade. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 579, et seq., and cases cited; Le Roy v. United Ins. Co., 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 343.

To know the political state of the world. Hoyt v. Gilman, 8 Mass. 336; Blagge v. New York Ins. Co., 1 Cal. (N. Y.) 549; 2 Duer 516, 561; Buck v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 160; Kohne v. Ins. Co., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 158; Martin v. Del. Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 254; De Longuemere v. N. Y. Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 120; Marsh v. Muir, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 134.

And the physical characteristics of the ports of the world. Thus it is not necessary to disclose that Sisal is an open roadstead. De Longuemere v. New York Fire Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 120, 126.

Or the depth of the water over the bar of a particular harbor. Patterson v. Duguid, Bell's Sel. Cas. 281.

Whether or not the underwriter is affected with knowledge of what is contained in Lloyd's List, or similar publications, is not fully decided, but the law seems to be as stated in 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 584, and cases cited.

That there is no presumption of his knowledge of particular facts as to particular ships, merely on the ground that such facts have appeared in Lloyd's List, the London Gazette, or in a newspaper. Friese v. Woodhouse, 1 Holt N. P. 572; Elton v. Larkins, 5 C. & P. 85; Foley v. Tabor, 5 F. & F. 662; Mackintosh v. Marshall, 11 M. & W. 116; Bates v. Hewitt, L. R., 2 Q. B.

595; Symers v. Glasgow Ins. Co., 19 Scot. Jur. 49.

The American decisions require the fact of knowledge to be proved. Green v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 402; Dickenson v. Commercial Ins. Co. of New York, Anth. (N. Y.) 92. See on this case also 2 Duer Ins. 486. note a; 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), §606; Union Ins. Co. v. Stoney, Harp. (S. Car.) 235; 3 McCord (S. Car.) 387; 4 McCord (S. Car.) 511.

Against extraordinary hazards to be apprehended from the description of the risk the underwriter can protect himself by enquiry. The law is well stated by SEWALL, J., in Stocker v. Merrimack M. & F. Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 220 at 224.

"The employment in which a vessel is to be engaged when attended with any extraordinary hazard must always be material to the risk; and if this is known to the assured, and the extraordinary circumstances are not suggested by the description of the voyage, the concealment will avoid the policy.

"When the circumstance from which an extraordinary risk may be apprehended was not known to the assured, or he knew only what was sufficiently suggested by the description of the risk insured, and there has been no misrepresentation respecting it, the underwriter cannot avoid his contract upon the objection of a material concealment. Against circumstances within the risk described, which may or may not happen, but which, happening, are attended with an extraordinary degree of hazard, the underwriter may guard himself by his enquiries, or by stipulations restricting the risk he undertakes, and when he neglects these precautions he must be understood to waive his right to further information, and to undertake against all events and accidents of the voyage insured."

So where an ordinance declared neutral ships liable to seizure if the supercargo was the subject of a belligerent, it was held that if this ordinance was known to the underwriter he should enquire as to the nationality of the supercargo, and the assured was not bound to disclose it unasked. Mayne v. Walter, 1 Park Ins. 431.

And so where a vessel was not within a "convoy act" because she was foreign built, it was held that the assured, having disclosed the name of the vessel, was not bound to disclose her build, or the fact she was not within the act. On these points the underwriter should inform himself by enquiry. Long v. Duff, 2 B. & P. 209; Long v. Bolton, 2 B. & P. 209.

It is not essential to disclose the nature of the cargo, if not specially hazardous, nor, in a time policy, the place of destination unless known to be specially dangerous. Harvey v. Seligman, 10 Sc. Sess. Cas., 4th series 680; Chesapeake Ins. Co. v. Allegre, 2 G. & J. (Md.) 164; Dufanty v. Commercial Ins. Co., Anth. (N. Y.) 114.

Nor the method of loading. Adams v. Warren Ins. Co., 22 Pick. (Mass.) 163; Da Costa v. Edmunds, 4 Camp. 142; 2 Chitty 227; Clarkson v. Young, 22 L. T., N. S. 41.

Nor directions to master as to his proceedings, if he is allowed the usual discretion as to the safe conduct of the voyage. Houston v. New England Ins. Co., 5 Pick. (Mass.) 89; Talcot v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 136.

Nor the age of the vessel. Poppleston v. Kitchen, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 138.

Nor the method of building it. Lexington Ins. Co. v. Paver, 16 Ohio 324.

The assured need not disclose title unless enquiries are made. Russ v. Waldo Mut. Ins. Co., 52 Me. 187; Locke v. North American Ins. Co., 13 Mass. 61; Curry v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 535; Bixby v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 86; Bartlett v. Walter, 13 Mass. 267; Turner v. Burrows, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 144; 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 541; Chase v. Washington Mut. Ins. Co., 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 595; Lawrence v. Van Horne, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 276.

If goods insured are in their nature perishable, the assured need not disclose that they are damaged at the time of insuring, provided they were in good condition when they were loaded on board. Boyd v. Dubois, 3 Camp. 133.

Where correspondence is shown which refers to statements in earlier letters the assured need not disclose the contents of the latter unless asked. Thompson v. Buchanan, 4 Bro. P. C. 482; Freeland v. Glover, 7 East 457. See also Livingston v. Maryland Ins. Co., 7 Cranch (U. S.) 506; Lovering v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 12 Pick. (Mass.) 348.

Where all the facts essential for forming a judgment as to the seaworthiness of a vessel were disclosed, it was held no concealment not to have stated what her structure showed, that she was sions.¹ Nor any facts in regard to which there is a warranty, express or implied.²

The date of sailing, or any fact connected with the sailing, material to the risk, should be communicated, e. g., that another vessel that sailed at the same time has arrived safely.³

The person desiring insurance is bound to use ordinary diligence to communicate any material fact coming to his knowledge after negotiations have been begun, and failure so to do will be a fatal concealment.⁴

built for river, not for ocean use. Clapham v. Langton, 2 Asp. 54; 10 L. T. N. S. 875.

Concealment of immaterial circumstances by the assured will not vitiate the policy. Pine v. Vanurem, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 30; Russ v. Waldo & Ins. Co., 52 Me. 187; Ins. Co. v. Bathurst, 5 Gill & J. (Md.) 159; Green v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 402; Money v. Union Ins. Co., 4 McCord (S. C.) 511; Silloway v. Neptune Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 73.

For other cases on the general subject see Court v. Martineau, 3 Doug. 161; Beckwith v. Sidebotham, 1 Camp. 116; Haywood v. Rodgers, 14 East 590; Adams v. Murray, Fac. Dec. (1801-1807) 360; Smith v. Bissett, Fac. Dec. (1808-1810) 617; Lambe v. Smith, Fac. Dec. (1814-1815) 220; Gandy v. Adelaide Mut. Ins. Co., L. R., 6 Q. B. 746; Sperry v. Delaware Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 243; Marshall v. Union Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 357; Hubbard v. Coolidge, 2 Gall. 353; Kemble v. Bowne, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 75.

1. Thus where a recent order of the Russian government requiring the papers of all vessels to be sent to St. Petersburg for examination created general alarm in Riga for the safety of vessels there, it was held that it was not essential for the assured to communicate information of this apprehension. Bell v. Bell, 2 Camp. 475.

2. Haywood v. Rodgers, 4 East 590; Augusta Ins. Co. v. Abbott, 12 Md. 348; Silloway v. Neptune Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 73; Elling v. Scott, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 157; Walden v. New York Firemen's Ins. Co., 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 128; De Wolf v. New York Firemen's Ins. Co., 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 214.

3. Time of sailing.—This is the rule laid down in 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.), and it is fully supported by the cases. In the absence of facts making the date important it is not necessary to communicate the time of sailing. Fort v.

Lee, 3 Taunt. 381; Foley v. Moline, 5 Taunt. 430; Fiske v. New England M. Ins. Co., 15 Pick. (Mass.) 310; M¹-Lanahan v. Universal Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 188. And it has been held that the date of sailing need not be communicated unless the vessel is at the time the policy is made a missing vessel. Per TINDAL, C. J., in Elton v. Larkins, 5 C. & P. 385. But the latter rule is not law to-day in England, and probably not in the United States.

A failure to disclose the time of sailing has been held fatal in the following cases: Bridges v. Hunter, 1 M. & S. 14; Shirley v. Wilkinson, 3 Doug. 41; 1 Doug. 306, note; Willes v. Glover, 4 B. & P. 14; Ratcliffe v. Shoalbred, 1 Marsh. Ins. 466; Mackintosh v. Marshall, 11 M. & W. 116; Elkin v. Jansen, 13 M. & W. 655; Stribley v. Imperial Mar. Ins. Co., 1 Q. B. D. 507; Stewart v. Morrison, Fac. Dec. (1778-1781) 102; Gillespie v. Douglass, Fac. Dec. (1801-1807) 251; Livingston v. Delafield, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 49; Himely v. South Carolina Ins. Co., 1 Mill (S. Car.) Const. 154.

A failure to communicate the arrival of another vessel which sailed at the same time as that insured has been held a fatal concealment in the following cases: McAndrews v. Bell, 1 Esp. 373; Webster v. Forster, 1 Esp. 407; Rickards v. Murdock, 10 B. & C. 527; Kirby v. Smith, 1 B. & A. 672; Westbury v. Aberdeen, 2 M. & W. 267; Allan v. Young, Fac. Dec. (1801-1807) 248.

When the assured stated that another vessel which sailed two days before his had arrived, but added that she was coppered and a fast sailer, it was left to the jury to decide whether it was a fatal concealment to fail to communicate that another vessel, also coppered and fast, that left three days after the date he had assumed for the sailing of his own had arrived. Liddedale v. Dixon, 4 B. & P. 151.

4. Information Pending Negotiation.—

Thus, where, after a letter had been sent

The principal, though himself ignorant, is affected with knowledge of all which is known by his agents authorized to effect the insurance.¹

directing insurance, the applicant learned of loss and neglected to send this information by the next mail, which would have arrived before the policy was made, it was held a fatal concealment. Bowker v. Smith, Fac. Dec. (1808-1810) 571.

And so when an owner while abroad sent orders to procure insurance, but sailed homeward by the same vessel that carried one of the orders and learned of the loss while he knew that the policy had not yet been effected, it was held a fatal concealment not to send notice of the loss by the same conveyance as the order. Watson v. Delafield, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 224; 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 526.

The assured need not make unusual exertions or resort to uncommon means of communication in order to inform the underwriter. Grieve v. Young, Millar Ins. Co., 65; M'Lanahan v. Universal Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 170; Batchelder v. Jones, 2 Dane Abr. 123; Burr v. Foster, 2 Dane Abr. 122; Green v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 402; Andrews v. Mar. Ins. Co., 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 32.

The law is well stated and illustrated in the case of Snow v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co., 61 N. Y. 60. There a policy was made in November, 1866, on an order from Liverpool. The owner at that time knew of the loss, and sent a letter announcing it by the first mail after receiving the information. The Atlantic cable had been in use about three months, averaging twenty-nine messages each way per day. The rates were very high and the cable was not then a usual means of communication. It was held that the assured had used ordinary diligence and that the policy was valid.

1. Knowledge of Agents.—The statement of the text is believed to be the result of the latest cases in England and in this country.

The law in England is settled by Blackburn v. Vigors, 12 Ap. Cas. 531, 55 L. J. (Q. B.) 347; Blackburn v. Haslam, 21 Q. B. Div. 144.

In these cases the plaintiffs of Glasgow had sought to obtain reinsurance by means of Murison & Co. of Glasgow and the London agents of M. & Co., Thompson & Co. of London. Before T. & Co. were able to effect the insurance one of the Glasgow brokers learned of a loss, telegraphed the London firm in the name of the plaintiffs, thus putting them in direct communication with the plaintiffs, and took no further part in the negotiations. He did not, however, communicate what he had learned. Insurance with defendant Haslam was effected by T. & Co., but that with defendant Vigors was made the next day by the other brokers wholly distinct from T. & Co., and after all negotiations through them had ceased.

In Blackburn v. Haslam it was held that the failure to impart the knowledge of the agent was fatal to the policy.

In Blackburn v. Vigors, after a decision in the lower court for the plaintiffs had been set aside by the court of appeals, the house of lords upheld the first decision, holding that the plaintiffs could not be affected with the knowledge of agents not in fact employed in obtaining the policy in question.

The earlier English cases did not hold so strict a rule.

In Fitzherbert v. Mather, 1 T. R. 12, it was held that the failure of a master to inform the owner of a loss before the insurance was obtained vitiated the policy, the owner being affected with the knowledge of his agent; and a similar decision was made in Stewart v. Dunlap, 4 Bro. P. C. 483, note, where a clerk had been informed of the loss.

So in Proudfoot v. Montefiore, L. R. 2 Q. B. 511, where A, employed to purchase and ship madder at Smyrna to Liverpool, advised the plaintiff of the shipment January 12th, and sent shipping documents January 19th. The vessel sailed on January 23rd and was wrecked the same day. A purposely refrained from telegraphing and only advised the plaintiff by mail on January 26th. This was held a fatal concealment.

The law as laid down in the latter case was regarded as the law in England until the decision of the house of lords. Per COCKBURN, C. J., p. 521.

"If an agent whose duty it is, in the ordinary course of business, to communicate information to his principal as to the state of a ship and cargo omits to discharge such duty, and the owner, in the absence of information as to any fact material to be communicated to the underwriter, effects an insurance, such insurance will be void on the ground of concealment or misrepresentation. The insurer is entitled to assume, as the basis of the contract between him and the assured, that the latter has communicated to him every material fact of which the assured has, or in the ordinary course of business ought to have, knowledge; and the latter will take the necessary measures, by the employment of competent and honest agents, to obtain through the ordinary channels of intelligence in use in the mercantile world, all due information as to the subject matter of insurance. This condition is not complied with where, by the fraud or negligence of the agent, the party proposing the insurance is kept in ignorance of a material fact, which ought to have been made known to the underwriter, and through such ignorance fails to disclose it."

These cases established the law to be that the principal was affected by the knowledge of all agents whose duty it was in the ordinary course of business to keep him informed of the condition of the vessel or goods.

Two other English cases are authority for a rule of very doubtful validity. In Gladstone v. King, 1 M. & S. 35, a vessel had been driven upon a rock, but got off safely and, as was supposed, without damage. The master neglected to give any information of this mishap, and the policy was made in ignorance of it. After the vessel's arrival it was found that some damage had resulted from the accident. It was held that, while the policy was not void for the concealment, there could be no recovery for the damage resulting from or connected with the accident. It must be regarded as excepted from the policy.

A similar decision was made in Stribley v. Imperial Mar. Ins. Co., 1 Q. B. Div. 507, where the master neglected to report the loss of an anchor and chain.

The earlier case has been many times disapproved, both in England and America, and is probably not law, though not distinctly overruled.

See cases already cited on the topic of the knowledge of agents, and Ruggles v. General Interest Ins. Co., 4 Mason (U. S.) 74; 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 408.

In the United States it was early decided in Ruggles v. General Interest

Ins. Co., 4 Mason (U. S.) 74, where the master not only did not inform the owner of the loss in time but deliberately prevented knowledge from getting to him in order that he might insure, that the policy was not void, JUDGE STORY stating the law thus, at p. 79: "My opinion is that in the present case, where there has been an abandonment in due time for a loss really total, if the owner, at the time of procuring the insurance, had no knowledge of the loss, but acted with entire good faith in procuring the insurance, he is not precluded from a recovery, nor is the policy void by the omission of the master to communicate intelligence of the loss, although such omission was wilful and with the fraudulent design to enable the owner to make insurance after the total loss, the owner not being conscious of any such act or design at the time of such insurance."

This decision was upheld by the supreme court of the United States. General Interest Ins. Co. v. Ruggles, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 408, on the distinct ground that the master was not an agent to procure insurance and that the principal was not to be affected by the knowledge of any other agent, the court also intimating that after the loss the master was the agent of the underwriters.

This decision is supported by Clement v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 481.

It is opposed by the decision in Byrnes v. Alexander, 1 Brev. (S. Cal.) 213, where the knowledge of a merchant's clerk was imputed to himself. See also 2 Duer Ins. 418, and 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 555.

See also, on the general topic, Hamblet v. City Ins. Co., 36 Fed. Rep. 118; Continental Ins. Co. v. Allen, 26 Ill. App. (Ill.) 576.

The principal is not affected with knowledge of what he might have known had he taken from the post office or received from others letters ready to be delivered to him. Ware v. Atty., 4 Taunt. 493; Stone v. Aberdeen Mut. Ins. Co., 11 C. C. Sc. 1041; Neptune Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 11 G. & J. (Md.) 256; Green v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 402.

In Tate v. Hyslop, 15 Q. B. Div. 368, the defendant was held to know facts which had been communicated to his solicitor, and a policy was declared void for the concealment of these facts.

Nothing need be communicated that is learned after the contract is once completed, although before the policy is actually delivered.¹

It seems that the failure to communicate may be waived by the underwriter and the contract be binding upon him.²

3. Breach of Warranties—Express Warranty.—An express warranty is a stipulation in writing inserted in the policy alleging the existence of some fact or state of things at the time or previous to the time of making the policy or undertaking for the happening of future events, or the performance of future acts.³

The warranty must be strictly and exactly complied with; any failure will invalidate the policy.⁴

1. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 549; Cory v. Paton, L. R., 7 Q. B. 304; L. R., 9 Q. B. 577; Ionides v. Pender, L. R., 6 Q. B. 674; L. R., 7 Q. B. 517; Lishman v. Northern Marit. Ins. Co., L. R., 8 C. P. 216; L. R., 10 C. P. 179; Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Lyman, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 664.

2. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 594, and cases cited. Russell v. Thornton, 4 H. & N. 788; 6 H. & N. 140; Morrison v. Universal Mar. Ins. Co., L. R., 8 Ex. 40, 197.

The contra has been held in Canada. Royal Canadian Ins. Co. v. Smith, Cassell's Dig. of Can. Sup. Ct. 216, 217, cited in Berryman, Digest of the Law of Insurance, 278, overruling Smith v. Royal Canadian Insurance Co., 5 Russ. & I. (Nova Sc.) 322.

3. 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 599.

4. Express Warranties.—The cases cited hereafter fully confirm this statement of the law. The strictness with which the law is enforced appears best from the case of DeHaka v. Hartley, 1 T. R. 343; 2 T. R. 186. Here the ship was warranted to sail from London with, inter alia, 50 hands. In fact on leaving London there were only 46, but enough were taken on board six hours later to make the number more than 50. The court held that the warranty was not complied with and the policy was void.

The fact that the performance of the warranty is prevented by a peril insured against is immaterial. Hore v. Whitmore, 2 Camp. 784.

Compliance with the letter of the warranty is sufficient. Thus where it was warranted that the vessel had 20 guns, it was held sufficient if she in fact carried that number, though she had but 25 men and could not man the 20 guns with less than 60 men. Hide v. Bruce, 3 Doug. 213.

Compliance with the warranty is dispensed with if it be subsequently made unlawful. Brewster v. Kitchell, Ld. Raym. 371.

If broken, the policy is void though the loss is not connected with the breach of the warranty. Woolmer v. Muilman, 1 W. Bl. 427.

See also, on strict compliance, Kemble v. Rhineland, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 130; Swain v. Boylston Ins. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 766; Murgalroyd v. Crawford, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 420.

The following cases support the statement of the text, and merely determine the construction of particular warranties and whether or not they have been complied with. Muller v. Thompson, 2 Camp. 610; Havilock v. Haverill, 3 T. R. 277; Hutchinson v. Read, 19 L. J. Exch. 222; 4 Exch. 760; Grant v. Aetna Ins. Co., 15 Moo. P. C. 516; s. c., 11 Low. Can. 128, 380; 12 Low. Can. 386; Provincial Ins. Co. of Canada v. Leduc, L. R., 6 P. C. 224; Birrell v. Dryer, L. R., 9 App. Cas. 345; Grant v. Equitable Fire Ins. Co., 14 Low. Can. 493; Levy v. New Orleans Mut. Ins. Ass'n, 2 Woods (U. S.) 63; Ogden v. Ash, 1 Dall. (U. S.) 162; Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Allen, 121 U. S. 67; 122 U. S. 376; Bayard v. Mass. F. & M. Ins. Co., 4 Mason U. S. 256; Livingston v. Maryland Ins. Co., 7 Cranch (U. S.) 506; Bulkley v. Derby Fishing Co., 1 Conn. 571; Grant v. Lexington F. & M. Ins. Co., 5 Ind. 23; Weinberger v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 41 La. An. 31; Davis v. Boardman, 12 Mass. 80; Thatcher v. Bellows, 13 Mass. 111; Thwing v. Great Western Ins. Co., 103 Mass. 401; Sawyer v. Coasters' Mut. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 221; Odiorne v. New

The warranty, to be express, must be in the body of the policy or incorporated in it by reference.¹

The warranty need not use the word "warrant."²

Where the warranty relates to a circumstance necessarily subsequent to the commencement of the risk, the assured is entitled to recover for an antecedent loss although the warranty is never complied with.³

England etc. Ins. Co., 101 Mass. 551; Martin v. Fishing Ins. Co., 20 Pick. (Mass.) 389; McLoon v. Commercial Mut. Ins. Co., 100 Mass. 472; Wilkins v. Tobacco Fire & M. Ins. Co., 2 Cen. (Ohio) 204; St. Louis Ins. Co. v. Glasgow, 8 Mo. 713; Gaty v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 30 Mo. 56; Duncan v. Sun Fire Ins. Co., 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 488; Mark v. National Fire Ins. Co., 24 Hun (N. Y.) 565; Dickey v. U. S. Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 358; Vandervoort v. Smith, 2 Cal. (N. Y.) 155; Murray v. Harmony etc. Ins. Co., 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 19; Ogden v. Ash, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 162; Stacey v. Franklin Ins. Co., 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 506; Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Algeo, 31 Pa. St. 446; Murden v. South Carolina Ins. Co., 1 Mill (S. Car.) Const. 200; Cobb v. Lime Rock Ins. Co., 58 Me. 326.

1. Thus where a written statement was wrapped up in the policy it was held not a warranty. Pawson v. Barnevelt, 1 Doug. 12, note. And so where it was wafered on. Bean v. Stupert, 1 Doug. 11. But written proposals referred to in the policy, and made part of it will constitute an express warranty. Worsley v. Wood, 6 T. R. 710. It is enough if they appear anywhere on the face of the policy. Kenyon v. Berthon, 1 Doug. 12, note; Blackhurst v. Cockell, 3 T. R. 360.

2. It is enough that the intention to warrant appears. Thus an insurance describing the vessel as "the American ship—" is a warranty that she is American. Murray v. United Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 168. So on cargo on the "Spanish brig New Constitution." Atherton v. Brown, 14 Mass. 152. And on the "Swedish brig Sophia." Higgins v. Livermore, 14 Mass. 106; Lewis v. Thatcher, 15 Mass. 431. And the "British brig." Francis v. Ocean Ins. Co., 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 404.

Where, however, the policy was "on the good British brig called the John," and the risk was to cease on capture, it was held that since the fact recited could have no relation to the risk, the words did not amount to a warranty. Mackie v. Pleasants, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 363; cf. on this 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 758, and 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 602.

In Le Mesurier v. Vaughan, 6 East 382, the words on the ship called "the American ship President" were held to be a statement of the name and not a warranty of the national character.

The mere use of a national language in the name does not constitute a warranty that the vessel is of that nation. Clapham v. Cologan, 3 Camp. 382; Dent v. Smith, L. R., 4 Q. B. 414.

A description of the voyage to "port Sisal" is no warranty that a port or harbor exists at Sisal. De Longuemere v. N. Y. Firemen's Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 120. So a stipulation that the underwriter is "not to be liable for any damages to or from her sheathing" is not a warranty that she is sheathed. Martin v. Fishing Ins. Co., 20 Pick. (Mass.) 389.

For other cases of construction see Hyde v. Mississippi Ins. Co., 10 La. (O. S.) 543; Harrison v. Douglas, 3 Ad. & E. 396; and the cases cited passim.

3. 1 Phillips Ins. Co. (5th ed.), § 771.

Hendricks v. Commercial Ins. Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 1, where the policy was on goods at and from Bristol with a warranty that the vessel should sail between October 20th and December 1st. She did not sail until after December 1st. The action was for a return of premium, but it was held that the policy attached to the goods while at Bristol and before the sailing, and was not void for the subsequent breach of warranty.

Baines v. Holland, 10 Exch. 802, where a vessel insured on a time policy at and from New York to Quebec, while there and thence to the United Kingdom, was warranted to sail from Q. before November 1st. She was lost after November 1st, before reaching Q. en route from N. Y. The underwriter was held liable. Cf. Taylor v. Lowell, 3 Mass. 331.

A warranty that a vessel is safe on a given day is satisfied if she was safe at any time on that day.¹

If warranted in port and the insurance is at and from a particular port, the warranty will not be satisfied unless she is in that port.²

The ordinary cases of express warranties have related to the time of sailing, to convoy, to neutrality, and to national character.

A failure to sail as warranted is fatal.³

Where the warranty is to sail with convoy, it will be complied with only if the vessel sails with a legally appointed convoy for the whole voyage insured, with proper sailing orders, and remains with the convoy during the voyage unless driven away from it.⁴

1. Blackhouse v. Cockell, 3 T. R. 360.

2. Colby v. Hunter, 3 C. & P. 7.
If from a port "where the vessel now is," this means where she is at the time of making the policy. Callaghan v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 64.

But if the policy states "beginning the adventure (said vessel being warranted to be then in safety) at and from C, via C & A to N Y, the warranty refers to the time of" beginning the voyage at C, and not to the time of making the policy. Anchor Mar. Ins. Co. v. Keith, 9 Can. Sup. Ct. 483; 3 Russ. & G. (Nova Sc.) 402.

3. Veizan v. Grant, 2 Pasto Ins. (8th ed.) 670.

Sailing.—What constitutes a sailing has given rise to numerous decisions. The law is that to constitute a sailing the vessel must be in complete readiness to perform the voyage according to its usual course, and must set forward with the bona fide intent to pursue the voyage. Subsequent delays and detentions are thereafter immaterial. In the following cases the vessel was held to have satisfied the warranty: Bond v. Nutt, 2 Cowp. 601; Earle v. Harris, 1 Doug. 357; Thelusson v. Ferguson, 1 Doug. 360; Cruikshank v. Janson, 2 Taunt. 301; Wright v. Shiffrer, 2 Camp. 247; 11 East 515; Long v. Anderdon, 3 B. & C. 495; Cochrane v. Fisher, 2 C. & M. 581; 1 C. M. & R. 809; Bouillon v. Lupton, 15 C. B., N. S. 113; Dennis v. Ludlow, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 111.

In the following cases it was held she had not. Ridsdale v. Newnham, 3 M. & S. 456; 4 Camp. 111; Moir v. Royal Exch. Assur. Co., 6 Taunt. 241; Nelson v. Salvador, M. & M. 309; Pittgrew v.

Pringle, 3 B. & Ad. 514; Graham v. Barros, 5 B. & Ad. 1011; Colledge v. Harty, 6 Exch. 205. Cf. with this last Provincial Ins. Co. of Canada v. Leduc, L. R., 6 P. C. 224.

Parol evidence of an agreement between the insured and insurer that the vessel insured should sail before a certain day cannot establish a warranty. Whitney v. Haven, 13 Mass. 172.

4. Convoy.—2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 620.

The convoy need not be the same vessel for the whole distance. Smith v. Readshaw, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 708; Degarty v. Claggett, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 708.

Nor need it go to the very place of the vessel's destination. D'Equino v. Bewicke, 2 H. Bl. 551.

But it must go substantially the whole voyage. Lilly v. Ewer, 1 Doug. 72.

The vessel must leave port with the convoy. Jeffries v. Legandra, 2 Salk. 443.

A delay of two hours is fatal. Taylor v. Woodness, 2 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 707.

And the vessel has no right to endeavor to overtake the convoy and thus perform the warranty. Hibbart v. Pigan, Marshall Ins. (5th ed.) 292.

It is not enough to sail with convoy appointed for another voyage. Cohen v. Hinckley, 1 Taunt. 249.

It is a sufficient sailing with convoy if the vessel proceeds from a port of lading where no convoy is placed unprotected to the rendezvous appointed for convoy and sails thence with convoy. Warwick v. Scott, 4 Camp. 62.

The vessel must have sailing orders. Webb v. Thompson, 1 B. & P. 5; Anderson v. Pitcher, 2 B. & P. 164. See Verdon v. Wilmot, 2 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 696, note.

A warranty of neutrality requires that the ship or cargo be the property of a citizen of a neutral country, navigated in accordance with its laws and accompanied by the due, proper and unequivocal evidence of its national character.¹

If the vessel actually sailed with convoy, but was driven back by stress of weather, and separated from the convoy, she may go on alone without breach of the warranty. Laing v. Glover, 5 Taunt. 49.

1. Neutrality.—Baring v. Cluggett, 3 B. & P. 201; 5 East 298; Francis v. Ocean Ins. Co., 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 404; Walton v. Bethune, 2 Brev. (S. Car.) 453; Schwartz v. Ins. Co. of N. A., 3 Wash. (U. S.) 117.

Where the property was that of an American residing in England with his family, it was held he was a British subject, so far that a warranty of his goods as American was improper. Tabbs v. Bendeleck, 4 Esp. 108; 3 B. & P. 207, note. See also Elbers v. United Ins. Co., 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 128; Duguet v. Rhinelander, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 25.

The fact that a belligerent is a part owner will not invalidate a warranty of neutrality in an insurance of the interests of neutral part owners. Livingston v. Maryland Ins. Co., 6 Cranch (U. S.) 274.

Property held in trust by a neutral for the benefit of a belligerent is belligerent. Murray v. United Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 168.

Documents.—The vessel must carry proper documents to prove her neutrality, and a failure to do so will constitute a breach of the warranty. Rich v. Parker, 7 T. R. 705; 2 Esp. 615; Calbreath v. Gracy, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 219; Smith v. Del. Ins. Co., 3 Wash. (U. S.) 127; Higgins v. Livermore, 14 Mass. 106; Blagge v. New York Ins. Co., 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 549; Goix v. Low, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 341; Barker v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 307; Coolidge v. New York Firemen's Ins. Co., 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 308; Le Roy v. United Ins. Co., 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 343; Murray v. Alsop, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 38; Griffith v. Ins. Co. of North America, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 464; Carrere v. Ins. Co., 3 Har. & J. (Md.) 324.

The register is not an essential document for this purpose. Le Cheminant v. Pearson, 4 Taunt. 367.

Yet in time of peace it is alone sufficient. Catlet v. Pacific Ins. Co., 1 Paine (U. S.) 594.

A sea letter is enough without the register. Barker v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 307.

Evidence is admissible in New York to show what is understood by "sea letter." Sleight v. Rhinelander, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 532; overruling 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 193.

Where the warranty calls for the presence of a particular document, it must be on board at all times during the voyage. Everth v. Tunno, 1 B. & A. 141.

A compliance with the law of nations as to documents is sufficient to satisfy the warranty; a failure to comply with a municipal regulation of the captor is not a breach. Siffken v. Lee, 2 B. & P., N. R. 484; Pollard v. Bell, 8 T. R. 434.

Unless assented to by the treaties of the neutral country. Baring v. Christie, 5 East 398; Barzillay v. Lewis, 2 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 725.

It has been held a sufficient prima facie proof of compliance with a warranty of neutrality that the vessel carried a flag of the neutral nation at all times when free from danger of capture, and that the master addressed himself to consuls of that nation whenever in port. Archangels v. Thompson, 2 Camp. 620.

In the following cases, acts have been held a breach of the warranty to cover belligerent property. Schwartz v. Ins. Co. of North America, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 117, 276; Pratt v. Philadelphia Ins. Co., 1 Brown (Pa.) 152; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Pratt, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 308.

Though it is not such a breach merely to carry belligerent property. Barrier v. Blakes, 9 East 283.

To conceal or destroy papers. Livingston v. Maryland Ins. Co., 7 Cranch (U. S.) 506; Carrere v. Union Ins. Co., 3 Har. & J. (Md.) 324; Calbreath v. Cracy, 1 Wash. (219).

To carry simulated papers unless leave is granted. Oswell v. Vigne, 15 East 70; Horneyer v. Lushington, 15 East 46. See also Bell v. Bromfield, 15 East 364.

To resist search. Robinson v. Jones, 8 Mass. 536; Snowdon v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 3 Binn. (Pa.) 457.

The warranty of neutrality is satisfied if the vessel or cargo is neutral when the risk begins;¹ a subsequent change of character is immaterial unless the result of the act of the assured or his agents.²

After an abandonment has been accepted with full knowledge of all the facts, the underwriters cannot object to a breach of warranty.³

A warranty of national character is proved by reputation, employment and the domicile of the owner.⁴

Implied Warranties.—In all voyage policies, and, in the United States, generally, in time policies as well, the law implies a warranty that the vessel shall be seaworthy at the commencement of the risk. A breach of this implied warranty is fatal to the policy.⁵

. But not if outrageous. McLellan v. Maine F. & M. Ins. Co., 12 Mass. 246.

To rescue the vessel when seized or detained. Garrels v. Kensington, 8 T. R. 230; Wilcocks v. Union Ins. Co., 2 Binn. (Pa.) 574.

Carrying on a coasting or colonial trade in time of war that is forbidden by the belligerent to all nations in time of peace. Berens v. Rucker, 1 W. Bl. 314.

Sailing for a blockaded port with intent to enter on arrival there, although still blockaded. Sperry v. Delaware Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 243; Vos v. United Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 180, 460.

But a mere intent unaccompanied by an act is not enough. Fitzsimmons v. Newport Ins. Co., 4 Cranch (U. S.) 185; Calhoun v. Ins. Co. of Pennsylvania, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 293. See also on this topic Williams v. Smith, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 13; Radcliff v. United Ins. Co., 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 38; Maryland Ins. Co. v. Woods, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 29.

Acceptance of an enemy's licence where the voyage is intended for a neutral port does not avoid the policy. Bulkeley v. Derby Fishing Co., 1 Conn. 572; Hayward v. Blake, 12 Mass. 176. But see Colquhoun v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 352.

On the effect of the judgment of a foreign court condemning the property for breach of neutrality, see 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 640 et seq.; 2 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.) 2104 et seq.; Maryland Ins. Co. v. Woods, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 29; Brown v. Union Ins. Co., 4 Day (Conn.) 179.

1. Eden v. Parkinson, 2 Doug. 732; Saloucci v. Johnson, Park. Ins. (8th ed.) 716, 727; Tyson v. Gurney, 3 T. R.

477; Wilson v. Blackhouse, Peake Add. Cal. 119; Sleight v. Rhinelander, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 192.

2. Goold v. United Ins. Co., 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 73; Woolmer v. Muilman, 1 W. Bl. 427; 3 Burr. 1417; Cleveland v. Union Ins. Co., 8 Mass. 308; Stockert v. Merrimack Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 220.

3. Provincial Ins. Co. of Canada v. Leduc, L. R., 6 P. C. 224.

4. National Character.—Peyton v. Hallett, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 363; Barker v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 307; Murgatroyd v. Crawford, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 491; Polleys v. Ins. Co., 14 Me. 141; Higgins v. Livermore, 14 Mass. 106; Atherton v. Brown, 14 Mass. 152; Lewis v. Thatcher, 15 Mass. 432; Coolidge v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 308; Mackie v. Pleasants, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 363; Griffith v. Ins. Co. of N. A., 5 Binn. (Pa.) 464; Ludlow v. Bowne, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 1; New York etc. Ins. Co. v. De Wolf, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 56.

If a vessel is described in the policy to be a prize vessel, and afterwards her national character is changed so as to increase the risk, the underwriters are discharged. Seamens v. Loving, 1 Mass. 127.

A stipulation in a policy warranting the property to be American, proof to be made in America, is not set aside by the sentence of a foreign court against the neutrality. Sperry v. Del. Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 243.

Where a vessel is described in a policy as an American ship, while she is really held in trust to secure the debt of a British subject, the warranty is broken. Murray v. U. S. Ins. Co., 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 168.

5. Implied Warranties — Seaworthi-

There will be no such warranty, however, if the underwriters have approved the vessel.¹

In England no such warranty is implied in time policies.²

In the United States generally the law is otherwise.³

ness—No principle of the law of marine insurance is better known and more completely established. 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 648; 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 695 et seq.; 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 389 et seq.; Lee v. Beach, 1 Park. Ins. (8th ed.) 468; Wedderburn v. Bell, 1 Camp. 1; Douglas v. Scougal, 4 Dow 269; Knill v. Hooper, 26 L. J., Ex. 377; Brooking v. Maudsley, 38 Ch. Div. 636; Watson v. Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 480; Seaman v. Enterprise F. & M. Ins. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 778; Higgin v. National Lloyds, 14 Fed. Rep. 143; 11 Biss. (U. S.) 395; Marcy v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 11 La. An. 748; Donnally v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 28 La. An. 939; Field v. Ins. Co. of N. A., 3 Md. 244; Taylor v. Lowell, 3 Mass. 331; Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Clapp, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 56; Paddock v. Franklin Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 227; Starbuck v. New England Ins. Co., 19 Pick. (Mass.) 108; Talcot v. Com. Ins. Co., 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 124; American Ins. Co. v. Ogden, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 532; Barnwall v. Church, 1 Cal. (N. Y.) 217; Warren v. United Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 232; Van Wickle v. Mechanics and Traders' Ins. Co., 97 N. Y. 350; Rogers v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 14 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 65; Osborne v. New York Mut. Ins. Co., 6 N. Y. Supp. 103; Lemelin v. Montreal Ass. Co., 1 Quebec L. R., 337; Reed v. Philips, 2 Han. (N. B.) 171; Rouse v. Ins. Co., 3 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 367; Guy v. Citizens' Mut. Ins. Co., D. C. S. D. (Ala.) 30; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Moog, 81 Ala. 335; Pope v. Swiss Lloyds Ins. Co., 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 533; Hudson v. Williamson, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 342; Ingraham v. S. C. Ins. Co., Treadw. (S. Car.) Const. 707.

A breach is fatal, although the fact of unseaworthiness is unknown and could not have been known. Rogers v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 14 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 65; Lee v. Beach, 1 Park Ins. 468.

There is no such implied warranty that the cargo shall be seaworthy. Koebel v. Saunders, 17 C. B., N. S. 71.

But in every policy on cargo there is the warranty that the ship shall be seaworthy. 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 651; Oliver v. Cowley, 1 Park Ins. 470.

Even though the policy except losses from rottenness, inherent defects and unseaworthiness, the implied warranty as to seaworthiness is not removed, and the policy is void if the vessel is unseaworthy. Quebec Mar. Ins. Co. v. Commercial Bank of Canada, L. R., 3 P. C. 234.

The warranty in case of a policy on goods does not extend to the seaworthiness of lighters. Lane v. Nixon, L. R., 1 C. P. 412.

It is, of course, immaterial that the loss does not result from the unseaworthiness. Forshaw v. Chabert, 3 B. & B. 158.

1. Weir v. Aberdeen, 2 B. & Ald. 320; Marine Fire Ins. Co. v. Burnett, 29 Tex. 433.

2. In Time Policies.—This was definitely decided in the case of Gibson v. Small, 16 Q. B. 128, 141; 4 H. L. Cas. 353; and the following English cases are in full accord: Dudgeon v. Pembroke, L. R., 9 Q. B. 581; L. R., 1 Q. B. Div. 96; L. R., 2 App. Cas. 284; Michael v. Tredwin, 17 C. B. 251; Thompson v. Hopper, E. B. & E. 1049; Jenkins v. Heycock, 8 Moo. P. C. 351; Fawcus v. Sacsfield, 6 El. & Bl. 192; Hollingsworth v. Brodrick, 7 A. & E. 40; cf. Stewart v. Wilson, 12 M. & W. 11.

The law in Canada is the same. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Anchor Ins. Co., 4 Ont. 524.

3. In Union Ins. Co. v. Smith, 124 U. S. 405, the court assumes that such a warranty exists in a time policy. Jones v. Ins. Co., 2 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 278.

In Connecticut, the warranty is implied in time policies. Hoxie v. Home Ins. Co., 32 Conn. 21. And so in Pennsylvania. Dallam v. Ins. Co., 6 Phila. (Pa.) 15. So also in Wisconsin. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Sweet, 6 Wis. 670. So also (semble) in Ohio. Gazzam v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., 6 Ohio 71.

Such also seems the law in New York. America Ins. Co. v. Ogden, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 533; 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 287.

The law of Illinois follows the English decisions. Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Morrison, 62 Ill. 242.

In Massachusetts, the early cases decided that there was no implied war-

This warranty requires that the vessel be in a fit state as to repairs, equipment and crew to encounter the ordinary perils of the voyage insured.¹

ranty of seaworthiness in any time policy made or to begin while the vessel is at sea or in such a position that the assured cannot fairly be held to know of her condition or bound to have her at that moment in good seaworthy condition. Copen v. Washington Ins. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 517; Macy v. Mutual Mar. Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 497; but where the risk is to begin at such time or place that the assured is in position both to know of her condition and to be able to make her seaworthy, there is an implied warranty that she was seaworthy at the beginning of the risk. This was so held in Hoxie v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 7 Allen (Mass.) 211, where a time policy was on a vessel, which at the moment the risk was to attach was in a foreign port where full repairs could be made.

1. Seaworthiness.—Dixon v. Sadler, 5 M. & W. 405; Commercial Mar. Co. v. Namaqua Min. Co., 5 L. T., N. S. 504; Biccard v. Shepherd, 14 Moo. P. C. 471; Barnwall v. Church, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 217; Warren v. United Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 232; Palmer v. Great Western Ins. Co. (N. Y.), 23 N. E. Rep. 5.

Whether or not the vessel is seaworthy is often a question of degree, and is according to the voyage and the nature of the vessel. Where the full nature of the vessel is disclosed and she is made as seaworthy as her character permits it is sufficient. Turnbull v. Janson, 3 C. P. Div. 264; Clapham v. Langton, 34 L. J., Q. B. 46; Burgess v. Wickham, 33 L. J., Q. B. 17; Knill v. Hooper, 2 H. & N. 277; Batchelder v. North America Ins. Co., 30 Fed. Rep. 459.

So the vessel may be seaworthy while in harbor undergoing repairs although she would not be fit for going to sea in that condition. Forbes v. Wilson, 1 Park Ins. 472; Hibbert v. Martin, 1 Park Ins. 473; Smith v. Surridge, 4 Esp. 25; Parmeter v. Cousins, 2 Camp. 235; M'Lanahan v. Universal Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 170; Hoxie v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 7 Allen (Mass.) 211.

In Abbott v. Broome, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 292, it was held the vessel was not seaworthy unless in condition to carry a full cargo.

It is sufficient if the vessel is sufficiently furnished for the service in which she is at the time engaged. Hucks v. Thornton, Halt N. P. 30; Amen v. Woodman, 3 Taunt. 297. Though not of the most skillful construction. Seaman v. Enterprise F. & M. Ins. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 778; Moore v. Louisville Underwriters, 14 Fed. Rep. 226.

Where a river steamer is insured for an ocean voyage, failure to strengthen the vessel so as to render her as seaworthy as a vessel of that class could reasonably be made is a breach of the implied warranty of seaworthiness and avoids the policy. Thebaud v. Pœnix Ins. Co., 5 N. Y. S. 619; Thebaud v. Great Western Ins. Co., 623.

Where the voyage is of different stages it is enough if the vessel is seaworthy for the stage in which she is at the stated time, though not for some other stage. Biccard v. Shepherd, 14 Moo. P. C. 471; Alverson v. Laughman, 2 B. & Ald. 322; Treadwell v. Union Ins. Co., 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 270; Bell v. Reed, 4 Binn. (Pa.) 127.

Vessels are unseaworthy if improperly built. Watt v. Morris, 1 Dow. 32. Worn out. Douglas v. Scougal, 4 Dow. 276.

Overloaded or out of trim. Daniels v. Harris, L. R., 10 C. P. 1; Biccard v. Shepherd, 14 Moo. P. C. 471; Foley v. Tabor, 2 F. & F. 662; Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. May, 20 Ohio 211. But see Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Butler, 20 Md. 41.

Without strong sails. Wedderburn v. Bell, 1 Camp. 1.

With defective boiler. Quebec Mar. Ins. Co. v. Commercial Bank of Canada, L. R., 3 P. C. 234.

With insufficient ground tackle. Wilkie v. Geddes, 3 Dow. 57; Pope v. Swiss Lloyds Ins. Co., 4 Fed. Rep. 153; Sawyer (U. S.), 533; Lawton v. Royal Canadian Ins. Co., 50 Wis. 163.

With insufficient stores. Woolf v. Claggett, 3 Esp. 258; Stewart v. Wilson, 12 M. & W. 11; Fontaine v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 58.

With unadjusted compass. Richelieu etc. Nav. Co. v. Boston Mar. Ins. Co., 26 Fed. Rep. 596; McCloskie v. Glasgow & Clyde Mar. Ins. Co., 6 C. C. Sc. 2. See Stanwood v. Rich, cited in Phillips, § 701.

The implied warranty is satisfied if the vessel is seaworthy at the beginning of the voyage, although at a later period it may become unseaworthy.¹

So the vessel is unseaworthy if without a capable master. Tait v. Levi, 14 East 481; Clifford v. Hunter, 3 C. & P. 16; Borland v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co., 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. 433; Draper v. Commercial Ins. Co., 21 N. Y. 378. Or a sufficient crew. Shore v. Bentall, 7 B. & C. 798, note; Forshaw v. Chabrot, 3 Br. & B. 158; Draper v. Mut. Ins. Co., 4 Duer (N. Y.) 234; Walsh v. Washington etc. Ins. Co., 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 202.

The implied warranty of seaworthiness requires from the insured such a degree of care in the selection of his officers and crew as is necessary to obtain competent persons, and the principle extends to many other matters embraced in the contract. The burden of proof is here upon the underwriter. The presumption is with the insured after proof of the loss. Schultz v. Pacific Ins. Co., 14 Fla. 73; M'Lanahan v. Universal Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 183; Selva v. Low, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 184; Cruder v. Pa. Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 339; The Gentleman, Olc. (U. S.) 110.

There are very many decisions turning on the special facts of the particular cases. In the following vessels were held seaworthy. Stone v. Aberdeen Mar. Ins. Co., 11 C. C. Sc. 1041; Bullard v. Roger Williams Ins. Co., 1 Curtis (U. S.) 148; Schultz v. Pacific Ins. Co., 14 Fla. 73; Marigny v. Home Mut. Ins. Co., 13 La. An. 338; Pointer v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 20 La. An. 100; Warren v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 13 Pick. (Mass.) 518; Deblois v. Ocean Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 303; Deshon v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 11 Met. (Mass.) 199; Cobb v. New England Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 192; Patrick v. Hallet, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 241; Draper v. Commercial Ins. Co., 21 N. Y. 378; Walsh v. Washington Mar. Ins. Co., 32 N. Y. 427; Sherwood v. Ruggles, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 55; Sturm v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 6 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 281; Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. May, 20 Ohio 211; Sherlock v. Globe Ins. Co., 1 Cin. Sup. Ct. (Ohio) 193; Peters v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 25; Schultz v. Pacific Ins. Co., 14 Fla. 73.

In the following, unseaworthy. McKellar v. Henderson, Fac. Dec. (1810-1812) 15; Coons v. Aetna Ins. Co., 18

Up. Can. C. P. 305; Myles v. Montreal Ins. Co., 20 Up. Can. C. P. 283; Magdeburg Gen. Ins. Co. v. Paulson, 29 Fed. Rep. 530; Richelieu etc. Nav. Co. v. Boston Mar. Ins. Co., 26 Fed. Rep. 596; Cunningham v. Switzerland Mar. Ins. Co., 26 Fed. Rep. 46; The Planter, 2 Woods (U. S.) 490; Rouse v. Ins. Co., 3 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 367; Rugely v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 7 La. An. 279; Dupeyre v. Western F. & M. Ins. Co., 2 Rob. (La.) 457; Field v. Ins. Co. of North America, 3 Md. 244; Gartside v. Orphans' Benefit Ins. Co., 62 Mo. 322; Van Wickel v. Mechanics and Traders' Ins. Co., 97 N. Y. 350; Borland v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co., 14 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 433; Treadwell v. Union Ins. Co., 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 270; Fontaine v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 58; Silva v. Low, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 184; Myers v. Girard Ins. Co., 26 Pa. St. 192; Dallam v. Ins. Co., 6 Phila. (Pa.) 15; Prescott v. Union Ins. Co., 1 Whart. (Pa.) 399; Miller v. South Carolina Ins. Co., 2 McCord (S. Car.) 336; Hudson v. Williamson, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 342; Wallace v. De Pau, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 252. See also The Orient, 4 Woods (U. S.) 255; Batchelder v. Ins. Co. of North America, 30 Fed. Rep. 459.

Whether the warranty is satisfied if the vessel is seaworthy according to the usage of the country to which it belongs, or whether it must be seaworthy according to the usage of the place of contract, has been differently decided.

The former was decided to be the law in Tidmarsh v. Washington Ins. Co., 4 Mason (U. S.) 439, and is approved by 1 Parsons Mar. Ins. 134, 386, and by 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 670.

The latter view was held in Cook v. Greenock Mut. Ins. Co., 5 C. C. Sc. 246.

1. No prior condition of seaworthiness is sufficient if the vessel is not seaworthy at the time of sailing from the port of loading from which she is insured. Cohn v. Davidson, 2 Q. B. Div. 455.

It does not satisfy the warranty that by a jettison the vessel can be made seaworthy. Daniels v. Harris, L. R., 10 C. P. 1.

If seaworthy at the outset it is sufficient. There is no implied warranty she shall continue so. This is clearly the law in England. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 652; Bermon v. Woodbridge, 2 Doug. at 788, per LORD MANSFIELD; Eden v. Parkinson, 2 Doug. 735, per LORD MANSFIELD; Walson v. Clark, 1 Dow P. C. 344, per LORD ELDON; Dixon v. Sadler, 5 M. & W. at 415, per PARKE, B.; Union Ins. Co. v. Smith, 124 U. S. 405; Taylor v. Lowell, 3 Mass. 331; Merchants' Co. v. Clapp, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 56; Paddock v. Franklin Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 227.

It is immaterial that the subsequent unseaworthiness is the result of the negligence of the master or crew. 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 654; Busk v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 2 B. & Ald. 73; Walker v. Maitland, 5 B. & Ald. 171; Bishop v. Pentland, 7 B. & C. 219; Holdsworth v. Wise, 7 B. & C. 794; Phillips v. Headlam, 2 B. & Ad. 380; Dixon v. Sadler, 5 M. & W. 405; 8 M. & W. 895; Redman v. Wilson, 14 M. & W. 476; Phillips v. Nairne, 4 C. B. 343; Biccard v. Shepherd, 14 Moo. P. C. 471; Dudgeon v. Pembroke, 2 App. Cas. 284.

In an action on a marine insurance policy, the vessel having been abandoned during the voyage on account of alleged damage by perils of the sea, the captain testified that the vessel was in good condition when she started, and he was corroborated by the official surveyor, who reported her seaworthy shortly before the voyage. She was fourteen years old at the time of the voyage, and one witness testified that when a vessel had had her rating five years and it was extended one year, she was "pretty near her end." The captain testified that cross seas were encountered on the voyage. Held, that the court properly left it to the jury to say whether the vessel was seaworthy. Osborne v. New York Mut. Ins. Co., 6 N. Y. S. 103.

Where subsequent intermediate ports are named in the policy there is no implied warranty that the vessel shall be seaworthy on sailing thence. Bermon v. Woodbridge, 2 Doug. 788; Holdsworth v. Wise, 7 B. & C. 794; Redman v. Wilson, 14 M. & W. 476.

It is also the law of Canada that it is enough if the vessel be seaworthy at the beginning of the voyage. Woodhouse v. Provincial Ins. Co., 31 Up. Can. Q. B. 176; Eward v. Merchants' Mar. Ins. Co., 1 Russ. & G. (Nova Sco.) 168; cf. Irvine v. Nova Scotia Mar. Co., 2 Nova Sco. Dec. 510; Leduc

v. Western Ass. Co., 1 Dorion Q. B. 273; Cross v. Brit. America Ins. Co., 22 Low. Can. J. 10; Leroux v. Merchants' Ins. Co., Ramsay's App. Cas. (Low. Can.) 374.

The law of the United States is in full accord. Various statements of judges have intimated that there is a further implied warranty that the vessel shall be kept seaworthy, but this is not law. For a loss due to the unseaworthiness of the vessel there can be no recovery if the assured could, before the loss, have made proper repairs and had neglected to do so; but if the vessel was seaworthy when she sailed, subsequent unseaworthiness due to the negligence of the assured will not discharge the underwriter if the loss results from the perils insured against and was not the proximate result of the unseaworthiness.

This is fully sustained by the following cases: Union Ins. Co. v. Smith, 124 U. S. 405; Adderly v. American Mut. Ins. Co., Taney (U. S.) 126; Jones v. Ins. Co., 2 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 278; Seaman v. Enterprise F. & M. Ins. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 778; Paddock v. Franklin Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 227; Starbuck v. New England Mar. Ins. Co., 19 Pick. (Mass.) 198; Copeland v. New England Mar. Ins. Co., 2 Met. (Mass.) 432; Hoxie v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 7 Allen (Mass.) 211; American Ins. Co. v. Ogden, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 532; 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 287; Howard v. Orient Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Robt. (N. Y.) 539; Hathaway v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 8 Bosw. (N. Y.) 33; Brioso v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 4 Daly (N. Y.) 246; Gazzam v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., 6 Ohio 71; Franklin Ins. Co. v. Cobb, 2 Cin. Sup. Ct. (Ohio) 87 (cf. Western Ins. Co. v. Tobin, 32 Ohio St. 77); Peters v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 25; Cudworth v. South Carolina Ins. Co., 4 Rich. (S. Car.) 416; Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Sweet, 6 Wis. 670.

That seaworthiness at outset is sufficient see also Lockwood v. Sangamo Ins. Co., 46 Mo. 71; Treadwell v. Union Ins. Co., 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 270; Miller v. Russell, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 309; cf. Lapene v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 8 La. An. 1.

Where the voyage insured is made up of distinct voyages, unseaworthiness at the beginning of each distinct voyage is fatal. Van Valkenburg v. Astor Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Bosw. (N. Y.) 61; cf. Howard v. Orient Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Robt. (N. Y.) 539.

Presumptions.—In Treat v. Union

A failure to take a pilot in navigating waters where it is usual and customary to take one does not render the vessel unseaworthy.¹

There is also an implied warranty that the vessel shall have ready all the papers and documents required by the laws of the nation to which it belongs and by its treaties with other nations.²

This warranty is not implied in a policy on goods.³

There is no presumption that a vessel is seaworthy.⁴

Ins. Co., 56 Me. 231, it was held that in an action on a policy of insurance upon a vessel the burden of proof is not upon the plaintiff to show in the first instance the seaworthiness of the vessel at the inception of the voyage; that the presumption is that all things are as they should be in this respect. The court suggested, however, that the burden of proof would be changed if it appeared that the vessel, without being subject to any stress of weather or to any unusual buffeting of the seas, or other extraordinary peril, had suddenly foundered and gone down with all sails set shortly after leaving port. See also Adderly v. American etc. Ins. Co. 126.

1. Pilot.—The earlier English cases are apparently contra. See 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 656.

But the law is established as stated in the text. 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 658; Phillips v. Headlam, 2 B. & Ad. 380.

The law of the United States is in accord with that of English. Hathaway v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 1 Fed. Rep. 197; 1 McCrary (U. S.) 25; Domingo v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 19 La. An. 479; Keeler v. Firemen's Ins. Co. (N. Y.) 250; Old Dominion Ins. Co. v. Frank (Ohio), 2 Cent. L. Bul. 93; Flanigan v. Washington Ins. Co., 7 Pa. St. 306; McMillan v. Union Ins. Co., 1 Rice (S. Car.) 248; Cox v. Charleston F. & M. Ins. Co., 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 331; cf. De Pau v. Jones, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 437.

In New York, a statute declares the vessel unseaworthy if without a licensed pilot. Borland v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co., 14 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 433.

Where positive law requires a pilot, the vessel is unseaworthy if without one. Law v. Hollingsworth, 7 T. R. 160; cf. on this case Hollingsworth v. Brodrick, 7 A. & E. at 48; Sadler v. Dixon, 8 M. & W. 900; Whitney v. Ocean Ins. Co., 14 La. (O. S.) 485; McDowell v. General Mut. Ins. Co., 7

La. An. 684; Lapene v. Sun Ins. Co., 8 La. An. 1.

The mere fact that the officers navigating a government vessel are not licensed pilots does not prima facie render the vessel unseaworthy under the warranties of marine insurance. Hathaway v. St. Paul etc. Ins. Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 25.

2. Christie v. Secretan, 8 T. R. 192; Elting v. Scott, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 157.

The documents must be required by law. Price v. Bell, 1 East 663; Bell v. Bromfield, 15 East 364; Le Cheminant v. Allnutt, 4 Taunt. 367.

3. Carruthers v. Gray, 15 East 35; Dawson v. Atty., 7 East 367; Hobbs v. Huming, 17 C. B., N. S. 791.

4. Presumption.—It need not be alleged in the declaration. Gay v. Citizens' Mut. Ins. Co., 30 Fed. Rep. 695.

But the assured must produce some evidence that the vessel was seaworthy at the outset of her voyage. Lunt v. Boston Mar. Ins. Co., 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 151; 6 Fed. Rep. 562; Moses v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Duer (N. Y.) 159; Borland v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co., 14 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 433; Rogers v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 14 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 65. Cf. Treat v. Union Ins. Co., 56 Me. 231; McCloskie v. Glasgow & Clyde Mar. Ins. Co., 6 C. C. Sc. 2.

The sinking of a boat at port raises a violent presumption of unseaworthiness. Gartside v. Orphans' Benefit Ins. Co., 62 Mo. 322.

Where a canal boat, properly loaded, after a forty-eight hours' voyage, without apparent cause, sank in fair weather and smooth water, a presumption of her unseaworthiness at the time of her starting is properly created. Van Wickle v. Mechanics' etc. Ins. Co., 48 N. Y. Super. Ct. 95.

The underwriter has the burden after a prima facie case has been made out by the assured. The Orient, 4 Woods (U. S.) 255; Batchelder v. Ins. Co. of North America, 30 Fed. Rep. 459; Guy

There is an implied agreement that goods will be stowed in the usual and customary place for the storage of such goods.¹

There is no warranty implied of the diligence of a carrier or of any other person than the agents of the assured.²

4. Violation of Covenants.—The violation of a covenant will avoid the policy. Thus where a policy provides that the assured shall not assign the policy or the interest insured by it without the consent of the insurers, and the assured sells the ship or assigns the policy, the insurers will not be liable.³

v. Citizens' Mut. Ins. Co., 30 Fed. Rep. 695.

If the vessel becomes leaky and founders or puts back after a short period, during which she is subjected to no extraordinary strain, she will be presumed to be unseaworthy when the voyage began. Munro v. Vandam, 1 Park Ins. 469; Watson v. Clark, 1 Dow 344; Parker v. Potts, 3 Dow 23; Pickup v. Thames Ins. Co., 3 Q. B. Div. 594; Pointer v. Ins. Co., 20 La. An. 100; Rugely v. Sun Ins. Co., 7 La. An. 279; Parker v. Union Ins. Co., 15 La. An. 688; Patrick v. Hallett, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 76; Talcot v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 124; Walsh v. Washington Ins. Co., 32 N. Y. 427; Wallace v. De Pau, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 252; Miller v. S. Car. Ins. Co., 2 McCord (S. Car.) 336.

And so, generally, when no adequate reason for the loss is shown. Coons v. Aetna Ins. Co., 18 Up. Can. C. P. 305; Parker v. Union Ins. Co., 15 La. An. 688; Talcot v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 124-467.

But where the vessel sails in apparently good condition and is never heard of again she will be held seaworthy. Paddock v. Franklin Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 227.

Or is exposed to gales. Watson v. Ins. Co. of North America, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 480; Martin v. Fishing Ins. Co., 20 Pick. (Mass.) 389.

A vessel was sunk by a violent cyclone. It was shown, in an action on the insurance policy, that for two years before the loss she was seaworthy. The court held that the burden of showing unseaworthiness at the time of the loss was upon the insurer. The Orient, 16 Fed. Rep. 916.

The fact that no explanation can be given for the loss will not be enough to establish unseaworthiness if evidence is given that she was seaworthy at the outset. Smith v. Bissett, Fac. Dec. (1808-1810) 617; Snethen v. Memphis Ins. Co., 3 La. An. 474.

If found rotten after a considerable period, this will not be necessarily enough to establish that she was unseaworthy when she sailed. Trimbles' Syndics v. New Orleans Ins. Co., 3 Martin (La.) O. S. 374.

The necessity to repair mere wear and tear creates no presumption that the vessel was unseaworthy. Donnell v. Columbian Ins. Co., 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 366.

Whether or not the vessel was seaworthy is for the jury. Foster v. Steele, 3 Bing. N. C. 892; Foster v. Alvez, 3 Bing. N. C. 896; Foley v. Tabor, 2 F. & F. 662; Dawson v. Home Ins. Co., 21 Up. Can. C. P. 20; Rosenheim v. American Ins. Co., 33 Mo. 230; Sherwood v. Ruggles, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 55; Fuller v. Alexander, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 149; McFee v. Ins. Co., 2 McCord (S. Car.) 503; Patrick v. Hallett, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 241; Union Ins. Co. v. Caldwell, Dudley (S. Car.) 263.

If the facts are controverted the question is for the court. Myles v. Montreal Ins. Co., 20 Up. Can. C. P. 283; Thebaud v. Phenix Ins. Co., 5 N. Y. S. 619; Thebaud v. Great Western Ins. Co., 5 N. Y. S. 623; Prescott v. Union Ins. Co., 1 Whart. (Pa.) 399.

In Wright v. Orient Mut. Ins. Co., 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 269, the court held a vessel unseaworthy though the jury distinctly found to the contrary. See also Hudson v. Williamson, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 342.

1. Leitch v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 66 N. Y. 100.

2. Underwriters' Agency v. Sutherlin, 55 Ga. 266.

So where the policy was on ice in boats "to be towed from Pittsburgh by steamboat L, or by some other good boat equal to her," it was held there was no implied warranty the tow boat should be of sufficient capacity to manage and tow the ice boats. Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Algeo, 31 Pa. St. 446.

3. Ins. Co. of Pennsylvania v. Trask,

5. Deviation and Change of Voyage.—A policy is avoided by a deviation or by a change in the voyage insured.

To constitute a deviation the vessel must have entered on a voyage to an unauthorized port; a mere intention formed before reaching a port of call is not sufficient to constitute a deviation.¹

8 Phila. (Pa.) 32; Atherton v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 109 Mass. 32.

Such a clause, however, does not apply to a transfer of the policy, or of the claim arising under it, after the happening of a loss. Mellen v. The Franklin Fire Insurance Co., 17 N. Y. 609.

As to other covenants see Morse v. Buffalo etc. Ins. Co., 30 Wis. 534; Muhleman v. Nat. Ins. Co., 6 W. Va. 508.

1. As to what constitutes a deviation or change of voyage, see under title DEVIATION. That a deviation or change of voyage avoids the policy is well established. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 449 et seq.; 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 977 et seq.

In case of deviation the policy is avoided only from the time of reaching the dividing point in the courses. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 451; Hare v. Travis, 7 B. & Cr. 14; Thellusson v. Fergusson, 1 Doug. 361; Kewley v. Ryan, 2 H. Bl. 343; Wheeler v. N. Y. Mut. Ins. Co., 35 N. Y. Super. Ct. 247.

But in case of change of voyage, it is void from the time the change is finally determined upon. 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 453; Woolbridge v. Baydell, 1 Doug. 16a; 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 990.

Examples.—An open policy of marine insurance was issued on goods consigned to A upon vessels from Santos "to New York, Baltimore, or Boston direct, or via Hampton Roads for orders." A's agent shipped a cargo of coffee at Santos on a barque chartered accordingly, except the word "Philadelphia" instead of "Boston," but by mistake reported the risk to the insurance company as from Santos to New York direct, and it was so entered upon the policy. The barque arrived at Hampton Roads, and, after lying at anchor there for eighteen days, was sunk, and the cargo was lost. Held, that in the absence of any showing of damage to the company from the mistake, the case was to be treated as if a proper endorsement had been made; and there was no deviation in going into Hampton Roads for orders. Ar- nould v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 78 N. Y. 7.

A vessel was insured against perils of the seas "at and from Plymouth to Banks, cod fishing, and at and thence back to Plymouth." The premium was to be at a certain rate per month, and the policy was to end with the voyage. The vessel sailed with the usual quantity of bait, but not with a full supply for the trip, it being customary to rely on catching live bait on the Banks. Such bait had been plenty in previous years, but this year was scarce, and the master, after exhausting the bait on hand, and being unable to catch any, went to the nearest practicable port for bait, returned to the fishing grounds, and the vessel was afterwards lost by a peril insured against. Held, that in the absence of evidence of usage to put into port for bait, under such circumstances, the doing so was a deviation which discharged the insurer. Sylvanus W. Burgess v. Equitable Mar. Ins. Co., 126 Mass. 70.

Defendants insured plaintiff's vessel, then lying in port at New York undergoing repairs, "at and from New York to Havana," and after the repairs were completed the vessel went on a trip to a port sixteen miles distant, to test her engines and take in coal, and after returning to New York sailed for Havana, and while prosecuting her voyage was destroyed by fire. Held, that the trial trip was in violation of the terms and conditions of the policy, and defendants were not liable thereon. Fernandez v. Great Western Ins. Co., 48 N. Y. 511.

The loss of a vessel wrecked in the Gulf of Mexico is covered by a policy containing a special clause by which the vessel is limited "to navigate the Atlantic Ocean between Europe and America," the Gulf of Mexico being part of the Atlantic Ocean. The Orient, 16 Fed. Rep. 916; Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Allen, 121 U. S. 67; s. c., 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 858.

In the printed part of a marine policy, the assured warranted not to use certain ports and places and certain waters, and among them ports and

6. Illegality.—The policy is avoided by illegality in the voyage or trade insured. "No species of property or interest at risk on a sea venture can be the subject of a valid contract of marine insurance if the course of trade or the voyage in the prosecution of which it is so exposed to risk be in contravention either of the laws or the war policy of the country of the insurer."¹ places in Texas, except Galveston, and foreign ports and places in the Gulf of Mexico. On the margin of the policy was written, "To be employed in the coasting trade on the United States Atlantic coast," and "to use Gulf ports not west of New Orleans." The vessel was lost west of New Orleans, while on a voyage from Maine to a port in the Gulf of Mexico west of New Orleans. Held, that the loss was not covered by the policy. New Haven Steam Mill Co. v. Security Ins. Co., 20 Blatchf. C. Ct. 192. See also in general McCall v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 66 N. Y. 505; Wilkins v. Tobacco Ins. Co., 30 Ohio 317; Stillwell v. Home Ins. Co., 3 Dillon 80; Snyder v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 95 N. Y. 196; New Jersey Lighterage Co. v. New York Mut. Ins. Co., 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 165; Nicholson v. Mercantile etc. Ins. Co., 106 Mass. 399; Hearne v. Marine Ins. Co., 20 Wall. (U. S.) 488; Hearn v. N. E. Mut. Ins. Co., 4 Cliff. (U. S.) 200; Lloyd Transport Versicherungs Gesellschaft, s. c., 66 Cal. 294; Gulf of California Nav. Co. v. State Investment etc. Ins. Co., 70 Cal. 586.

1. Illegality.—2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 687. The principle is established beyond all question. The principal difficulty has arisen in deciding whether or not a particular act or trade were in fact illegal.

A policy on a voyage forbidden by the law of the underwriter's country is void. Johnson v. Sutton, 1 Doug. 254; Andrews v. Essex F. & M. Ins. Co., 3 Mason (U. S.) 6.

But it is not void if the voyage be merely forbidden by the laws of another country. Lever v. Fletcher, 1 Park Ins. 506; Planche v. Fletcher, 1 Park Ins. 428; 1 Doug. 251; Skidmore v. Desdoity, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 77; Livingstone v. Maryland Ins. Co., 7 Cranch (U. S.) 506; Decrow v. Waldo Mut. Ins. Co., 43 Me. 460.

A violation of customs acts, or of special statutes, by the master without the knowledge and authority of the owner, does not render the voyage illegal. Wilson v. Rankin, 34 L. J.

Q. B. 62; 35 L. J., Q. B. 203; Cunard v. Hyde, 27 L. J., Q. B. 408; Redmond v. Smith, 7 M. & G. 449, 474; Dudgeon v. Pembroke, 2 App. Cas. 284; Sherlock v. Globe Ins. Co., 1 Cin. (Ohio) 193.

Nor does the act of carrying particular goods in a manner contrary to the provisions of an act of congress. Sherlock v. Globe Ins. Co., 1 Cin. L. Bul. (Ohio) 26.

If the intent at the outset of the voyage was to violate the law the policy is void and the underwriter is discharged, although the vessel is seized before an illegal act has been committed. Seymour v. London & Provincial Mar. Ins. Co., 27 L. J. 417; 41 L. J. (C. P.) 193; Wilson v. Backhouse, Peake Add. Cas. 119; Wilson v. Marryat, 8 T. R. 31. But see Sewall v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 4 Taunt. 856.

The illegality to vitiate the policy must be in the particular voyage insured. Bird v. Appleton, 8 T. R. 562.

For a full discussion of what voyages and what traffics are illegal by the English law, see 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 687 et seq.

In the United States, the cases have arisen chiefly upon warranties against illegal traffic. Voyages and traffics have been held illegal so as to avoid the policy in the following cases. Craig v. United States Ins. Co., Pet. (C. C.) 410; Corrington v. Merchants Ins. Co., 8 Pet. (U. S.) 495; Gray v. Sims, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 276; Sturges v. Bush, 5 Day (Conn.) 452; Pond v. Smith, 4 Conn. 297; Cucullu v. Louisiana State Ins. Co., 5 Mart. (La.) N. S. 464; Tucker v. De Longuamare, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 20; Colquhoun v. New York Firemen's Ins. Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 352; Mumford v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 310; Fandel v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 4 Ser. & R. (Pa.) 29.

In the following cases the policy was held not to be avoided. Carrington v. Merch. Ins. Co., 8 Pet. (U. S.) 495; Church v. Hubbard, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 187; Hallet v. Jenks, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 210; Bradstreet v. Neptune Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 600; Williams v. Suffolk

IX. Perils Insured Against.—The perils insured against are “of the seas; men of war; fire, enemies, pirates, rovers, thieves, jettisons; letters of mart and countermart; surprisals; takings at sea; arrests, restraints and detainments of all kings, princes and people of what nation, condition or quality soever; barratry of the masters and mariners, and of all other perils, losses and misfortunes that have or shall come to the hurt, detriment or damage of the said goods and merchandise, and ship, etc., at any port thereof.¹

Ins. Co., 13 Pet. (U. S.) 415; 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 270; Clark v. Protection Ins. Co., 1 Story (U. S.) 109; Graham v. Pennsylvania Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 113; Warren v. Ocean Ins. Co., 16 Me. 439. Bulkley v. Derby Fishing Co., 1 Conn. 571; Lovering v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 12 Pick. (Mass.) 348; Kimble v. Rhinelander, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 130; Merchants Ins. Co. v. Edmond, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 138. See also on the general topic Smith v. Delaware Ins. Co., 3 Wash. (U. S.) 127; Fontaine v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 293.

The burden is on the underwriter to prove the trade illicit and a seizure justified. Thompson v. Mississippi M. & F. Ins. Co., 2 La. (O. S.) 228.

Where the warranty is against seizure for illicit trade, proof of illicit trade is not enough to vitiate the policy, there must also be a seizure. 1 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 1153 et seq.; De Peyster v. Gardner, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 492.

Seizure and condemnation are not enough to vitiate the warranty, the trade must be proved illicit. Frances v. Ocean Ins. Co., 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 404; 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 64; Johnston v. Ludlow, 1 Cai. Cas. (N. Y.) 29; Smith v. Delaware Ins. Co., 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 74.

The warranty is not broken if the master barratrously carry on an illicit trade. Suckley v. Delafield, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 222.

Trade by a neutral in goods contraband of war is not illegal. Seton v. Law, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 1; Skidmore v. Desdoity, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 77.

The warranty against illicit trade is limited to the goods of the assured. Bowne v. Shaw, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 489.

1. 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 744. These are the perils enumerated in the English form of policy, and are the same covered by all ordinary policies.

Perils of the Seas.—“The term ‘perils of the seas’ denotes all marine casualties resulting from the violent action of the elements, as distinguished from their natural silent influence upon the fabric of the vessel, casualties which may, and not consequences which must, occur.” Per LUSH, J., in Merchants’ Trading Co. v. Universal Mar. Ins. Co., L. R., 9 Q. B. 596.

Loss by wreck or foundering at sea is, of course, by peril of the seas. Houston v. Thornton, Holt N. P. 242; Newby v. Reid, 1 Park Ins. 148; Green v. Brown, 2 Stra. 1199; Sturm v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 38 N. Y. Super. Ct. 281; Hogar v. New England etc. Ins. Co., 59 Me. 460; Western Ins. Co. v. Tobin, 32 Ohio St. 77; Swan v. Union Ins. Co., 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 168; Cleveland v. Union, 8 Mass. 308.

Where a vessel is insured against perils of the lake, excepting certain excluded causes, if the vessel is lost from perils not arising from one of the excluded causes, the company is liable. Union Ins. Co. v. Smith, 124 U. S. 405, 31 L. ed. 497.

Where a raft of logs was insured for a voyage in charge of a tow-boat, and coming to the mouth of a river up which it was to be placed a short distance, was lost under circumstances which did not disclose any extraordinary action of the elements, or, as far as could be observed, any negligence of navigation, and it was proven that the raft was seaworthy, the court held that there was, in the absence of proof to the contrary, a presumption of loss by some unknown peril insured against; that it was probable the loss was caused by the combined action of the currents of the two rivers, the strain of the tugs engaged in towing, and the possible unskilful or negligent navigation of the crews employed in the tow, and all of this being covered by the policy, the insurer was liable. Moores v. Louisville Underwriters, 14 Fed. Rep. 226.

There is no fixed rule as to when a vessel which has not been heard from shall be held to be lost. When the usual voyage was seven weeks and the vessel had been out nine months, a recovery was allowed. Houstman v. Thornton, Holt N. P. 242.

The assured must prove that the vessel sailed. Cohen v. Hinckley, 2 Camp. 51.

Proof of sailing and nonarrival, and a report of loss by foundering is enough without calling any one of the crew, though the crew were reported saved. Koster v. Reed, 6 B. & C. 19. See also Koster v. Innes, Ry. & Moo. 333.

Where the policy excepted loss from capture and seizure, and the vessel was never heard from, it was held, that the assured was not bound to prove the loss not due to capture or seizure, but had made out a case for the jury on proof of sailing in seaworthy condition and of nonarrival. Green v. Brown, 2 Stra. 1199.

Yet, where the underwriter was not to be liable for loss from rottenness, inherent defects, and other unseaworthiness, it was held that the assured must prove the vessel seaworthy, when lost, either by direct proof or by proof that the cause of the loss was such as to exclude the inference of unseaworthiness. Berwind v. Greenwich Ins. Co., 21 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 102.

Stranding is a peril of the seas. Hahn v. Corbett, 2 Bing. 205; Livil v. Jansen, 12 East 648; Fletcher v. Ingalls, 2 B. & Ald. 315; Corcoran v. Gurney, 1 E. & B. 456; Bales of Cotton, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 221; Potter v. Suffolk Ins. Co., 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 197; Hagar v. New England Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 59 Me. 460; Rathbone v. Fowler, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 294; McLaughlin v. Atlantic etc. Ins. Co., 57 Me. 170; Fitzpatrick v. Bales of Cotton, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 42.

Injury by ice or by freezing in is such a peril. Jordan v. Great Western Ins. Co., 24 New Brunswick 421; Franklin Ins. Co. v. Humphrey, 65 Ind. 549; Mississippi Valley Ins. Co. v. Humphrey, 66 Ind. 600; Reybold v. U. S., 15 Wall. (U. S.) 202. See Brown v. St. Nicholas Ins. Co., 61 N. Y. 332.

So injury to animals resulting from their being tossed about in a gale. Lawrence v. Aberdeen, 5 B. & Ald. 107; Coit v. Smith, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 16; Snowdon v. Guion, 101 N. Y. 458.

Although the wounds are inflicted by their kicking one another. Gabay v. Lloyd, 3 B. & C. 793.

The cutwater of a whaling vessel, that had been unaffected by a heavy gale in the Arctic Ocean, was injured by striking against floating ice. She was taken to a port, examined, and no unsoundness discovered. In order to put her on a gridiron for repairs, it was found necessary to beach her to ascertain her depth and shape. She was sharp built, drew nineteen feet of water, and, upon being put upon the beach, heeled over at an angle greater than forty degrees. When the tide left she was badly strained, and became a total wreck. She was injured against perils of the sea, and other losses and misfortunes coming to her damage. Held, that the loss was properly found to occur from a peril insured against and not from any inherent weakness in the vessel. Swift v. Union etc. Marine Ins. Co., 122 Mass. 573.

So damage to cargo by rain while in transit. Underwriters' Agency v. Sutherland, 55 Ga. 266. Or by sea water shipped in tempestuous weather or admitted by leakage caused by straining. Carr v. Royal Exch. Ins. Co., 5 B. & S. 433; Montaya v. London Ass. Co., 6 Exch. 451; Cator v. Great Western Ins. Co., L. R., 8 C. P. 552; Williams v. Cole, 16 Me. 207.

Destroying a vessel to prevent capture has been held a loss by peril of the seas. Gordon v. Remington, 1 Camp. 123.

Injury from the swell of a passing steamer is by a peril of the sea. Washington Ins. Co. v. Reed, 20 Ohio 199. Or from escaping steam. Union Ins. Co. v. Groom, 4 Bush. (Ky.) 289.

So the loss of a slave by accidentally falling from a vessel. Moore v. Perpetual Ins. Co., 16 Mo. 98.

The loss of a boat from the stern davits in a gale. Hall v. Ocean Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 472.

The peril attending making river landing is a peril of navigation. Seaman v. Enterprise F. & M. Ins. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 778.

Loss of animals in embarkation or disembarkation is a peril of the seas. Anthony v. Aetna Ins. Co., 1 Abb. (U. S.) 343; Aetna Ins. Co. v. Stivers, 47 Ill. 86.

Where sailors were sent ashore to change a fastening, but were seized by a press gang and carried away before they could do it, and the vessel was injured, this was held a loss by a peril of the seas. Hodgson v. Malcolm, 2 B. & P. N. R. 336.

So where a vessel was taken in tow by a man of war by mistake and exposed to a tempestuous sea which injured goods, it was held a loss by perils of the seas. Hagedorn v. Whitmore, 1 Stark. 157.

Where a part of a cargo being linseed, which was wet by the water that came in through the holes made in a vessel by ice, and the linseed became swollen and injured the vessel, the injury so caused was a damage from a peril of the sea. Rathbone v. Fowler, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 294.

So where a vessel which was driven into port of necessity was unable to leave it owing to a pestilence, the delay was held to be by a peril of the seas. Williams v. Smith, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 1.

Where the owner of cargo had it ready for shipment but the vessel which had contracted to carry it was lost by accident in getting out of a dock, it was held that the loss was by a sea peril. Dervaux v. l'Anson, 5 Bing. N. R. 519.

A loss by collision is manifestly by such a peril. See cases cited later on negligence of master.

What Is Not a Peril of the Seas.—No loss which is the result of ordinary wear and tear, or a necessary consequence of the employment of a vessel in the usual course of navigation, is a loss by a peril of the seas.

Thus, damage by worms to an unsheathed vessel. Rohl v. Parr, 1 Esp. 445; Lovell v. McMillan, Fac. Dec. (1808-1810) 341; Hazard v. New Eng. Mut. Ins. Co., 8 Pet. (U. S.) 557; 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 218; Martin v. Salem Mar. Ins. Co., 2 Mass. 420. Or damage by rats to the ship's bottom. Hunter v. Potts, 4 Camp. 203; Laveroni v. Drury, 8 Exch. 160. Contra, Garrigues v. Coxe, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 592. Or damage by the vessel's taking bottom in the usual course of navigation. Magnus v. Buttemer, 11 C. B. 876. See also Wells v. Hapwood, 3 B. & Ad. 20 at 34. Or by other ordinary wear and tear. Coles v. Mar. Ins. Co., 3 Wash. (U. S.) 159; Harrison v. Universal Mar. Ins. Co., 3 F. & F. 190.

Leakage and breakage from packages is such ordinary wear and tear. Crafts v. Marshall, 7 C. & P. 597.

So injury to an ocean cable by the chemical action of the sea water. Patterson v. Harris, 1 B. & S. 336.

Whether damage by heavy cross seas in the gulf stream is by the ordinary action of the seas is for the jury. Bullard v. Roger Williams Ins. Co., 1 Curt. (U. S.) 148.

Where a raft of logs being towed from one river into another was lost apparently by the action of the two currents and the strain of the tugs, it was held error "to rule that because there was apparently no extraordinary condition of wind and current there was no peril of navigation to cause the loss." The underwriter may be liable for a loss from the ordinary action of the sea, if that ordinary action in fact is fatal to a seaworthy vessel. Moores v. Louisville Underwriters, 14 Fed. Rep. 226.

Damage resulting to a vessel while hove down, or hauled upon a beach for repairs, has been held not by peril of the seas. Thompson v. Whitmore, 3 Taunt. 227; Rawcroft v. Dunsmore, cited 3 Taunt. 227.

Barratry is not of itself a peril of the sea. Heyman v. Parish, 2 Camp. 151. Nor is embezzlement of cargo. Hicks v. Fitzsimmons, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 279.

Fire.—The policy covers loss by fire on a steamship. Patteson v. Mills, 1 Dow & Clark 342; 2 Bligh N. S. 519.

It covers a burning to prevent capture. Gordon v. Remington, 1 Camp. 123.

A policy of marine insurance "against all such loss or damage, not exceeding the sum insured, as should happen to the property by fire other than the fire happening by means of any invasion, insurrection, riot, or civil commotion, or of any military or usurped power," includes a loss from a fire which is caused by collision, although it does not include losses caused directly by collision. Insurance Co. v. Transportation Co., 12 Wall. (U. S.) 194. See also Germania Ins. Co. v. Sherlock, 25 Ohio 33; Waters v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 11 Pet. (U. S.) 213; Montgomery v. Fireman's Ins. Co., 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 427; Mason v. Franklin Fire Ins. Co., 12 Gill & J. (Md.) 468; Gilmore v. Carman, 9 Miss. 279; Perrin v. Protection Ins. Co., 11 Ohio 147; Eureka Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 56 Pa. St. 256.

Collision is a peril of the sea. Peters v. Warren Ins. Co., 14 Pet. 99; s. c., 3 Sumn. 389; Sherwood v. Ins. Co., 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 251; s. c., 14 How. (U. S.) 351; Hale v. Washington Ins. Co., 2 Story (U. S.) 176; Nelson v. Suffolk Ins. Co., 8 Cush. (Mass.) 477; Stewart v. Ins. Co., 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 242; Norwich etc. Co. v. Western Ins. Co., 34 Conn. 561; Caldwell v. St. Louis Ins. Co., 1 La. An. 85; Mathews v. Howard Ins. Co., 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 234; Street

v. Augusta etc. Ins. Co., 12 Rich. (S. Car.) L. 13.

Enemies, Pirates and Rovers.—A taking by a confederate vessel during the civil war is within this risk. Monongahela Ins. Co. v. Chester, 43 Pa. St. 491; Dole v. New England etc. Ins. Co., 2 Cliff. (U. S.) 394.

So a taking by coolie passengers. Palmer v. Naylor, 23 L. J. Exch. 323; 10 Exch. 382; Kleinwort v. Shepard, 1 E. & E. 447. Or mutinous sailors. Brown v. Smith, 1 Dow. 349. Or, of course, by pirates. Dean v. Hornby, 3 E. & B. 180.

Thieves.—In England, this risk is limited to loss by theft from without accompanied by force. Harford v. Maynard, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 36. The rule is the same in Tennessee. Marshall v. Ins. Co., 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 99.

In New York, theft without violence has been held within the policy. Atlantic Ins. Co. v. Storrow, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 285, 293; American Ins. Co. v. Bryan, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 563; 1 Hill (N. Y.) 25.

The wrongful seizure and sale of a cargo by a consul of the United States is not a loss, under a clause in a policy which insures against the acts of pirates and assailing thieves. Paddock v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Allen (Mass.) 93.

A policy of insurance of goods shipped by river included perils "of the rivers, fires, rovers, assailing thieves, and all other perils and losses and misfortunes that have or shall come to the hurt, detriment or damage of the said goods and merchandise or any part thereof by reason of the dangers of the rivers." Held to cover a loss from the seizure of the vessel and cargo by a mob, where, although the mob could not be properly classed as assailing thieves, because the evidence did not establish that the taking was done animo furandi, yet the acts were of such a character that they were clearly included within the general words at the end of the clause. Babbett v. Sun etc. Ins. Co., 23 La. An. 314.

Worms are not a peril of the sea. Hazard v. Ins. Co., 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 218; Martin v. Salem Ins. Co., 2 Mass. 420.

Taking, Arrests, Restraints and Detainments.—Where the underwriter and the assured are of the same country, a restraint by its government is within the policy. Page v. Thompson, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 175; Green v. Young, 2 Ld.

Raym. 840. See also Tawteng v. Hubbard, 3 B. & P. 291 at 302.

It is immaterial that the taking is unlawful. Logano v. Jansen, 2 E. & E. 160; Sewall v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 4 Taunt. 855; Powell v. Hyde, 5 E. & B. 607; Seymour v. London Provincial Mar. Ins. Co., 27 L. T., N. S., 417.

It is not necessary to prove sentence of condemnation. Carruthers v. Gray, 15 East 35; 3 Camp. 142.

A temporary seizure for the purposes of plundering is within this clause. Johnston v. Hogg, 10 Q. B. Div. 432. And so a taking by coolie passengers. Kleinwort v. Shepard, 1 E. & E. 447. And a seizure and prosecution because of barratrous act of the master. Cory v. Burr, L. R., 8 App. Cas. 393; 9 Q. B. Div. 463; 8 Q. B. Div. 313. So a taking by a privateer with collusion of the master of the vessel. Archangelo v. Thompson, 2 Camp. 620.

Where the policy covered land and water transit, a detention in Paris by the German armies was held within the policy. Rodonachi v. Elliott, L. R., 9 C. P. 518; L. R., 8 C. P. 649.

A detention by a belligerent for search constitutes a detention. Barker v. Blakes, 9 East 283.

So, of course, an embargo. Rotch v. Edie, 6 T. R. 413.

The underwriter will be liable if the vessel is in fact detained, although if the master had abandoned the return cargo the vessel need not have remained at the port. Schroder v. Thompson, 7 Taunt. 462. See also on the general subject Levi v. Allnutt, 15 East 267; Wilbraham v. Wartnaby, Lloyd & Welsby 144.

Under a policy which ran thus: "touching the risks I am willing to bear, they are the same as contained in all regular policies of insurance," it was held that a loss by capture and condemnation was included. Levy v. Merrill, 4 Me. 180. See also in general McCall v. Mar. Ins. Co., 8 Cranch (U. S.) 59; Olivera v. Union Ins. Co., 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 183; Williams v. Sufold Ins. Co., 13 Pet. (U. S.) 415; Levy v. Merrill, 4 Me. 180; Pollock v. Babcock, 6 Mass. 234; Robinson v. Jones, 8 Mass. 536; De Peau v. Russell, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 441; Lorent v. S. Car. Ins. Co., 1 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 505.

Barratry.—As to what constitutes barratry see SHIPPING.

LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C. J., in Earl v. Rawcroft, 8 East at 134, said: "It is extraordinary that this species of loss, occasioned by the misconduct of the master, selected and appointed as he is by the owners themselves, and liable to be dismissed by them only, should ever have been made the subject of insurance. . . . So, however, it is that this description of loss has, from the earliest times, held its place, as a subject of indemnity, in British policies of insurance." Where the policy does not specify the perils, barratry is included, although the assured appoints the master, and is owner. Parkhurst v. Gloucester Fishing Ins. Co., 100 Mass. 301; Briose v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 4 Daly (N. Y.) 246.

In Waters v. Merchants' Louisville Ins. Co., 11 Pet. (U. S.) 213, the policy enumerated many perils, but did not set out barratry, and the court held the underwriter not liable for loss by barratry.

It is a general rule, where barratry is excepted from the risks, that if the immediate cause of the loss is a peril insured against, it is no defence that the loss was remotely caused by the gross negligence of the agent of the insured not amounting to barratry. Shultz v. Pacific Ins. Co., 14 Fla. 73. See also Swan v. Union Ins. Co., 3 Wheat. 168; Patapasco Ins. Co. v. Coulter, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 222; Crousset v. Ball, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 204; Brown v. Union Ins. Co., 5 Day (Conn.) 1; Tate v. Protection Ins. Co., 20 Conn. 481; Richardson v. Marine Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 102; Ward v. Wood, 13 Mass. 539; Wiggin v. Smory, 14 Mass. 1; Taggard v. Loring, 16 Mass. 336; Walden v. Fireman's Ins. Co., 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 128; Hallett v. Columbian Ins. Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 272; Cook v. Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 40; Messonnier v. Union Ins. Co., 1 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 155; Gazzam v. Ohio Ins. Co., Wright (Ohio) 202.

"Other Losses, Perils and Misfortunes."—These words cover only losses from perils of the same kind and nature as the foregoing. Thus they do not cover a loss by an extraordinary duty placed upon a cargo while captured and detained. De Peau v. Russel, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 441.

Nor loss of passage money through the decree of a court at a port whither the vessel was driven and at which it was libelled by the passengers, ordering the return of the passage money. Marks v. Nashville M. & F. Ins. Co., 6 La. An. 126.

Nor a loss by negligently pumping water into the air chamber of a vessel's engine. Thames & Mersey Mar. Ins. Co. v. Hamilton, L. R., 12 App. Cas. 484, reversing s. c., 17 Q. B. Div. 195.

But they do cover a loss from the breaking of a rope which allowed the vessel to fall over at low tide and become injured. Napier v. Wood, 4 C. C. Sc. 19.

So, where in a similar way, damage was done to cargo. Laurie v. Douglas, 15 M. & W. 746.

They cover a loss by straining while beached for repairs. Swift v. Union Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 122 Mass. 373.

A loss by being blown over while in a graving dock. Phillips v. Barber, 5 B. & Ald. 161.

A loss caused by the sticking of the vessel on the ways while being launched. Frichette v. State Mut. F. & Ins. Co., 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 190.

A loss by the bursting of a steamship's boiler. West India etc. Co. v. Home & Colonial Mar. Ins. Co., 6 Q. B. Div. 51. But see Thames & Mersey Mar. Ins. Co. v. Hamilton, L. R., 12 App. Cas. 484, disapproving.

A policy of marine insurance which exempts loss by the bursting of boilers, but covers that "occurring subsequent to and in consequence of such bursting," does not cover a total loss occasioned by an explosion so violent as to tear open the sides of the vessel to such an extent that the water admitted sinks her in five or ten minutes. Evans v. Columbian Ins. Co., 44 N. Y. 146.

Or by an injury to goods caused by water entering through a cock negligently left open. Davidson v. Burnaud, L. R., 4 C. P. 117; Good v. London Steamship etc. Co., L. R., 6 C. P. 563.

These words cover also an injury caused by being fired upon by mistake by a man-of-war. Cullen v. Butler, 4 Camp. 289; 5 M. & S. 461.

Where specie was thrown overboard to prevent its capture, the loss was held covered by these words. Butler v. Wildman, 3 B. & Ald. 398.

And so where it was sunk in shallow water for a similar purpose and not regained. Kohn v. New Orleans Ins. Co., 12 La. (O. S.) 348.

The loss was held within these words also where a vessel was seized by a mob and the sugar covered by the policy was lost. Babbitt v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 23 La. An. 314.

A payment for salvage is recoverable under these words. Ritchison v. Lohre, L. R., 4 App. Cas. 755; 2 Q. B. Div.

The underwriter will not be liable unless the loss is a result of which the perils insured against are the proximate and efficient cause.¹

501; 3 Q. B. Div. 558; Dent v. Smith, L. R., 4 Q. B. 414.

Where the policy is against all risks, it includes every loss except those caused by the acts of the assured. Goix v. Knox, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 337; Barnwall v. Church, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 217; M'Cargo v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 10 Rob. (La.) 334; Lockett v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 10 Rob. (La.) 339; Maryland Ins. Co. v. Bathurst, 5 G. & J. (Md.) 159.

The cause of the loss must appear. The captain's protest does not prove the cause. Bernard v. Greenwich Ins. Co., 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 102.

1. Proximate Cause.—Much difficulty has arisen in deciding what is the proximate cause of loss, and probably the question will never be free from difficulty. The law regards only the proximate and disregards the remote cause of loss.

In Dudgeon v. Pembroke, L. R., 9 Q. B. 581; 1 Q. B. Div. 96; L. R., 2 App. Cas. 284, a vessel structurally too weak was driven ashore in bad weather and wrecked. But for her weakness she probably would not have been driven ashore. The question was as to the proximate cause of loss. This the queen's bench held to be the peril of the seas, and this decision was sustained by the house of lords, after being reversed in the exchequer chamber.

The law and the difficulty are well stated by BLACKBURN, J., L. R., 9 Q. B. at 595: "In all cases the law regards the proximate cause of the loss, and it would be difficult to find a better example of what LORD BACON calls the infinity of the 'causes of causes,' and their impulsion one on the other' than is afforded in this case. The ship perished because she went ashore on the coast of Yorkshire. The cause of her going ashore was partly that it was thick weather and she was making for Hull in distress, and partly that she was unmanageable because full of water. The cause of that cause, viz., her being in distress and full of water, was, that when she laboured in the rolling sea she made water, and the cause of her making water was that when she left London she was not in so strong and staunch a state as she ought to have been, and this last is said to be the proximate cause of the loss, though since she left London she had crossed the North Sea twice. We think it would have been a misdirection to tell the jury that this was not a loss by perils of the seas, even if so connected with the state of unseaworthiness as that it would prevent anyone who knowingly sent her out in that state from recovering indemnity for this loss." See also Peters v. Warren Ins. Co., 14 Pet. (U. S.) 99; Magoun v. New England Mar. Ins. Co., 1 Story (U. S.) 157; Potter v. Ocean Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 27; Williams v. Suffolk Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 270; Merchants etc. Ins. Co. v. Butler, 20 Md. 41; Phoenix etc. Ins. Co. v. Cochran, 51 Pa. St. 143; Dyer v. Piscataqua Ins. Co., 53 Me. 118.

Where a vessel was insured "free from all consequences of hostilities," she was wrecked off Cape Hatteras owing to the fact that the confederate forces, in order to injure the federal commerce, had put out the light maintained there for years by the government of the United States. It was held that the loss was from a peril of the seas and not a consequence of hostilities. Part of the cargo could have been saved had not the confederate forces prevented. This loss the court held a consequence of hostilities for which the underwriter was not liable. Ionides v. Universal Mar. Ins. Co., 14 C. B., N. S. 259.

Where a vessel was driven ashore by perils of the sea and captured before she could be got off, this was held a loss by capture. Green v. Emslie, Peake, N. S. 212. A similar decision was reached in Livie v. Jansen, 12 East 648; Rice v. Homer, 12 Mass. 230; c/ Hahn v. Corbett, 2 Bing. 205.

So where a vessel was wrecked, part of the cargo lost and the part put on shore destroyed by the natives, the whole loss was held to be by peril of the seas. Bordrett v. Hentigg, 1 Holt N. P. 147.

Where a vessel being towed along a river had some of her sails set and was carried by a sudden gust of wind against the abutments of a bridge and injured, it was held that the wind was the proximate cause of loss and not the negligence of the crew. Greenwich Ins. Co. v. Raab, 11 Ill. App. 636.

And he will be liable only for the direct and immediate and not for remote consequences of the peril.¹

Where the cargo of a canal boat was insured, the risk to cease "if prevented or detained by ice or the closing of navigation from terminating trip," a gale separated the boat from the tug in charge and drove it ashore. Here it was frozen in so that the tug could not get at it, and, later, after a thaw, wind and ice forced another boat against it, in consequence of which it broke in two and sunk. It was held that the underwriter was liable, as the proximate cause of the loss was the storm and not the ice. Brown v. St. Nicholas Ins. Co., 61 N. Y. 332.

Where a ship was so negligently loaded that it became leaky and was finally run ashore in heavy weather to prevent its foundering, it was held that the proximate cause of loss was the peril of sinking. Redman v. Wilson, 14 M. & W. 476.

Where a vessel insured against barratry but not against seizure, was seized for a barratrous act of the master, the seizure was held the proximate cause and the underwriter held not liable. Cory v. Burr, L. R., 8 App. Cas. 393; 9 Q. B. Div. 463; 8 Q. B. Div. 313.

Where a vessel was driven ashore during a detention the peril of the sea was held the proximate cause of loss. Bailey v. South Carolina Ins. Co., 2 Brev. (S. Car.) 354.

Where a vessel warranted free from loss if not permitted entry in consequence of having negroes on board, anchored outside a port to await permission to enter, and was lost in a hurricane before permission could be obtained, it was held that the proximate cause of loss was the hurricane. Dickey v. United Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 358.

A loss by derangement of the mud valves of a vessel, the derangement not being the proximate cause, is not within the exception of a policy freeing the company from a claim for loss by derangement of machinery. Orient Mut. Ins. Co. v. Adams, 123 U. S. 67.

A vessel was injured by sea perils but managed to land its cargo, and the owner received the freight. On a survey the vessel was condemned and abandoned to the underwriters, who thereupon claimed the freight and, after suit, obtained it. The owner then brought suit to recover the freight from an underwriter on the freight. It was held that the proximate cause of the loss was the abandonment of the vessel and not the perils of the seas, and that the underwriter was not liable. Scottish Mar. Ins. Co. v. Turner, 1 Macq. H. L. 334.

Where a charter party allowed the charterer to cancel it if the vessel failed to arrive by a certain date, the vessel failed to arrive at the day fixed owing to delay caused by perils insured against, and the charterer cancelled the charter. It was held that the proximate cause of the loss of freight was not the perils, but the exercise of the option by the charterer, and recovery against the underwriter was refused. Mercantile Steamship Co. v. Tyser, 7 Q. B. Div. 73.

In New York & Boston Dispatch Express Co. v. Traders and Mechanics' Ins. Co., 132 Mass. 377, goods were insured "against all such immediate loss or damage as may occur by fire to the property." The vessel was run into by another and caught fire. She sunk, carrying down the goods untouched by the fire. They were damaged by the water. ENDICOTT, J., said: "Undoubtedly the injury occasioned by the collision would have caused the vessel to sink and thereby have injured the plaintiffs' property; and if that had been the only cause operating the plaintiffs cannot recover, for the insurance is not against collision, but only against fire. But if means and appliances were at hand by which that result could have been avoided, and the intervention of a new agency, namely, that of fire, prevented their use, then the fire was the proximate and immediate cause of the loss." It was held error to refuse to allow the question of the possibility of preventing the injury had not the fire supervened, to go to the jury, and a new trial was granted. It was also held that no peculiar force was to be given to the word "immediate" in the policy.

1. Direct and Remote Consequences.—

Thus where part of the cargo is sold to pay for repairs to the ship caused by perils insured against, the loss is not the result of the peril, but of the sale, and cannot be recovered of the underwriter. Powell v. Gudgeon, 5 M. & S. 431; Sarqy v. Hobson, 2 B. & C. 7; Dyer v. Piscataqua F. & M. Ins. Co., 53 Me. 118; Ruckman v. Merchant's Louisville Ins. Co., 5 Duer (N. Y.) 342.

Or where, owing to supplies giving out from delay caused by sea perils, part of the cargo is used for the passengers. Moses v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Duer (N. Y.) 159.

Or cargo is used for fuel owing to the ship's supply proving inadequate on a voyage protracted by sea perils.

The underwriter is not liable for loss caused by a sale of the cargo because it has been damaged by a sea peril, or because the vessel has been rendered by a peril insured against unable to carry it on. The loss in such a case is the result of the sale and not of the peril. Meyer v. Ralli, 1 C. P. Div. 358; Philpott v. Swann, 11 C. B. N. S. 270; Moody v. Jones, 4 B. & C. 394; Murray v. Nova Scotia Mar. Ins. Co., 1 Russ. & C. (Nova Sc.) 24; Wood v. Pleasants, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 201; Dodge v. Union Mar. Ins. Co., 17 Mass. 471; Paddock v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Allen (Mass.) 93.

Of course if the sea damage to the cargo is such as to render it a total loss without the sale, the loss is the result of the peril and the underwriter is liable. Royal Exch. Ass. Co. v. McSwiney, 14 Q. B. 634; Carr v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 5 B. & S. 433.

The law is the same where, owing to damage to the vessel by a peril insured against, additional expense is incurred in forwarding goods or passengers, unless this is rendered absolutely necessary. Baillie v. Mandigliani, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 116; Malinckrodt v. Jefferson Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Mo. App. 205; Howard v. Astor Mut. Ins. Co., 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 38.

And the underwriter is not liable for additional expense for corn and provisions during a detention caused by a peril insured against. Eden v. Poole, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 117; Fletcher v. Poole, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 115; Lateward v. Curling, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 288; Robertson v. Ewer, 1 T. R. 127; Sharp v. Gladstone, 7 East 24, 33; Everth v. Smith, 2 M. & S. 278; De Vaux v. Salvador, 4 Ad. & E. 420; Martin v. Salem Mar. Ins. Co., 2 Mass. 420; Perry v. Ohio Ins. Co., 5 Ohio 305; Gazzam v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., 6 Ohio 71; Webb v. Protection Ins. Co., 6 Ohio 456.

Nor for the lessened value of cargo from the delay. Thompson Steel Co. v. Baylston Mut. Ins. Co., 12 Mo. App. 244.

The underwriter's liability in cases of injury by a collision does not extend to the payment of damages for personal injury to passengers. Taylor v. Dewar, 5 B. & S. 58.

Contra.—Excelsior Co. v. Smith, 2 L. T., N. S. 90 (Scotch); Coey v. Smith, 22 C. C. Sc. 955.

Nor is he liable for any balance above the cost of repairs to the vessel insured which it is required to pay to make up one-half of the expenses of a collision where both vessels were in fault. De Vaux v. Salvador, 4 Ad. & E. 420.

The American law is contra. Peters v. Warren Ins. Co., 14 Pet. (U. S.) 99, the American court refusing to consider the judgment of the court assessing the damages as the proximate cause of loss.

So also the underwriter on cargo was held not liable for a loss caused by the cargo owner being forced to pay a balance on a bottomry bond not paid by the ship and freight. Greer v. Poole, 5 Q. B. Div. 272.

The underwriter is liable for all the consequences which flow naturally from the peril insured against or are incident thereto. Thus for a loss of a boat in consequence of a ship becoming unmanageable in a storm, although it did not occur during the storm. Potter v. Ocean Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 27.

The same rule was followed where a vessel was stranded by the fraudulent act of the master and mariners. She was then taken into port by salvors and the cargo labelled for salvage and condemned. The cargo owners labelled the vessel for damages, and she was sold to pay them. It was held that the underwriter was liable for the loss to the owner of the vessel. Pike v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 26 La. An. 392.

So, too, the underwriter was held where, after a capture and condemnation, a bona fide compromise was made and the decree reversed. Berens v. Rucker, 1 W. Bl. 313.

Where a portion of a cargo is damaged by actual contact with sea water during a storm, and another portion is injured by the moisture arising from them, this has been held a loss by the perils insured against. Montoza v. London Ins. Co., 6 Exch. 459.

But a different rule is followed in the United States. Neidlinger v. Ins. Co. of North America, 18 Blatchf. (U. S.) 297; 11 Fed. Rep. 514; s. c., 10 Ben. (U. S.) 254. In this case there was a claim for damages for the loss of a cargo of barley in sacks, the malting quality of which had been injured. The policy contained a clause that the grain was to be "free from damage or injury from dampness, change of the flavor, or being spotted, discolored, musty or mouldy, except caused by actual contact of sea water with the articles damaged." The court held that, assuming that the damage to the sacks of barley which were not reached by the sea water was caused by damp vapor arising from other sacks that were reached by the sea water which came into the vessel through a peril of the seas, such damage was not caused by actual contact of sea water with the articles damaged within the meaning of the policy, and that the company was not liable.

The underwriter is not liable for any loss caused through apprehension of a loss by a peril insured against.¹

The fact that the negligence of the master or crew contributes to the loss will not preclude a recovery from the underwriter.²

A similar question arose in Cory v. Boylston Ins. Co., 107 Mass. 140. In that case a policy of marine insurance upon champagne wines, valued by the case, contained printed clauses providing that the insurers should not be liable for loss by leakage, unless occasioned by stranding or collision; nor "for damage or injury to goods by dampness, rust, change of flavor, or by being spotted, discolored, musty or moldy, unless the same be caused by actual contact of sea water with the articles damaged, occasioned by sea perils." A vessel with such wine on board met with severe gales and stress of weather, which prolonged the voyage and caused her to ship much sea water; and upon her arrival at the port of destination all the cases were found to be more or less wet, either by the sea water, or by the steam and dampness generated in the hold by the presence of the sea water and the changes of climate through which the vessel had passed, some of the bottles, though still corked, were partly empty, the cases and their contents heated, and the wine impaired in flavor and merchantable value. It was held that the insurers were not liable for the loss of the wine which had escaped from the bottles, nor for injury by dampness or change of flavor to cases with which the sea water had not actually come in contact.

1. Apprehension.—Thus where a vessel was detained by a commander of convoy through fear of a hostile embargo laid by Russia, it was held the underwriter was not liable for the loss. Forster v. Christie, 11 East 205.

So where a master turns back through fear of capture. Hadkinson v. Robinson, 3 B. & P. 388; Blackenhazen v. London Ass. Co., 1 Camp. 454; Lubbock v. Rawcroft, 5 Esp. 50; Tucker v. United M. & F. Ins. Co., 12 Mass. 288; Craig v. United Ins. Co., 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 226; Ferguson v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 5 Binn. (Pa.) 544.

2. Negligence.—This is established law both in England and the United States. The English cases upon the question are: Busk v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 2 B. & A. 73; Walker v. Maitland, 5 B. & A. 171; Bishop v. Pentland, 7 B. & C. 219; Haldsworth v. Wise, 7 B. & C. 794; Hodgson v. Malcolm, 2 B. & P., N. R. 336; Dixon v. Sadler, 3 M. & W. 405; 8 M. & W. 895; Carmichael v. Liverpool Sailing Ship Owners' Ass., 19 Q. B. Div. 242.

In the United States some of the earliest cases followed a different rule. Grim v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 451; Lodwicks v. Ohio Ins. Co., 5 Ohio 433; Howell v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., 7 Ohio, pt. 1, 276; Fulton v. Lancaster Ins. Co., 7 Ohio, pt. 2, 5.

These, however, have been distinctly overruled. Mathews v. Howard Ins. Co., 11 N. Y. 9; Perrin v. Protection Ins. Co., 11 Ohio 147. But see Fayerweather v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 7 N. Y. St. Rep. 25.

And the law is as stated. U. S. v. Hunt, 2 Story (U. S.) 120; Patapsco Ins. Co. v. Coulter, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 222; Waters v. Merchants' Louisville Ins. Co., 11 Pet. (U. S.) 213; 1 McLean (U. S.) 275; Van Sickle v. The Ewing, Crabbe (U. S.) 405; Sperry v. Delaware Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 243; National Ins. Co. v. Webster, 83 Ill. 470; Franklin Ins. Co. v. Humphrey, 65 Ind. 549; Mississippi Valley Ins. Co. v. Humphrey, 66 Ind. 600; Fireman's Ins. Co. v. Powell, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 311; Hagar v. New England Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 59 Me. 460; Georgia Ins. Co. v. Dawson, 2 Gill (Md.) 365; St. Louis Ins. Co. v. Glasgow, 8 Mo. 713; Sturm v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 63 N. Y. 77;

Sherlock v. Globe Ins. Co., 1 Cin. Sup. Ct. (Ohio) 193; Germania Ins. Co. v. Sherlock, 25 Ohio St. 33; Enterprise Ins. Co. v. Parisot, 35 Ohio St. 35; Flanigen v. Washington Ins. Co., 7 Pa. St. 306; American Ins. Co. v. Insley, 7 Pa. St. 223; Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Cochran, 51 Pa. St. 143; Lebanon Mut. Ins. Co. v. Kepler, 106 Pa. St. 28; M'Millan v. Union Ins. Co., 1 Rice (S. Car.) 248; Hume v. Providence Washington Ins. Co., 23 S. Car. 190; Hays v. Phenix Ins. Co., 6 N. Y. S. 3; Underwriters' Agency v. Sutherland, 55 Ga. 266; Empire Varnish Packer Co. v. Union Ins. Co., 32 La. An. 1081; Richelieu etc. Nav. Co. v. Boston Mar. Ins. Co., 26 Fed. Rep. 596.

The reason for the rule is explained in Orient Mut. Ins. Co. v. Adams, 123 U. S. 67, as follows: "But it is insisted that the court should have granted the request of the company to the effect that it was not liable if the accident and loss were caused by the 'misconduct' of the master. Had that request been granted in the form asked, the jury might have supposed that the company was relieved from liability if the master was chargeable with what is sometimes described as gross negligence as distinguished from simple negligence. Hence the court properly said in effect that the misconduct of the master, unless affected by fraud or design, would not defeat a recovery on the policy. The principle upon which the court below acted was that expressed by CHIEF JUSTICE GIBSON, in American Ins. Co. v. Insley, 7 Pa. 223, 230, when he said that 'public policy requires no more than that a man be not suffered to insure against his own knavery, which is not to be protected or encouraged by any means; for though the maxim respondet superior is applicable to the responsibility of a master for the acts of his servants, yet the insured, so long as he acts with fidelity, is answerable neither for his servants nor for himself.'" Williams v. Suffolk Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. 270.

Where, however, the assured is himself directly in fault for negligence, he cannot recover. Piper v. Cole, 1 Camp. 434; Heyman v. Parish, 2 Camp. 149. See also Thompson v. Hopper, 6 E. & B. 937; Tanner v. Bennett, Ryan & Moo. 182; Williams v. New England Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 244; Levi v. New Orleans Ins. Co., 2 Woods (U. S.) 63; Riffin v. Patapsco Ins. Co., 7 Har. & J. (Md.) 279; Cleveland v.

Union Ins. Co., 8 Mass. 308; Smith v. Touro, 14 Mass. 112; Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Marsh, 41 Pa. St. 386; Himely v. Stewart, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 209; Orient Ins. Co. v. Adams, 123 U. S. 67; Ad-dlerly v. American etc. Ins. Co., Taney (U. S.) 126.

The underwriter is not liable to indemnify the insured for losses by the peril insured against directly incurred through the fraud or gross misconduct of the insured. Hence an insurer can relieve himself by showing that the efficient and direct cause of encountering the peril was the failure on the part of the insured to act in good faith toward the insurer, or to exercise ordinary prudence in the management, navigation and care of the vessel. Shultz v. Pacific Ins. Co., 14 Fla. 73.

Of course if the policy excepts loss by negligence or warrants against it the underwriter will not be liable. Levi v. New Orleans Ins. Co., 2 Woods (U. S.) 63; Richelieu etc. Nav. Co. v. Boston Mar. Ins. Co., 26 Fed. Rep. 596; Gillespie v. Brit. American F. & L. Ass. Co., 7 U. C., Q. B. 108; Lawton v. Royal Canadian Ins. Co., 50 Wis. 163.

A time policy of insurance on a steam tug to be employed on the lakes contained, among other exceptions, incompetency of master, . . . want of ordinary care and skill in navigating said vessel, "rottenness, inherent defects, . . . and all other unseaworthiness." While towing vessels in Lake Huron, in July, her shaft was broken, causing a leak. Instead of taking her into the nearest port, the master endeavored to tow her to Cleveland, her home port, and she sank on the way. On a trial of a suit on the policy, the court charged that if a master of competent judgment might reasonably have supposed in the exercise of ordinary care, that the tug was sufficiently seaworthy to be towed to Cleveland, and therefore omitted to repair her, such omission was no bar to a recovery. The court held that there was error in so charging. Union Ins. Co. v. Smith, 224 U. S. 405.

Where a policy of marine insurance exempts the underwriter from liability for "all perils, losses, misfortunes or expenses, consequent upon or arising from or caused by . . . the want of ordinary care and skill in navigating said vessel," the insured cannot recover general average expenses incurred in rescuing the vessel from a peril brought

X. Losses Not Covered.—The underwriter is not liable when the loss is due to the inherent vice of the subject insured.¹ Or to the act of the government of the assured if hostile to the government of the underwriter.²

XI. Total Loss and Abandonment.—A total loss is such a loss as entitles the assured to recover from the underwriter the full amount of his subscription to the policy.³

It is either absolute or constructive.

1. *Absolute Total Loss.*⁴—An absolute total loss occurs when-about by negligence in her navigation. The Ontario, 37 Fed. Rep. 220.

Misconduct of the Assured.—Though an insurance policy may protect against losses through mere negligence and carelessness, it will not protect against the misconduct of the party assured. In Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Marsh, 41 Pa. 386, it was held that misconduct means a transgression of some established and definite rule of action, where no discretion is left, except what necessity may demand, while in contradistinction, carelessness, negligence and unskillfulness are transgressions of some established but indefinite rule of action, where some discretion is necessarily left to the actor. If acts of barratry, such as the misconduct of the master and a crew of a vessel, by which it is lost, be not expressly insured against, they are at the risk of the owner; if done with the consent of the insured, they are not covered by the barratry clause in the policy; nor are they insured against when committed by the owner himself. Therefore, where the insured, the master of a river steamboat, caused a barrel of turpentine to be brought from the hold to the furnace, and used it in order to increase the head of steam, whereby the vessel was set on fire and destroyed, it was held that he could not recover his insurance; for, under the act of congress of August 30th, 1853, turpentine must be secured upon steamboats in metallic safes, or in apartments lined with metal, at a secure distance from any fire; and, therefore, in using it he violated a clear and definite rule of duty, which would subject him to whatever loss resulted therefrom.

1. Loss Not Covered.—As where meat becomes putrid owing to delay caused by tempestuous weather. Taylor v. Dunbar, L. R., 4 C. P. 206. See also Boyd v. Dubois, 3 Camp. 133; cf. British American Ins. Co. v. Joseph, 9 Low. Can., Q. B. 448.

14 C. of L.—25

The same principle applies in case of mortality among animals, and was applied in early slave cases. Jones v. Schmoll, 1 T. R. 130, note; Jotham v. Hodgson, 6 T. R. 656; Lawrence v. Aberdein, 1 B. & A. 107; Gabay v. Lloyd, 3 B. & C. 793. The term "fire" in a marine policy does not cover an inherent infirmity in the goods, as spontaneous combustion or chemical action occurring in oil cloth clothing packed in boxes. Providence Washington Ins. Co. v. Adler (Md.), 3 Cent. Rep. 218; s. c., 65 Md. 162.

2. The cases on this point, Conway v. Gray, 10 East 536; Conway v. Forbes, 10 East 539; Maury v. Shedden, 10 East 540, arose upon policies in favor of American subjects made in England, when the loss was due to detentions by the American Embargo acts of 1807. The court held that the subjects of a foreign state are party to its acts, and that, consequently the assured could not recover, the detention being their own act. The embargo in these cases was directed against England and was essentially hostile. The court did not limit the principle to hostile acts, but later cases have established such a limitation. Aubert v. Gray, 3 B. & S. 163; Barett v. Meyer, 5 Taunt. 824; Anthony v. Moline, 5 Taunt. 711; Simcon v. Bozett, 2 M. & S. 94.

It is immaterial that the policy is made in ignorance of hostilities. Campbell v. Innes, 4 B. & A. 423.

3. 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 951.

4. Absolute Total Loss—Ship.—An absolute total loss is such a loss that nothing is left to the assured worth abandoning to the underwriter, and the criterion is the impossibility of procuring the arrival of the thing insured. 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 988; Raux v. Salvador, 3 Bing. N. C. at 286, per LORD ABINGER. Burt v. Brewers' Ins. Co., 16 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 383.

385

ever the subject insured is totally annihilated by perils insured against.¹

Or, in the case of a vessel, is so damaged by perils of the sea as not to be repairable at all, or not repairable without an expense exceeding her value when repaired;² or is wholly lost to her owner by capture, seizure or detention.³ Or is lost to the assured by a bonafide and proper sale made by the master in consequence of loss by perils insured against.⁴

1. Obviously this must be so, and citation of authorities is unnecessary. Where the vessel is never heard from a total loss is allowed. Haustman v. Thornton, Holt N. P. 242; Foster v. Reeve, 5 L. J., K. B. 73; Ferrier v. Sandieman, Fac. Dec. 1808-1810, 373; Hallett v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 279; Ruan v. Gardner, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 145; Gordon v. Bowne, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 150; Child v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 26.

2. Cambridge v. Anderton, 2 B. & C. 691; Shawe v. Felton, 2 East 109; Irvine v. Manning, 1 H. L. Cas. 287; 6 C. B. 391; Stewart v. Greenock Mar. Ins. Co., 2 H. L. Cas. 159; Levy v. Merchants' Mar. Ins. Co., 52 L. J. 263; Stagg v. United Ins. Co., 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 34; Carr v. Providence Washington Ins. Co., 38 Hun (N. Y.) 86; Walker v. United States Ins. Co., 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 61; California Nav. & Exp. Co. v. State Investment & Ins. Co., 70 Cal. 586; Wood v. Lincoln etc. Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 479; Peele v. Suffolk Ins. Co., 7 Pick. (Mass.) 254; Hall v. Franklin Ins. Co., 9 Pick. (Mass.) 466; Bryant v. Comm. Ins. Co., 13 Pick. Mass. 543; Deblois v. Ocean Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 303; Orrok v. Comm. Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 456; Hall v. Ocean Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 472; Crosby v. New York Ins. Co., 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 369.

The sinking of the vessel does not by itself create a total loss. Kemp v. Halliday, 6 B. & S. 723; Sewall v. United States Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 90; Burt v. Brewers and Maltsters' Ins. Co., 78 N. Y. 400.

3. Tyson v. Gurney, 3 T. R. 477; Hewit v. Flexney, 1 Beewes (6th ed.) 458; Marine Ins. Co. v. Tucker, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 357; Dorr v. New England Ins. Co., 11 Mass. 1; Delano v. Bedford Ins. Co., 10 Mass. 347; Brown v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 4 Binn. (Pa.) 445; Gordon v. Bowne, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 150.

If the vessel is recaptured several early English cases held that if the assured had lost the voyage the loss remained an actual total loss. Miller v. Fletcher, 1 Doug. 231; Jenkins v. Mackenzie, 4 Bro. P. C. 447, note; Pond v. King, 1 Wils. 191.

But these cases are probably not law. 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. 1034, 1035; Pole v. Fitzgerald, 5 Bro. P. C. 131; Willes 641.

A decree of restoration will not render the loss less than an actual total loss if the result of the capture is a complete loss of the vessel to the owner. Stringer v. English & Scottish Mar. Ins. Co., L. R., 7 Q. B. 599. Or, it has been held, if it result in a loss of the voyage. Storey v. Brown, 4 Bro. P. C. 445, notes.

The loss is not less an actual total loss if the vessel be recaptured but then be sold for salvage under a decree of court. Storer v. Gray, 2 Mass. 565.

If, however, the original owners buy it at the sale for much less than its value, they cannot both retain the vessel and recover for a total loss. Oliver v. Newburyport Ins. Co., 3 Mass. 37.

4. For the cases on the authority of the master to sell see SHIPPING. Where the sale is proper the underwriter is liable. Cambridge v. Anderton, 2 B. & C. 691; Robertson v. Carruthers, 2 Stark. 571; Robertson v. Clark, 1 Bing. 445; Fleming v. Smith, 1 H. L. Cas. 513. See Allen v. Seegrul, 8 B. & C. 561, but on this case cf. Irving v. Manning, 1 H. L. Cas. 817; Anchor Mar. Ins. Co. v. Keith, 9 Can. Sup. Ct. 483; 3 Russ. & G. (Nova Sc.) 402; Williams v. Suffolk Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 510; Hall v. Ocean Ins. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 371; Prince v. Ocean Ins. Co., 40 Me. 481; Dunning v. Merchants' Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 57 Me. 108; Mutual Safety Ins. Co. v. Cohen, 3 Gill (Md.) 459; Gordon v. Massachusetts F. & M. Ins. Co., 2 Pick. (Mass.) 249; Graves v. Washington Mar. Ins. Co., 12 Allen (Mass.) 391; Stephenson v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 7 Allen (Mass.) 232; Stephenson v. Piscataqua etc. Ins. Co., 54 Me. 55; Saltus v. Commercial

In the case of insurance upon cargo, there is an absolute total loss where by perils insured against the cargo ceases to exist in specie;¹ or where, in consequence of perils insured against, although the goods still exist in specie, yet they are so damaged as not to be worth carrying on and are accordingly properly sold;² or the vessel is so damaged that it cannot complete the voyage and no other can be obtained, or the expense of forwarding would exceed the value of the goods and they are therefore sold;³ or the goods are lost to the owner by capture, seizure or detention.⁴

Where the subject of the insurance is freight there is an absolute total loss where the ship is so damaged by perils insured against that she cannot earn the freight save at an expense exceeding the freight agreed upon, or as to entitle the Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 487; McCall v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 66 N. Y. 505; Wright v. Williams, 20 Hun (N. Y.) 320.

In Hanberry v. King, 4 Bro. P. C. 445, note, the old rule of loss of voyage was followed, and a sale made where the voyage was lost, was held to constitute a total loss.

The following cases further support the text, but as in each the sale was held not stringently necessary, the underwriter was held not liable for a total loss. Cobequid Mar. Ins. Co. v. Barbeaux, L. R., 6 P. C. 319; Bell v. Nixon, Holt 423; Martin v. Crokatt, 14 East 465; Tanner v. Bennett, R. & M. 182; Doyle v. Dallas, 1 M. & Rob. 48; Malburn v. Leckie, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 347; Furneaux v. Bradley, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 365; Gallagher v. Taylor, 5 Can. Sup. Ct. 368, reversing 1 Russ. & G. (Nova Sc.) 279; Millville Mut. M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Driscoll, 11 Can. Sup. Ct. 183; 23 New B. 160; Wood v. Symest, 5 Allen (N. B.) 309; Cort v. Delaware Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 375; Peck v. Nashville, 6 La. An. 148; Hallett v. Peyton, 1 Cai. Cas. (N. Y.) 28.

Sale Under Decree of Court.—The law is the same where the sale is made by a decree of court in consequence of damage by a peril insured against. Cossmann v. West, 13 App. Cas. 160.

1. Cargo.—Dyson v. Rawcroft, 3 B. & P. 474; Bordreth v. Hentigg, Holt N. P. 149; Duff v. Mackenzie, 3 C. B., N. S. 16; Young v. Pacific Ins. Co., 34 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 321; McCall v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 34 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 313.

Total physical loss of goods is not necessary to entitle owners of merchandise insured against perils of the sea, "free of particular average only," to recover as for a total loss, if the right to abandon is exercised during the continuance of the peril, and there is a total loss of value to the owners. Wallerstein v. Columbian Ins. Co., 44 N. Y. 204.

As in the case of policies upon the ship the early cases held a loss of the voyage by the vessel to constitute a total loss of the cargo. Manning v. Newnham, 3 Doug. 130; Wilson v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 2 Camp. 623, note.

2. Saunders v. Baring, 34 L. T., N. S. 419; Roux v. Salvador, 3 Bing. N. C. 279; Snowden v. Guion, 101 N. Y. 458; Morau v. United States Ins. Co., 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 219; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Catlett, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 383; Robinson v. Com. Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 220; Gould v. Louisiana etc. Ins. Co., 20 La. An. 259; Tudor v. New England Ins. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 554; Waler v. Thompson, 9 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 115; Bryant v. Com. Ins. Co., 13 Pick. (Mass.) 543.

When the salvage falls short of the freight there is a total loss. Bayfield v. Brown, 2 Stra. 1065.

3. Miller v. Fletcher, 1 Doug. 231; Farnworth v. Hyde, 18 C. B., N. S. 835. See Browning v. Provincial Ins. Co. of Canada, L. R., 5 P. C. 263; Edgar Thompson Steel Co. v. Boylston Mut. Ins. Co., 12 Mo. App. 244; Abbott v. Broome, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 292.

4. Mellish v. Andrews, 15 East 13; Mullett v. Shedden, 13 East 304; Gracie v. New York Ins. Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 237; Brown v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 4 Binn. (Pa.) 445.

owners to abandon the vessel as a total loss; or to disable her from fulfilling the terms of her charter party.¹

So also if she is detained by capture or embargo so as to prevent earning the freight insured.²

Where the ship is so damaged that she is sold justifiably, there is an actual total loss of the freight.³

Where, after damage to the vessel or cargo, the assured might, nevertheless, go on and earn the freight, he cannot recover for a total loss if he fails to do so.⁴

1. Freight.—De Cuadra v. Swann, 15 C. B., N. S. 772; Potter v. Rankin, L. R., 6 H. L. 83; L. R., 3 C. P. 562; Jackson v. Union Mar. Ins. Co., L. R., 10 C. P. 125; Kidstone v. Empire Mar. Ins. Co., L. R., 2 C. P. 357; Driscoll v. Millville Mut. M. & F. Ins. Co., 23 New Br. 160; Jordon v. Great Western Ins. Co., 24 New Br. 421; Hugg v. Augusta Ins. & Bank Co., 7 How. (U. S.) 595; Redyard v. Phillips, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 443; Hodgson v. Mississippi Ins. Co., 2 La. (O. S.) 341; Blanks v. Hibernia Ins. Co., 36 La. An. 599; Lord v. Neptune Ins. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 109; Coolidge v. Gloucester Mar. Ins. Co., 15 Mass. 341; Adams v. Warren Ins. Co., 22 Pick. (Mass.) 163; Robinson v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 1 Met. (Mass.) 143; Thwing v. Washington Ins. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 443; Parsons v. Manufacturing Ins. Co., 82 Mass. 463; Marmond v. Melledge, 123 Mass. 173; Willard v. Millers and Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 24 Mo. 561; Lockwood v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 47 Mo. 50; Stilwell v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Mo. App. 22; Stevens v. Col. Ins. Co., 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 43; Center v. American Ins. Co., 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 46; 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 564; Robertson v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 68 N. Y. 192; Hugg v. Augusta Ins. Co., Taney 159; Meech v. Philadelphia Ins. Co., 3 Whart. (Pa.) 473; De Longue-mere v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 127; American Ins. Co. v. Carter, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 45.

If the failure to earn freight or perform a charter party is due to the exercise of a power granted to the charterer to terminate the contract, the loss is not the result of a peril insured against, and the underwriter is not liable. Inman Steamship Co. v. Bischoff, L. R., 7 App. Cas. 670; 6 Q. B. Div. 648.

If the assured receives the freight in fact, although the vessel has been so damaged that he can abandon for a total loss, he cannot recover for a total loss of the freight. Benson v. Chapman, 8 C. B. 950; 2 H. L. Cas. 606.

2. Puller v. Staniforth, 11 East 232; Puller v. Glover, 12 East 124; Charleston Ins. & Tr. Co. v. Corner, 2 Gill (Md.) 410; Davy v. Hallett, 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 16.

If she earns another freight the underwriters are entitled to the benefit of it. Puller v. Staniforth, 11 East 232; Charleston Ins. & Tr. Co. v. Corner, 2 Gill (Md.) 410.

If there is merely a detention which does not prevent an actual earning of a freight there is no total loss. Everth v. Smith, 2 M. & S. 278; Mayo v. Maine F. & M. Ins. Co., 4 Mass. 374.

3. Idle v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 8 Taunt. 755; Mount v. Harrison, 4 Bing. 388; Currie v. Bombays Native Ins. Co., L. R., 3 P. C. 72.

Insurance Co. v. Mordecai, 22 How. (U. S.) 111; Callender v. Ins. Co. of North America, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 525; Dunning v. Merchants' Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 57 Me. 108.

Where, however, goods were so damaged that the master justifiably sold them, and so lost freight pro tanto, it was held that the underwriter was not liable. Mordy v. Jones, 4 B. & C. 394.

4. Hart v. Delaware Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 346; Hughes v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co. (N. Y.), 1 Cent. Rep. 319; Marks v. Louisiana State M. & F. Ins. Co., 3 Rob. (La.) 454; Clark v. Massachusetts F. & M. Ins. Co., 2 Pick. (Mass.) 104; McGaw v. Ocean Ins. Co., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 405; Lord v. Neptune Ins. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 109; Field v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 11 Mo. 50; Herbert v. Hallett, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 93; Saltus v. Ocean Ins. Co., 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 138; Ogden v. General Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Duer (N. Y.) 204.

In Allen v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co., 44 N. Y. 437, it was held that, under a contract for the insurance of freight, the owner or master of the vessel cannot voluntarily surrender or abandon the cargo to the shipper or underwriter, free of freight, upon the occurrence of any injury short of a technical total loss, or inability to deliver the goods in specie at the port of destination. If the owner demands the goods at the port of detention, the master should make payment of full freight a condition to delivery. Having surrendered them without payment, he cannot hold the insurer liable.

2. Constructive Total Loss.¹—A constructive total loss of the ship is said, by JUDGE STORY,² to exist “where there is a forcible dispossession or ouster of the owner of the ship, as in cases of capture;³ where there is a moral restraint or detention which deprives the owner of the free use of the ship, as in cases of embargoes, blockades and arrests by sovereign authority;⁴ where there is a present total loss of the physical possession and use of the ship, as in case of submersion;⁵ where there is a total loss of the ship for the voyage, as in case of shipwreck, so that the ship cannot be repaired for the voyage in the port where the disaster happens;⁶ and lastly, where the injury is so extensive that by

1. Constructive Total Loss.—A constructive or technical total loss “is such a loss as entitles the assured to claim the whole amount of the insurance, on giving due notice of abandonment.” 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 1024.

It is a loss such that in the eye of the law the assured is entitled, on transferring such part or remnant of the subject insured as is surviving to the underwriter, to claim the whole amount of his subscription. 2 Phillips Ins. (5th ed.), § 1487; 2 Parsons Mar. Ins. 107.

It is no less a total loss than is an absolute total loss, and the underwriter of a policy against “total loss only” is liable for a constructive total loss. Adams v. McKenzie, 32 L. J., C. P. 92; Forwood v. Provincial Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 9 Q. B. Div. 732; 7 Q. B. Div. 57; O’Leary v. Stymest, 6 Allen (New Br.) 259; Heebner v. Eagle Ins. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 131; Greene v. Pacific Ins. Co., 9 Allen (Mass.) 217; Trou v. Union Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 119 Mass. 592.

2. Ship.—Peele v. Merchants’ Ins. Co., 3 Mason (U. S.) 27 at 65. The learned judge is speaking of the right to abandon, but the words must apply to a constructive loss, since without the existence of that right there can be no such loss.

3. McIver v. Henderson, 4 M. & S.

576; Lozano v. Janson, 28 L. J., Q. B. 337; Goss v. Withers, 2 Burr. 683; Dean v. Hornby, 23 L. J., Q. B. 129; 3 E. & B. 180; Marine Ins. Co. v. Tucker, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 357; Dutilh v. Gatliff, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 446; Russel v. Union Ins. Co., 4 Dall. (U. S.) 421; Marshall v. Delaware Ins. Co., 4 Cranch (U. S.) 202; Thompson v. Mississippi M. & F. Ins. Co., 2 La. (O. S.) 228; Ruan v. Gardner, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 145; Odlen v. Penn Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 312; Lee v. Boardman, 3 Mass. 238; Dorr v. New England Ins. Co., 11 Mass. 1; Lovering v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 2 Pick. (Mass.) 348; Stover v. Grey, 2 Mass. 565; Livingston v. Columbian Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 49; Jumel v. Marine Ins. Co., 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 412; Post v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 79, 80; Watson v. Marine Ins. Co., 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 57; Lawrence v. Ocean Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 241; Gouverneur v. United Ins. Co., 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 592; Duval v. Commercial Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 278; cf. Barney v. Maryland Ins. Co., 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 139; Thomson v. Read, 12 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 440.

4. Rotch v. Edie, 6 T. R. 413; Fowler v. English & Scottish Mar. Ins. Co., 18 C. B., N. S. 919.

5. See Greene v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 9 Allen (Mass.) 217.

A similar case is presented in Snow v. Union Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 119 Mass. 592. A vessel caught in the ice in the Arctic ocean was abandoned by the master and crew to save their lives. Later she was recovered, yet the loss was held constructively total.

6. Columbian Ins. Co. v. Catlett, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 383; Catlett v. Pacific Ins. Co., 1 Paine (U. S.) 594; Snow v. Union Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 119 Mass. 592; Stagg v. United Ins. Co., 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 34.

reason of it the ship is useless, and yet the necessary repairs would exceed her present value."¹

In the United States, there is a constructive total loss where the cost of repairs exceeds one half the value of the vessel.²

1. A loss is to be considered total where a prudent owner if uninsured would not have repaired. Irving v. Manning, 1 H. L. Cas. 287; 6 C. B. 391; Thompson v. Colvin, Lloyd & Wels, 140; Young v. Turing, 2 M. & Gr. 593; Moss v. Smith, 9 C. B. 94; Lindsay v. Leathley, 11 L. T., N. S. 194; Barker v. Janson, L. R., 3 C. P. 303; Forwood v. North Wales Mut. Ins. Co., 9 Q. B. Div. 732; 5 Q. B. Div. 57; Adams v. Murray, Fac. Dec. (1801-1807) 360; Kenneth v. Moore, 10 Sc. Sess. Cas. (4th ed.) 547; Meagher v. Aetna Ins. Co., 20 U. C. Q. B. 607; King v. Western Ass. Co., 7 U. C. C. P. 300; Troop v. Jones, 5 Russ. & G. (Nova Sc.) 230.

But a constructive total loss is not to be presumed to be provided for by language in a policy fairly susceptible of a contrary interpretation. Merchants S. S. Co. v. Commercial Mut. Ins. Co., 51 N. Y. Super. Ct. 444.

The assured is always at liberty to repair, and if he does so, the cost of the repairs is the measure of the loss. Pitman v. Universal Mar. Ins. Co., 9 Q. B. Div. 192.

Even though this exceeds the amount for which the underwriter would be liable as for a total loss. Aitcheson v. Lohre, L. R., 4 App. Cas. 755.

The mere fact that the vessel was so damaged that the master, acting in good faith, sold her, is not enough to constitute a total loss. It must be proved justifiable through pressure of urgent necessity. Gardiner v. Salvador, 1 M. & Rob. 116; Domett v. Young, Car. & M. 465; Martin v. Crockett, 14 East 465; Knight v. Faith, 15 Q. B. 649; Hall v. Jupe, 43 L. T., N. S. 411; 49 L. J., C. P. 721; Cobequid Mar. Ins. Co. v. Barteaux, L. R., 6 P. C. 319; Millville Mut. M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Driscall, 11 Can. Sup. Ct. 183; Wood v. Stymest, 5 Allen (N. Br.) 309; Leslie v. Taylor, 1 Russ. & C. (Nova Sc.) 352; Greely v. Tremont Ins. Co., 9 Cush. (Mass.) 415.

A vessel laden with coal, valued at $9,000, struck on the beach on the west side of Block Island, about ten o'clock at night, and in a thick fog. She lay on a sandy beach with rocks and stones under and around her, nearly on an even keel and head on the beach, but so that she was broadside to the sea. Next morning the wind increased somewhat in violence, and as the tide arose the vessel chafed heavily; and about 10 A.M. bilged and filled with water. The master applied to a wrecking company, who offered to get the vessel off for $5,000. The following day the owner's agent arrived. The weather had moderated somewhat. A survey was called, and four days later the vessel was sold at auction for $610. The vessel was in an exposed condition, and local witnesses testified that a large proportion of coal vessels which were bilged on that part of the island became a total loss. It was held that the master was justified in making the sale, and the insurers liable for a total loss, although the vessel was afterwards saved. Hall v. Ocean Ins. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 371.

2. This is not the rule in England. There the cost of repairs must equal the value of the repaired vessel. 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 1055.

It is, however, established law in the United States. Bradlie v. Maryland Ins. Co., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 378; Peele v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 3 Mason (U. S.) 27; Bullard v. Roger Williams Ins. Co., 1 Curt. (U. S.) 148; Phillips v. St. Louis Ins. Co., 11 La. An. 459; Lincaln v. Hope Ins. Co., 8 Gray (Mass.) 22; Ellicott v. Alliance Ins. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 318; Taber v. China Mut. Ins. Co., 131 Mass. 239; Lockwood v. Sangamo Ins. Co., 46 Mo. 71; Abbott v. Broome, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 292; Smith v. Bell, 2 Cai. Cas. (N. Y.) 153; Patrick v. Commercial Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 9; Center v. American Ins. Co., 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 46; 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 564; Dickey v. American Ins. Co., 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 658; Peters v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 25; Ritchie v. United States Ins. Co., 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 501; American Ins. Co. v. Francia, 9 Pa. St. 390; Hedley v. Nashville Ins. Co., 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 130; cf. Globe Ins. Co. v. Sherlock, 25 Ohio St. 50.

The decisions of different States whether or not the value of the vessel stated in the policy is conclusive as to her value are not in accord. In the following the stated value is conclusive:

A constructive total loss of the cargo takes place where it is changed into something of a different species;¹ or cannot be carried to its destination at all or without undergoing a change of species by the way.²

Massachusetts.—Winn v. Columbian Ins. Co., 12 Pick. (Mass.) 279; Orrok v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 456; Hall v. Ocean Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 472.

New York.—American Ins. Co. v. Ogden, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 287.

In the following it is not:

Alabama.—Fulton Ins. Co. v. Goodman, 32 Ala. 108.

Ohio.—Peabody Ins. Co. v. Memphis & Arkansas River Packet Co., 1 Cin. L. Bul. 42, 379.

And so in the courts of the United States. Bradlie v. Maryland Ins. Co., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 378; U. S., too, in Scotland. Stewart v. Greenock Mut. Ins. Co., 6 C. C. S. 359.

In arriving at the cost of repairs, the expense of raising and towing a vessel to port is part of the cost; and so, if she be stranded, the expense of getting her off. Wallace v. Thames & Mersey Ins. Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 66; Sewall v. United States Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 90; Ellicott v. Alliance Ins. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 318; Patrick v. Commercial Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 9.

And the law is the same as to the expense of taking a vessel to a port for repairs. Lincoln v. Hope Ins. Co., 8 Gray (Mass.) 22.

The deduction of one-third new for old is not to be made in estimating the cost of the repairs. Bradlie v. Maryland Ins. Co., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 378; Peele v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 3 Mason (U. S.) 27; Phillips v. St. Louis Ins. Co., 11 La. An. 459; Dupuy v. United Ins. Co., 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 182; Peabody Ins. Co. v. Memphis & Arkansas River Packet Co., 1 Cin. L. Bul. 379, 42.

The following cases hold that such a deduction should be made. Deblois v. Ocean Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 303 at 314; Sewall v. United States Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 90; Heebner v. Eagle Ins. Co. of Cincinnati, 10 Gray (Mass.) 131 at 143; American Ins. Co. v. Ogden, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 287; Smith v. Bell, 2 Cai. Cas. (N. Y.) 153; Fiedler v. New York Ins. Co., 6 Duer (N. Y.) 282; Globe Ins. Co. v. Sherlock, 25 Ohio St. 50.

The value to be taken in estimating the constructive total loss is the value at the place where the repairs are made. Bradlie v. Maryland Ins. Co., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 378; American Ins. Co. v. Francia, 9 Pa. St. 390.

And the value after the repairs are made. Peele v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 3 Mason (U. S.) 27.

If a general average due from freight and cargo reduces the expense of repairs below one-half the vessel's value, there can be no abandonment for a constructive total loss. Pezant v. National Ins. Co., 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 453; Greely v. Tremont Ins. Co., 9 Cush. (Mass.) 415.

The law is the same in the case of constructive total loss of cargo. Lapsley v. Pleasant's Ins. Co., 4 Binn. (Pa.) 502.

1. Cargo.—Lowndes' Mar. Ins. (2nd ed.) 134.

In an early case, Cocking v. Fraser, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 247; 4 Doug. 295, it was held that if it remained in specie, though rendered of no value by sea damage, there was no constructive total loss; but this has been disapproved by Lord ALVANLEY, Dyson v. Rawcrofts, 3 B. & P. 474; Lord KENYON, Burnett v. Kensington, 7 T. R. 210, and Lord ELLENBOROUGH in Calogan v. London Ass. Co., 5 M. & S. 447. Cf. also Chadsey v. Guion, 14 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 118, per SEDGEWICK, J.

2. Hudson v. Harrison, 3 Bro. & B. 97; Roux v. Salvador, 1 Bing. N. C. 526; 3 Bing. N. C. 266; Parry v. Aberdeen, 9 B. & C. 411; Fairbanks v. Union Mar. Ins. Co., Thomson (Nova Sc.) 67.

The mere fact that it would be unprofitable owing to their damaged state to carry the goods on is not enough to render the loss constructively total. Thompson v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 16 East 214; Richardson v. Stodart, Fac. Dec. (1781-1787) 299.

The fact that the master has sold the cargo owing to damage to it or to the ship is not enough to render the loss total. "As a general rule, when the whole or any part of a cargo is practically capable of being sent in a marketable state to its port of destination, the master cannot sell, nor can the assured recover as for a total loss. . . . If

Or except at an extraordinary expense exceeding its value.¹

In the United States, there is a constructive total loss of the cargo where the value of the part saved is less than half the full value.²

A mere loss of the voyage if the goods are not perishable does not entitle the assured to recover on abandonment as for a total loss.³

Damage to part of the cargo where some still exists in specie

the damage cannot be repaired without laying out more money than the thing is worth, the reparation is impracticable, and therefore, as between the underwriters and the assured, impossible." Per JERVIS, C. J., in Rosetto v. Gurney, 11 C. B. 176 at 186.

If it lies within the master's power to send the cargo on he must do it. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co. v. Herth, 16 Ch. Div. 474; Farnworth v. Hyde, L. R., 2 C. P. 204; Navone v. Haddon, 9 C. B. 30; Rugely v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 7 La. An. 279; Bryant v. Com. Ins. Co., 13 Pick. (Mass.) 543; 6 Pick. (Mass.) 131; Ludlow v. Columbian Ins. Co., 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 335; Teasdale v. Charleston Ins. Co., 2 Brev. (S. Car.) 190.

But if it cannot be sent on because no vessel can be obtained, and the master sells justifiably, the loss is constructively total. Manning v. Newnham, 3 Doug. 130.

When the sale by the master is justifiable the assured may recover for a constructive total loss. Semonds v. Union Ins. Co., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 382; Hurtin v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 400; Vanderheuel v. United Ins. Co., 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 406; Moses v. Columbian Ins. Co., 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 219; Snowden v. Guion, 101 N. Y. 458.

The sale must be absolutely necessary, and not merely expedient. In Hall v. Franklin Ins. Co., 9 Pick. (Mass.) 466, PUTMAN, J., said: "There must be something more than expediency in the case; the sale should be indispensably requisite. The reason for it should be cogent. We mean a necessity which leaves no alternative; which prescribes the law for itself, and puts the party in a positive state of compulsion to the act. The master acts for the owners of insurers, because they cannot have an opportunity to act for themselves. If the property could be kept safely until they could be consulted, and have an opportunity, in a reasonable time, to exercise their own judgment in regard to sale the necessity to act for them would cease." See also Winn v. Columbian Ins. Co., 12 Pick. (Mass.) 279; Bryant v. Com. Ins. Co., 13 Pick. (Mass.) 543; Stephenson v. Pacific Ins. Co., 7 Allen (Mass.) 232; Peirce v. Ocean Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 83; Orrok v. Com. Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 456; Patapasco Ins. Co. v. Southgate, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 604; The Sarah Ann, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 206; The Amelie, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 18.

1. Reimer v. Ringrose, 6 Ex. 263; Watson v. Mercantile Mar. Ins. Co., 3 Nova Sc. Dec. 396.

2. Gardner v. Smith, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 141; Judah v. Randal, 2 Cai. Cas. (N. Y.) 324; Boardman v. Boston Marine Ins. Co. (Mass.), 6 N. Eng. Rep.; s. c., 16 N. E. Rep. 26; Budd v. Union Ins. Co., 4 McCord (S. Car.) 1.

In estimating the amount of damage to determine whether the cargo is damaged more than half its value, the damage to memorandum articles must be excluded. Marcardier v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 8 Cranch (U. S.) 39.

3. Anderson v. Wallis, 2 M. & S. 240; Hunt v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 5 M. & S. 47.

Thus, the constructive total loss of a whaling ship at a port where whaling outfits are bought and sold, and where such outfits are in safety, is not a constructive total loss of the outfits, although no vessel is obtainable within a reasonable time to carry forward the outfits on the voyage insured. Macy v. China Mut. Ins. Co., 135 Mass. 328.

When they are perishable, the loss of the voyage may render the loss total. Columbian Ins. Co. v. Catlett, 12 Wheat (U. S.) 383.

In the United States a loss of the voyage by turning back on learning of the blockade of the port of destination has been held sufficient to constitute a total loss. Simonds v. Union Ins. Co., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 382; Schmidt v. United Ins. Co., 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 249.

does not entitle the assured to claim as for a total loss of that part.¹

So also there is a constructive total loss of cargo where it is captured, seized or detained.²

A constructive total loss of freight takes place where there is a constructive total loss of the vessel.³ Or where the cargo is so damaged that it cannot be carried to its destination at an expense less than will render the loss on cargo constructively total, or unless there is a constructive total loss of the cargo.⁴

Where the vessel loses her chartered freight, but, nevertheless, earns a freight on the same voyage the loss is not total.⁵

In the United States, the underwriter is bound to accept an abandonment and pay the full amount of his subscription when

1. Roux v. Salvador, 1 Bing. N. C. 326; 3 Bing. N. C. 266; McAndrews v. Naughan, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 252; Meyer v. Ralli, 1 C. P. Div. 358; Browning v. Provincial Ins. Co. of Canada, L. R., 5 P. C. 263; Hedberg v. Pearson, 7 Taunt. 153; Hills v. London Ass. Co., 5 M. & W. 569; Ralli v. Janson, 6 E. & B. 422; Entwistle v. Ellis, 2 H. & N. 549; Seton v. Delaware Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 175.

This is not so if the whole of a distinct species of the cargo is destroyed. Duff v. Mackenzie, 3 C. B., N. S. 16; Wilkinson v. Hyde, 3 C. B., N. S. 30.

In Spence v. Union Marine Ins. Co., L. R., 3 C. P. 427, a cargo of cotton belonging to different owners was so mixed by peril of the sea as to be undistinguishable. It was held that no single owner could recover as for a total loss of his part, but could get only the difference between his share of what was saved and the value of what he shipped.

2. Barker v. Blakes, 9 East 283; Marshall v. Parker, 2 Camp. 69; Cologan v. London Ass. Co., 5 M. & S. 447; Smith v. Robinson, Hayes 125; Russel v. Union Ins. Co., 4 Dall. (U. S.) 421; Mar. Ins. Co. v. Tucker, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 357; Dorr v. New England Mar. Ins. Co., 4 Mass. 221; Livingston v. Columbia Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 49; Clarkson v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 1; Waddell v. Columbian Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 61; Dutilh v. Gatliff, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 446; Brown v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 4 Binn. (Pa.) 445.

The law is the same though the seizure be by the crew. Dixon v. Reid, 5 B. & Ald. 597. Or by pirates. Gilfert v. Hallet, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 296.

3. Freight.—Benson v. Chapman, 6 M. & G. 810; Thompson v. Rawcroft, 4 East 34; Dunning v. Merchants' Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 57 Me. 108; Coolidge v. Gloucester, Mar. Ins. Co., 15 Mass. 341; Thwing v. Washington Ins. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 443; Callender v. Ins. Co. of North America, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 525.

The test of the constructive loss is the state of the vessel. Green v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 6 Taunt. 66; Moss v. Smith, 9 C. B. 94.

4. Michael v. Gillespie, 2 C. B., N. S. 627; Currie v. Bombay Native Ins. Co., L. R., 3 P. C. 72.

A clause in a marine policy on freight—"The insured shall not have a right to claim for a total loss on account of the estimated amount of repairs exceeding the valuation of the vessel, nor to abandon, unless the amount which the insurer would be liable to pay, after usual deductions, shall exceed half the value of said vessel; and the highest value under which the vessel is insured in any policy shall be a basis for ascertaining the technical total loss of freight,"—does not apply where the claim is based upon a loss of cargo, and other parts of the policy regulate the claim for freight upon a loss of specific articles of cargo. Boardman v. Boston Marine Ins. Co. (Mass.), 6 N. Eng. 88; 16 N. East. 26.

In a case of marine insurance, where the vessel sank, and the cargo is saved and brought to port by the insurer, and sold without regard to the carrier's lien for freight, the insurer is liable to the carrier. Hughes v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., (N. Y.) 1 Cent. Rep. 319.

5. Brocklebank v. Sugrue, 1 B. & Ad. 81.

the state of affairs actually existing at the time of the notice of abandonment is such as constitutes a total loss.¹

In England, the extent of the underwriter's liability depends upon the actual state of affairs at the time the action is brought. Events subsequent to the notice of abandonment may reduce the loss from one constructively total to a partial loss.²

3. Abandonment.—An abandonment is a cession to the underwriter of all advantages direct and indirect of ownership in the thing insured.³

1. Determined by Facts at Time of Notice of Abandonment.—The American law on this subject is thus laid down by MARSHALL, C. J., in Marshall v. Delaware Ins. Co., 4 Cranch (U. S.) 202 at 206: "The right to abandon is founded on an actual or legal total loss. It appears to the court to consist with the nature of the contract, which is truly stated to be a contract of indemnity, that the real state of loss at the time the abandonment is made is the proper and safe criterion of the rights of the parties."

The law is definitely settled by many cases that the state of the facts and not of the information determines the obligation of the underwriter to accept the abandonment. The total loss must continue up to the time of the abandonment. Rhineland v. Ins. Co. of Pennsylvania, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 29; Marshall v. Delaware Ins. Co., 4 Cranch (U. S.) 202; Olivera v. Union Ins. Co., 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 183; Humphreys v. Union Ins. Co., 3 Mason (U. S.) 429; Fulton Ins. Co. v. Goodman, 32 Ala. 108; Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. Bakewell, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 541; Lee v. Boardman, 3 Mass. 238; Delano v. Bedford Mar. Ins. Co., 10 Mass. 348; Hallet v. Peyton, 1 Cal. Cas. (N. Y.) 28 (overruling Slocum v. United Ins. Co., 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 152; and Mumford v. Church, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 147; Jurnel v. Marine Ins. Co., 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 412; Child v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 76; Dutilh v. Gatliff, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 446.

Although the information in the possession of the assured at the time of the notice of abandonment discloses a constructive total loss, the underwriter is not bound to accept the abandonment if, in point of fact, events subsequent to the date of his information, but prior to the notice, have reduced the loss to a partial loss. Thus, if a vessel abandoned as seized, captured or detained, has, in point of fact, been restored or recaptured. Dorr v. Union

Ins. Co., 8 Mass. 502; Parage v. Dale, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 156; Muir v. United Ins. Co., 1 Cal. (N. Y.) 49; Adams v. Delaware Ins. Co., 3 Binn. (Pa.) 287; Brown v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 4 Binn. (Pa.) 445; Messonier v. Union Ins. Co., 1 N. & McC. (S. Car.) 155.

Or if she has been repaired at such a cost as not to constitute a constructive total loss. De Pau v. Ocean Ins. Co., 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 63; Dickey v. American Ins. Co., 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 658.

2. The restitution of the property before the action is brought reduces the loss to a partial loss. Bainbridge v. Neilson, 10 East 329; Patterson v. Ritchie, 4 M. & S. 393; Brotherson v. Barber, 5 M. & S. 418; Faulkner v. Ritchie, 2 M. & S. 290; Naylor v. Taylor, 9 B. & C. 718; 2 Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) 1028.

Where the underwriter has accepted the abandonment subsequent events reducing the loss are immaterial. Smith v. Robertson, 2 Daw. 474.

3. Abandonment.—Lowndes Mar. Ins. (2nd ed.) 153.

The right of abandonment as for a total loss depends on the probabilities at the time the right is exercised, and is not affected by the fact that the vessel was got off subsequently, or that the damage was less than was supposed. Orient Ins. Co. v. Adams, 123 U. S. 67.

In an action on a marine policy, the vessel having been abandoned during the voyage, evidence is admissible to show the prices demanded by mechanics in the port of distress, in response to advertisements for bids for the repairs necessary to enable the vessel to continue, the burden of proof being on plaintiff to show that the expense of such repairs justified the abandonment. Osborne v. New York Mut. Ins. Co., 6 N. Y. Sup. 103. See also Snow v. Union Mut. Ins. Co., 119 Mass. 592.

Where an insured vessel is stranded and abandoned there are three courses open to the underwriters: (1) They may accept the abandonment and pay for a total loss; (2) they may allow the vessel to lie on the beach and contest the owner's right to abandon; or (3) they may elect to raise and repair her, and thus avoid paying a total loss. Northwestern Transp. Co. v. Continental Ins. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 171. See also Prince v. Ocean Ins. Co., 40 Me. 481; Bosley v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 450; Suydam v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 138; Portsmouth Ins. Co. v. Brazee, 16 Ohio 81; Smith v. Universal Ins. Co., 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 176; Simonds v. Union Ins. Co., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 382; King v. Delaware Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 300; Clarke v. The Steamer Fashion, 2 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 339; Craig v. United Ins. Co., 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 226; Cord v. United States Ins. Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 277; Saltus v. Ocean Ins. Co., 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 107; Treadwell v. Union Ins. Co., 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 270; Peele v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 3 Mass. 27; Wood v. Lincoln etc. Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 479; Hall v. Ocean Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 472; Gordon v. Mass. Ins. Co., 2 Pick. (Mass.) 249; Cooledge v. Gloucester Ins. Co., 15 Mass. 341; Hall v. Franklin Ins. Co., 9 Pick. (Mass.) 466; Winn v. Columbian Ins. Co., 12 Mass. 279; King v. Hartford Ins. Co., 1 Conn. 422; Marks v. Nashville Co., 6 La. An. 127; Hanan v. Louisiana etc. Ins. Co., 15 La. An. 201; Fuller v. Kennebec Mutual Ins. Co., 31 Me. 325; Peters v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 3 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 25; Salisbury v. Mut. Ins. Co., 23 Mo. 553; Ralston v. Union Ins. Co., 4 Binn. (Pa.) 386;

Notice of abandonment is absolutely essential to enable the assured to recover for a constructive total loss.¹

The notice may be given by anyone interested in the subject insured.²

1. Notice.—Fleming v. Smith, 1 H. L. Cas. 513; Knight v. Faith, 15 Q. B. 649; Kaltenbach v. Mackenzie, 3 C. P. Div. 467; Townsend v. Phillips, 2 Root (Conn.) 400; Thomas v. Rockland Ins. Co., 45 Me. 116; Barney v. Maryland Ins. Co., 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 139; Mellon v. Louisiana State Ins. Co., 17 Mart. (La.) 563; Lovering v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 12 Pick. (Mass.) 348; Taber v. China Mut. Ins. Co., 131 Mass. 239; Hubble v. Great Western Ins. Co., 74 N. Y. 246; Sherlock v. Glové Ins. Co., 1 Cin. L. Bul. (Ohio) 26; American Ins. Co. v. Francia, 9 Pa. St. 390; Cossman v. West, 6 Russ. & G. (Nova Sc.) 461.

An abandonment is not necessary, however, where it could not possibly be of benefit to the underwriter. "Notice is only necessary to be given when upon receiving it the underwriters could do something in the exercise of their rights over the salvage." Per LORD CHELMSFORD, in Rankin v. Potter, L. R., 6 H. L. 83; Holbrook v. United States, 21 Ct. of Cl. (U. S.) 434; Babbitt v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 23 La. An. 314; Fosdick v. Norwich Ins. Co., 3 Day (Conn.) 108; Walker v. Protection Ins. Co., 29 Me. 317.

In Burt v. Brewers' etc. Ins. Co., 16 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 383, it was held that a notice of abandonment is of no effect in case of an actual total loss; that such notice is only necessary when something still exists which is capable of abandonment, and when the insured seeks to convert a partial into a constructive total loss.

The fact that at the time information is received the property has already been sold does not do away with the necessity of abandoning. Hodgson v. Blackiston, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 400.

It is not necessary for the assured, on the vessel's reaching its destination in a foreign port, to give notice to the underwriters of its condition before the former can abandon for a total loss. Cohen v. Ins. Co., Dudley (S. Car.) 147; Hedley v. Nashville Ins. Co., 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 130.

No notice of abandonment need be given an underwriter upon a policy of reinsurance. Uzielli v. Boston Mar. Ins. Co., 15 Q. B. Div. 11.

2. By Whom Given.—Thus one of several jointly interested in a cargo may give a notice for all. Hunt v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 5 M. & S. 47.

So one owner of a vessel who has insured for whom it may concern. Reynolds v. Ocean Ins. Co., 22 Pick. (Mass.) 191.

So also an agent who makes insurance for his principal. Chesapeake Ins. Co. v. Stark, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 268; Cassedy v. Louisiana State Ins. Co., 6 Mart. (La.) N. S. 421.

An abandonment by the president of a corporation owning the vessel is sufficient. Northwestern Transportation

Notice to the broker who effected the policy is a sufficient notice of abandonment.¹

The notice must be given as soon as the assured has the information which enables him to elect whether to repair or abandon.²

Co. v. Continental Ins. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 171. But not by a mere depository of the policy. Jardine v. Leathley, 3 B. & S. 700. Nor a consignee of the goods. Hicks v. McGehee, 39 Ark. 264.

A notice by one part owner of abandonment of his interest does not necessarily affect the interest of other part owners. Kirby v. Thames & Mersey Ins. Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 221.

1. Crousillat v. Ball, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 375.

2. Time of Notice.—Abel v. Potts, 3 Esp. 242; Mitchell v. Edie, 1 T. R. 608; Read v. Bonham, 6 Moore 397; Hunt v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 5 M. & S. 47; King v. Walker, 3 H. & C. 209; Potter v. Campbell, L. R., 3 C. P. 304, note; Kaltenbach v. Mackenzie, L. R., 3 C. P. Div. 467; Maryland Ins. Co. v. Ruden, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 338; Bell v. Beveridge, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 272; Hurtin v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 400; Livingston v. Maryland Ins. Co., 7 Cranch (U. S.) 506; Gardner v. Columbian Ins. Co., 2 Cranch (U. S.) 550; Livermore v. Newburyport Ins. Co., 1 Mass. 264; Smith v. Newburyport Ins. Co., 4 Mass. 668; Dorr v. Union Ins. Co., 8 Mass. 494; Dorr v. New England Ins. Co., 11 Mass. 1; Tucker v. United M. & F. Ins. Co., 12 Mass. 288; Livingston v. Newburyport Ins. Co., 1 Mass. 264; Howland v. India Ins. Co., 131 Mass. 239, 253; Peele v. Suffolk Ins. Co., 7 Pick. (Mass.) 254; Reynolds v. Ocean Ins. Co., 22 Pick. (Mass.) 191; Pierce v. Ocean Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 83; Krumbhoar v. Marine Ins. Co., 1 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 281; Clarkson v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 1.

If delay has not impaired the underwriter's rights, it is immaterial. Young v. Union Ins. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 279. But see Taber v. China Mut. Ins. Co., 131 Mass. 239.

The assured cannot take the chance of first endeavoring to save and make the best of the property, and then abandon when this is found not to his advantage. Anderson v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 7 East 38; Martin v. Crockatt, 14 East 465; Fleming v. Smith, 1 H. L. Cas. 513; cf. Kelly v. Walton, 2 Camp. 155.

So also if the assured before abandonment either recovers the subject insured or receives an indemnity for its loss, he cannot thereafter elect to abandon. Thus a policy in its terms rendered the insurers liable only for a total loss. The vessel having been forcibly seized by the officers of the government was lost while in the government service. The assured, without any previous abandonment, made and obtained payment of a claim upon the United States government to an amount nearly equal to the whole value of the vessel. It was held that this circumstance caused the capture to cease from operating as a total loss. Murray v. Harmony Ins. Co., 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 9.

Upon a time policy it is immaterial that notice is given after the expiration of the policy, if otherwise in season. Dean v. Hornby, 3 E. & B. 180.

The assured is entitled to reasonable time for examining into the state of the property in order to decide whether to abandon. Gernon v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 6 Taunt. 383; Kelly v. Walton, 2 Camp. 155; Currie v. Bombay Native Ins. Co., L. R., 3 P. C. 72; Duncan v. Koch, Wall. C. C. (U. S.) 33. Reynolds v. Ocean Ins. Co., 22 Pick. (Mass.) 191.

An abandonment on learning of condemnation is seasonable, although the assured did not abandon on learning of capture. Dorr v. Union Ins. Co., 8 Mass. 494; Earl v. Shaw, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 314; Bohlen v. Delaware Ins. Co., 4 Binn. (Pa.) 430.

The notice was held too late in the following cases. Allwood v. Henckell, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 399; Barker v. Blakes, 9 East 283; Hunt v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 5 M. & S. 47; Aldridge v. Bell, 1 Stark. 493; Granger v. Martin, 4 B. & S. 9; Harkley v. Provincial Ins. Co., 18 Up. Can. C. P. 335; Morton v. Patillo, 3 Nova Sc. Dec. 17; Livermore v. Newburyport Ins. Co., 1 Mass. 264; Oliver v. Newburyport Ins. Co., 3 Mass. 37; Smith v. Newburyport Mar. Ins. Co., 4 Mass. 668; Orrök v. Com. Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 456; Taber v. China Mut. Ins. Co., 131 Mass. 239; Chadsey v. Guion, 14 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 118; Fuller v. McCall, 1 Yeates (Pa.)

No special form of notice is essential.¹

The notice may be waived by acts of the assured inconsistent with an abandonment of ownership.²

464; Krumbhoar v. Marine Ins. Co., 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 281.

Whether within a reasonable time is a question of law. Smith v. Newburyport Mar. Ins. Co., 4 Mass. 668. Or of mixed law and fact. Reynolds v. Ocean Ins. Co., 22 Pick. (Mass.) 191.

In Bell v. Beveridge, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 272, the jury held an abandonment within a reasonable time though not made until five months after notice of the loss, the assured having been absent from business owing to an epidemic of yellow fever, and having gone upon journey immediately after. For a similar case see also McCalmont v. Murgatroyd, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 27.

1. Form of Notice.—The use of the word "abandon" is not necessary. Currie v. Bombay Native Ins. Co., L. R., 3 P. C. 72; cf. Parmeter v. Todhunter, 1 Camp. 542.

Simply sending to the underwriter a letter from the master stating the loss and directing that the underwriter be notified was held enough in King v. Walker, 3 H. & C. 209.

"... Though no particular form of abandonment is necessary, yet in substance it must be positive and absolute, not fettered by contingencies, conditions or limitations, and must, in express terms or by necessary implication, import an actual present relinquishment of the interest or subject matter to which the abandonment applies, and must truly state the reasons or grounds upon which the abandonment is made and a total loss claimed." Per SHAW, C. J., in Peirce v. Ocean Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 83 at 93; Dicken v. New York Ins. Co., 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 222.

A claim for an absolute total loss has been held equivalent to an abandonment. Sherlock v. Globe Ins. Co., 25 Ohio St. 50.

On the general subject see also Burnham v. Boston Mar. Ins. Co., 139 Mass. 399; Barker v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 307; Baker v. Brown, 3 Nova Sc. Dec. 100.

In the following cases turning merely on their particular facts the form of the abandonment was held sufficient. Patapasco Ins. Co. v. Southgate, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 604; Bradlie v. Maryland Ins. Co., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 378; Dederer v. Dela- ware Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 300; Reynolds v. Ocean Ins. Co., 22 Pick. (Mass.) 191; Lincoln v. Hope Ins. Co., 8 Gray (Mass.) 22; Macy v. Whaling Ins. Co., 9 Met. (Mass.) 354; Heebner v. Eagle Ins. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 131; Perkins v. Augusta Ins. & B. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 312; Thwing v. Washington Ins. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 443; Sillaway v. Neptune Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 73; Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Glasgow, 9 Mo. 411; Thomas v. Rockland Ins. Co., 45 Me. 116; Savage v. Corn Exch. etc. Ins. Co., 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 1; Bell v. Beveridge, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 272; Teasdale v. Charleston Ins. Co., 2 Brev. (S. Car.) 190.

If the causes assigned are insufficient to justify the abandonment, the notice is ineffectual. Bosley v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 3 G. & J. (Md.) 450; Suydam v. Mar. Ins. Co., 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 182; Craig v. United Ins. Co., 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 226; King v. Delaware Ins. Co., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 300; Bullard v. Roger Williams Ins. Co., 1 Curt. (U. S.) 148; Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Powell, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 311. And the law is the same if they are not so stated that the underwriter can determine whether or not he is bound to accept the abandonment. McConochie v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 26 N. Y. 477.

Where a clause on a policy required notice of abandonment to be in writing, a telegram informing the company that the vessel was ashore at a given point, and that the insured abandoned it and claimed a total loss, is sufficient. Richelleu & O. Nav. Co. v. Thames & M. Ins. Co. (Mich.), 40 N. W. Rep. 758.

2. Waiver of Notice.—Martin v. Salem Ins. Co., 2 Mass. 420; Smith v. Touro, 14 Mass. 112; Oliver v. Newburyport Ins. Co., 3 Mass. 37; McLellan v. Marine Ins. Co., 12 Mass. 246; Abbott v. Sebor, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 39; Saidler v. Church, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 297, note; Ogden v. New York Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 177; Ogden v. New York Firemen's Ins. Co., 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 25; Abbott v. Broome, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 292; Columbian Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 139; King v. Middletown Ins. Co., 1 Conn. 184. But acts of the master will not in general waive the rights of the assured as after the abandonment he becomes agent of the underwriter.

After the abandonment has been once accepted all question of its seasonableness or sufficiency are waived.¹

The effect of the abandonment is to vest in the underwriter the property in what remains of the subject insured.²

Lovering v. Mercantile Mar. Ins. Co., 12 Pick. (Mass.) 340.

Whether an abandonment is waived or not is a question for the jury. Currier v. Phila. Ins. Co., 5 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 113; cf. King v. Hartford Ins. Co., 1 Conn. 333.

1. Acceptance.—Smith v. Robertson, 2 Dow. 474; Haustman v. Thornton, Holt N. P. 242; New Orleans Ins. Assoc. v. Piaggio, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 378; Gloucester Ins. Co. v. Younger, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 322; The Sarah Ann, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 206; Child v. Sun. Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 76; Bell v. Smith, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 109; Badger v. Ocean Ins. Co., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 347; Reynolds v. Ocean Ins. Co., 22 Pick. (Mass.) 1917 per SHAW, C. J.; Buffalo City Bank v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 30 N. Y. 251.

Where an insurer, upon notification of an abandonment of a vessel, gets it off, brings it to port, repairs it at great expense, and never offers to return it, believing the loss caused by a peril covered by the policy, the abandonment is thereby accepted, and the company cannot defend on the ground that it is not liable, but must pay the full amount of the policy, as it should have investigated the cause of the loss before accepting the abandonment. Richelieu & O. Nav. Co. v. Thames & M. Ins. Co. (Mich.), 40 N. W. 758.

An unreasonable delay of the underwriter in refusing the abandonment has been held to amount to an acceptance. Hudson v. Harrison, 3 Moore 288. But the general law in England seems now to be that if no answer is returned to the notice of abandonment, the underwriter must be taken to refuse to accept it. Lowndes Mar. Ins. (2nd ed.) 164; Provincial Ins. Co. v. Leduc, L. R., 6 P. C. 224 at 237. This will not be so, however, if he takes any action in regard to the property inconsistent with such a refusal. Provincial Ins. Co. v. Leduc, L. R., 6 P. C. 224; Shepherd v. Henderson, L. R., 7 App. Cas. 49; Baker v. Brown, 3 Nova Sc. Dec. 100; Western Ins. Co. v. Pearson, Ramsay's App. Cas. (Law Can.) 373; Northwestern Transportation Co. v. Continental Ins. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 171; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Copeland, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 461; Gloucester Ins. Co. v. Younger, 2 Curt. (U.

S.) 322; Norton v. Lexington F. & M. Ins. Co., 16 Ill. 235; Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. Bakewell, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 541; M'Lellan v. Maine F. & M. Ins. Co., 12 Mass. 246; Peele v. Suffolk Ins. Co., 7 Pick. (Mass.) 254; Northwestern Transportation Co. v. Thames & Mersey Ins. Co., 59 Mich. 214; Copelin v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 46 Mo. 211.

Merely superintending repairs is not such a possession. Griswold v. New York Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 321; Commonwealth Ins. Co. v. Chase, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 142; Reynolds v. Ocean Ins. Co., 22 Pick. (Mass.) 191; Wood v. Lincoln etc. Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 479. That a failure to return any answer is a refusal. See also Child v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 76.

In Northwestern Transportation Co. v. Continental Ins. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 171, a ship which had been voluntarily stranded and abandoned to the underwriters was raised by them and tendered back to the owner without being repaired, and without an offer to pay the expense of the repairs rendered necessary by the stranding. It was held that the owner was under no obligation to receive her, and the underwriters must be deemed, as matter of law, to have accepted the abandonment.

2. Effect.—The transfer dates by relation to the time of the loss. Commell v. Sewell, 3 H. & N. 617; 5 H. & N. 728; Scottish Mar. Ins. Co. v. Turner, 1 Macq. H. L. Cas. 334; Holbrook v. United States, 21 Ct. of Cl. (U. S.) 434. The Manitoba, 30 Fed. Rep. 129; Clamageran v. Banks, 6 Mart. (La.) N. S. 551. It transfers all the property insured, together with all benefit and advantage belonging or incident to it. Stewart v. Greenock Mar. Ins. Co., 2 H. L. Cas. 159; Haustman v. Thornton, Holt N. P. 242; Whitworth v. Shepherd, 12 Sc. Sess. Cas. (4th ed.) 204; Stalker v. Weir, 1 James (Nova Sc.) 248; The Bristol, 29 Fed. Rep. 867; Shaw v. United States, 8 Ct. of Cl. 488; Ches. Ins. Co. v. Stark, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 268; Murphy v. Dunham, 38 Fed. Rep. 503; Graham v. Ledda, 17 La. An. 45; Hardman v. Brett, 37 Fed. Rep. 803; Liverpool etc. Co. v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 9 S. Ct. (N. Y.) 469; The Planter, 2 Woods (U. S.) 490; Rogers v. Hosack, 398

18 Wend. (N. Y.) 319; Child v. Sun Mutual Ins. Co., 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 76; Clarkson v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 1; Waddell v. Columbian Ins. Co., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 61; Carr v. Security Ins. Co., 109 N. Y. 504; Hammond v. Essex etc. Ins. Co., 4 Mass. 196; Norton v. Lexington etc. Ins. Co., 16 Ill. 235; Phillips v. St. Louis Ins. Co., 11 La. An. 459; Graham v. Ledda, 17 La. An. 45; Peirce v. Ocean Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 83; Smith v. Touro, 14 Mass. 112; Oliver v. Newburyport Ins. Co., 3 Mass. 37; Badger v. Ocean Ins. Co., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 347; Gould v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 13 Mo. 524; Gardner v. Smith, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 141; Union Ins. Co. v. Burrell, Anth. (N. Y.) 128; Gardere v. Columbian Ins. Co., 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 514; Rogers v. Hosack, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 319; Atlantic Ins. Co. v. Storrow, 1 Edw. (N. Y.) 621; Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. Duffield, 6 Ohio St. 200.

A difficult question arises where only a part interest in a vessel is covered by the policy. In such a case if the vessel is wrecked and abandoned, the assured remains owner of that part which was not insured, and cannot recover from the insurers more than the amount of the policy. This is well illustrated by the case of the Allegheny Insurance Co. v. Ranson, 69 Pa. 496. In that case a vessel was insured on a valued policy for one third its value. It was subsequently wrecked and abandoned. Notice was at once given to the insurance company, whose agent examined the wreck and decided that it was not worth the risk and expense of raising. The company consequently did nothing about the wreck but paid as for total loss. Subsequently the assured brought an action of assumpsit against the company alleging that the defendants had taken possession of the steamer and were liable "for a sum of money which bore the same proportion to the whole value of said wreck which the uninsured portion bore to the agreed valuation." The plaintiffs recovered a verdict in the court below. On a writ of error the judgment was reversed. SHARSWOOD, J., said: "The plaintiffs did not show that the defendants had ever received one dollar or one dollar's worth from the wreck. They seem to have gone upon the idea that they had a right to maintain the action for their share of what the defendants might have realized by the sale. But this is founded upon an entire misapprehension of the relation between them. The defendants were not trustees for them. According to their own theory, if there was an abandonment all they ceded to the defendants was so much only as was covered by the insurance. They remained the owners of that for which they stood their own insurers. Of course the defendants had no title to sell more than had been abandoned to them. It may be that when one tenant in common, who is in possession of the joint property, abandons it to inevitable destruction it would be the same thing as if he had destroyed it himself, which would be a conversion, and entitle his cotenant to maintain trover and recover the value of his share in damages. The authorities certainly go that length. But that was not this case. The defendants, through their agent, after examination and enquiry, thought that the sunk steamer was not worth the risk and expense of raising. They did nothing. The plaintiffs themselves might have raised the wreck if they had seen fit. The defendants did nothing to prevent it. It was just as much their right to look after their interests as it was the defendants'. No action of trover, therefore, could have been maintained, and certainly without evidence that the defendants had recovered or received anything for which they were liable to account to their cotenants, assumpsit would not lie."

A request to instruct the jury that the verdict should be reduced by the sum for which the vessel was sold after its abandonment, on the ground that the plaintiff was presumed to have received the proceeds of the sale, and that the defendant should have credit therefor, no issue upon this point having been raised by the pleadings, held, properly refused. California Nav. Exp. Co. v. State Investment & Ins. Co., 70 Cal. 586. See also Globe Ins. Co. v. Sherlock, 25 Ohio St. 50; The Mary E. Perew, 15 Blatchf. (U. S.) 58.

Abandonment by one part owner of a stranded vessel of his interest in the vessel to the insurer of such interest does not affect the interest of other part owners nor the master's control over the vessel so far as their interest is concerned. Thus A and B each owned one half of a vessel. A obtained insurance on his half. She stranded, and A requested assistance from the insurer, who sent C with a tug and pumps. The vessel was got off, and A and C and the master and crew, without further orders from the insurer, attempted to navigate her to her port of destination. On the voyage she was lost. Held that, without regard to the effect of an attempted abandonment by A, the insurer was not liable to B. Kirby v. Thames & Mersey Ins. Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 221.

XII. Return of Premium.—Where any risk has been run, although less than the full risk contemplated by the parties, the underwriter is entitled to retain the premium; but where no risk has been run he is bound to return it.¹

Where insurance reaches every part of the ownership of a vessel indiscriminately, an abandonment will extend to the entire property, though its value exceeds the amount of the insurance. The Manitoba, 30 Fed. Rep. 129.

An abandonment of the ship transfers freight earned subsequently to the abandonment. Davidson v. Case, 5 Moore 116; 5 M. & S. 79; M'Carthy v. Abel, 5 East 338; Scottish Mar. Ins. Co. v. Turner, 1 Macq. H. L. Cas. 334; Barclay v. Stirling, 5 M. & S. 6; Stewart v. Greenock Mar. Ins. Co., 2 H. L. Cas. 159; cf. Simonds v. Union Ins. Co., 1 Wash. (U. S.) 443.

And this is so although the freight is insured separately and is abandoned to the underwriter upon freight. Thompson v. Rawcroft, 4 East 34; Leatham v. Terry, 3 B. & P. 479; M'Carthy v. Abel, 5 East 388; cf. Sharp v. Gladstone, 7 East 24.

Where a ship and cargo is insured, and the freight is also separately insured under a policy providing that no claim for total loss shall be made, except in the case of an actual or technical loss of the vessel under the policies of insurance on her, if an abandonment of the vessel and cargo is accepted by the underwriters, they cannot refuse to accept an abandonment of the freight: for, after accepting an abandonment of the vessel and cargo, the question whether the loss was partial or total is no longer open. Hubbell v. Great Western Ins. Co., 17 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 167.

Where, however, the master after abandonment, acting as agent of the assured, forwarded his passengers by another vessel and received the chartered freight, it was held to belong to the owners and not to the underwriter. Hickie v. Rodocanachi, 4 H. & N. 455.

So where the cargo was the property of the ship owner, it was held that the underwriter was entitled only to compensation for the portion of the voyage subsequent to the abandonment. Miller v. Woodfall, 8 E. & B. 493.

In Davy v. Hallett, 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 16, the English doctrine whereby the assured who has abandoned his ship is held to have abandoned the freight also and to be unable to recover from the underwriter of freight is denied, and the latter held liable. See also Center v. American Ins. Co., 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 564; 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 46.

In Phillips v. St. Louis Ins. Co., 11 La. An. 459, it was held that if the value of the thing insured exceeded the total amount of the insurance the assured is his own underwriter for the balance, and is entitled to a pro rata share of the salvage. This is followed as law in Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. Duffield, 6 Ohio St. 200; Rice v. Cobb, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 302.

But the following cases are contra, holding that where the insurance covers the whole ownership indiscriminately, the abandonment passes the whole title. The Manitoba, 30 Fed. Rep. 129; The Mary E. Perew, 15 Blatchf. (U. S.) 58; The George, Olc. (U. S.) 89.

1. Return of Premium.—The rules are thus laid down by LORD MANSFIELD in Tyrie v. Fletcher, 2 Cowp. 666: "The first is, that where the risk has not begun, whether this be owing to the fault, pleasure or will of the assured, or any other cause, the premium shall be returned, because a policy of insurance is a contract of indemnity; the underwriter receives a premium for running the risk of indemnifying the assured, and to whatever cause it may be owing, if he do not in fact run the risk, the consideration for which the premium was put into his hands fails, and therefore he ought to return it. Another rule is that if an entire risk has once commenced, there shall be no apportionment or return of premium afterwards; for though the premium is estimated and the risk depends on the nature and length of the voyage, yet, if it was commenced, though it be only for twenty-four hours, or less, the risk is run; the contract is for the entire

Where the risk is apportionable and part has been run, the assured may recover a ratable portion of the premium for the risk not run.¹

Where the contract is void for illegality the premium cannot be recovered back.² If, however, the illegal voyage is never en-risk, and no part of the consideration shall be returned." The law is well established.

Where the policy has not attached the assured may recover the premium. Tyrie v. Fletcher, 2 Cowp. 666; Penson v. Lee, 2 B. & P. 330; Colby v. Hunter, 3 C. & P. 7; Martin v. Sitwell, 1 Shaw 156; Cleveland v. Tettyplace, 3 Mass. 392; Taylor v. Lowell, 3 Mass. 331; Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Clapp, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 56; Homer v. Dorr, 10 Mass. 26; Hendricks v. Commercial Ins. Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 1. Although owing to misrepresentation, if without fraud. Anderson v. Thornton, 8 Exch. 425; Feise v. Parkinson, 4 Taunt. 639; Taylor v. Sumner, 4 Mass. 56.

The law is the same in the United States. Delavigne v. United Ins. Co., 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 310; Forbes v. Church, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 159; Robertson v. Columbian Ins. Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 491; Elbers v. United Ins. Co., 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 128; Waddington v. United Ins. Co., 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 23.

Where the insurance fails owing to want of interest in the assured, if without fraud, the premium may be recovered by the assured. Routh v. Thompson, 11 East 428 (cf. Boehm v. Bell, 8 T. R. 154); Finney v. Warren Ins. Co., 1 Met. (Mass.) 16; Holmes v. United Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 329; Howland v. Com. Ins. Co., Anth. (N. Y.) 26. Or where there is in failure of the warranty without fraud. Delavigne v. United Ins. Co., 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 310; Richards v. Marine Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 307; Murray v. Columbian Ins. Co., 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 443; Scriba v. Ins. Co. of N. A., 2 Wash. (U. S.) 107; Porter v. Bussey, 1 Mass. 435; Penniman v. Tucker, 11 Mass. 66; Foster v. United States Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 85.

The law is the same where the policy was obtained without authority, and consequently was never binding. Steinback v. Rhinelanders, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 269.

If the risk has once begun, it is immaterial that in fact the voyage is ended and the chance of loss has ceased before the policy is made, provided both parties are ignorant of this. Bradford v. Symondson, 7 Q. B. Div. 456; Natusch v. Hendewerk, 7 Q. B. Div. 460, note.

Where an entire risk has once attached the premium is earned and a return cannot be had. Meyer v. Gregson, 3 Doug. 402; Annen v. Woodman, 3 Taunt. 299; Bermon v. Woodbridge, 2 Doug. 781; Turner v. Burrows, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 144; Crowningshield v. N. Y. Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 142; N. Y. Ins. Co. v. Thomas, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 142; Hendricks v. Commercial Ins. Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 1; New York Fire Mar. Ins. Co. v. Roberts, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 141; Marine Ins. Co. v. Stras, 1 Munf. (Va.) 408.

If the contract, legal when made, becomes illegal by subsequent law, the premium may be recovered, although it has once attached. Gray v. Sims, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 276.

1. While the law is settled as stated, the difficulty has been to determine whether the risk was divisible. In the following cases a usage to return part of the premium where part of the risk had not been run was sustained, and the risk held divisible. Stevenson v. Snow, 3 Burr. 1237; Gale v. Machel, 2 Marsh. Ins. 667; Long v. Allen, 4 Doug. 276; Rothwell v. Cooke, 1 B. & P. 172.

And the risk has been held divisible in Scott v. Rae, 2 Doug. 787; Waters v. Allen, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 421.

On a time policy the risk is entire. Lorraine v. Thomlinson, 2 Doug. 585; Tyrie v. Fletcher, 2 Cowp. 666.

2. Lubbock v. Potts, 7 East 449; André v. Fletcher, 3 T. R. 266; Vanduyck v. Hewitt, 1 East 96; Morck v. Abel, 3 B. & P. 35; Lowry v. Bourdieu, 2 Doug. 468; Cowie v. Barber, 5 M. & S. 16; Alkins v. Jupe, 2 C. P. Div. 375; cf. Hentig v. Staniforth, 5 M. & S. 122.

If paid in ignorance of facts which rendered the policy illegal the premium may be recovered. Oom v. Bruce, 12 East 225.

tered upon in fact, the assured may recover the premium paid, after formally renouncing the contract.¹

Where the policy is avoided by the fraud or misconduct of the assured, he cannot recover the premium.²

If void for the fraud of the underwriter, the premium may be recovered.³

In the event of over-insurance the assured may recover the premium on the amount of the over-insurance.⁴

XIII. Particular Average—1. Definition.—Particular average is the damage or loss, short of total, falling directly upon particular articles of property. When the loss happens from any peril insured against by a policy of marine insurance, the owners of the property have a right to be indemnified by the underwriters.⁵

2. Distinction Between Particular Average and Partial Loss.—Particular average is a loss on the ship, cargo or freight to be borne by the owner of the subject assured. If the subject assured is not entirely lost, the loss is called a partial loss. The term particular average includes all partial losses except general average.⁶

1. The formal notice is essential. Palyart v. Leckie, 6 M. & S. 290.

2. Tyler v. Horne, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 455; Chapman v. Fraser, 1 Park Ins. (8th ed.) 456; Langhorn v. Calogian, 4 Taunt. 329; Schwartz v. United States Ins. Co., 3 Wash. (U. S.) 170; Hearne v. Marine Ins. Co., 20 Wall. (U. S.) 488; Hoyt v. Gilman, 8 Mass. 335; Hemely v. S. Car. Ins. Co., 1 Mills (S. Car.) Const. 154; Waters v. Allen, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 421.

3. Duffell v. Wilson, 1 Camp. 401; Carter v. Boehm, 3 Burr. 1909.

4. Fisk v. Masterman, 8 M. & W. 165; New York Ins. Co. v. Thomas, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 1.

5. Padelford v. Boardman, 4 Mass. 549.

Particular average is a loss on the ship, cargo or freight, to be borne by the owner of the subject on which it happens, and is so called in distinction from general average; and if not total it is also called partial loss. Bouv. L. Dict.

6. In Wadsworth v. Pacific Insurance Co., CHANCELLOR WALWORTH said: "I believe in the United States the terms partial loss and average are understood by commercial men to mean the same thing; and that average other than general includes every loss for which the underwriter is liable, except general average and total loss, which last includes total loss with salvage. Partial loss includes both general and particular average, and the latter term includes all partial losses, except general average."

In Phillips on Insurance, § 1422, the following explanation is given of the distinction between particular average, general average, partial loss and total loss: "A particular average is a loss borne wholly by the party upon whose property it takes place, and is so called in distinction from a general average for which divers parties contribute. A partial loss is one in which the insurers are liable to pay an amount less than that insured for damages happening to the subject, or expense incurred and occasioned by the perils insured against in distinction from a total loss in which the insurer is liable to pay the entire value at which the subject is insured, so far as it is covered by the policy, as the price of the whole or such proportion of it. Mr. Benecke proposes to apply the expression "particular average" to cases of damage or deterioration in value, or loss by expense, to be borne in either case by the owner of the subject or his underwriters, and not to the case of a total destruction of a part of the subject, which he would denominate a "partial loss." He does not, however, propose to restrict the expression "partial loss" to that case, but would extend it to all those cases comprehended under particular average. This distinc-

3. On the Ship—(a) Repairs.—Where parts of a ship are injured or destroyed by the perils insured against, the cost of replacing or repairing the parts so injured is particular average.¹ Where the timbers or other materials are replaced by new, the assured must himself bear one third of the expense of the labor and materials for the repairs. This deduction is said to be on account of "new for old."² In England and some of the United tion seems to be in conformity to the customary use of the terms."

1. Orrok v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 456; Giles v. Eagle Ins. Co., 2 Metc. (Mass.) 140; Sewall v. U. S. Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 90; Paddock v. Commercial Ins. Co., 104 Mass. 521; Crofts v. Marshall, 7 Carr. & P. 597; Sage v. Middletown Ins. Co., 1 Conn. 239; Wadsworth v. Pacific Ins. Co., 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 528; Hagar v. New England etc. Ins. Co., 59 Me. 460.

A vessel having lost her boat and camboose, and had her mainsail damaged in a gale, repaired the sail at sea, with duck taken from the cargo, and bought an old boat and camboose at a port of necessity, and on reaching home sold the boat, sail and camboose, and procured new ones. Held, that the loss was particular average. Brooks v. Oriental Ins. Co., 7 Pick. (Mass.) 259.

Defendant, an insurance company, insured plaintiff's steamship for $75,000, which amount, for the purposes of the insurance, was agreed to be its value. She went ashore, and being in danger of becoming a total wreck, defendant consented that plaintiff might use every effort to save her, whereupon plaintiff paid $21,000 to get her afloat, and $46,000 to repair her. The real value of the steamer was $275,000 and defendant contended that its liability, in addition to $46,000 was only such proportional part of $21,000 as $275,000 bore to $75,000. Held, that this contention was untenable; that defendant was bound to pay the whole amount, it being less than $75,000. Providence & Stonington S. S. Co. v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 89 N. Y. 559.

2. "One-third New for Old."—Fisk v. Commercial Ins. Co., 18 La. 77; Sanderson v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Cranch (U. S.) 218; Peele v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 3 Mass. (U. S.) 27; Burnes v. Nat. Ins. Co., 1 Cowen (N. Y.) 265; Savage v. New York Ins. Co., 4 Cowen (N. Y.) 245; Brooks v. Oriental Ins. Co., 7 Pick.

(Mass.) 259; Eager v. Atlas Ins. Co., 14 Pick. (Mass.) 141; Hall v. Ocean Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 472; Kerr v. Quaker City Ins. Co., 33 Mo. 158; Orrok v. Com. Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 456; Lincoln v. Hope Ins. Co., 8 Gray (Mass.) 22; Paddock v. Commercial Ins. Co., 104 Mass. 521.

In computing the amount of loss under a policy of insurance, the temporary repairs necessary to enable a ship which could not be fully repaired at the port of destination to proceed on her voyage, as well as the complete repairs made at a subsequent port, are subject to the deduction of one-third new for old. Paddock v. Commercial Ins. Co., 104 Mass. 521.

The right of recovery under a marine policy is not limited to the amount actually expended for repairs, after deducting one-third new for old. Hager v. New England etc. Ins. Co., 59 Me. 460.

The ordinary deduction in cases of a partial loss of one-third new for old, from the repairs, is inapplicable to the case of a technical total loss by an injury exceeding one-half the value of the vessel. Wallace v. Thames & Mersey Ins. Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 66. But see Deloils v. Ocean Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 303.

In case of repairs of the damage done to the ship by perils insured against, the customary deduction of one-third new for old is applicable only to the labor and materials employed in the repairs, and the new articles purchased in lieu of those which are lost or destroyed; and it does not apply to other incidental expenses having no connection with the repairs, or new articles furnished and from which the assured can possibly derive no enhanced value or benefit beyond his loss, such as steamboat towage, boat hire, etc. Potter v. Ocean Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 27.

The rule applies also to steamboats plying on interior waters. Wallace v. Ohio Ins. Co., 4 Ohio 234; Perry v. Ohio Ins. Co., 5 Ohio 306.

States the deduction of one third on account of "new for old," does not apply to the first voyage.¹

In applying the rule it seems to have been the usual custom to take the value of the old materials towards payment of the new, and to allow the deduction of one third from the balance.²

(b) Extraordinary Expenses of Raising Funds.—The extraordinary expense of raising funds for particular average expenses is at the risk of the underwriter. Thus he is liable for the payment of marine interest on money borrowed on the ship or cargo; or for a loss arising by the sale of goods at an intermediate port at a price less than their value at the port of destination.³

(c) Wages and Provisions of Crew During Detention for Repairs.—In France, the wages and provisions of the crew during a delay for repairs is particular average on the ship.⁴ The same rule prevails in Massachusetts, where it has been distinctly held that the labor of the crew in repairing damage occasioned by the perils insured against is chargeable to the underwriters.⁵

1. Fenwick v. Robinson, 3 Carr. & P. 323; Wallace v. Ohio Ins. Co., 4 Ohio 234; Fireman's Ins. Co. v. Fitzhugh, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 160.

No exception to the rule was made in Nickels v. Maine F. & Mar. Ins. Co., 11 Mass. 253; Sewall v. U. S. Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 90; Dunham v. Commercial Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 315.

2. In Byrnes v. National Ins. Co., 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 265; SUTHERLAND, J., said: "It seems to me to resolve itself into the enquiry, to whom do the old materials belong? If they belong to the assured, there is an end of the question; for having been applied by them to the payment of the repairs, pro tanto, the assured cannot possibly claim any further benefit from them. If there is anything in the nature of an abandonment of them to the underwriters, then the principle contended for by the defendant may be well founded. But there is nothing like an abandonment. The assured do not, and could not claim, from the underwriters, the gross amount of the repairs. They can only claim the difference between that amount and the value of the old materials; for to that extent, only are they injured; and an indemnity is all that they can claim. It is more analogous to the adjusting of a partial loss, in which case the title to the goods remains in the assured. The true rule, therefore, seems to me to be this—to apply the old materials towards payment for the new, and to allow the deduction of the one-third new for old upon the balance. It affords full indemnity to the assured, and gives to the underwriters all the benefit that the principle, upon which the practice of deducting one-third new for old has been established, will justify." Dickey v. New York Ins. Co., 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 222; American Ins. Co. v. Center, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 45; Brooks v. Oriental Ins. Co., 7 Pick. (Mass.) 259; Eager v. Atlas Ins. Co., 14 Pick. (Mass.) 141.

3. See Alers v. Tobin, Abbot Shipp. (3rd ed.) 245.

4. Phillips on Ins., § 1429.

5. In Hall v. Ocean Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 472, PUTNAM, J., said: "It is very clear that such charges are not to be put to the account of general average; they would not be sustained for the general good, but for the particular benefit of the ship. The voyage was broken up; and it seems to us that the owner of the ship must bear these, as he bears the other expenses incident to the ship. He would have no claim upon the underwriter for those charges. It would be a very prudent thing for the master to pay a mate and seaman for a month or more, for holding themselves in readiness to serve at a minute's warning, under such circumstances; but that expense would be a charge upon the freight. It would cost the owner of the ship just so much more to earn his freight than it would if he were not subjected to the payment of extra wages or services. But the services of the officers and seamen might be rendered by them as laborers, in making the repairs; and in such case their labor would be charge-

The rule varies in other States.¹

(d) Risks Excluded by the Memorandum.—To prevent disputes respecting partial losses arising from trivial subjects of difference, it is the general practice to provide in the policy that the insurer shall not be liable for any partial loss under a certain rate per cent. This rate is usually five or seven per cent.²

4. On Freight.—A particular average or partial loss on freight occurs when the ship is lost after a part of the voyage is completed and it is necessary to hire another ship to carry the cargo to the port of destination in order to earn the freight.³ It also able, just as if other laborers had been employed to make the repairs. And it would be necessary that some person should be employed on the part of the owner to superintend the repairs, whose work or business should be to see that they were completely made; and this charge is to be considered as for part of the labor employed in the reparation."

1. Perry v. Ohio Ins. Co., 5 Ohio 306; Gazzam v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., 6 Ohio 73; Webb v. Protection Ins. Co., 6 Ohio 456; Dunham v. Commercial Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 315; Sage v. Middletown Ins. Co., 1 Conn. 239.

2. Under a policy of insurance upon a ship, which provides that the endorsers shall not be liable for a partial loss, unless it shall amount to five per cent, successive partial losses by distinct gales or storms upon different passages cannot be added together to make up the requisite five per cent; and the burden of proving a partial loss amounting to five per cent from one gale or storm is upon the assured. Paddock v. Commercial Ins. Co., 104 Mass. 521; Hagar v. New England etc. Ins. Co., 59 Me. 460. But see Donnell v. Columb. Ins. Co., 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 366.

Under a similar policy, where the sum apportioned on a vessel, on account of injury to another vessel occasioned by an accidental collision, together with their own loss, exceeded five per cent, the underwriters were held liable for the whole loss borne and apportioned on her. Peters v. Warren Ins. Co., 1 Story 463.

A vessel insured under a similar policy arrived at her port of destination, and delivered a part of her cargo, which was insured in safety. In the progress of a regular delivery of the balance, it was partially damaged by the perils of the sea. In an action for a partial loss, held, that although the amount of the particular loss did not reach five per centum on the whole value of the cargo shipped, still the insured was entitled to recover, the loss being more than five per cent on the amount at risk at the time of the damage. Maryland Ins. Co. v. Bosley, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 337.

A clause in a policy that the insurer was not liable for any partial loss "on the vessel or freight unless it amounts to seven per cent, exclusive of all charges," etc., applies to a loss occurring by reason of the damages which the owners of the insured vessel are compelled to pay to the owners of another vessel in consequence of a collision in which the insured vessel was alone in fault. Whorf v. Equitable Mar. Ins. Co. (Mass.), 3 N. E. Rep. 720.

Where goods were insured against the perils of the sea, and against all other losses and misfortunes which shall come to the goods to which the insurers are liable, by the rules and customs of assurances in B, with a provision that the "assurers shall not be liable for any partial loss on goods esteemed perishable in their own nature, unless it amount to seven per cent, and happen by stranding," held, that the insurers were liable for a loss of such perishable goods, not occasioned by stranding. Williams v. Cole, 16 Me. 207; Lord v. Neptune Ins. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 109.

3. It is the duty of the master, when the ship becomes disabled during the voyage, to procure another vessel if it is in his power; and the insurer is not answerable for consequences of his voluntary neglect to do so, unless such neglect is caused by an act of barratry. And it is a general rule that the plaintiff, in an action on the policy, in order to entitle himself to recover on the ground of the loss of the voyage, must show that another vessel could not be obtained. Schieffelin v. New York Ins. Co., 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 21.

occurs where a part of the cargo is lost and the ship is thereby prevented from earning the freight.¹

The master, however, is not bound to seek another vessel out of the port of distress, or out of a port immediately contiguous thereto; and if part only of the cargo is sent to its port of destination in another vessel, the insurer on freight is not entitled to a deduction or allowance for the freight earned on that part, unless he shows that the goods were delivered to the insured at the port of destination, or that they had notice of their arrival and situation. Saltus v. Ocean Ins. Co., 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 107.

A vessel being lost on her voyage to a port where a cargo was waiting, which the owner of the vessel had contracted to transport, the insured can recover the freight which have become due for the transportation of that cargo. Adams v. Warren Ins. Co., 22 Pick. (Mass.) 163.

In a policy on freight at and from Gibraltar to Philadelphia, a vessel sailed from Gibraltar with specie, but without obtaining a cargo, or contracting for one, and was lost. Held, that the insured were not entitled to recover. Adams v. Pennsylvania Ins. Co., 1 Rawle (Pa.) 97.

If a capture takes place during the voyage, the freight will be chargeable up to the day of capture. Leavenworth v. Delafield, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 573.

Where goods insured were captured during the voyage, and the vessel was released, but the goods detained for further proof, and were afterwards restored on payment of full freight, but the owner was obliged to hire another vessel to carry the goods to their place of destination, held, that the insured was liable to pay additional or increased freight, being an expense necessarily incurred in consequence of the capture. Mumford v. Commercial Ins. Co., 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 262.

Mere delay of the voyage is not a particular average on freight for wages and provisions. Ins. Co. of North America v. Jones, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 547. See also Mayo v. Maine F. & Mar. Ins. Co., 4 Mass. 374.

1. In McGaw v. Ocean Ins. Co., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 504, a ship laden with tobacco and cotton, and bound from New Orleans to Havre, was injured by the perils of the sea and a part of the cargo was destroyed, and she returned to New Orleans for repairs. The cargo could not be sent on in another vessel at a lower rate of freight, and the master delivered it up to the shipper. It was held that the insurers on the freight were responsible for the loss of the freight on the portion of a cargo which was wholly destroyed. CHIEF JUSTICE SHAW, in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "In order to earn freight there must be a vessel to carry it, a cargo to be carried, either actually on board, or so engaged as to give the ship owner a right to have it. Where the freight is insured on a particular voyage, by a particular vessel, and the cargo has been put on board, and the vessel actually sails in the prosecution of the voyage, it is the freight of that cargo, in that vessel, and on that voyage, which is the subject of insurance and to which the policy attaches. Then if the vessel is lost by one of the perils insured against, the freight is lost by that peril. Or if the cargo is lost by one of the same perils, as if consumed by fire or captured by an enemy, the owner loses his power of earning his freight by carrying that cargo, and the freight is lost by one of the perils insured against. There may be a freight pro rata itineris, in case the vessel, after carrying the cargo a part of distance, has done a beneficial part of the service, and the owner of the goods consents to receive his property at a place short of the destined port, or the master may engage another vessel to carry on the cargo to the place of destination and thus earn his full freight at the expense of the hire of such other vessel. So in case of the loss of cargo other goods may be taken in its stead if they can be obtained, the freight of which may enure by way of salvage. In various ways, by the application of the equitable principles of maritime law, the loss may be relieved and mitigated; but in strictness, if the ship be destroyed or prevented from prosecuting and completing the voyage thus commenced by stranding, by hostile seizure or by any of the perils insured against; or if the specific goods so laden are destroyed, so they do not exist and cannot be car-

Where goods are transported for a part of the voyage only by the ship whose freight is insured, the loss is computed by deducting from the gross freight the expense of forwarding the goods to the place of destination.¹

5. On the Cargo.—Where a portion of the cargo is totally destroyed, the insurer is liable to pay for the goods so far as they are covered by policy at the price at which they are insured.²

If, however, the goods are merely damaged, so that their value is diminished, the loss to the insurer is ascertained by finding the selling price of the sound goods and also of the damaged goods, and taking the ratio of these two quantities and applying it to the whole value of the goods as fixed by the policy. Thus if the damaged goods sell for only one third of what the same goods would have sold if sound, the direct loss by the damage is thirtyried to the port of destination, the freight insured is lost."

Where salt on board ship was washed away by causes attributable to the perils of the sea, so that freight could not be recovered, held, that the loss might be recovered in an action on the freight policy. De Wolf v. State Mut. Fire & Mar. Ins. Co., 6 Duer (N. Y.) 191. See also Mordy v. Jones (4 Barn. & Cressw. 394); Griswold v. New York Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 321; Saltus v. Ocean Ins. Co., 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 138; Herbert v. Hallett, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 93; Whitney v. New York Ins. Co., 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 208; Jordan v. Warren Ins. Co., 1 Story (U. S.) 342; Clark v. Mass. F. & Mar. Ins. Co., 2 Pick. (Mass.) 104.

1. In Coffin v. Storer, 5 Mass. 252, CHIEF JUSTICE PARSONS said: "The loss on freight must be decided, not by the proportion in time of sailing, as was determined in Luke v. Lyde (2 Burr. 882), but the respective rates of freight. Let the average from Demarara to Biddeford, if she has not been wrecked, be ascertained, and deduct therefrom the expense of bringing the goods on." See also Searle v. Scovel, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 218; American Ins. Co. v. Center, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 45; Bork v. Norton, 2 McLean, C. C. 423.

Underwriters cannot avail themselves of a freight earned in a new voyage, which they have not insured, by way of recompense for losses on another voyage which they have insured, and which has already terminated. Thus, where freight was insured at and from New Orleans to Havre, and the ship, meeting with an accident, put back, and another voyage to England was substituted, on which freight was earned, it was held that the underwriters were not entitled to the freight of the substituted voyage, as in the nature of salvage freight. Jordan v. Warren Ins. Co., 1 Story (U. S.) 342.

2. Where 198 bales of cotton were insured, and only a part was lost, the underwriters were discharged from liability for whatever portion was safely landed at the port of destination. Mobile Marine Dock and Mut. Ins. Co. v. McMillan, 27 Ala. 77.

In an open policy of insurance on three barge loads of wheat, the risk was described as "39,085 bushels bulk wheat, at $1.15 per bushel,—sum $44,945; rate 1, premium $449.45." Held, that a clause: "each package shall be subject to its own average," did not apply to such risk; that the insurance was in bulk and not in packages either of one bushel or one barge each; and that in determining the percentage of partial loss, the proportion between the entire actual loss and the value of the entire shipment must be ascertained. Haenschen v. Franklin Ins. Co., 67 Mo. 156.

Clauses in an open, uniform, canal cargo policy of insurance being to the amount of $8,000 on goods worth $20,000, and the loss being $9,738.01, the liability of the insurer was held to be only for two-fifths of the loss, and not for the $8,000. Breed v. Providence Washington Ins. Co., 17 Blatchf. C. Ct. 287.

Where the insurance was made by the owners of five-sixths of a cargo of specie, amounting to $90,000, upon their interest in the cargo to the extent of three and one-third per cent., and the insurer must pay, not one-third of the price of the sound goods at the port of destination, but one-third of the value at which the goods were insured.¹

6. Excepted by the Terms of the Policy.—In many policies the insurers except liability for particular average or partial loss. This is usually done by inserting in the policy such expressions as “free from average unless general,” or “free from particular average.”²

$30,000, and a loss heppened; held, that they were entitled to recover the whole sum insured, and not merely five-sixths thereof. Pacific Ins. Co. v. Catlett, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 75.

1. Under a policy of marine insurance which fixes the value of the goods at the sum insured, in case of a partial loss; and where the property insured was grain, a portion of which reached the port of destination in a damaged condition, the standard of the liability of the insurer is the value so fixed, and not the value in the market. Thus, when the proportion of loss is ascertained by the difference between the selling price of the sound and damaged grain, that difference gives the aliquot part of the original value which may be considered as destroyed by the perils insured against and by applying this liquidated proportion of the loss to the standard of value as fixed in the policy, the proportion of loss, whatever it may be, is ascertained in terms of money. Lamar Ins. Co. v. McGlashen, 54 Ill. 513; Lewis v. Rucker, 2 Burr. 1167; Johnson v. Sheddon, 2 East 581; Hurry v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 3 Bos. & P. 308; Usher v. Noble, 12 East 630; Dick v. Allen, Park Ins. 167; Lawrence v. New York Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 217; Evans v. Commercial Ins. Co., 6 R. I. 47; Henderson v. Maid of Orleans, 12 La. An. 352.

2. A cargo of potatoes was insured against a total loss, “free from average, unless general;” “free from particular average.” After the canal boat, on which the potatoes were, had reached her destination, and after 100 barrels out of 1,600 had been landed, the boat sank. Held, that the insurers were liable for nothing. Chadsey v. Guion, 48 N. Y. Super. Ct. 267.

Under a policy of insurance containing the clause “free from particular average less than fifty per cent.,” there can be no recovery from the insurer, of salvage and agent's expenses, when there are other insurers, and the proportion of loss payable by the respondent is less than fifty per cent. of the amount of the policy. Buzby v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 422.

Where a cargo is insured “free from particular average,” a constructive total loss is sufficient; that is, a destruction of all value to the owner, and hence a total loss to him. Chadsey v. Guion, 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. 118.

A marine insurance policy covered all shipments from “ports and places . . . in Europe, generally to New York, and to Atlantic ports in the United States, direct or by port or ports, with privilege of transshipment per steamer, sailing vessels, and other conveyances, including all risks of lighterage, one-half interest in dried fruits or other merchandise. Each kind of goods separately. Dried fruits and other merchandise by steamer to be insured free from particular average, unless the vessel be stranded, sunk, burned or in collision.” Held, that “all risks of lighterage” meant any loss, partial or total, by lighterage, while the loss by steamer was limited, and to be free from particular average. Hills v. Rhenish Westphalian etc. Ins. Co., 39 Hun (N. Y.) 552.

Authorities.—The authorities used in the preparation of this article have been Arnould Mar. Ins. (6th ed.) by Mac-lachlan, the leading authoritative work upon this subject for the English law; Phillips Law of Ins. (5th ed.); Parsons Mar. Ins., and Lowndes Law of Ins. (2nd ed.)

The careful digests of the Law of Insurance by Sansum and by Berryman, and Pritchard's Digest of Admiralty and Maritime Law (3rd ed.), will prove of great assistance to lawyers looking into the subject.

There is no recent American text book upon the subject, the latest edition of Phillips' Law of Insurance being in 1867, while Parsons's Marine Insurance was published in 1868.

Much use has been made of the ad-

MARINER—MARITAL RIGHTS—MARITIME.

MARINER—(See also SEAMEN).—A person employed on a merchant ship or a ship of war. The term includes common sailors, a cook, porter, steward, purser, clerk, engineer, surgeon, captain, admiral; in fact, whoever has to do with the equipment and preservation of the vessel, or the welfare of the crew.¹

MARITAL RIGHTS.—See HUSBAND AND WIFE, Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, vol. 9, p. 789; CONTRACTS, Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, vol. 3, p. 872.

MARITIME—(See also MARINER).—Pertaining to navigation or commercial intercourse upon the seas, great lakes and rivers.²

mirable work of Arnould edited by Maclachlan.

1. 1 Conkl. Adm. 107; Wilkes v. Dinsman, 7 How. (U. S.) 89; Matthews v. Offley, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 115; Ex parte Thompson, 4 Bradf. (N. Y.) 154; Atkyns v. Burrows, 1 Pet. Adm. (U. S.) 246; Ross v. Walker, 2 Wils. 264; Gwin's Will, 1 Tuck. (N. Y. Surr.) 44.

In Spinetti v. Atlas Steamship Co., 80 N. Y. 71-80, RAPALLO, J., observes: "I am of the opinion that the purser does fall within the term 'mariner,' as used in this bill of lading, and that embezzlement by him was barratry. He was permanently attached to the ship as one of its officers, and performed duties which would otherwise devolve upon the master."

The authorities cited by the respondent are to the effect that barratry can be committed only by master and mariners, a point which is not disputed, but there is no authority showing that a purser of a ship is not included in the term "mariner." It is not necessary to bring a purser within the definition of mariner that he should be engaged in navigating the ship, provided his employment is on the sea, and he is attached to the ship. The duties of the purser are marine duties. McLachlan on Shipping 146, 148; The Gratitude, 3 C. Rob. 240, 257. The cook and steward have been held to be mariners, and entitled to sue as such. The Jane and Matilda, 1 Hagg. Adm. 187, 190; Smith v. Sloop Gilpin (U. S.) 505.

Mariner in a Statute—A master of a licensed vessel under twenty tons employed as a lighter in a harbor, and not going to sea, is not exempt from duty in the militia as a mariner in the sea service of a citizen of the United States, under the second section of the act of congress, 2nd Cong., 1st sess. ch. 33, passed May 8th, 1792. Pratt v. Hall.

4 Mass. 239; Brush v. Bogardus, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 157.

A master of an enrolled vessel employed in transporting stones, etc., from one part to another of Boston bay, and occasionally making a short trip to sea for the purpose of fishing, was held not to be exempt from militia duty as a mariner in the sea service. Com. v. Newcomb, 14 Mass. 394.

Fishermen engaged in the cod fishery on board a vessel of more than twenty tons, duly licensed, and having signed an agreement required by the laws of the United States, are not liable to do duty in the militia, notwithstanding the statute of this commonwealth of 1814, ch. 63. Com. v. Douglas, 17 Mass. 49; Bayley v. Merritt, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 597.

2. Anderson's Law Dict.

Maritime.—Primarily, bordering on the sea; as a maritime town, coast, nation; secondarily, belonging to those who border on the sea, as maritime laws, rights, pursuits.

Maritime Law.—The law of the sea. The body of principles and usages which, by the consent of civilized communities or nations, has been adopted to regulate the affairs of men engaged in navigation and marine commerce. Anderson's Law Dict.

In the Lottawanna, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 558, BRADLEY, J., observes, in substance, that whilst the general maritime law is the basis of the maritime law of the United States, as well as of other countries, it is only so far operative in this, or any country, as it is adopted by the laws and usages thereof. It has no inherent force of its own. In particular matters, especially such as approach a merely municipal character, the received maritime law may differ in different countries without affecting the general integrity of the system as a harmonious whole.

MARITIME LIENS—(See also BOTTOMRY; FREIGHT; LIENS; MASTER OF A VESSEL; SALVAGE; SEAMEN; SHIPPING).

- I. Definition, 410.
- II. What Are Subject to Maritime Liens, 411.
- III. For What a Lien May Exist on a Vessel, 412.
 1. For Supplies and Repairs, 412.
 - (a) Must be Necessary, 412.
 - (b) Presumption That They Are Furnished on the Credit of the Vessel, 416.
 - (c) Must be Furnished in a Foreign and Not in a Home Port, 417.
 - (d) Chartered Vessels, 420.
 2. For Construction, 421.
 3. For Advances of Money, 423.
 4. For Services, 425.
 - (a) By Seamen, 425.
 - (b) By the Master, 430.
 - (c) By Subordinate Officers, 431.
 - (d) By Other Persons, 432.
 5. For Towage, 434.
 6. For Pilotage, 434.
 7. For Wharfage, 434.
 8. For Salvage, 436.
 9. For Damages, 436.
 10. For Safe Transport, 436.
- IV. Lien of the Ship on the Cargo, 438.
 1. For Freight, 438.
 2. For Demurrage, 439.
- V. Priority of Liens, 439.
 1. General Principles, 439.
 2. Priority of Various Claims, 442.
- VI. Waiver, Discharge and Extinguishment of Liens, 447.
 1. By Laches, 447.
 2. By Judicial Sale of the Vessel, 449.
 3. By Private Sale, 449.
 4. By Taking Commercial Paper, 451.
 5. By Taking Collateral Security, 452.
 6. By Destruction of the Vessel, 453.
 7. By Departure of the Vessel, 453.
 8. By Assignment of the Claim, 453.
- VII. Liens on Vessels at Common Law, 453.
- VIII. Liens under State Laws, 454.
 1. In General, 454.
 2. Divestment of State Liens, 456.

I. DEFINITION.—A maritime lien is a right of property in a vessel which may be enforced directly against the vessel by a libel in rem, and it is immaterial in whose possession the vessel may be, or to whom the title may have been transferred.¹

The general system of maritime law which was familiar to the lawyers and statesmen of this country when the constitution was adopted, was intended, and referred to, when it was declared in that instrument that the judicial power of the United States shall extend to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction. Thus adopted, it became the maritime law of the United States, operating uniformly in the whole country. The question as to the true limits of maritime law and admiralty jurisdiction is exclusively a judicial question, and no state law or act of congress can make it broader or narrower than the judicial power may determine those limits to be. But what the law is within those limits, assuming the general maritime law to be the basis of the system, depends upon what has been received as law in the maritime usages of this country, and on such legislation as may have been competent to affect it.

The decisions of this court illustrative of these sources, and giving construction to the laws and constitution, are especially to be considered; and when these fail us, we must resort to the principles by which they have been governed.

1. The Young Mechanic, 3 Ware (U. S.) 58.

In Verderwater v. Mills, 19 How. (U. S.) 82, the libel set forth a contract between the owners of certain steam ships to convey freight and passengers between New York and California. The owner of one of the ships refused to employ his vessel according to this agreement, and sent her to the Pacific

The term is also applied to the mutual liens which the ship has upon the cargo for freight, and the cargo upon the ship for safe transport.

II. WHAT ARE SUBJECT TO MARITIME LIENS.—A maritime lien can only exist upon such movable things as are used in navigation, or upon things which are the subjects of commerce on the high seas, or on navigable waters. Thus, vessels, dredges and scows are subject to such liens, but not wharves, bridges, dry-docks, or real estate of any kind.¹

under a contract with other persons. For this breach of contract libellant demanded damages, assuming that the vessel was subject under the maritime law to a lien which might be enforced in rem in a court of admiralty. The circuit court dismissed the bill. On writ of error to the Supreme Court of the United States the judgment of the lower court was affirmed. In delivering the opinion of the court Mr. JUSTICE GRIER described a maritime lien as follows: "The maritime 'privilege' or lien is adopted from the civil law, and imports a tacit hypothecation of the subject of it. It is a jus in re, without actual possession or any right of possession. It accompanies the property into the hands of a bona fide purchaser. It can be executed and divested only by a proceeding in rem. This sort of proceeding against personal property is unknown to the common law, and is peculiar to the process of courts of admiralty. The foreign and other attachments of property in the state courts, though by analogy loosely termed proceedings in rem, are evidently not within the category. But this privilege or lien, though adhering to the vessel, is a secret one; it may operate to the prejudice of general creditors and purchasers without notice; it is therefore 'stricti juris,' and cannot be extended by construction, analogy or inference."

In the case of The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 558, 579, the Supreme Court of the United States said: "A lien is a right of property, and not a mere matter of procedure." See also The J. W. Tucker, 20 Fed. Rep. 129; The Fanny, 2 Law Rep. (U. S.) 508; The Arcuturus, 18 Fed. Rep. (U. S.) 748; Ward v. Chamberlain, 2 Black (U. S.) 430.

The more recent cases overrule the principle laid down in The Triumph, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 433 (note), and The Globe, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 427, 433

(1852), where it was held that a maritime lien "is, in reality, only a privilege to arrest the vessel for a debt which, of itself, constitutes no encumbrance on the vessel, and becomes such only by virtue of an actual attachment."

1. "It may arise with reference to vessels, steamers and rafts, and upon goods and merchandise carried by them. It cannot arise upon anything which is fixed and immovable, like a wharf, a bridge, or real estate of any kind. Though bridges and wharves may aid commerce by facilitating intercourse on land, or the discharge of cargoes, they are not in any sense the subjects of maritime lien." The Rock Island Bridge, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 213.

Dredges and Scows.—Dredges and scows, though never used in the transfer of passengers or freight, and furnished with no motive power of their own, are vessels, and subject as such to maritime liens for service rendered and supplies furnished. The Alabama, 19 Fed. Rep. 544. See also Endner v. Greco, 3 Fed. Rep. 411.

A light boat built and adapted to be used as a floating light is a vessel upon which a lien for materials furnished may attach. Briggs v. A Light Boat, 7 Allen (Mass.) 287.

A Steam Dredge, being within the definition of a vessel in the United States Revised Statutes (tit. 1, ch. 1), is subject to a maritime lien for supplies. Pioneer, 30 Fed. Rep. 206.

Dry Docks.—In Cope v. Vallette Dry Dock Co., 10 Fed. Rep. 142, and Cope v. Vallette Dry Dock Co., 16 Fed. Rep. 924, the court, in deciding that a maritime lien could not exist on a dry dock, said: "The structure (a dry dock) to which they (the services) were rendered was not designed for navigation, and, being practically incapable of navigation, it had no more connection with trade or commerce than a wharf, a shipyard or a fixed dry dock, into which water crafts are introduced by being

The ordinary tackle, sails, boats, and appliances of a vessel are of course subject to any lien which may exist upon the vessel itself. In addition to the ordinary furniture of a ship, any special apparatus, or appliances on board a vessel, engaged in a particular vocation, such as whaling or wrecking, which are indispensable to the prosecution of such business, are also subject to the lien.¹

III. FOR WHAT A LIEN MAY EXIST—1. For Supplies and Repairs.—

(a) Must be Necessary.—In order to create a maritime lien for supplies it must appear that there was a reasonable necessity for the supplies themselves, and that they could only be obtained upon the credit of the vessel.²

drawn up on the ways. As shown by the findings, it had remained securely and permanently moored to the bank for a period of more than fourteen years; it partook more of the nature of a fixture attached to the realty than of a boat or ship."

Bridges.—In the Rock Island Bridge Case, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 213, it was held that a maritime lien could not exist upon a bridge.

A seine boat attached to a schooner engaged in the mackerel fishery, which had previously belonged to the owner of the schooner, but had been sold by him, and subsequently owned by the schooner, in prosecuting its business under a contract of hiring with the purchaser, is not subject, as appurtenant to the schooner, to a lien for supplies furnished the schooner. Merrimac, 29 Fed. Rep. 157. So also services rendered to two barges which had become disabled and were left behind from a tug, give no lien on the tug. James Dalzell's Sons & Co. v. Daniel Kaine, 31 Fed. Rep. 746.

Compressing Cotton.—No maritime lien for the compressing of cotton, when the compressing was performed inland, and before any contract of affreightment binding the ship was made. The Paola R., 32 Fed. Rep. 174.

Where a steamboat and canal-boat, owned by the same person, were always employed together, it was held that a lien would not accrue as against the steamboat for work done on the canal-boat. The Ida Meyer, 31 Fed. Rep. 89.

A maritime contract may have for its subject a canal-boat, Hipple v. The Fashion, 3 Grant (Pa.) Cas. 40; a pile driver, Kearney v. Pile Driver, 3 Fed. Rep. 246; a scow, Endner v. Greco, 3 Fed. Rep. 411; a floating elevator, placed on a canalboat, The Hezekiah Baldwin, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 556; a floating derrick, Maltby v. A Steam Derrick-boat, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 477; where the res is or has been afloat, Gregg v. Sloop Clarissa Ann, 2 Hughes (U. S.) 89; a floating scow, The Count De Lesseps, 17 Fed. Rep. 460.

Scow Platform.—But a libel in admiralty for wharfage is not maintainable where the thing charged with the wharfage was a scow platform, designed to be moored at a wharf so that refuse carts could be driven over it for the purpose of dumping their contents into boats, the platform being mainly stationary and rarely moved, although capable of being towed. Such a structure is not a vessel, within the meaning of the maritime law. Ruddiman v. Scow Platform, 38 Fed. Rep. 158.

1. Special Apparatus.—In The Witch Queen, 3 Sawyer (U. S.) 301, a vessel fitted out for a pearl fishing voyage was furnished with a diving bell, air pump and other apparatus, not contributing to navigation, but required and provided for the fishery intended, and belonging to her owners. It was held that these, as well as the tackle and furniture proper, were subject to the lien of material men for general supplies.

The fact that the ownership of the vessel and of such apparatus is separate will not be sufficient to exempt such apparatus from liability if in fact it was on board the vessel by the consent of its owners at the time the supplies were furnished. The Edwin Post, 11 Fed. Rep. 602.

2. "The authority of the master in contracting for repairs and supplies is not confined to such as are absolutely or indispensably necessary, but includes also such as are reasonably fit and proper for the ship and voyage. Where such repairs and supplies are reasonably fit and proper, the master, if he has not funds and cannot obtain such on the personal credit of the owners, may obtain the same on the credit of the ship, either with or without giving a bottomry bond, as necessity shall indicate. Reasonable diligence in either event must be exercised by the merchant or lender to ascertain that the repairs and supplies were necessary and proper, as the master is not authorized to hypothesize the vessel unless such was the fact within the meaning of the maritime law. Such necessity for repairs and supplies is proved where such circumstances of exigency are shown as would induce a prudent owner, if present, to order them, or to provide funds for the cost of them on the security of the ship. Proof that the supplies and repairs were necessary will not in any such case be sufficient to entitle the furnisher or lender to recover by a suit in rem against the vessel if it appear that the master had funds sufficient to execute the repairs and furnish the supplies, and that the party who made and furnished the same knew that fact, or that facts and circumstances were known to him sufficient to put him upon enquiry, and to show that if he had used due diligence he would have ascertained that no funds except such as the master already possessed were necessary for any such purpose. Good faith is undoubtedly required of a party seeking to enforce a lien against a vessel for such a claim, but the fact that the master had funds which he ought to have applied to that object is no evidence to establish the charge of bad faith in such a case unless it appears that the libellant knew that fact, or that such facts and circumstances were known to him as were sufficient to put him upon enquiry within the principles of law already explained. Express knowledge of the fact that the master had sufficient funds for the purposes is not necessary to maintain the charge of bad faith, as it is well settled law that a party to a transaction, where his rights are liable to be injuriously affected by notice, cannot wilfully shut his eyes to the means of knowledge which he knows are at hand, and thereby escape the consequences which would flow from the notice if it had actually been received; or in other words, the general rule is that knowledge of such facts and circumstances as are sufficient to put a party upon the enquiry, and to show that if he had exercised due diligence he would have ascertained the truth of the case, is equivalent to actual notice of the matter in respect to which the enquiry ought to have been made." The Lulu, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 192.

"To constitute a case of apparent necessity, not only must the repairs and supplies be needful, but it must be apparently necessary for the master to have a credit to procure them. If the master has funds of his own, which he ought to apply to purchase the supplies which he is bound by the contract of hiring to furnish himself, and if he has funds of the owners, which he ought to apply to pay for the repairs, then no case of actual necessity to have a credit exists. And if the lender knows these facts, or has the means, by the use of due diligence, to ascertain them, then no cause of apparent necessity exists to have a credit and the act of the master in procuring a credit does not bind the interest of the general owners in the vessel." Thomas v. Osborn, 19 How. (U. S.) 22.

In Pratt v. Reed, 19 How. (U. S.) 359, it appeared that a running account for coal was kept with a vessel trading upon the lakes, the master of which was also the owner, and it did not appear that the only means of procuring the coal was upon the credit of the vessel. It was held, therefore, as between a libellant who furnished the coal, and the mortgagees of the vessel, that the latter were entitled to the proceeds of the sale of the boat.

In Thomas v. Osborn, 19 How. (U. S.) 22, it appeared that the master had received freight money, and, with the assistance of the libellants, invested it in a series of adventures as a merchant, partly carried on by means of the vessel, the command of which he had deserted for the purpose of conducting these adventures, and that money was advanced by the libellants to enable the master to repair and supply the vessel, and purchase a cargo to be transported and sold in the course of such private adventures; and that the freight money earned by the vessel was sufficient to pay for the repairs and supplies, and might have been commanded for that use if it had not been wrongfully diverted from it by the master, with the assistance of the libellants; the court held that the latter had no lien on the vessel for their advances.

In the case of The Neversink, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 539, it appeared that the master of the steamer had no funds to pay for coal, and her charterers, who owned her pro hac vice, resided in a foreign jurisdiction, and the coal was a necessary supply, and it was obtained by the master, and credit therefor was, in fact, given to the vessel and her charterers. The court held that a lien was created on the vessel for the price of the coal furnished. In this case Mr. JUSTICE NELSON used the following language: "It has been said, or intimated, by every respectable authority, that this rule has been extended beyond its ancient strictness, in the recent cases of Thomas v. Osborn, 19 How. (U. S.) 22, and Pratt v. Reed 19 How. (U. S.) 359, and that a greater degree of proof of this necessity is now required, by these adjudications than had been previously exacted in the administration of this branch of the rule. I may be permitted to say that, having written one of the opinions, and fully concurred in the other, after extended arguments at bar, and the very discussions by the judges in their conferences, arising out of the differences of opinion among them, that no such purpose existed on the part of the court or any one of the justices; and a reference to the cases will show that the opinion delivered in each of them was placed, and intended to be placed, upon ancient and settled authority."

A claim for a sum advanced by the charterers after a vessel had been seized, and while in the custody of the court, cannot be allowed as a lien on the vessel where the advancements are not necessary for the due care and preservation of the vessel, and the charterers have actual notice of the seizure. Augustine Kobbe, 37 Fed. Rep. 702.

A lien does not attach upon a vessel, for damages for the master's refusal to accept and pay for supplies which have been ordered for the vessel's use. To create a lien, the supplies must have been actually furnished to the ship; the material man must have parted with them, and the ship must have received the benefit of them. The Cabarga, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 75.

Where the owner of a vessel has an agent residing at the place where the repairs are being made, who purchases the materials in his own name, and gives his personal undertaking to pay the price, there will be no lien on the vessel unless specially given. Phelps v. The Camilla, Taney (U. S.) 400.

Whether the credit is given to the vessel or to her owners is a question of fact; the equitable ownership does not always determine the question of credit. The George T. Kemp, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 477.

A lien upon a vessel for repairs in a foreign port exists, notwithstanding the owner may be present at the time the repairs are ordered, if the repairs were done on the credit of the vessel, and not upon that of the owner, the latter being notoriously insolvent. The Guy, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 758.

A bill of supplies to a vessel, made out in the vessel's name, is evidence that the credit was given to the vessel, and not exclusively upon the personal liability of the owners. The Mary Bell, 1 Sawyer (U. S.) 135.

For other cases concerning liens for supplies and repairs see James H. Prentice, 36 Fed. Rep. 777; Park v. Edgar Baxter, 37 Fed. Rep. 219; The Murphy Tugs, 28 Fed. Rep. 429; The Ellen Holgate, 30 Fed. Rep. 125; The Kingston, 23 Fed. Rep. 200; Berwind v. Schultz, 25 Fed. Rep. 912; The Howard, 29 Fed. Rep. 604; The General Smith, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 438; The St. Jago de Cuba, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 409; The Jerusalem, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 345; The Nestor, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 73; Zane v. The President, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 453; Woodruff v. The Levi Dearborne, 4 Am. L. J., N. S. 97; Davis v. New Brig, Gilp. (U. S.) 478; Sarchet v. The General Isaac Davis, Crabbe (U. S.) 185; The Hull of a New Brig, 3 L. Rep. U. S. 69; Nall v. The Illinois, 6 McLean (U. S.) 413; Carroll v. The T. P. Leathers, Newb. Adm. 432; Leland v. The Medora, 2 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 92; The Lulu, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 192; The Kalorama, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 204; Burke v. The M. P. Rich, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 308; The Eledona, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 511; The Washington Irving, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 318; Lyons v. The Lady Franklin, 16 Pittsb. Leg. J. 30; The Chausan, 2 Story (U. S.) 455; The Sea Lark, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 571; Scott's Case, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 336; Hatton v. Melita, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 494; Patapsco, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 329; The Native, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 34; The New Champion, 17 Fed. Rep. 816; The Eclipse, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 99.

What Are Necessaries.—A chronometer is one of the necessities of a ship, and where one is supplied to a foreign ship, upon her credit by the direction of the master, a maritime lien arises therefor. The Georgia, 32 Fed. Rep. 637.

Expenses for provisions provided passengers and crew detained on board a vessel under seizure for being engaged in an unlawful enterprise, after arrival in port, and before service of attachment under libel for forfeiture, were allowed against the vessel in the case of The City of Mexico, 28 Fed. Rep. 239.

Copper sheathing is necessary. The Perla, Swabey 353; 4 Jur. N. S. 741. Butcher's meat is necessary. The N. R. Gosfabrick, Swabey 344; 4 Jur. N. S. 742; Coals supplied at intervals to a foreign steamer for several voyages may be recovered as necessities. The West Friesland, Swabey 454; 5 Jur. N. S. 658. Rope for the use of the ship in discharging its cargo is necessary. The Ludgate Hill, 21 Fed. Rep. 431.

Seamen's clothes are not necessary. Rosenthal v. Die Gartenlaube, 5 Fed. Rep. 827. Nor are oats and hay for a canal boat laid up for the winter, where it appears that the horses and men were engaged in an occupation not maritime. The T. L. Wadsworth, 13 Fed. Rep. 46.

There is no maritime lien for unpaid premiums of insurance. The John T. Moore, 3 Woods (U. S.) 61; Insurance Co. v. Proceeds of Waubanshene, 23 Blatchf. (U. S.) 292; The Jennie B. Gilkey, 19 Fed. Rep. 127; The Paola R., 32 Fed. Rep. 74; The Dolphin, 1 Flip. (U. S.) 580, note.

Supplies of food were furnished in the city of New York to a passenger steamboat making several trips daily between that city and Long Branch, N. J., on her credit, such supplies not being absolutely necessary for the passengers or crew, but being useful and convenient. Some of the food was consumed by the employes of the vessel, but the larger part was dispensed at a restaurant on board to passengers, who paid for what they ordered. It was held that the vessel was subject to a lien for the supplies. There was sufficient necessity for them to sustain a lien, and the fact that they were dispensed to passengers from a restaurant formed no objection. HUNT, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "It is insisted that these supplies were not necessary, and, hence, that there is no lien. Necessity is a relative term. By a uniform construction of the courts much latitude is given in this respect. What is necessary for a packet ship to Liverpool or Havre, carrying passengers who pay the highest price and expect a table to be liberally supplied, may not be necessary for a vessel carrying coal or lumber, with crews working for low wages and accustomed to plain fare. But in each case, no doubt, a lien may exist for the articles supplied. I do not see that the fact of the dispensation of the supplies from a restaurant, i. e., to individuals as called for, and to be paid for by such individuals, rather than that the passengers should be charged a passage price intended to include a charge for meals furnished, makes any difference. If a British steamer is about to sail for London with a crew of fifty men and one hundred passengers, she must be provided with the means for feeding them. She must lay in the needed supplies in advance, ascertaining what will be needed. Whether she charges a passenger one hundred dollars and furnishes him a state room and a seat at a general table well provided with food, or whether she charges him fifty dollars for his state room and furnishes him meals to be paid for when and as he requires them, can be of no importance. No man can make the voyage without food, and if it is supplied by the ship's company, the particular manner in which it is dispensed cannot be of importance. It certainly cannot be competent for the ship's owner to allege that, for such reason, the articles purchased on its account are not necessary supplies." The Plymouth Rock, 13 Blatchf. (U. S.) 505.

Water casks furnished to a foreign vessel are of the nature of materials, for which there is a lien. Zane v. The President, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 453.

Furnishing an air pump to a water craft used for pumping out a dry dock is a maritime service, for which a lien in admiralty may be enforced. Winslow v. Floating Steam Pump, 2 N. J., L. J. 124.

A chain cable was loaned by its maker to a master for the use of his vessel, under an agreement that it should be returned when another chain should have been made and delivered on board; and, on such delivery of the second chain, the first was promised to be returned at a fixed time, before which the vessel sailed and the chain was never afterwards returned. It was held that the vessel was properly chargeable with the price of both chains. Sarchet v. The General Isaac Davis, Crabbe (U. S.) 185.

The owner of a cargo, part of which is sold by the master to raise money for the necessary repairs of the vessel,

(b) Presumption that They Are Furnished on the Credit of the Vessel.—Where necessary supplies have been furnished in a foreign port, the presumption of law is, that in the absence of fraud or collusion the supplies were furnished upon the credit of the vessel. It is not necessary that there should be any express pledge of the vessel.¹

and part of which is consumed by the crew and passengers on the voyage, has a lien on the vessel for the value of what is so sold and consumed. The Gold Hunter, Blatchf. & H. Adm. 300.

Clothing of Seamen.—There is no lien upon a vessel for clothing furnished to seamen, unless needed by the seamen, and essential to the prosecution of the voyage. Rosenthal v. The Die Gartenlaube, 5 Fed. Rep. 827.

The expenses of an agent for coming from Newcastle to London to assist the master in the defence of a vessel prosecuted in a cause of collision and for attending the trial, are not necessities. The Bonnie Amelie, 1 L. R., Adm. 19; 35 L. J. Adm. 115; 14 L. T., N. S. 191.

Averages.—Where money is advanced to a master to pay averages with costs, such advances are not necessities. The Altje Willemina, 1 L. R., Adm. 107.

An advance of money to pay off a bottomry bond for which a ship is arrested, being made under a contract to pay off claims outstanding on the ship, and outfit her for a new voyage, in consideration of receiving brokerage and the prepaid freight for the new voyage, is not within 3 & 4 Vict., ch. 66, § 6, and cannot be recovered in the Admiralty court. The Onni, Lush. 154; 3 L. T., N. S. 447.

"Necessaries" in 3 and 4 Vict., ch. 65, § 6, means articles immediately necessary for the ship, as contradistinguished from those merely necessary for the voyage. The Comtesse de Tregeville, 4 Lush. 329; 4 L. T., N. S. 713.

1. Presumptions.—In the case of the Grapeshot, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 129, the question of presumption as applicable to the subject of maritime hypothecation, is stated in the following propositions:

1. Liens for repairs and supplies, whether implied or express, can be enforced in admiralty only upon proof made by the creditor that the repairs or supplies were necessary, or believed, upon due enquiry and credible representation, to be necessary.

2. Where proof is made of necessity for the repairs or supplies, or for funds raised to pay for them by the master, and of credit given to the ship, a presumption will arise conclusive in the absence of evidence to the contrary, of necessity for credit.

3. Necessity for repairs and supplies is proved where such circumstances of exigency are shown as would induce a prudent owner, if present, to order them, or to provide funds for the cost of them on the security of the ship.

4. The ordering, by the master, of supplies or repairs upon the credit of the ship, is sufficient proof of such necessity to support an implied hypothecation in favor of the material man, or of the ordinary lender of money to meet the wants of the ship, who acts in good faith.

5. To support hypothecation by bottomry, evidence of actual necessity for repairs and supplies is required; and, if the fact of necessity be left unproved, evidence is also required of due enquiry and of reasonable grounds of belief that the necessity was real and exigent.

When a contract contemplates the furnishing of supplies to a vessel at a foreign port, it is to be presumed that a lien on the vessel was contemplated by the parties, unless something to the contrary appears. The Hiram R. Dixon, 33 Fed. Rep. 297.

The presumption that necessary repairs were made on the credit of the vessel, arising from the fact that the owner was a non-resident of the State where the work was done, is strengthened by the fact that such repairs were charged to the vessel at the time, and is not overthrown by the fact that libellants, when they undertook the repairs, did not know where the owner resided; nor by the fact that they were made at the request of the owner's agent at the place where they were made; nor by the fact that ninety days were given the owner in which to pay for them; nor by the fact that nothing was said about a lien. The Comfort, 25 Fed. Rep. 158; affirmed 25 Fed. Rep. 159; rehearing denied, 32 Fed. Rep. 327.

The presumption that supplies furnished to a ship in a foreign port by order of the master were furnished on the credit of the ship does not apply to a case where the material men ought to have known, or did know, that the master ordered the supplies without authority. The Esteban De Antunano, 31 Fed. Rep. 920.

(c) Must be Furnished in a Foreign and Not in a Home Port.—

No lien exists for repairs made or supplies furnished in the home port.¹ Where advances and supplies are made to a vessel in her home port, the law presumes that they were made on the personal credit of the owners.² In such a case the home port is the place where the owner of the vessel resides.³

A presumption of lien arises from the furnishing of supplies to a foreign vessel, which may be rebutted by proof that the master or agent ordering the supplies was in funds sufficient to pay therefor; that the material man either had notice of these facts, or knowledge of facts sufficient to put him on enquiry; and that reasonable enquiry or due diligence would have informed him of the existence of such funds and that there was no need of credit. Berwind v. Schultz, 25 Fed. Rep. 912. See also The Belfast, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 624; The Emily Souder, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 666; The Lulu, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 192; The Eliza Jane, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 152; The Patapsco, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 329; The Charlotte Vanderbilt, 19 Fed. Rep. 219; The New Champion, 17 Fed. Rep. 816; The E. A. Baisley, 13 Fed. Rep. 703; Randall v. Roche, 30 N. J. L. 220.

1. The leading case on this subject is The General Smith, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 438, where JUSTICE STORY said: "Where repairs have been made or necessities have been furnished to a foreign ship, or to a ship in a port of the State to which she does not belong, the general maritime law following the civil law gives the party a lien on the ship itself for his security; and he may well maintain a suit in rem in the admiralty to enforce his right. But in respect to repairs and necessities in the port or State to which the ship belongs, the case is governed altogether by the municipal law of that State, and no lien is implied unless it is recognized by that law." See also The Edith, 94 U. S. 518; affirming 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 451; s. c., 5 Ben. 432; The Circassian, 12 Am. L. Reg. 291; Gill v. Continental, 8 West. Jur. 232; Woodruff v. The Levi Dearborne, 4 Am. L. J., N. S. 97; The Eliza Jane, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 152; Russel v. The Asa R. Swift, Newb.

Adm. 553; The Francis, 21 Fed. Rep. 715; Thomas Fletcher, 24 Fed. Rep. 375.

2. The Queen of St. Johns, 31 Fed. Rep. 24; The Canary, No. 2, 22 Fed. Rep. 532; The Francis, 21 Fed. Rep. 715; Buddington v. Stewart, 14 Conn. 404. But see Fox v. Holt, 36 Conn. 558.

3. Residence of Owner.—"It has often been decided that the place of residence of the owners is to be considered the home port, even when the registration is in another State, if the facts of ownership and residence were known, or might have been known to the material man." The Jennie B. Gilkey, 19 Fed. Rep. 127.

A New Jersey corporation owned a steamboat which was enrolled in the port of New York and was run as a passenger boat between the city of New York and Long Branch, New Jersey, making several trips a day each way. It was held that her enrollment at New York did not make her a domestic vessel there, but she was, while there, a vessel in a foreign port, because her owner did not reside at New York. The Plymouth Rock, 13 Blatchf. (U. S.) 505.

The location of the custom house determines the place of enrollment; but when the place of enrollment and residence of the owners of the vessel differ, the latter will be considered the "home port," even though the place of enrollment is in another State, if the facts of the ownership and residence were known or might have been known to the material man. The Lotus, No. 2, 26 Fed. Rep. 637; Hill v. The Golden Gate, Newb. Adm. 308; 5 Am. L. Reg. 142; The Mary Bell, 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 135; Parmlee v. The Charles Mears, Newb. Adm. 197; The Albany, 4 Dill. (U. S.) 439; The E. A. Barnard, 2 Fed. Rep. 712; The Mary Chilton, 4 Fed. Rep. 847; The Rapid Transit, 11 Fed. Rep. 322; Blanchard v. The Martha Washington, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 463; The Sarah Stow, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 453.

A vessel cannot have more than one home port at a time. She may, if owned by the residents of different States, be a foreign vessel in the port of a State wherein certain of her owners reside. The Ellen Holgate, 30 Fed. Rep. 125.

If there are several equal co-owners, general or special, resident in different States, no lien will arise for supplies furnished in the State of the known residence of either. The Rapid Transit, 11 Fed. Rep. 322.

When the owner does nothing to inform the public of the charter, courts will not presume knowledge of the change of home port from the residence of the owner to that of the owner pro hac vice, so as to relieve a vessel of an otherwise valid lien. The Cumberland, 30 Fed. Rep. (U. S.) 449.

When a ship is run by charterers, being owners pro hac vice, their residence only is regarded in determining the ship's home port, and the presumptions of personal credit in regard to supplies furnished. The Francis, 21 Fed. Rep. 715.

Where a steam propeller was built by ship builders at Cleveland, under a contract with parties residents of Buffalo, N. Y., it was held that the former place was her home port until after her delivery and first voyage. The Plymouth, Newb. Adm. 56; 6 McLean (U. S.) 463.

On a libel against a vessel and her New York owners for materials furnished her at Baltimore, it was held that the portion furnished her while previously owned by a resident of Baltimore constituted no lien. Otherwise as to materials furnished after the change of ownership, unless furnished on the credit of the master. And the burden of proof of their having been furnished on his credit was on the claimants. Jones v. The Rattler, Taney (U. S.) 456.

A vessel was enrolled as belonging to a port in New Jersey, and a share in her was subsequently sold to a person in Philadelphia, who thereupon became managing owner, and obtained a new enrollment for her as belonging to Philadelphia. It was held, that as to charges for work and materials furnished, before the new enrollment, the district court in Pennsylvania had jurisdiction over her as a foreign vessel; but after that enrollment she became a domestic vessel, and as the lien which the local law of Pennsylvania gave, for work and materials furnished, had been under the law divested by her making subsequent voyages, the court had no jurisdiction as to the charges which accrued subsequently to the second enrollment. Tree v. The Indiana, Grabbe (U. S.) 479.

In the case of The Thomas Fletcher, 24 Fed. Rep. 375, PARDEE, J., considered the question of residence as connected with the ownership of vessels on which liens are filed, in the following language: "As to what port is the home port of an American ship, there arise many difficult questions. When the residence of the owner is in the same State as the nearest port to such residence, and there is no other port in the State, there is no particular trouble in ascertaining the exclusive home port, provided the ship is enrolled at the proper port; but, if all these circumstances do not occur, the home port of a ship is a matter of uncertainty, under the authorities, the weight of authority being in favor of considering all the ports of the State in which the owner resides as home ports. See The Albany, 4 Dill. (U. S.) 439, and cases there cited. In the present case, the question is whether the port of New York was, at the time the supplies were furnished, a home port of the Fletcher. It is conceded that the enrollment of the Fletcher in New York makes only a prima facie case as to that being her home port; that a prima facie case seems to be overcome by the positive evidence that Pendergast lived in New Jersey, and that Perth Amboy was the proper place for his ship to be enrolled. But it is contended (see The Albany, 4 Dill. (U. S.) 439) that as Pendergast had a continuous business place in New York, where he was nearly always to be found during business hours, New York constituted his residence, in the sense of section 4141, Rev. Stat. relating to the enrollment. Without reviewing the authorities cited to maintain this proposition, I do not think it necessary to go further in this case than the language of the statute itself, which is: "Which port shall be deemed to be at or nearest to which the owner . . . usually resides." For certain commercial purposes a person's usual place of business may be taken for his residence, not because he resides there, but because he may be, or ought to be, found there; and the statute referred to seems to contemplate that a ship owner may reside in different places, for the residence to determine the place of enrollment is to be the usual residence, and no person can have more than one such residence. Pendergast may have had a residence

A port of one of the United States, other than the State to which the vessel belongs, is a foreign port, within the principles regulating the authority of a master to create a lien upon the vessel for necessary supplies.¹

The fact that a vessel sails under a foreign register and flag does not affect the rule that a port in the State where the vessel is owned is a home port, and no maritime lien arises for supplies there furnished.²

in New York at his business place, but it was not his usual residence. His usual residence was at Plainfield, New Jersey, where he kept his family, and where he lived continuously from 1878 to 1884, perhaps going to New York city the morning of every business day, and returning to his home at night. Business men in this country may have residences and business places scattered over the whole of our great territory, but I cannot see how, as a matter of fact, they can have more than one usual residence. At all events, I am clearly of the opinion that, under the evidence in this case, Pendergast's usual residence was at Plainfield, New Jersey, and not in the city of New York. In reaching this conclusion I do not hold that Pendergast, by his conduct, may not be estopped on the matter of residence; and this might be a very important question in this case if any of the libellants herein were adjudged to have, not maritime liens, but domestic liens, under the laws of New York."

While a yacht whose home was at Boston, Mass., was at Newport, R. I., on a pleasure excursion, goods were supplied to her at Newport, and were sent to her at Newport by express. It was held that while at Newport she was in a foreign port, and subject to a lien for the goods supplied. Huron, 29 Fed. Rep. 183.

1. The Lulu, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 192; Burke v. The M. P. Rich, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 308; Ex parte Easton, 95 U. S. 68, 69; The Canada, 7 Sawy. (U. S.) 173; The St. Lawrence, 3 Ware (U. S.) 211; The Chusan, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 39; The Sarah J. Weed, 3 Lowell (U. S.) 555; The Huron, 29 Fed. Rep. 183; The Nestor, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 73; The Kalorama, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 204; The Patapsco, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 329; The Belfast, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 624; The Cumberland, 30 Fed. Rep. 449; The Sultana, 19 How. (U. S.) 359, 362; The Guy, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 758; The Rich, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 308; The James Guy, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 496;

The Plymouth Rock, 13 Blatchf. (U. S.) 505; The Regulator, 1 Haskell (U. S.) 17; The Neversink, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 539; The General Burnside, 3 Fed. Re.p. 228.

2. In The E. A. Barnard, 2 Fed. Rep. 712, the vessel was registered at St. Andrews, New Brunswick, and sailed under the British flag, but was owned by her master, who resided at Philadelphia. The court held that the home port was Philadelphia. BUTLER, J., said: "I cannot accept the conclusion that the vessel should be treated as foreign. She clearly is not. Her owner resides here, and here, therefore, is her home. That she has a foreign registry, and sails under a foreign flag, does not seem to be important. As against one who has been misled by such representations, the owner would not be allowed to assert the contrary. But here there has been no misleading. The residence of the owner in Philadelphia was well understood, and that the home of the vessels was well understood, and that the home of the vessels was therefore here, all persons dealing with him were bound to know. For necessary services and supplies furnished in foreign ports liens are allowed, on the presumption that credit is given the vessel, inasmuch as the owner personally has none there. When at home the presumption is preserved, and the credit treated as given to the owner personally. What difference can it make, therefore, that the owner registers his vessel abroad and sails under foreign colors? These facts do not affect the presumption on which alone the question of liens depends. But aside from the reasonableness of this view, the point has been so decided in this court after full consideration. In McCorker v. The Brig Thomas Walker, the owners, residing in Philadelphia, had their vessels registered abroad, and sailed under foreign colors to avoid danger from rebel cruisers, during the late war, and a lien was claimed for services ren-

(d) Chartered Vessels.—Where the general owner of a vessel charters it, and allows the charterers to have control, management, and possession of the vessel, and thus to become the owners for the voyage, he must be deemed to consent to a lien for necessary repairs and supplies furnished at a foreign port for the prosecution and completion of the voyage.¹

dered here on the ground that she was foreign. The claim was disallowed by the district court, and on appeal by the circuit court also; JUDGE GRIER filing a written opinion, in which, while expressing sympathy with the plaintiffs, he held that the foreign registration and the use of a foreign flag were unimportant, in view of the owner's residence here and the claimant's knowledge of this fact." See also the Alice Tainter, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 41; The Walkyrien, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 394; The Mary Chilton, 4 Fed. Rep. 847; The Secret, 3 Fed. Rep. 665; The Norman, 6 Fed. Rep. 406; The Albany, 4 Dill. (U. S.) 439; Hill v. The Golden Gate, 1 Newb. Adm. 308; The Plymouth Rock, 13 Blatchf. (U. S.) 505.

A domestic vessel may be subjected to liabilities of a foreign ship by being falsely held out as foreign by her owners; and material men who have been induced by such representations to give her credit may enforce their claims by a lien in admiralty, if the circumstances were calculated to deceive men of ordinary vigilance. The St. Jago de Cuba, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 409; McAlister v. The Sam Kirkham, 1 Bond (U. S.) 369; The Nestor, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 73; The Francis, 21 Fed. Rep. 715.

The term "foreign vessel" does not include a foreign built ship sold and delivered to Americans, although under an agreement that the legal title should remain in the vendor. The Guisborough, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 407; The Island City, 1 Lowell (U. S.) 375; The George T. Kemp, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 477.

Part Owners.—Where there are several part owners residing in different States, no lien arises for supplies furnished in the State of the known residence of either. Stephenson v. The Francis, 21 Fed. Rep. 715; The Rapid Transit, 11 Fed. Rep. 322; The Mary Chilton, 4 Fed. Rep. 847; Hill v. The Golden Gate, 1 Newb. Adm. 308.

Repairs were furnished in Philadelphia to a vessel wholly owned and registered in New Jersey. One sixth of the vessel was sold to a resident of Philadelphia, who was thereupon made managing owner, and a new registry was taken out in Philadelphia, and the repairs were continued under his direction. It was held that a lien accrued for the repairs prior to the sale of the one sixth, but that there was no lien for those made after the sale. Tree v. The Indiana, Crabbe (U. S.) 479.

A maritime lien does not exist for supplies sent from one State to a vessel lying at her home port within an adjoining State, which is the State of the owner's residence. The Mary McCabe, 22 Fed. Rep. 750; The Eliza Jane, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 152; 2 Jones on Liens 510.

1. Charterers.—"The affirmance of the decree of the district court may be satisfactorily placed upon the ground that the charterers were the owners of the vessel pro hac vice; that as such their contracts for necessary supplies bound the ship, and as the supplies were furnished at a foreign port, they are presumed to have been furnished on the credit of the vessel. That a charterer to whom is given the entire possession, management, and control of a ship, becomes the owner pro hac vice, although, by the terms of the charter party, the general owner appoints the master and selects the mariners, as was the case by the charter party here, is not doubted; and the proposition is assumed to be correct by the appellees. Authorities which are controlling upon this court decide that when the general owner allows the charterers to have the control, management and possession of the vessel, and thus to become the owner for the voyage, he must be deemed to consent that the vessel shall be answerable for necessary repairs and supplies to enable her to pursue her voyage, and that the special owner may bind the interest of the general owner of the vessel in this behalf. This doctrine was declared by Mr. JUSTICE NELSON, in The City of New York, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 187, where the parties furnished the supplies in a foreign port to the agent of the charterers, and knew of the charter, and that according to its terms

2. For Construction.—Materials and machinery furnished and work done in the original construction of a vessel do not give rise to a maritime lien in the United States, and a recovery therefor cannot be enforced in admiralty by a libel in rem.¹ This rule, the charterers were bound to furnish the supplies for the voyage." The India, 16 Fed. Rep. 262. See also Harney v. The Sidney L. Wright, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 474; The Stroma, 14 Fed. Rep. 599.

In The Cumberland, 30 Fed. Rep. 439, it was held that where necessary supplies and repairs are furnished a chartered vessel, of which the charterer is owner pro hac vice, and part of the time master, and it is not shown that the material men had knowledge of the charter, such supplies will give a lien at the place of residence of the charterer, as long as he is master, but not after he has appointed another master and only procures supplies as charterer. It is only in circumstances of distress in a foreign port, or where repairs or supplies are necessary to enable the vessel to complete her voyage, or reach the hands of the owners, that the master has an implied authority from the owners to bind the ship contrary to the known terms of a charter party. The William Cook, 12 Fed. Rep. 919.

Where the charterers of a vessel agree to pay all the expenses of supplying her, and a person furnishing supplies is notified by the owner of the terms of the charter party, and forbidden to credit the vessel, he cannot acquire any lien upon her for supplies afterwards furnished. The William Cook, 12 Fed. Rep. 919.

The steamship Norman, an American vessel, registered at New York, was chartered to A & Co., of that city, who agreed to place her under foreign register, and to pay the expenses of victualling, manning, coaling, oiling and running the ship, she to be at their sole use and disposal during the voyage. Possession of the ship was given to the charterers at New York, and there, on their order, the coal in question was furnished and delivered to the ship. The master and engineer had nothing to do with the purchase. It was held that, conceding that the ship, by reason of her foreign register, was in a foreign port, as the liability sought to be imposed was not created by the act or engagement of the master, in his character of master, there could be no lien, and that as the coal was furnished upon the order of A & Co., who were residents of the place where the vessel was at the time, and owners pro hac vice, the presumption was that the coal was furnished upon the personal credit of the charterers, and not upon the credit of the vessel. The Norman, 28 Fed. Rep. 383.

In The Pirate, 32 Fed. Rep. 486, it was held that there was no lien in favor of material men for repairs and supplies furnished in the port of Baltimore to two British steamers upon the orders of charterers, who were owners pro hac vice, and who were well known residents of Baltimore. See also Neill v. The Francis, 21 Fed. Rep. 921.

By a charter party it was agreed that the charterer might place an approved condenser in the vessel, one-half of the actual costs thereof to be allowed to him by the owners. Such a condenser was furnished, the charterer paying therefor one-half the price in cash, and giving his note for the balance, which was never paid. The party furnishing the condenser had at the time knowledge of the charter party. It was held that he was not entitled to a lien against the vessel for the balance of the price remaining unpaid. Howard, 29 Fed. Rep. 604.

See also in general as to charterers The City of New York, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 187; Gracie v. Palmer, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 605; The Freeman, 18 How. (U. S.) 182; The Columbus, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 487; Hill v. The Golden Gate, 1 Newb. Adm. 308.

1. Construction.—In People's Ferry Co. v. Beers, 20 How. (U. S.) 393, the Supreme Court of the United States decided that a contract to build and complete a vessel is not within the admiralty jurisdiction of the United States courts, though the intention might be to employ the vessel in navigating the ocean; and that a material man or builder, if he has a lien at all, has only the common law possessory lien, or such statutory lien as local legislation may have provided for; neither of which, of itself, confers admiralty jurisdiction. MR. JUSTICE CATRON in delivering the opinion of the court said: "It must be borne in mind that liens on vessels encumber commerce, and are discouraged; so that where the owner is present, no lien is required by the material man; nor is any where the vessel is supplied or repaired in the home port. The lien attaches to foreign ships and vessels only in favor of the carpenter who repairs in a case of necessity and in the absence of the owner. It would be a strange doctrine to hold the ship bound in a case where the owner made the contract in writing, charging himself to pay by instalments for building the vessel at a time when she was neither registered nor licensed as a sea going ship. So far from the contract being purely maritime, and touching rights and duties appertaining to navigation (on the ocean or elsewhere), it was a contract made on land to be performed on land. The wages of the shipwrights had no reference to a voyage to be performed; they had no interest or concern whatever in the vessel after she was delivered to the party for whom she was built; they were bound to rely on their contract. It was thus held by the first, Judge Hopkinson, in 1781, who then declared, as respects ship builders, that 'the practice of former time doth not justify the admiralty's taking cognizance of their suits.' (Chilton v. The Brig Hannah, Bee's Admiralty R., app. 419). And we feel warranted in saying that at no time since this has been an independent nation has such a practice been allowed. (Turnbull v. Enterprise, Bee Adm. 345.) It is proper, however, to notice the fact that district courts have recognized the existence of admiralty jurisdiction in rem against a vessel to enforce a carpenter's bill for work and materials furnished in constructing it, in cases where a lien had been created by the local law of the State where the vessel was built, such as Read v. The Hull of a New Brig, 1 Story (U. S.) 244, and Davis v. A New Brig, Gilp. (U. S.) 473; Ludington v. The Nucleus, 2 Law Jour. 563. Thus far, however, in our judicial history no case of the kind has been sanctioned by this court."

A floating scow having been constructed in New Jersey and towed to Pennsylvania, where material and machinery were furnished upon contract with the building contractors, who had undertaken to construct the scow with such machinery, held that the machinery and material were furnished in the original construction of the vessel.

The Count de Lesseps, 17 Fed. Rep. 460.

Reconstruction.—A contract for the reconstruction of a vessel was made by the owner at the home port, but owing to low water the vessel was carried to a foreign port, where the work was completed by the contractors. It was held that no lien for that portion done in the latter place arose either under the general maritime or local law of the latter place. The Rapid Transit, 11 Fed. Rep. 322.

The owner of an old and decayed boat employed libellant, who was a ship carpenter, to assist in building for him the hull of a new boat, and, after it was completed, dismantled the old boat and used some of its materials in fitting up the new one. It was held that the libellant had no lien on the new boat for his wages, or for money, etc., deposited by him for safekeeping with the master of the boat. Smith v. The Royal George, 1 Woods (U. S.) 290.

In Roach v. Chapman, 22 How. (U. S.) 129, where a steamer under libel was built in Louisville, Ky., and the person who furnished the boilers and engines libelled in admiralty in Louisiana, the court held that there was no jurisdiction on the ground that "a contract for building a ship or supplying engines, timber or other materials for her construction is clearly not a maritime contract."

A contract to build and equip a steamboat made no mention of stores, fuel, tillerline, checkline, copper wire, packing for machinery, pails for roof, bedding, etc. These things were furnished after the hull was built and the propelling power put in, and on the day they were furnished the boat made her first trip. It was held that these things should be deemed included in the contract, they being necessary to make the boat serviceable, and that, therefore, no maritime lien existed for their price. The Glenmont, 32 Fed. Rep. 703. See also Edwards v. Elliott, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 532; The Ship Norway, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 121; 23 How. 494; The Pacific, 9 Fed. Rep. 120; Baizley v. Odorilla, 121 Pa. St. 231; The No. 1, 11 L. Rep. N. S. 281; Collis v. The Coernine, 7 Am. L. Reg. 5; Collins v. The Fort Wayne, 1 Bond (U. S.) 476; The Antelope, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 405; The Guiding Star, 18 Fed. Rep. 263; Foster v. Ellis, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 83; Griffenberg v. The John Laughlin, 2 W. N. C. (Pa.) 612; Cunningham v. Hall, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 43;

however, does not apply where the work done and the material furnished was not in and about the original construction, but was for repairs or for rebuilding a portion of the vessel which had been destroyed.¹

Local laws by creating a lien for construction do not make the lien maritime so as to confer jurisdiction on the United States courts.²

3. For Advances of Money.—A lien exists for advances of money made to a captain in a foreign port to pay for necessary repairs or supplies. In such a case when the necessity is proved, the law presumes that the advances were made upon the credit of the vessel.³

The Iosco, Brown Adm. 495; Young v. The Orpheus, 2 Cliff. (U. S.) 29; 2 Parsons, Ship. & Adm. 327.

1. A steamboat was burned to the water's edge while on a voyage; her hull was then towed into port and there built upon anew, the old hull being used, but the length of the vessel increased. It was held that this was not a case of building a new vessel within the rule that a maritime lien is not accorded for building a ship, but a case of repairs to an old vessel. Hardy v. The Ruggles, 2 Hughes (U. S.) 78.

For work done in converting a steamer into a barge by taking out her engine and making the necessary repairs on the hull, the material man's lien is upon the hull only, not upon the engine. But other holders of liens upon the whole property may be required to exhaust their remedy against the engine before resorting to the hull. The Buffalo, 24 Int. Rev. Rec. 6.

A contract to furnish a ship with the means of propulsion or to change the mode of her propulsion after she is launched and afloat, is not a contract to build a ship, and is a maritime one. The Eliza Ladd, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 519.

2. Local Law Cannot Confer Jurisdiction.—In Roach v. Chapman, 22 How. (U. S.) 129, it was insisted for the libellants that the local law of Kentucky, by giving a lien, supplied the defect of jurisdiction arising from the nonmaritime character of a contract. The court, however, held that "the local laws can never confer jurisdiction on the courts of the United States."

The same question was raised in The Pacific, 9 Fed. Rep. 120, where the court said: "It is well settled that local laws can neither enlarge nor diminish the admiralty jurisdiction either by declaring those contracts to be maritime which are not, or those not maritime which are so by the admiralty law." But see the Sylvan Stream, 34 Fed. Rep. 314. See generally ADMIRALTY, vol. 1, p. 193.

3. Advances.—"The presumption of law always is, in the absence of fraud or collusion, that where advances are made to a captain in a foreign port, upon his request to pay for necessary repairs or supplies to enable his vessel to prosecute her voyage, or to pay harbor dues, or for pilotage and like services rendered to the vessel, they are made upon the credit of the vessel as well as that of her owners. It is not necessary to the existence of the hypothecation that there should be in terms any express pledge of the vessel, or any stipulation that the credit shall be given on her account. The presumption arises that such is the fact from the necessities of the vessel, and the position of the parties considered with reference to the motives which generally govern the conduct of the individuals. Moneys are not usually loaned to strangers, and it would be a violent presumption to suppose that any such course was adopted when ample security in the vessel was lying before the parties. The presumption, therefore, that advances in such cases are made upon the credit of the vessel is not repelled by any loose and uncertain testimony as to the suppositions or understandings of the parties. It can be repelled only by clear and satisfactory proof that the master was in possession of funds applicable to the expenses, or of a credit of his own or of the owners of the vessel, upon which funds could be raised by the exercise of reasonable diligence, and that the possession of such funds or credit was known to the party making the advances, or could readily have been ascertained by proper enquiry." The Emily Souder, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 666.

See also The J. F. Spencer, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 151; The Sarah Harris, 7 Ben. (U. S.) 28; The J. C. Williams, 15 Fed. Rep. 558; Janney v. The Belle Lee, 12 Int. Rev. Rec. 123; The Lucia B. Ives, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 660; Collins v. The Fort Wayne, 1 Bond (U. S.) 476.

There may be a maritime lien for advances in a foreign port to discharge existing debts which are a charge on the ship. The Tangier, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 7; The Emily Souder, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 666; The J. A. Brown, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 464; The Union Express, 1 Brown, Adm. 537.

Advances as an Insurable Interest.—Such advances create an insurable interest. In Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Baring, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 159, Mr. JUSTICE CLIFFORD said: "Advances made on the credit of a ship for necessary repairs or supplies in a foreign port create a maritime lien upon the ship, and it is well settled law that a maritime lien is a jus in re, and that it constitutes an encumbrance on the property of the ship, which is not divested by the death or insolvency of the owner. Such a lien may be enforced by a process in rem, which is founded on a right of the thing itself, or a satisfaction out of it, for some claim resting on a real or quasi proprietary right in the thing. Liens of the kind constitute an insurable interest, and it is quite clear that enough is alleged in the declaration to warrant the conclusion that the advances made in this case are properly to be regarded as constituting a maritime lien upon the bark. Contracts for repairs and supplies may be made by the master to enable the vessel to proceed on her voyage, and if it appears that it was necessary for the purpose and that they were made and furnished to a foreign vessel of the United States, to which the vessel belongs, the prima facie presumption is, that the repairs and supplies were made and furnished on the credit of the vessel unless it appears that the master had funds on hand or at his command which he ought to have applied to the accomplishment of those objects, and that the material men knew that fact or that such facts and circumstances were known to them as were sufficient to put them upon enquiry and to show that if they had used due diligence in that behalf they might have ascertained that the master had no authority to contract for such repairs and supplies on the credit of the vessel. Whenever the necessity for the repairs and supplies is once made out it is incumbent upon the owners, if they allege that the funds could have been obtained upon their personal credit, to establish that fact by competent proof, and that the material men knew the same, or were put upon enquiry, as before explained, unless those matters fully appear in the evidence introduced by the other party. Apply those principles to the case and it is clear that the objection that the plaintiffs had no insurable interest in the bark utterly fails, as it is not controverted that the advances were made to equip the vessel and to procure a cargo for her in the described voyage; and it is sufficient that such an allegation affords a prima facie presumption that the advances were made on the credit of the vessel, as the record fails to disclose any fact or circumstances to overcome that presumption. Such advances constitute a lien upon the ship, and such a lien gives the lender an insurable interest in the ship."

Seamen's Wages.—A maritime lien is accorded for money advanced to pay seamen's wages. The Dora, 34 Fed. Rep. 348.

General Average Claim.—Money advanced by the ship's agent to pay a general average claim against the ship, there having been a jettison, held, a maritime lien, and entitled to priority over bottomry bonds. The Dora, 34 Fed. Rep. 343.

Miscellaneous.—A part owner has no lien or right of priority in equity upon the ship itself for a balance of account which may be due him. The Larch, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 427; The Jennie B. Gilkey, 20 Fed. Rep. 161; Macy v. De Wolf, 3 Wood. & M. (U. S.) 193.

Advances of money to the owner of a vessel do not create a lien on her in favor of the lender, in the absence of an agreement for a lien upon the vessel; even though the money be applied to the payment of liens upon the vessel. The William A. Harris, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 210.

Advances of money for a vessel do not have a lien upon her, unless made to pay for supplies or demands which would have a lien. The Home, 18 Bankr. Reg. 557.

If a vessel is attached in a foreign port in a suit at common law against the owners, the money advanced to pay

4. For Services—(a) By Seamen.—The wages of seamen engaged in vessels transporting goods upon tide water, constitute a lien on the ship and freight in whatever hands they may be. It has been said that they are nailed to the last plank of the ship.¹ If, this debt does not create a lien on the vessel, though the owners could not pay and the master could release the ship in no other way. The A. R. Dunlap, 1 Lowell (U. S.) 350. See also The Superior, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 346.

A claim for a sum advanced by the charterers after a vessel has been seized, and while in the custody of the court, cannot be allowed as a lien on the vessel where the advancements are not necessary for the due care and preservation of the vessel, and the charterers have actual notice of the seizure. Augustine Kobbe, 37 Fed. Rep. 702.

A bank which has paid money on the checks of the master and owners of a vessel has no lien under the Oregon statute providing for liens for materials furnished by "mechanics, tradesmen or others." Oreg. L. P. 651. Although the money was used to pay debts contracted for materials. City of Salem, 31 Fed. Rep. 616.

The general agents of a ship were accustomed to advance money for her, and deduct the amount in remitting the freight to the owner. It was held that they had no lien on the ship, though they did not have the exclusive control of her, her master being general superintendent of the corporation owning her. Raleigh, 32 Fed. Rep. 633.

1. Seamen's Wages.—In Pitman v. Hooper, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 50, JUSTICE STORY said: "The seamen's wages generally constitute a lien, or claim upon the ship and freight, and upon the proceeds thereof, in whatever hands they may be, which must be paid before any other claim. It has been significantly said that they are nailed to the last plank of the ship; a figurative expression which will be found used in one of the earliest maritime codes in modern times (The Consolato del Mare) of which we have any distinct traces, and it may be added that they adhere also to the last fragment of the freight. . . . The wages of seamen constitute, as has been justly remarked at the argument, a peculiar class of contracts; and the principles applicable to them do not belong to the ordinary contracts for hire and services. In ordinary contracts for hire and services the persons employed do not partake of any of the risks of the owner in relation to the property. They are entitled to their full compensation for labor and services on the property although it shall be utterly lost or destroyed by accident or superior force. Not so with the contract of seamen for maritime voyages and adventures. The policy of the maritime law has in such cases subjected them to the risk of the voyage to a limited extent; for the payment of wages is ordinarily made to depend upon the earning of freight in the voyage. If freight is not earned in the voyage, in consequence of an overwhelming calamity, or an unexpected accident, the seamen generally lose their wages. But if freight is earned in the voyage, and for the voyage, whether greater or less, and whether it is actually secured by the owner, or not, makes no difference in the rights of the seamen."

A seaman may have a lien for service as such, though he served only in port. Levering v. Bank of Columbia, 1 Cranch C. Ct. (U. S.) 152; The Blohm, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 228.

Extra Wages.—The lien for wages extends to extra wages. The Wexford, 7 Fed. Rep. 674.

Mariners hired for a voyage, who pursuant to the contract presented themselves at the wharf where the boat lay and offered their services, but without good reason were refused admission to the boat, may sue in rem in admiralty for their stipulated wages, the boat having prosecuted the voyage. The Acorn, 32 Fed. Rep. 638.

Some roustabouts shipped for a trip from Cairo to New Orleans and return, and were discharged at New Orleans for no reason other than that there was ice above Cairo and that the boat did not care to return. The roustabouts were paid to date of discharge and were given a little money besides, but not enough to take them to Cairo. It was held that they could enforce, in admiralty, payment of their wages for the return trip and their necessary expenses in returning. The City of New Orleans, 33 Fed. Rep. 683.

Under the British Merchants' Shipping act, a vessel has no right to aban-however, seamen enter into a contract to serve on a vessel relying upon the exclusive credit of the master, they cannot have a lien for their wages.¹

don a disabled seaman without payment of his wages up to the time of his being left on shore, together with provisions for his return home. The seaman, in such case, may recover the penalty given by the British statute, together with his wages, by libel against the vessel. Harvey v. Smith, 35 Fed. Rep. 367.

The lien of seamen for wages takes priority over claims of the United States for penalties incurred by the vessel for failure to keep posted the certificate of inspection, to have the name of the vessel painted upon the stern, or to carry sufficient life preservers, as required by statute; and it is immaterial that the seamen served with knowledge of such failures on the part of the vessel, as the statutes do not impose upon them any duty with respect thereto. Jennie Hayes, 37 Fed. Rep. 373.

In a libel for seaman's wages, the defence was that the service were rendered as master. It appeared that libellant had been employed for some time as a seaman, and that the master desiring to stop ashore for a few trips, he and libellant went to the custom house, and the master caused libellant to be enrolled as master. Libellant made only one trip as master, but his name continued on the enrollment as master, and he reported and cleared at the custom house. It was held that he was entitled to a lien for seaman's wages except during the one trip through which he actually served as master. Peterson v. Nellie and Annie, 37 Fed. Rep. 217.

Ordinary laborers were employed by the freighter of a vessel, for the purpose of excavating and loading cargo, and went out and returned on the vessel as passengers. Their contract was made independently of the vessel, and the work done by them was for the freighter and on his credit, and not for the vessel or for her credit, or on that of the cargo, but during the passage they rendered slight and occasional help in working the ship, though such service did not appear to have been in obedience to orders, or otherwise than voluntary, and the vessel had a full complement of officers and men. It was held that the vessel was liable for their wages. Sarah E. Kennedy, 29 Fed. Rep. 264.

Seamen who had been hired for a voyage were, without good reason, refused admission to the vessel at the beginning of the voyage, and could not get employment elsewhere. It was held that they had a lien for wages for the voyage. Acorn, 32 Fed. Rep. 638; The Alanson Sumner, 28 Fed. Rep. 670.

Claimant had chartered his vessel for a wrecking expedition, the charterer to furnish provisions and men and pay all wages. The libellants were the former crew, who had continued as such with knowledge of the charter, and under a contract made for them by claimant with the charterer. Held, no express agreement not to hold the vessel liable being shown, that the libellants were entitled to a lien for their wages. L. L. Lamb, 31 Fed. Rep. 29.

Libellants claimed a lien for wages against defendant tug-boat. The services had been performed as hands on canal boats belonging to owners of the tug, which the tug was regularly used to tow. It was held that the lien could not be supported. Ida Meyer, 31 Fed. Rep. 89.

The captain and crew of a vessel abandoned her in a foundering condition, saving some property belonging to her. The vessel and the articles saved were sold for $500, under an agreement between the creditors, which was not signed by the seamen, to share pro rata, and the vessel was not found. It was held that the seamen had a lien on the $500 for their wages in full. Hart v. Proceeds of the Oakland, 32 Fed. Rep. 234. See also International, 30 Fed. Rep. 375; Flanagan v. United States etc. S. S. Co., 30 Fed. Rep. 202; Andalina, L. R., 12 P. D. 1; 56 L. T., N. S. 171; Live Oak, 30 Fed. Rep. 78; Shelbourne, 30 Fed. Rep. 510; Honora Carr, 31 Fed. Rep. 842; Lizzie Dun, 30 Fed. Rep. 927; Hunter, 11 Sawy. (U. S.) 426; Rob Roy, 30 Fed. Rep. 696; The Bolivar, Olc. Adm. 480; The Mary, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 204; The Louisa, 2 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 48; Levering v. Bank of Columbia, 1 Cranch, C. Ct. (U. S.) 152; The Blohm, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 228; The Guiding Star, 9 Fed. Rep. 521; The Alanson Sumner, 28 Fed. Rep. 670; Poland v. The Spartan, 1 Ware (U. S.) 134; Sheppard v. Taylor, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 675; The Ole Oleson, 20 Fed. Rep. 384.

1. Scott v. Failes, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 82;

The claim of seamen for their wages constitutes a lien upon the vessel, the freight, and the proceeds of the sale of both.¹

The Highlander, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 510; The Sirocco, 7 Fed. Rep. 599; Fisher v. The Galloway, C. Morris, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 572; The Canton, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 437; The Bombard, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 493; The Montauk, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 455.

1. In the case of shipwreck during the voyage, the seamen, if they remain by the ship and assist in the salvage, will be entitled to receive their wages out of the fragments of the wreck, if enough is saved to pay them, even though the entire freight be lost by the total destruction and loss of the cargo. Pitman v. Hooper, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 50.

In the case of a general average in the course of a voyage, the wages of seamen do not contribute to the loss, though the ship, cargo and freight all do, and though thereby a part of the freight for the voyage is necessarily lost. In such a case it is plain that the loss of freight does not entitle the owner to make a pro rata deduction of the wages. Pitman v. Hooper, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 50.

Where a vessel is abandoned at sea, the crew, shipped for an indefinite period, have a lien on her, in the hands of salvors, for their wages due at the last port of delivery, before the abandonment. The Joseph Stewart, Crabbe (U. S.) 218.

A libellant shipped in June, 1809, as a seaman, on a voyage from Marblehead to St. Petersburg, and thence back to the United States; the outward cargo was duly delivered, a return cargo to the same amount was taken on board, and the ship sailed in June, 1810, on her homeward voyage, in the course of which she was captured by some Danish gun brigs, and afterwards condemned. The libellant continued on board the ship until her condemnation, when he was discharged. Under the treaty between the United States and the king of Denmark, of the 28th of March, 1830, providing a certain sum in full for compensation of services, detentions and condemnations by the king of Denmark, the respondent, administrator of the ship and cargo, received $19,115 in full for his proportion of the indemnity granted, being about one-third of his loss ($61,416). It was held that the libellant was entitled to recover of the respondent full wages, and not simply a pro rata proportion, according to the amount received by the ship owner, and this though the commissioners under the treaty made no express allowance on account of the freight. Pitman v. Hooper, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 50.

Seamen have a lien for wages upon the proceeds of the sale of articles belonging to an abandoned vessel, which were saved by the master and crew. Hart v. Proceeds of the Oakland, 32 Fed. Rep. 234.

The master of a fishing vessel hired her of the owners for the season, and undertook to pay the men, certain of whom were hired on wages. The vessel was lost during the season, and parts of her tackle, etc., were saved, and sold in Nova Scotia. It was held that the owners were liable to an action in admiralty by the men for their wages, to the extent of the proceeds of the sale of the wreck. The men had a lien on the vessel, and a fund arising out of a res upon which seamen have a lien can be followed in admiralty though the thing itself has been destroyed, or is out of the jurisdiction. Flaherty v. Doane, 1 Lowell (U. S.) 148.

Where the owner of a shipwrecked vessel appeared with a competent force, superseding the officers, and took the business of salvage out of the hands of the seamen, afforded the latter no subsistence, nor desired their aid, which they were willing to render, it was held that the seamen might recover wages in rem against the remnants of the vessel. The Massasoit, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 97.

Fishermen who are employed to go to the fishing grounds and to set the nets and clean the fish, are entitled to a lien, though they take no part in the navigation of the vessel. The Minna, 11 Fed. Rep. 759; The Ocean Spray, 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 105.

Wages of seamen in the whaling service are secured by lien upon the oil. The Antelope, 1 Lowell (U. S.) 130.

A seaman who ships for a voyage in violation of the acts prohibiting the slave trade is not entitled to his wages out of the proceeds of the forfeited vessel. The St. Jago de Cuba, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 409. But contra if the seaman did not know of the illegal character of the voyage. Sheppard v. Taylor, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 675.

The lien for seamen's wages is prior and paramount to all other claims on the vessel,¹ but the claim must be asserted within a reasonable time, or a preference in its favor will not be allowed.²

The lien of seamen for wages is a personal privilege and is not assignable. If an assignment of the claim is made, the assignee has no standing in a court of admiralty to enforce it as a lien against the vessel.³ The representatives of a deceased seaman, however, may sue in admiralty for wages earned by the decedent in his lifetime,⁴ and a father may proceed in rem for wages of his minor son earned as a seaman.⁵

See in general Brackett v. Hercules, Gilp. (U. S.) 184; The Monadnock, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 357; The Sailor Prince, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 234; Poland v. The Spartan, 1 Ware (U. S.) 134; Sheppard v. Taylor, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 675.

Mere landmen are not entitled to a lien for services. The Canton, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 437; The Ida Meyer, 31 Fed. Rep. 89.

1. "The claim of mariner's wages has a priority above all other claims against the vessel, the freight and the proceeds of both into whose ever hands they come. It is a permanent lien, and secures to the mariner for his wages a preference above all other persons, and they may be enforced in admiralty against a bona fide purchaser, without regard to the title through which the purchaser claims." Foster v. Steamboat Pilot, No. 2, 1 Am.L. Reg. 403. See also The Sailor Prince, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 234; U. S. v. Wilder, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 308; The Charles Baylis, 25 Fed. Rep. 862; The City of Mexico, 28 Fed. Rep. 207; The Henry Warner, 29 Fed. Rep. 601.

2. Thus a claim for three years' wages as a seaman, which is two years old, and no attempt has been made to collect it, and no excuse given for the delay, should be postponed to liens of other bona fide lienors. The Nellie Bloomfield, 27 Fed. Rep. 524.

But seamen's wages sued for during the season next after they accrue are not stale as against mortgages executed before the wages were earned. The Live Oak, 30 Fed. Rep. 78.

Where a seaman shipped for a part of a voyage is discharged at the termination of his engagement, without payment of wages, if he follows up the vessel, and immediately upon meeting her commences suit against her, his lien for wages is not destroyed, though the vessel has made one or more voyages since his discharge. Freeman v. The Jane, Crabbe (U. S.) 178.

Seamen's lien for wages was held to be lost, rights of a bona fide purchaser having intervened, by several years' delay to sue, though during a considerable part of the time he did not know where she was. The Artisan, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 538.

When the ownership of a vessel has not been changed, and no appreciable injury has resulted to the owner, forbearance by a seaman to demand and collect his wages (here, continued for twenty-one months) does not impair his lien. Fisher v. The Galloway, C. Morris, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 572.

3. Logan v. The Aeolina, 1 Bond (U. S.) 267; Rusk v. The Freestone, 2 Bond (U. S.) 234; The Gate City, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 200.

4. In Sims v. Jackson, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 414, a mariner who shipped to perform a voyage from Philadelphia to the Batavia and back to Philadelphia, at a certain rate of wages per month, having performed the voyage to Batavia died there, and the vessel returned to the port from which she sailed. It was held that the administratrix of the deceased mariner was entitled to recover the wages which the intestate would have received had he lived and returned in the vessel. See also Hart v. The Littlejohn, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 115; Walton v. The Neptune, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 142; Johnson v. The Coriolanus, Crabbe (U. S.) 239. But see Writer v. The Richmond, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 263; Natterstorm v. The Hazard, Bee Adm. (U. S.) 441; also 2 Am. Law J. 359.

5. Gifford v. Kollock, 3 Ware (U. S.) 45; Coffin v. Shaw, 11 L. Rep. N. S. 463; Lovrein v. Thompson, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 355.

The father's right may be renounced

A seaman who is a part owner of the vessel in which he serves, is not thereby precluded from enforcing a lien in admiralty for wages.¹

by his voluntarily allowing his child the exclusive rights of the fruits of his labor; or may be forfeited by his neglecting to perform those parental duties which are the foundation of this right. McGinnis v. The Grand Turk, 2 Pittsb. (Pa.) 326.

The minor may sue in his own name if the father waives his privilege. The David Faust, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 187; Wicks v. Ellis, Abb. Adm. 444; Burdett v. Williams, 30 Fed. Rep. 697.

A father agreed to run a vessel on shares and to pay all the expenses of running her; and his minor son, being a member of his household, and living on board as a member of the father's family, acted as mate. It was held that no lien against the vessel could, under such circumstances, be acquired by either the father or son. The Hattie Low, 14 Fed. Rep. 880. To the same effect The Modoc, 20 Fed. Rep. 398.

1. Part Owners Serving as Seamen.

armed—This question was carefully considered in the case of Foster v. Steamboat Pilot No. 2, 1 Am. L. Reg. 403, where the court said: "It is contended that two of the libellants, though they might have been, as alleged, employed as mariners in the vessel, yet as part owners of it they could not by any known principles of law proceed by libel in admiralty for the recovery of the wages; that all the owners of the vessel were debtors for wages, and all equally liable; that the libellants could not separate themselves from the part owners and assert a separate claim against the partnership property, which, in effect, would be to claim against themselves as well as against their co-partners, nor could they claim against a bona fide purchaser of the partnership property under a judicial sale; that such claims for services to the partnership in a steam vessel or otherwise might be met with similar or equally good claims by other part owners, and that their separate or mutual charges and accounts can only be legally settled by the law of partnership. It was further urged that, if part owners of a vessel had in admiralty a lien for wages as mariners, the right would extend to all other admiralty liens to the exclusion of creditors, and thus open a door to fraudulent claims, which, in most instances, it would be impossible to expose or successfully resist. The argument in this case is specious, but unsound. The owners of a steam vessel must from necessity, in a voyage of that vessel, be subject to mariner's wages: and if it should happen that one of their number should be employed as a mariner, such employment would be in a capacity distinct from, and unconnected with, the appropriate business partnership of that nature, the object of which is either to let the vessel out to freight, or for mutual adventure in vessel and cargo. As one of the crew, his name would regularly be included in the shipping articles for the voyage; and either by them or other contracts his station and rate of wages would be determined; and while subject to all the penalties and forfeitures, prescribed by the act of congress for a failure to perform his duties as a mariner, he would, as such, be entitled to the stipulated wages, and the triple remedy which the law provides for enforcing its payment—a lien upon the vessel, the freight and the proceeds of both regardless of partnership relations and liabilities, unless, by express contract, another way of securing his wages had been provided. Without such an agreement it would be fair to infer that his copartners in a vessel-regarded his right to wages as unconnected with, and beyond the control of the partnership. In pursuing the remedy of libel it would, therefore, be enough for the libellant to show, by the shipping articles or otherwise, that he shipped as a mariner, and, as such, was entitled to wages, and that his wages were due and unpaid. The act of congress, which secures this right, is in accordance with the policy and usage of maritime law, which regards with peculiar favor and tenderness the situation of seamen, by giving them a lien for wages paramount to all other claims, and a summary remedy for enforcing the right, unaffected by collateral matters or common law pleadings. But whatever doubt there may be as to the remedy, when a vessel is owned by several in strict partnership, there can be none in a case where they are merely part owners, as the respondents are alleged to be in the answer, and as they must be taken to be in the absence of all controlling circumstances. The general relation of part owners of a vessel is that of tenants in common, and not as copartners; they are, therefore, not liable in solido, nor entitled, in the settlement of their accounts, to be governed by the principle of partnership. Nichols v. Munford, 4 John. Chan. R. (N. Y.) 522; 2 John. 611. There are exceptions, but this case is not one of them; and as liens may arise either from express or implied assignments, it is but a reasonable presumption, when not opposed by special or express contract, that part owners do not intend to rely solely upon the personal responsibility of each other to reimburse themselves for expenses and charges incurred upon the common property for the common benefit, but that there is a mutual understanding that they shall possess a lien in rem. Story's Partn. 444. The navigation of the western waters by steamboats is often attended with more than ordinary risk and loss; to lessen such risk it is not unusual for those about to engage in such business to unite in partnership with one or more persons, known to be skilful and trustworthy mariners, whose interest in the vessel, though generally small, is always sufficient to call into action the greatest amount of vigilance, ability and care of which they are capable, an advantage which it would be vain to expect from mariners bound to their duty only by the prospects of ordinary wages." See Dowling v. The Reliance, 1 Woods (U. S.) 284.

A lien for the wages of seamen is not discharged by a sale of a vessel on execution against its owners.¹

(b) By the Master.—A master has no lien on the ship for his wages. This rule is based on the fact that the master trusts to the personal credit of the owner, and also on the fact that such a lien would be attended with great inconvenience and expense to the owners, if the master could enforce it abroad, for wages due him, and thus compel a sacrifice of the ship.²

1. Foster v. Steamboat Pilot No. 2, Am. Law Reg. 403; Taylor v. The Royal Saxon, 1 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 311; Harris v. The Henrietta, Newb. Adm. 284; The Gazelle, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 378; The Julia Ann, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 382; McGinnis v. The Grand Turk, 2 Pittsb. (Pa.) 326; 4 West L. Month. 80; The Highlander, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 510.

2. Master.—Following the rule of the English admiralty, the courts of this country, from the earliest times, have held that the master should not be classed with the seamen in having the privileges against the ship for the payment of the wages. Various reasons have been assigned for this by elementary writers and learned judges. MR. JUSTICE STORY, in Willard v. Dorr, 3 Mason (U. S.) 91, says that it has generally been ascribed to the fact that the master, when he contracts, trusts to the personal credit of the owner, not quoting, but doubtless following, SIR WILLIAM SCOTT in The Favorite, 2 C. Rob. 232, who states that the master when he hires is supposed to stand on the security of his personal contract. In The Grand Turk, 1 Paine (U. S.) 73, LIVINGSTONE, J., remarks that, in addition to the foregoing reason, the master is not allowed a lien for his wages on account of the inconvenience and expense to which owners might be subjected if, in every dispute with the master, he could take their vessel out of their hands and thus compel them to submit to improper charges." The M. Vandercook, 24 Fed. Rep. 472. See also The Grand Turk, 1 Paine (U. S.) 73; Phillips v. The Thomas Scattergood, Gilp. (U. S.) 1; Revens v. Lewis, 2 Paine (U. S.) 202; Gardner v. New Jersey, 1 Pet. Adm. 223; The Melita, 3 Blat. L. Trans. 133; The Eolian, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 321; The Orleans v. Phœbus, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 175; The Dubuque, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 20; Vowell v. Bacon, 4 Cranch U. S. (C. C.) 97; The Island City, 1 Lowell (U. S.) 375; Fisher v. Willing, 8 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 118; The Imogene M. Terry, 19 Fed. Rep. 463; The J. L. Pendergast, 32 Fed. Rep. 415; The Hattie Low, 14 Fed. Rep. 880.

The master of a vessel has no lien upon a vessel for services as a pilot, where he acts in both capacities. The Eolian, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 321.

The rule of law that the captain of a vessel has no lien upon it for his wages is not applicable to a person who, though calling himself captain, neither contracts directly with the owners nor has any charge for freights and moneys, but is, except in name, an ordinary seaman. The Imogene M. Terry, 19 Fed. Rep. (U. S.) 463.

(c) By Subordinate Officers.—Subordinate officers and employes of a ship are in the same position as seamen, and have a lien for their wages.¹

A man being sent for by one of his friends made a journey to get employment as master of a vessel; it was held that he could not recover the expense of the journey from the owner, though the owner knew that he was so sent for, his compensation dating only from the time when the contract of the employment was made. Kells v. Boyd, 31 Fed. Rep. (U. S.) 631.

The libellant sued in rem to recover wages due him as master of a certain bark, claiming a lien under the British Merchant Shipping act, upon the theory that the bark was a British vessel. The libellant was a citizen of this country and made the contract to act as master in the city of New York with the real owner of the vessel, also a citizen of this country, in possession under a mortgage with irrevocable power of attorney. The vessel was registered in the name of a British subject, but this fact was unknown to the libellant at the time of making the contract. It was held, as between the contracting parties, the vessel was to be considered as an American vessel, and a lien of a master for wages under the laws of Great Britain did not attach. Chisholm v. The J. L. Pendergast, 32 Fed. Rep. 415.

One who was actually employed and served as master cannot support a lien for wages by showing that, in the application for a fishing licence, he was misrepresented as a seaman. The John A. Morgan, 28 Fed. Rep. 895.

Though the master of a vessel has no lien for wages, his claim being a maritime one, he may be paid from the surplus of the proceeds, as against the owner. Adams v. Wyoming, 2 N. J. L. J. 275.

The master of a vessel has no lien on the cargo of the vessel for his wages beyond the amount of the freight thereof; and where, for any reason, he does not unload the cargo, he is only entitled to a lien upon such of the freight as the vessel has actually earned, that being the freight less what it costs to unload. The Arcturus, 17 Fed. Rep. 95.

The sailing master of a yacht is entitled to a lien for his wages. The Carlotta, 30 Fed. Rep. 378.

1. A purser hired for a year on a vessel making regular trips between ports has a lien for his wages for the entire year and may enforce it before the end of that year, if discharged without cause. The Wanderer, 20 Fed. Rep. 655.

Engineer.—Under a charter of a steam lighter, the owner had the right to name the engineer, but all wages were to be paid by the charterer. The owner nominated the engineer and fully explained to him the provisions of the charter; but no special reference was made to the question of lien. It was held that the engineer was entitled to a lien on the vessel for his wages. International, 30 Fed. Rep. 375; The Murphy Tugs, 28 Fed. Rep. 429.

The engineer and mate of an enrolled towboat, employed in towing vessels in and about a harbor, have a maritime lien upon the steamer for their wages. The May Queen, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 588.

Upon a libel for wages for services as engineer etc. of a tug, it appeared that the services were rendered under an oral contract in the nature of a charter of a tug by her owner to the libellant; but that this contract had been abandoned by the parties. It was held that the abandonment left the libellant at liberty to sue for wages, and that unless rights of third persons had arisen, his wages were a lien upon the tug. The Louie Dole, 11 Biss. (U. S.) 479.

A part owner of a vessel condemned in admiralty will not be permitted to assert a claim for his wages as engineer of the vessel against creditors who have liens against it for which he may be personally liable. Petrie v. The Coal Bluff No. 2, 3 Fed. Rep. 531.

Mate.—Where the owners of goods shipped on a vessel and sold by the mate while temporarily acting as master in a foreign port, brought an action in rem for compensation, and the mate interposed his demand for wages, which were allowed by the court as his services as mate, leaving him to an action in personam against the owners for his services as master, it was held that in such action the libellants could not compel the mate to apply the surplus of proceeds in his hands to his claim for wages as mate. He had a lien on that fund as against the owners for his wages as master. The Leonidas, Olc. Adm. 12.

(d) By Other Persons.—A maritime lien for services is usually accorded to stevedores, laborers and other persons upon a foreign vessel, when the services are rendered at the request of the master. It was formerly held that a stevedore's contract for loading a vessel was not within the admiralty jurisdiction, but that his contract for unloading was. The tendency now is to hold that a stevedore's contract, both for loading and unloading, if made with the master, is binding on the ship.¹

Cook.—On a libel for cook's wages on a schooner, it appeared that libellant agreed generally to perform services to pay for his transportation and board. The cook was taken sick and libellant served as cook through a long and stormy voyage, the schooner being blown far out of her course. It was held that he was entitled to cook's wages, and this although the master had procured his signature to shipping articles which were not read to him and of the contents of which he was not informed, he being, moreover, unable to read. Johnson v. Frank S. Hall, 38 Fed. Rep. 258.

The cook of a tug had an agreement with the master to board the crew for so much a week. It was held that neither under the general maritime law nor the law of New Jersey could the cook impose a lien on the tug for the price of the provisions purchased by him. The William A. Levering, 35 Fed. Rep. 783.

Physician.—In Gardner v. The New Jersey, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 223, it was held that a physician employed by contract on board a vessel has no lien for his fees.

Quarantine commissioners have a lien for attending to sick sailors. Platt v. The Georgia, 34 Fed. Rep. 79.

The ship's husband ordinarily has no lien upon the ship for advances. The Larch, 2 Curtis (U. S.) 427; The Sarah J. Weed, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 555; The J. C. Williams, 15 Fed. Rep. 558; White v. Americus, 19 Fed. Rep. 848; The Esteban de Antunano, 31 Fed. Rep. 920; The Raleigh, 32 Fed. Rep. 633; Minturn v. Maynard, 17 How. (U. S.) 477; The Tangier, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 7; The Cabot Abb. Adm. 150.

1. Stevedores.—This subject was carefully considered by DEADY, J., in The Canada, 7 Fed. Rep. (U. S.) 119, who, in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "To my mind it is very plain that the services of a stevedore are maritime in their nature. A voyage cannot be begun or ended without the stowing or discharge of cargo. To receive and deliver the cargo are as much a part of the undertaking of the ship as its transportation from one port to another. Indeed, it is an essential part of such transportation. Freight is not due or earned until the cargo is at least placed on the wharf at the end of the ship's tackle. To say that the final delivery or discharge of the cargo is not a maritime service because it is or may be performed partly on shore is simply begging the question, as it is the nature of the service, and not the place where rendered, that determines its character in this respect. Without the services performed by the libellants The Canada would have been unable to accomplish her voyage, or to commence another one. The ship was in a foreign port, and the master without funds or credit. Standing in the place of the owner, he was under obligation to deliver the cargo of iron as he did. How was he to procure the necessary labor otherwise than upon the credit of the vessel? As it turns out, the owners are insolvent, the freight is hypothecated, the master is probably unable to pay, and, unless the ship is liable, the libellants will lose their labor, for which the ship or owners have received this value from the freighters. Under these circumstances it would not only be an inconvenience but a gross failure of justice if the libellants were denied the right to recover from the vessel for the labor thus performed upon its account and credit. In my judgment the law and the right of this case are with the libellants, and I decline to follow the decisions to the contrary."

In The Wivanhoe, 26 Fed. Rep. 927, HUGHES, J., said: "I see no reason why a stevedore's contract for loading, if made with the master of the vessel, is not to be deemed maritime. On the other hand, I can well perceive that if a stevedore makes a contract with one who wishes to ship merchandise on a vessel, to put the merchandise on board, both being landsmen, and neither having any other mercantile relation to the vessel, I say I see no reason why such a contract should be held binding on the ship. But where the master himself employs to put and stow his cargo on board, the contract seems to me to be as distinctly maritime as any other contract which the master may make with a landsman touching the vessel herself or her cargo."

The rule as laid down in the above cases has been applied in The Roberts v. Windermere, 2 Fed. Rep. 722; The Circassian, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 209; The George T. Kemp, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 477; The Esteban de Antunano, 31 Fed. Rep. 920; The Hattie M. Bain, 20 Fed. Rep. 389; The Senator, 21 Fed. Rep. 191; McCarty v. The Senator, 1 Flippin (U. S.) 609; The Velox, 21 Fed. Rep. 479; The Kate Tremaine, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 60; The Scotia, 35 Fed. Rep. 916. It is also to be inferred from the decision in The Emily Souder, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 669.

The earlier cases contra are Paul v. The Bark Ilex, 2 Woods (U. S.) 229; Cox v. Murray, 1 Abb. Adm. 340; McDermott v. The S. G. Owens, 1 Wall. Jr. C. C. (U. S.) 370; The Amstel, B. & H. Adm. 215; The Joseph Cunard Olc. Adm. 123; The L. A. Barnard, 2 Fed. Rep. 712.

But laborers employed by the head stevedore are not entitled to a lien upon the vessel. In the Hattie M. Bain, 20 Fed. Rep. 389, a libel was filed by several persons claiming wages due them for stevedore work in unloading a cargo of logwood. The head stevedore was one McAllister, by whom most of the libellants were originally employed. The testimony showed that a number of them being informed that he was not to be trusted to pay them, went to the captain and told him that they would stop work unless he would see them paid, and that the captain being in haste for the discharge of the cargo promised that he would see that they were paid. The captain admitted that on the last day he employed two of the men, but denied that he employed or promised to pay any others. BROWN, J., in delivering the opinion of the court said:

14 C. of L.—28

"As respects those workmen to whom the captain's promise, if any, was collateral only to the obligation of McAllister, and who did not work on the faith of the captain's promise, no recovery can be had, for it was McAllister's debt, and it is impossible, under the present known customs, that workmen engaged by the head stevedore should not understand that they should look to him for their pay. The old law of the Consulado expressly provided that where the workmen knew the work was done by a contractor by the job the ship could not be seized. Vol. 2, ch. 54, § 83; The Mark Lane, 13 Fed. Rep. 800. But the Consulado also declares that if the patron (captain) promise to pay the workmen, and they work on the faith of it, though the work be let out to a contractor by the job, that promise must be made good. Chap. 54, § 85. Where the original employment is by another, and the alleged promise by the master is disputed, no liability of the ship can be admitted, unless the court is clearly satisfied that the work itself was done on the faith of the master's promise; a subsequent promise by the master to see the men paid is a mere collateral promise and insufficient. In the present case I think this is made out in regard to only the libellants, and I therefore allow as follows: . . . and I disallow the other claims." See also The Whitaker, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 229; The Director, 34 Fed. Rep. 57; The Mark Lane, 13 Fed. Rep. 800; The Hattie M. Bain, 20 Fed. Rep. 389.

Watchmen.—Where a watchman's services are connected with the voyage performed, or to be performed, and for the benefit of all interested, he may have a maritime lien for his wages. The Erinagh, 7 Fed. Rep. 231.

But there is no lien for wages of a watchman employed on a vessel while lying up in port. The John T. Moore, 3 Woods (U. S.) 61; Phillips v. Thomas Scattergood, 1 Gilp. (U. S.) 1; Gurney v. Crockett, Abb. Adm. 490; The Harriet Olcott, Abb. Adm. 229.

Nor is a watchman placed in charge of a vessel by the master entitled to recover for services rendered after the ship is seized by a marshal in execution of process. The Erinagh, 7 Fed. Rep. 231.

The shipkeeper of a domestic vessel which is being repaired for a new use has no lien on her for his wages. The Island City, 1 Lowell (U. S.) 375.

A watchman was employed on a

5. For Towage.—Towage is a maritime service for which a lien is accorded,¹ but the service must have been rendered on the credit of the ship and not on the personal credit of the employers.² The service must be actually rendered to carry a lien; an unexecuted contract to perform towage is not enough.³

6. For Pilotage.—The pilot has a lien for services rendered to a vessel coming in and going out of port.⁴

7. For Wharfage.—A contract for wharfage is a maritime contract. If the vessel is a foreign one, or belongs to a port of a steamer in port, it being, among other things, his duty to move her from one anchorage to another, which he did on several occasions. He also procured labor and materials for her repair and preservation. Held, that he had a maritime lien on the vessel enforceable in admiralty. The Maggie P., 32 Fed. Rep. 300.

Brokers and Agents.—A ship's broker has a lien on a foreign vessel, in the nature of the lien of a material man for services in shipping a crew for the vessel and for advances for their wages. But he has no lien for services in drawing a contract between the owner of horses shipped as part of her cargo and the hostlers who accompanied her to take care of the horses. The Gustavia, B. & H. Adm. 189; The Crystal Stream, 25 Fed. Rep. 575; The J. C. Williams, 15 Fed. Rep. 558.

In the case of The Thames, 10 Fed. Rep. (U. S.) 848, the court held that a shipping broker has no lien for services for procuring a charter party, on the ground that this was clearly separable as a preliminary service leading to a maritime contract, and was not of itself a maritime service. See also the Paola R., 32 Fed. Rep. 174; The Medora, 2 Wood & M. 92.

No lien is allowed by the general admiralty law for services of an agent employed by a charterer to solicit freight; such services are not maritime. The Crystal Stream, 25 Fed. Rep. 575.

Compressing Cotton.—There is no maritime lien allowed for services in compressing cotton for shipment, done inland, and before any contract of affreightment charging the vessel is made. The Paola R., 32 Fed. Rep. 174. See also The Joseph Cunard, Olc. Adm. 120.

But where a compress company contract with the master of the ship for compressing her cargo of cotton and putting it on board, there is a maritime lien for the services rendered. The Wivanhoe, 26 Fed. Rep. 927. In deciding this case HUGHES, J., said: "The analogy of a contract for compressing the cotton constituting the cargo of a ship with the contract of a stevedore seems to be complete. In the case at bar. I infer from the language of libel, which is given above, that the ship had engaged to carry certain 2,023 bales of cotton to Liverpool; that in the original form of the bales it was impracticable to stow such a number of them on board, that to meet this difficulty the ship herself employed the compress company to reduce the bales to convenient size for shipping, and to put them on board; and that the libellant faithfully executed this contract. In its mere statement, the case seems to me to be clearly within the admiralty jurisdiction, irrespectively of the circumstance whether the vessel was domestic, which she was not, or foreign, which she was."

Clerks.—A clerk employed on shore to keep accounts of a vessel has no lien for his wages, either under the general law or under the Pennsylvania act of April 20th, 1858. James Dalzell's Son & Co. v. Daniel Kaine, 31 Fed. Rep. 746; Constantine v. The River Queen, 2 Fed. Rep. 731.

1. The Mystic, 30 Fed. Rep. 73; The Alabama, 30 Fed. Rep. 207; The John Cuttrell, 9 Fed. Rep. 777; The Murphy Tugs, 28 Fed. Rep. 429.

There is no lien on a vessel for services in towing her at her home port. James Dalzell's Son & Co. v. Daniel Kaine, 31 Fed. Rep. 746. But see The General Cass, 1 Brown Adm. 334; The John Cuttrell, 9 Fed. 777.

2. The J. M. Welsh, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 211.

3. The Prince Leopold, 9 Fed. Rep. 333.

4. The Pirate, 32 Fed. Rep. 486; The Edith Godden, 25 Fed. Rep. (U. S.) 511; The Talisman, 23 Fed. Rep. 111; The Harriet S. Jackson, 32 Fed. Rep. 110. See also PILOTS.

State other than that where the wharf is situated, the claim of the wharfinger is a maritime lien against the vessel, which he may enforce by a proceeding in rem.¹

1. Wharfage.—In the leading case on this subject, Ex parte Easton, 95 U. S. 68, MR. JUSTICE CLIFFORD said: "Wharf accommodation is a necessity of navigation, and such accommodations are indispensable for ships and vessels and water craft of every name and description, whether employed in carrying freight or passengers or engaged in the fisheries. Compensation for wharfage may be claimed upon an express or implied contract, according to the circumstances. Where a price is agreed upon for the use of the wharf, the contract furnishes the measure of compensation; and when the wharf is used without any such agreement, the contract is implied and the proprietor is entitled to recover what is just and reasonable for the use of his property and the benefit conferred. Such erections are indispensably necessary for the safety and convenience of commerce and navigation, and those who take berth alongside them to secure those objects derive great benefit from their use. All experience supports that proposition, and shows to a demonstration that the contract of the wharfinger appertains to the pursuit of commerce and navigation. Instances may, doubtless, be referred to where wharves are erected as sites for stores and storehouses; but the great and usual object of such erections is to advance commerce and navigation by furnishing resting places for ships, vessels and all kinds of water craft, and to facilitate their operation in loading and unloading cargo and in receiving and landing passengers. Nor is the nature of the service or the character of the contract changed by the circumstances that the water craft which derived the benefit in the case before the court was without masts or sails or other motive power of her own. Sail ships and even steamships and vessels are frequently propelled by tugs, and yet if they secure a berth at a wharf, or in a slip at the place of landing or at the port of destination, and actually occupy the berth as a resting place or for the purpose of loading or unloading, no one, it is supposed, will deny that the ship or vessel is just as much liable to the wharfinger as if she had been propelled by her own motive power. Neither canal boats nor barges ordinarily have sails or steam power, but they usually have tow lines, and it clearly cannot make any difference as to their liability for wharfage whether they are propelled by steam or sails of their own, or by tugs or horse or mule power, if it appears that the boat or barge actually occupied a berth at the wharf or slip at the commencement or close of the trip as a resting place, or for the purpose of loading or unloading cargo, or receiving or for landing passengers. Goods to a vast amount are transported by such means of conveyance, and all experience shows that boats of the kind require wharf privileges as well as ships and vessels, or any other water craft engaged in navigation. The Northern Belle, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 526. Access to the ship or vessel rightfully occupying a berth at a wharf, for the purpose of lading and unlading, is the undoubted right of the owner or charterer of such ship or vessel for which such right has been secured. Wendell v. Baxter, 12 Gray (Mass.) 494. Privileges of the kind are essential to the carrier by water, whether he is engaged in carrying goods or passengers. Repairs to a limited extent are sometimes made at the wharf; but contracts of the kind usually have respect to the voyage, and are made to secure a resting place for the vessel during the time she is being loaded or unloaded. Such contracts, beyond all doubt, are maritime, as they have respect to commerce and navigation, and are for the benefit of the ship or vessel when afloat. Carrying vessels would be of little or no value unless they could be loaded, and they are usually loaded from the wharf, except in a limited class of cases, where lighters are employed, the vessel being unable to come up to the wharf in consequence of shallow water. Accommodations at the port of destination are equally indispensable for the voyage as those at the port of departure. Consignments of goods and passengers must be landed, else the carrier is not entitled to freight or fare. Where the contract is to carry from port to port an actual delivery of the goods into the possession of the owner or consignee or at his warehouse, is not required in

8. For Salvage.—Salvors have a maritime lien for salvage upon the property sold.¹ The vessel, however, is not chargeable with the portion of salvage due from the cargo.²

9. For Damages.—A maritime lien for damages arises where an injury is committed by the negligence of the master and crew of a vessel. In such a case the person injured has a lien on the vessel in fault. It is founded on considerations of public policy for the prevention of careless navigation, and takes precedence of prior liens for money borrowed, wages, pilotage, etc.³

10. For Safe Transport.—The owner of the cargo has a lien, by the maritime law, upon the ship for the safe custody, due transport and right delivery of the same. Such a lien, however, will not be enforced in the courts of admiralty of the United States, in favor of citizens or subjects of a foreign country whose courts order to discharge the carrier from his liability. He may deliver them on the wharf, but to constitute a valid delivery there the master should give due and reasonable notice to the consignee, so as to afford him a fair opportunity to remove the goods, or to put them under proper care and custody. Delivery on the wharf, under such circumstances, is valid, if the different consignments be properly separated, so as to be open to inspection, and conveniently accessible to their respective owners. The Eddy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 481. These remarks are sufficient to show the wharves, piers or landing places are well nigh as essential to commerce as ships and vessels, and are abundantly sufficient to demonstrate that the contract for wharfage is a maritime contract, for which, if the vessel or water craft is a foreign one, or belongs to a port of the State other than that where the wharf is situated, a maritime lien arises against the ship or vessel in favor of the proprietor of the wharf." See also The Kate Tremaine, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 60; The John Walsh, 24 Int. Rev. Rec. 207; The J. H. Starin, 15 Blatchf. (U. S.) 473; The Dora Mathews, 31 Fed. Rep. 619; The Mary Kate Campbell, 31 Fed. Rep. 840; Elwell v. Fabre, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 70; Woodruff v. Covered Scow, 30 Fed. Rep. 269. See also WHARVES AND WHARFAGE.

1. "Salvors, under the maritime law, have a lien upon the property saved, which enables them to maintain a suit in rem against the ship or cargo, or both where both are saved in whole or in part. Such a remedy is the one usually pursued, and in view of the fact that the lien is maritime and exists quite independently of possession, it ordinarily affords the best mode of securing the payment of their salvage claims. . . . Compensation in such a case is usually enforced by a libel in rem, but where the parties rendering the salvage service are employed and sent out by the owners or insurers, the persons employed may proceed in personam against their employers for compensation, even though they were unsuccessful, unless they contracted that their right to compensation should depend upon their success as in the ordinary case of salvage service, without being antecedently employed. Employers, in such a case, are liable to those rendering service, under such circumstances, in a suit in personam within the last clause of the admiralty rule, but there is no authority for holding that salvors may proceed against the ship and cargo in rem and in personam against the consignees of the cargo in the same libel." Mayflower v. The Sabine, 101 U. S. 384.

A salvor must bear his share of a loss by a depreciation in value pending his suit. He is sub modo a joint owner, and, in the absence of an express contract, cannot recover on any theory of being a creditor with a lien to be satisfied at all hazards to the full extent of the proceeds in the registry. The Carl Schurz, 2 Flippin (U. S.) 330.

The fact that cotton is owned by the government does not exempt such cotton from a lien for salvage. The S. L. Davis, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 138. See also SALVAGE.

2. The Alaska, 23 Fed. Rep. 597.

3. Abb. Shipp. 533.

"Liens for reparation for wrong done are not clothed with the power to give the same remedy to citizens of the United States, under similar circumstances.¹

are superior to any prior liens for money borrowed, wages, pilotage," etc. Norwich Co. v. Wright, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 104. See SHIPPING.

1. Safe Transport of Cargo.—In the leading case of The Maggie Hammond, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 435, MR. JUSTICE CLIFFORD said: "Ship owners contract for the safe custody, due transport and right delivery of the cargo, and for the performance of their contract the ship, her apparel and furniture, are pledged in each particular case, and the shipper, consignee, or owner of the cargo, contracts to pay the freight and charges, and to the fulfilment of their contract the cargo is pledged to the ship, and those obligations are reciprocal, and the maritime law creates reciprocal liens for their enforcement. The Eddy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 493; Dupont v. Vance, 19 How. (U. S.) 168; The Bird of Paradise, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 545; Alsager v. Dock Co., 14 Meeson & Welsby 798; Foster v. Colby, 3 Hurlstone & Norman 715. Consequently where the lien or privilege is created by the lex loci contractus, says JUDGE STORY, it will generally, although not universally, be respected and enforced in all places where the property is found, or where the right can be beneficially enforced by the lex fori. Story on the Conflict of Laws (6th ed.) 428; 3 Burge's Commentaries, 770, 779. Such a lien is regarded as being in effect an element of the original contract, but in controversies wholly of foreign origin, and between citizens and subjects of the same foreign country, the admiralty courts of the United States will not, in general, entertain jurisdiction to enforce the maritime lien or privilege in favor of shipper or ship owner in a case where the libellant would not be entitled to such a remedy in the place where the contract was made or where the cause of action set forth in the libel accrued. The Infanta, Abb. Adm. 263; Whiston v. Stodder, 8 Martin's O. S. (La.) 95, 134; The Havana, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 402; The Jerusalem, 2 Gallison (U. S.) 191; The Kenneway, Abb. Adm. 321; Brig Napoleon, Olc. Adm. 208; Brig Nestor, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 73; Reed v. Hull of a New Brig, 1 Story (U. S.) 244; Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story (U. S.) 465. Where the lien exists only by some local statute, and is not given by the maritime law, admiralty courts in another jurisdiction can no more take jurisdiction of a case not within the local statute than the courts of the country could do where the cause of action arose, but where the lien is given by the maritime law the question in such a case, in the admiralty courts of the United States, is not one of jurisdiction but of comity, as the jurisdiction to enforce a maritime lien for the breach of a contract of affreightment, either original or appellate, is, beyond controversy, conferred on all the federal courts by the judiciary act. Courts of justice and text writers everywhere concede that the ship, under the maritime law, is bound to the merchandise and the merchandise to the ship independent of any local usage or statute; but it is true, as suggested by the appellants, that such a lien cannot be enforced in some countries, because the courts of admiralty, which alone are competent to give effect to the same by a proceeding in rem, are not, as now constituted, invested with any authority, except to a very limited extent, to exercise such a jurisdiction. Maritime liens are of little or no value in a country where there are no appropriate tribunals for their enforcement, as they must remain dormant and unavailable; but the denial of such jurisdiction to her admiralty courts by one country, whether it be by legislation or by the prohibitions of her common law courts, cannot have the effect to impair or diminish the jurisdiction in such cases of the admiralty courts of any other country, if they are legally clothed with the power and authority to enforce such remedies for the breach of a maritime contract. The Rebecca, Ware (U. S.) 188; The Phebe, Ware (U. S.) 263; Abbott on Shipping (ed. 1854) 167. Such a remedy will not in general be accorded in our courts of admiralty to the citizens or subjects of a foreign country whose courts are not clothed with the power to give the same remedy in similar controversies to the citizens of the United States, but the question whether they will do so or not is not a question of jurisdiction in any case, as it is clear they may do so if they see fit, and in some cases they will take jurisdiction to prevent loss and injustice, especially if no ob-

IV. LIEN OF THE SHIP ON THE CARGO—1. For Freight.—A ship owner, as carrier by water, has a lien upon the cargo for freight.¹ He may retain the goods until the freight is paid, but if he unconditionally delivers them to the consignee his lien is lost.²

jection is made by the consul of the nation to which the vessel belongs." See also Pearce v. The Thomas Newton, 41 Fed. Rep. (U. S.) 106; The Waldo, 2 Ware (U. S.) 161; The Adriatic, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 424; The Invincible, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 176. For cases illustrating the character of the negligence which will render a ship liable for the loss or injury of the cargo, see SHIPPING.

1. Lien for Freight.—"Such a lien is regarded in the jurisprudence of the United States as a maritime lien, because it arises from the usage of commerce, independently of the agreement of the parties, and not from any statutory regulations. Legal effect of such a lien is that the ship owner, as carrier by water, may retain the goods until the freight is paid, or he may enforce the same by a proceeding in rem in the district court. But it is not the same as the privileged claim of the civil law, nor is it an hypothecation of the cargo which will remain a charge upon the goods after the ship owner has parted unconditionally with the possession. Although the lien is maritime and cognizable in the admiralty, yet it stands upon the same ground with the lien of the carrier on land, and arises from the right of the shipowner to retain the possession of the goods until the freight is paid and is lost by an unconditional delivery to the consignee. Bags of Linseed, 1 Blackf. (U. S.) 108. Parties, however, may frame their contract of affreightment as they please, and of course may employ words to affirm the existence of the maritime lien, or to extend or modify it, or they may so frame their contract as to exclude it altogether. They may agree that the goods, when the ship arrives at the port of destination, shall be deposited in the warehouse of the consignee or owner, and that the transfer and deposit shall not be regarded as the waiver of the lien; and where they so agree, the settled rule in this court is that the law will uphold the agreement and support the lien. Mordecai v. Lindsay, 19 How. (U. S.) 199; The Eddy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 481; The Bird of Paradise, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 545. See also FREIGHT, vol. 8, p. 900.

2. Delivery of Goods as Waiver of Lien.—The lien of a ship owner for freight being merely the right to retain the goods until the freight is paid, is ordinarily lost by an unconditional surrender of the goods to the consignee. But if it appear that the cargo was delivered to the consignee with an understanding that the lien was to continue, a court of admiralty will consider that the ship owner still continued constructively in possession so far as to preserve his lien. Such an understanding must, however, clearly appear, or be plainly inferable from the established local usage of the port. "Courts of admiralty, when carrying into execution maritime contracts and liens, are not governed by the strict and technical rules of the common law, and deal with them upon equitable principles and with reference to the usages and necessities of trade. And it often happens that the necessities and usages of trade require that the cargo should pass into the hands of the consignee before he pays the freight. It is the interest of the ship owner that his vessel should discharge her cargo as speedily as possible after her arrival at the port of delivery. And it would be a serious sacrifice of his interest if the ship was compelled, in order to preserve the lien, to remain day after day with her cargo on board, waiting until the consignee found it convenient to pay the freight, or until the lien could be enforced in a court of admiralty. The consignee, too, in many instances might desire to see the cargo unladen before he paid the freight, in order to ascertain whether all of the goods mentioned in the bill of lading were on board, and not damaged by fault of the ship. It is his duty, and not that of the ship owner, to provide a suitable and safe place on shore in which they may be stored; and several days are often consumed in unloading and storing the cargo of a large merchant vessel. And if the cargo cannot be unladen and placed in the warehouse of the consignee without waiving the lien, it would seriously embarrass the ordinary operations and convenience of commerce both as to the ship owner and the merchant. It is true that such

2. For Demurrage.—A ship owner has a lien upon the cargo for demurrage, enforceable in admiralty by proceedings in rem.¹

V. PRIORITY OF LIENS—1. General Principles.—As a maritime lien is an interest in the vessel itself, the proceeds of the sale of a delivery, without any condition or qualification annexed, would be a waiver of the lien; because, as we have already said, the lien is but an incident to the possession with the right to retain. But in cases of the kind above mentioned it is frequently, perhaps more usually, understood between the parties that transferring the goods from the ship to the warehouse shall not be regarded as a waiver of the lien, and that the ship owner reserves the right to proceed in rem to enforce it if the freight is not paid. And if it appears by the evidence that such an understanding did exist between the parties before or at the time the cargo was placed in the hands of the consignee, or if such an understanding is plainly to be inferred from the established local usage of the port, a court of admiralty will regard the transaction as a deposit of the goods for the time in the warehouse, and not as an absolute delivery, and, on that ground, will consider the shipowner as still constructively in possession, so far as to preserve his lien and his remedy in rem." Bags of Linseed, 1 Black. (U. S.) 108. See also 151 Tons of Coal, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 368; Cutler v. Rae, 7 How. (U. S.) 728, 729; Dupont de Nemours & Co. v. Vance, 19 How. (U. S.) 162, 171. See generally FREIGHT, vol. 8, p. 900; SHIPPING.

1 In Hawgood v. 1310 Tons of Coal, 21 Fed. Rep. (U. S.) 681, DYER, J., after referring to Fulton v. Blake, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 371, 375, which decided that a consignee must pay damages for detention, whether demurrage was noted on the bill of lading or not, continued as follows: "Why has not the ship owner also a lien on the cargo for demurrage, and why may not such a lien be enforced in the admiralty? Demurrage is merely an allowance or compensation for the delay of detention of a vessel. The Apollon, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 362. It is only an extended freight or reward of the vessel in compensation of the earnings she is improperly caused to lose. Sprague v. West, 1 Abb. Adm. 548; Holt, Rule Road, pt. 3, ch. 1. Why should the right of a ship owner be limited in the admiralty to a common law lien, when in fact that right is dependent on the law merchant, which extends the lien or privilege of all charges, damages and expenses growing out of the affreightment? By the general maritime law, the ship is bound to the merchandise and the merchandise to the ship. It is the doctrine of the law merchant that the master or ship owner contracts rather with the merchandise than the shipper, and, as is remarked by JUDGE SHEPLEY in Donaldson v. McDowell, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 290. "It necessarily follows from this that the merchandise is liable for whatever the shipper is liable." It is unimportant that demurrage claim is unliquidated. Admiralty takes cognizance of many claims that are unliquidated, such as salvage claims, demands for injury to goods and claims on account for nondelivery of cargo. In the present extended jurisdiction of the admiralty and liberal recognition of the rights of parties interested in lake navigation and commerce, no sound reason is apparent why the ship owner's privilege or lien should not be extended to demurrage. The relation of the ship to the cargo and of the cargo to the ship is reciprocal. If the ship is bound to safely deliver the cargo to the consignee, without exemption from liability, except such as may be named in the bill of lading, the cargo ought to be answerable for the neglect of the consignee to duly receive it. The cargo may be labelled for the freight; why not for the extended freight which the vessel is improperly caused to lose, where as in this case, the consignee is the owner of the cargo? It may be labelled for general average and numerous other demands. "As in this country courts of admiralty have frequently exercised their jurisdiction to enforce the privilege where the cargo has been labelled for freight, general average, and other charges, there seems no just ground for making an exception and refusing a remedy for a violation of duty and right in the case of demurrage, which under circumstances like those in the present case, is as much a charge of damage which the master may lawfully demand, and for which he has a privilege against the cargo, as the

the vessel should be distributed according to the priorities of the liens themselves, and not according to priority of the proceedings to enforce them.¹

If the liens are for money advanced or for supplies, materials, or services in preparation for the same voyage, and are of the same rank, they are regarded as contemporaneous and concurrent with each other, and they will be discharged pro rata.²

freight itself, of which demurrage is only an extension." Donaldson v. McDowell, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 290. In that case, and in the case of The Hyperion's Cargo, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 93, it was adjudged that the ship has a privilege against the cargo for demurrage or damages, in the nature of demurrage, enforceable in the admiralty, when the cargo has not been received within a reasonable time, through fault of the consignee, although the bill of lading contains no demurrage clause; and it would, undoubtedly, have been sufficient had I simply referred to those cases, and to the reasoning of the learned judges who decided them, as quite conclusive upon the question." See also 275 Tons of Mineral Phosphates, 9 Fed. Rep. 209; Gray v. Carr, L. R., 6 Q. B. 522; Francesca v. Massey, L. R., 8 Exch. 101; Lockhart v. Falk, L. R., 10 Exch. 1032; Peek v. Larsen, L. R., 12 Eq. 378; Fulton v. Blake, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 371; The M. S. Bacon, 3 Fed. Rep. 344; The Glover, Brown Adm. 166; The Orient, 40 L. J., Adm. 29. See DEMURRAGE, vol. 5, p. 542.

1. "This rule permits all the equities of such liens to be considered and enforced instead of subordinating these equities to a mere race of diligence." BROWN, J., in The J. W. Tucker, 20 Fed. Rep. 129.

In the case of The Fanny, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 508, LOWELL, J., said: "The general rule in admiralty is that all lien holders of like degree share pro rata in the proceeds of the res, without regard to the date of their libels or suits, if all are pending together."

In the case of The Lady Boone, 21 Fed. Rep. (U. S.) 731, libellants filed a libel in rem against a steamboat for materials and supplies upon which a warrant of arrest was issued and the vessel seized by the marshal and the usual monition given. No claimant appeared, and on the day appointed for trial the default of all persons was entered. At the same time and before any decree was rendered in the cause, Watson and others appeared and filed intervening petitions, claiming liens for materials and supplies. Libellant and the intervening petitioners proved their claims and a decree was entered in which the sums due the libellant and the several intervenors were ascertained, and the vessel ordered to be sold and the proceeds paid into the registry for distribution. The proceeds of the sale were not sufficient to pay in full the several sums decreed to the libellant and intervenors. Wishon Brothers moved the court to direct the payment of their claim in full out of the proceeds of the sale of the vessel in the registry, to the exclusion of the claims of the intervenors, upon the ground that priority in bringing suit gave them priority of right to payment; that having filed the libel on which the vessel was seized and held until she was sold, they were entitled to be paid in full before anything was paid on the claims of those who subsequently intervened. The court refused the motion, saying: "The great weight of authority supports the view that when the proceeds of the vessel are not sufficient to pay all the debts of a given rank, the creditor first filing a libel and arresting the vessel does not thereby acquire the right to have his debt paid in full, to the exclusion of other creditors, whose debts are of the same rank and equal merit, and who intervene and prove their debts before or at the time a final decree in the suit first brought is rendered." See also The Superior, 1 Newb. Adm. 176; The Kate Hinchman, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 367; The General Burnside, 3 Fed. Rep. 228; The Arcturus, 18 Fed. Rep. 748; The Paragon, 1 Ware (U. S.) 322; The E. A. Barnard, 2 Fed. Rep. 712; The City of Tawas, 3 Fed. Rep. 170.

2. The Rapid Transit, 11 Fed. Rep. 322; The J. W. Tucker, 20 Fed. Rep. 129; The Paragon, 1 Ware (U. S.) 322; The Exeter, 1 C. Rob. 173; The Albion, 1 Hagg. 333; The Desdemona, 1 Swab. 158; The Saracen, 2 Wm. Rob. 458;

If the liens are for damages by negligence or collision, and are such as cannot be treated as contemporaneous or concurrent, and there is no ground in equity for preferring the later ones, then the rule applies, qui prior est tempore, potior est jure.¹

The M. Vandercook, 24 Fed. Rep. 472.

"There are several well established cases where classes of lien holders, as between themselves, share pari passu, as, for instance, seamen who ship for the same voyage, salvors who are engaged in the same salvage service, men who furnish materials or supplies for the same voyage, freighters who claim under bills of lading for the same voyage, holders of bottomry bonds who act in concert with each other in making advances for repairs at the same time and place, and parties who sustain a loss by the same collision. These cases show that the rule contemplates not merely the date but the voyage. Mere subsequence in time does not give a right to priority of payment, unless one lien holder has been more efficacious than the other in preserving the ship and bringing it to its final destination." Bump's Note to The De Smet, 10 Fed. Rep. 490. See The America, 6 Law Rep. 264; The Fanny, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 508; The Superior, 2 Newb. Adm. 176; The William F. Safford, Lush. 69; The Paragon, 1 Ware (U. S.) 322; The Exeter, 1 C. Rob. 173; The Constancia, 4 Notes of Cases 285; s. c., 10 Jur. 845; The Desdemona, Swab. 158.

1. In the Frank G. Fowler, 17 Fed. Rep. 653, two collisions were caused at different times by the negligence of a tug in fulfilling contracts of towage. The district court awarded the fund paid into court by the owners of the tug to the parties injured by the later collision. On appeal to the circuit court the decree of the district court was reversed, BLATCHFORD, J., saying: "This is a case where there was no priority of attachment or seizure of the vessel, although the libel for the second damage was first filed, and it is not a case where either claim can be considered as other than one sounding in damages for a tort. The contention on the part of the Phoenix Insurance Company is that the claims arising out of the two torts are to be paid in the inverse order of their creation, on the view that though they are claims of the same rank of privilege, it may very well be that among creditors he is to be preferred who has contributed most immediately to the preservation of the thing;'. . . and 'that repairs and supplies furnished a vessel in her last voyage take precedence of those furnished in a prior voyage.' But the principle governing such cases is that 'the services performed at the latest hour are most efficacious in bringing the vessel and her freightage safely to their final destination;' and 'that each foregoing encumbrance, therefore, is actually benefited by reason of the succeeding encumbrance.' This principle can have no place except where services are rendered, such as loaning money, furnishing supplies, making repairs, salvage, and claims arising out of contract generally. Such services benefit the vessel, making her better, preserve her, contribute to save her, or improve her, or keep her in running or going order for the benefit of all who have prior liens or claims on her. But a second tort or collision can have no such effect in reference to a party injured by a prior tort or collision. The second tort or collision does not benefit the vessel, or add to her value, or preserve her. It only tends to injure her, and the sufferer by the first tort or collision, in having recourse against the vessel after the second tort or collision, must take her as he finds her, damaged, perhaps, by a second collision. He ought not to lose the benefit of his lien arising out of the first tort or collision, unless the circumstances are such that in judgment of law he may fairly be held to have waived his lien, or postponed it, as regards the lien arising out of the second tort or collision. In the present case there was no waiver or postponement. No case cited declares any doctrine which sanctions the giving of priority in the present case to the Phoenix Insurance Company, except what is found in the case of The America, 6 Monthly Law Rep. (N. S.) 264. That case is not sustained by authority, nor is it sustainable on principle. There was nothing in the mere fact of the second tort to extinguish the lien arising out of the first tort, and, when both torts were of the same character, each arising out of negligence towards a tow in fulfilling a contract of towage, and each claimant

Where there are two liens for salvage, or where later improvements or advances are made for the preservation of former improvements or advances, then the rule is that such liens shall be discharged in the inverse order of their dates.¹

2. Priority of Various Claims.—The priority of one maritime lien over another depends in part upon the stage of the voyage, and in part upon the efficiency of subsequent advances or services in hastening the voyage to a conclusion, and preserving prior advances and improvements. Thus a lien for salvage is prior to all other liens; because the salvage service is usually the last rendered to the ship and preserves the interests of all prior claimants.² The wages of seamen are entitled to priority over all antecedent liens and all liens incurred during the voyage, except the lien for arrests the vessel at the same time to respond, there is no principle of the maritime law, and no interest of commerce or navigation, which requires that the elder lienor, not guilty of laches, and not having committed any waiver or abandonment, should have his claim postponed to that of the younger lienor."

1. "Where the liens are of the same rank, there is often an equitable priority among them arising out of the character of the liens themselves, or the time when they accrued. A later lien for salvage is entitled to priority over a former salvage, because the last service preserved the benefit of the former. The same is true of successive repairs of a vessel on different voyages, or on different parts of the same voyage, or of liens on successive bottomry bonds. The later improvements or advances are for the preservation of the former, or for further improvements upon the vessel; and they have, therefore, an equitable priority. As regard such liens they shall be discharged in the inverse order of their dates. 3 Kent 197; The Eliza, 3 Hagg. 87; The Rhodamante, 1 Dods. 201; The Bold Buccleugh, 7 Moore P. C. 267; The St. Lawrence, 5 Prob. Div. 250; The Fanny, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 508; The Jerusalem, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 345."

2. Salvage.—In The Athenian, 3 Fed. Rep. 248, it was decided that in marshalling claims for payment from the proceeds of sale, salvage is entitled to be paid in preference to prior claims for seamen's wages. The court said: "The case being one of salvage, libellants are entitled to be paid first, even before the seamen whose wages are earned prior to these services, since it is owing to their exertions that anything remains to which the lien of the seamen can attach." See also The Selina, 2 Notes of Cases 18; Collins v. The Fort Wayne, 1 Bond (U. S.) 476; The Mary Ann, 9 Jur. 94; The Panthea, 1 Asp. Mar. Law Cases 133; The Gustav Lush, 506; The Sabina, 7 Jur. 182.

But where the seamen do not abandon the ship, but stand by her, and aid in saving whatever is saved, then their lien for wages is entitled to priority over the lien of the salvors. Dalstrom v. The E. M. Davidson, 1 Fed. Rep. 259.

A claim for salvage of a vessel has priority over a claim for repairs and supplies. The M. Vandercook, 24 Fed. Rep. 472.

Salvage claims for property salvaged on the high seas, and brought by the salvors within the limits of the United States, are entitled to priority over the claims of the government for duties. Merritt v. One Package of Merchandise, 30 Fed. Rep. 195.

Where salvage services are rendered in getting a vessel off a reef, in the distribution of proceeds they are entitled to priority of payment as against a claim for general average arising from the jettison of a portion of her cargo; and this priority is not ousted by the fact that one of the salvors had the promise of a third party to pay him if he could not collect from the vessel. The Spaulding, 1 Browne Adm. 310.

The fact that the salvor held a mortgage upon the vessel, not due, the mortgagors being the owners and in possession, does not deprive him of his preference. He cannot be considered in the light of an owner. The Barney Eaton, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 242.

Claim for salvage in pulling one vessalvage.¹ Material men who furnish materials at a later stage of the voyage are entitled to priority over those who furnished materials at an earlier stage.² Liens for reparation for wrong done are superior to any prior liens for advances, wages, towage and bottomry.³ A lien for repairs is entitled to priority over an antecedent bottomry bond;⁴ and a later bottomry bond is entitled to sel away from the other after a collision was held superior to the claim of the other vessel for her damages sustained by the collision. The Jeremiah, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 326.

See generally SALVAGE.

1. Priority of Lien of Seamen.—As seamen perform the final service in bringing the ship to its destination their lien is the last to attach, and is consequently the first to be paid. The Sailor Prince, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 234; The Augustine Kobbe, 39 Fed. Rep. 559; The Jennie Hayes, 37 Fed. Rep. 373; The Aina, 40 Fed. Rep. 269; The Live Oak, 30 Fed. Rep. 78; The Charles L. Baylis, 25 Fed. Rep. 862; The City of Mexico, 28 Fed. Rep. 207; United States v. Wilder, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 308; Hart v. Oakland, 32 Fed. Rep. 234; The Dora, 34 Fed. Rep. 343; The Amos D. Carver, 35 Fed. Rep. 665; The Andalina, L. R., 12 P. D. 1; The Superior, Newb. Adm. 176; The America, Newb. Adm. 195; The Rodney, 1 B. & H. Adm. 226; Goble v. The Delos De Wolf, 3 Fed. Rep. 236; Logan v. The Aeolian, 1 Bond (U. S.) 267; Hatton v. The Melita, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 494; The Paragon, 1 Ware (U. S.) 322; The Leonidas, Olc. Adm. 12; The Virgin, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 538; The Hilarity, 1 B. & H. Adm. 90; The Madonna D'Ibra, 1 Dod. 37; Furniss v. The Magoun, Olc. Adm. 55; The Kammerhevie Rosenkrantz, 1 Hagg. 62; The William F. Safford, Lush. 69; The City of Tawas, 3 Fed. Rep. 170; The Athenian, 3 Fed. Rep. 248; The John T. Moore, Woods (U. S.) 61; Miller v. The Alice Getty, 9 C. L. N. 315; The Island City, 1 Lowell (U. S.) 375; Rusk v. The Freestone, 2 Bond (U. S.) 234; The St. Lawrence, 5 Prob. Div. 250; The Sidney Cove, 2 Dod. 13; The Union, Lush. 128; The Louisa Bertha, 1 Eng. L. & Eq. 665; The Mary Ann, 9 Jur. 94; The Janet Wilson, Swab. 261; The Mary H. Rech, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 187; The Orient, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 620; The Samuel J. Christian, 16 Fed. Rep. 796.

The lien of seamen for wages takes priority over claims of the United States for penalties incurred by the vessel for failure to keep posted the certificate of inspection, to have the name of the vessel painted upon the stern, or to carry sufficient life preservers, as required by statute; and it is immaterial that the seamen served with knowledge of such failures on the part of the vessel, as the statutes do not impose upon them any duty with respect thereto. Jennie Hayes, 37 Fed. Rep. (U. S.) 373. See generally SEAMEN.

2. The Omer, 2 Hughes (U. S.) 96; Hatton v. The Melita, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 494; The Fanny, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 508.

A lien for repairs or supplies is entitled to priority over antecedent claims for salvage—Collins v. The Fort Wayne, 1 Bond (U. S.) 476; and an antecedent claim for disbursement, pilotage and towage. The Rodney, 1 B. & H. Adm. 216.

3. "The maritime lien of damages, originating in the wrong of the master and crew of the vessel in fault, and founded on considerations of public policy for the prevention of careless navigation, takes precedence . . . of liens ex contractu. It absorbs, in the event of the res proving insufficient to meet all demands, the liens of wages, towage, pilotage and bottomry, leaving them to be enforced by proceedings against the person of the owners." Abb. Shipp. 533; Norwich Co. v. Wright, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 104; The M. Vandercook, 24 Fed. Rep. 472; The Grapeshot, 22 Fed. Rep. 123; The Young America, 30 Fed. Rep. 789; The R. S. Carter, 38 Fed. Rep. 515; Maria and Elizabeth, 12 Fed. Rep. 627.

4. The Aina, a foreign vessel, lost her master by death. The mate in charge put into New York in distress. The mate being without funds, libellants, at the mate's request, took charge of the vessel and advanced money for expenses. The vessel was condemned as unworthy of repair, whereupon she was libelled by the crew, by libellants and by the holder of the bottomry bond. It was held that proper advances gave a lien prior to such bond. The Aina, 40 Fed. Rep. 269.

priority over an antecedent bond.¹ Maritime liens are preferred to domestic liens created by statute.²

In the case of the Emily Souder, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 666, the facts were as follows: In June, 1865, an American steamer, the Emily Souder, owned by residents of New York, and mortgaged to persons living there, whilst on a voyage to that port from Rio Janeiro lost her propelling screw and put into the port of Maranh, on the coast of Brazil, in distress. She was towed into port by another steamer for which she had signalled. The captain was without adequate funds to make the repairs required and furnish the vessel with supplies necessary to enable her to proceed on her voyage, or to pay the expenses of her towage into port, and of pilotage, custom house dues, fees of the consul of the port and expense of medical attendance upon the sailors. Both he and the owners of the vessel were unknown in Maranh, and without credit there. Under the circumstances the captain borrowed of the libellants the necessary funds to enable him to pay these several expenses, and gave them drafts on the owners of the vessel in New York for the amount. The court decided that the liens for the advances made at Maranh had priority over existing mortgages to creditors at home. MR. JUSTICE FIELD, in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "The fact that the vessel was, at the time the advances were made, under mortgage to the claimants, does not subordinate the lien of the libellants to the claim of the mortgagees. Funds furnished in a foreign port, under the circumstances and for the purposes mentioned in this case, have priority as a lien upon the vessel over existing mortgages. Advanced for the security and protection of the vessel, they were for the benefit of the mortgagees as well as of the owners. If liens created by the necessities of vessels in a foreign port could be subordinated to or displaced by mortgages to prior creditors at home, such liens would soon cease to be regarded as having any certain value, or as affording any reliable security."

Where a mortgagee permits a mortgagor to retain possession of the vessel, this will subject the vessel to such liens as may accrue under the mortgagor's management. The Live Oak, 30 Fed. Rep. 78.

The master of a vessel in a foreign port gave a note against the vessel for supplies, payable after arrival, and on her arrival in Boston she was libelled for the amount. Thereupon, by agreement with the owner that the lien should continue, she was taken to New York and there libelled. It was held that the note and costs at both places took precedence of a prior mortgage. Bolten v. James L. Pendergast, 30 Fed. Rep. 717.

The lien of a material man for repairs made to a foreign ship will be preferred, in point of right, to a bottomry interest, though the latter is prior in point of time, if it appears that the repairs were indispensable. The Jerusalem, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 345; The Uncle Tom, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 234; Reeder v. The George's Creek, 3 Am. Law Reg. 232; The Charlotte Vanderbilt, 19 Fed. Rep. 219; The Norfolk, 2 Hughes (U. S.) 123; The George Prescott, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 1; Miller v. The Alice Getty, 4 N. Y. W. Dig. 471; Adams v. The Wyoming, 2 N. J. L. J. 275; Augustine Kobbe, 37 Fed. Rep. 696; The Mystic, 30 Fed. Rep. 473.

A bottomry bond is entitled to priority to liens for supplies and repairs where, prior to its execution, the owner of the vessel was notified to assent to the bond or to raise the necessary funds by other means. The Thomas Fletcher, 24 Fed. Rep. 375.

A hypothecation of a vessel by her owner to secure a pre-existing debt, which in its origin gave no lien on the vessel, gives no priority to such hypothecation over a prior maritime lien on the vessel. The Native, 14 Blatch. (U. S.) 34.

A bottomry bond is in general entitled to priority over antecedent liens. The Selina, 2 Notes of Cases 86; The William F. Safford, Lush. 69; The Aline, 1 W. Rob. 111; Furniss v. The Magoun, Olc. Adm. 55; The Mary, 1 Paine (U. S.) 671; The Duke of Bedford, 2 Hagg. 294; The Constancia, 4 Notes of Cases 285; s. c., 10 Jur. 845. See also BOTTOMRY, vol. 2, p. 492.

1. The Sydney Cove, 2 Dod. 2; Furniss v. The Magona, Olc. Adm. 55; The Constancia, 4 Notes of Cases 285; s. c., 10 Jur. 845. See also BOTTOMRY, vol. 2, p. 493.

2. "The maritime law of the country

Certain miscellaneous cases of priority amongst liens are stated in the note.¹

is a part of the federal system, administered alone by the federal courts, and a concession of right to interfere with it in any respect by the States is difficult to reconcile with reason. That they may interfere, however, to some extent, as by creating liens for supplies furnished, and repairs made in home ports, is well settled, though the fact is rarely referred to by the courts without an expression of regret that it is so. The Gen. Smith, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 438; Peyroux v. Howard, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 324; Orleans v. Phebus, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 175; The St. Lawrence, 1 Black (U. S.) 522; The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 558. No further interference, however, has been permitted, and no instance is found in which such statutory liens have been allowed to displace or supersede liens created by the maritime law. They are but quasi maritime, have uniformly been considered by the courts, and are recognized and allowed only after all maritime liens proper are paid. The creditors holding them are creditors of the State, and it is permitted to direct the order in which their claims shall be paid. To allow State legislation a greater effect would be to concede the right to alter and change the maritime law of the nation in a most material respect. The right so to change and alter has been most emphatically denied (as in principle it must be) whenever the subject has been mentioned. The Lattawanna, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 580; The St. Lawrence, 1 Black (U. S.) 522; and other cases therein cited." See also The Superior, Newb. Adm. 176; The St. Joseph, 1 Brown Adm. (U. S.) 302; The Harrison, 2 Abb. C. C. (U. S.) 74; The Favorite, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 405; The City of Tawas, 3 Fed. Rep. 170; The John T. Moore, 3 Woods (U. S.) 61; Scott's Case, 1 Abb. C. C. (U. S.) 336; The Athenian, 3 Fed. Rep. 248; Collins v. The Fort Wayne, 1 Bond (U. S.) 476; The Lillie Laurie, 4 Woods (U. S.) 312; The John Richards, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 106; The Guiding Star, 18 Fed. Rep. 263; The Unadilla, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 478; The Rapid Transit, 11 Fed. Rep. 322; Stapp v. The Swallow, 1 Bond (U. S.) 189. But see The General Burnside, 2 Fed. Rep. 228; Goble v. The Delos De Wolf, 3 Fed. Rep. 236; The Dan Brown, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 309.

Lien of Statutory Mortgage.—The lien of a mortgage on a vessel, duly recorded according to United States Rev. Stat., section 4192, is inferior to all strictly maritime liens, but is superior to any subsequent lien for supplies furnished in the home port, given by State legislation. Reeder v. The George Creek, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 584; The Emily Souder, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 666; The Granite State, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 277; Scott's Case, 1 Abb. C. C. (U. S.) 336; Baldwin v. The Brandish Johnson, 3 Woods (U. S.) 582; Hatton v. The Melita, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 494; The Josephine Spangler, 9 Fed. Rep. 773; Miller v. The Alice Getty, 9 C. L., N. 315; The Favorite, 3 Sawyer (U. S.) 405; The Hendrick Hudson, 17 Law Rep. 93; Zollinger v. The Emma, 3 Cent. Law J. 285; The Woodward, 32 Fed. Rep. 639; The Grace Greenwood, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 131.

If the mortgagee allows the mortgagor to remain in possession of the vessel, then his mortgage, although it is recorded at the custom house where the vessel is registered or enrolled, is postponed to liens under the State laws. The Hiawatha, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 100; The Wm. T. Graves, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 189; The Island City, 1 Lowell (U. S.) 375; The Raleigh, 2 Hughes (U. S.) 44; Strodes v. The Collier, 9 Pitts. Law J. 73; The St. Joseph, 1 Brown Adm. (U. S.) 302; Miller v. The Alice Getty, 9 C. L., N. 315; Whittaker v. The J. A. Travis, 7 C. L., N. 275; The Canada, 7 Fed. Rep. 730; Goble v. The Delos De Wolf, 3 Fed. Rep. 236.

1. As Between Different Voyages.—In the Augustine Kobbe, 39 Fed. Rep. 559, it was held that maritime liens incurred upon the last voyage should be preferred to those incurred on prior voyages; that a charterer, with knowledge of existing liens, should be postponed to them for his damages accruing from the breaking up of the voyage, but that money advanced by him for the necessities of the vessel should stand on an equal footing with the liens.

Foreign Laws.—On the question of the priority of maritime liens against an Italian vessel, it was held that, as between those on board, the provisions of the Italian Code should be observed by comity, and that while, as to liens arising under contracts made by the master in the United States, the law of the latter country would prevail over the Italian law, there being in fact, no difference between the Italian law and the general maritime law, distribution should be made in the following order, viz.: Libellant's costs, court dues, pilotage, provisions, seamen's wages in full, and, ratably from the balance, towage bills and other liens, the master's lien for wages being postponed. The Olga, 32 Fed. Rep. 329.

Priority of Various Claims. MARITIME LIENS. Priority of Various Claims.

In distributing the proceeds of sale of an Italian vessel sold by an order of the court in proceedings to enforce a bottomry bond given in Algiers on vessel and cargo, on which bond the master was not personally liable, the lien of the master for his wages, secured to him by Italian law, was held paramount to the claim of the owners of the cargo, American citizens and assignees of the bill of lading made in Italy to Italian resident or order. The Angela Maria, 35 Fed. Rep. 430.

In The Velox, 21 Fed. Rep. 479, the code of the Netherlands was held applicable to questions of priority of liens upon the proceeds of a Dutch vessel, whose voyage from Japan to New York and back had been broken up by a sale of the vessel in New York, as between the liens of the master and seamen shipped for such voyage, and liens for supplies and stevedore's services furnished in New York.

On a petition of intervention filed by the master and seamen of a foreign vessel to establish the priority of their liens over those of domestic and material men. Held, that in case of conflict between the maritime lien of a foreign country and the United States the latter must govern, and that, under it, the master had no lien on the vessel, as against material men, for wages or advances, and that he was estopped from setting up such a claim as would defeat, to that extent, their claims where he represented himself to be a part owner on obtaining the credit which they gave him. The Graf Klot Trautvetter, 8 Fed. Rep. 833.

Stevedore's Lien.—In the Director, 34 Fed. Rep. 57, a stevedore's lien was held to be entitled to priority in the proceeds of the sale of the vessel, a claim for towage and a claim for breach of the charter party sharing next, pro rata, and, lastly, the carpenter's claim for recaulking and copping after the cargo was removed.

Money advanced by the ship's agent to pay a general average claim against the ship, there having been a jettison, is a maritime lien and entitled to priority over bottomry bonds. The Dora, 34 Fed. Rep. 343.

Maritime Liens Preferred to Domestic Liens.—In the distribution of the proceeds of sale of a vessel, maritime liens are to be preferred over domestic liens created by State statutes for insurance premiums. The Woodward, 32 Fed. Rep. 639.

Towage bills are entitled to priority over mortgages and home port supply claims. Such liens are next in rank, but subordinate to the lien for wages. The Mystic, 30 Fed. Rep. 73.

Money advanced on the credit of the vessel to pay off liens of a maritime nature, and actually used for such purposes, is entitled to the same rank as the liens paid off. So also with money subsequently borrowed to pay off the claim for such moneys advanced. The Thomas Sherlock, 22 Fed. Rep. 253.

In The Rodney, B. & H. Adm. 226, the court in disposing of the proceeds of a vessel marshalled the different claims as follows: (1) seamen suing for wages; (2) material men; (3) a consignee, for money advanced for towage, pilotage, light, money and port duties; each claim carrying with it its own costs.

In general a wharfinger has a lien on a foreign ship for wharfage, which should have priority over a bottomry lien. But if a wharfinger has made an express personal contract with the ship owner, the court will not give his claim a priority over a bottomry interest which had previously attached to the ship. Johnson v. The McDonough, Gilp. (U. S.) 101.

Pilotage and towage into port stand in the same rank of maritime liens with necessary supplies and repairs. But a claim for towage furnished in one voyage has a lien superior to a claim for supplies furnished on a previous voyage. Porter v. The Sea Witch, 3 Woods (U. S.) 75.

Workmen and material men (having a lien on a vessel which has been taken in execution and sold under a judgment in favor of the United States, are entitled to payment out of the fund, in preference to the United States. Phillips v. The Thos. Scattergood, Gilp. (U. S.) 1.

Where a boat was seized on a libel for home supplies, and claims against her were filed for foreign and home

VI. WAIVER, DISCHARGE AND EXTINGUISHMENT OF LIENS—1. By Laches.—Delay to enforce a maritime lien, where the creditor has had a reasonable opportunity to do so, constitutes a waiver of the lien as against subsequent purchasers, or encumbrancers in good faith and without notice, unless such delay is satisfactorily explained.¹ But where the ownership of the vessel has not been supplies and repairs, for insurance premiums, for material and labor furnished in the construction of the boat, for a mortgage and borrowed money, and the boat was sold, on distribution of the proceeds it was held that after paying costs the fund should be distributed as follows: (1) seamen's wages; (2) foreign and, since the State statute made them liens, home supplies, repairs and insurance; (3) building claims; (4) mortgage claims; (5) claims for borrowed money to which no liens attach. The Guiding Star, 18 Fed. Rep. 263.

1. Laches.—Thus a vessel was repaired at Chicago in the spring of 1880, and was soon afterwards taken to Lake Erie. In the spring of 1881 she was sold to a person residing in Buffalo, who had no notice of the claims for repairs, and continued to run upon the lower lakes. The creditor was thereupon informed of such sale soon after it took place, and of the fact that she was navigating the lower lakes, but made no attempt to enforce his claim until December, 1882. The court held that he should have endeavored to seize the vessel at Buffalo, or some other port which she frequented, as soon as he was informed that she had been sold, and that his claim was stale. BROWN, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Where a vessel leaves a port of repair upon a long voyage, and does not return, and, in the meantime, it is impossible, or very difficult, to ascertain her whereabouts, there is certainly reason for saying that a creditor would not be chargeable with laches, as against innocent parties, even by the lapse of several years, if he had reasonable expectation of her return. But I find it quite impossible to say that, as a universal rule, the creditor may wait until her return to the port of repair, even though that be her home port, or a port which she has been in the habit of frequenting, without losing the benefit of his lien. A rule of this kind would be particularly inequitable upon the lakes, where the arrival and departure of vessels at all lake ports, from Chicago to Ogdensburgh, are noticed in the principal daily papers, and for four months in the year the entire shipping of the lakes is laid up by the ice to await the opening of navigation. I think that a reasonable opportunity to enforce a lien is given, within the meaning of the law, whenever the creditor is able, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, to ascertain the whereabouts of the debtor vessel. Each case must be governed largely by its own circumstances." The C. N. Johnson, 19 Fed. Rep. 782.

In Fisher v. Schooner Galloway, C. Morris, 7 Phil. (U. S.) 572, MCKENNAN, J., said: "Staleness is not susceptible of a precise definition of uniform application. It is predicable of the peculiar circumstances of each particular case. It does not operate to discharge the debt, but to deny to the creditor the enforcement of some security or form of liability, which the law holds him to have lost by laches. Simple forbearance does not constitute it; but the reason on which it rests is, that the creditor has unreasonably delayed the collection of his debt, so that some special equity or interest would be injuriously affected by the allowance of his claim. Hence it is that it has been generally, if not always, interposed to protect a purchaser of a vessel, or a person having a like equity against the lien of debts previously existing, the collection of which had been so long delayed that the privileged hypothecation of the vessel for their security had been waived." See also The Dubuque, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 20; The John Lowe, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 394; The Theodore Perry, 8 Cent. L. J. 191; The Frank, 25 Fed. Rep. 287; The Ship Mary, 1 Paine (U. S.) 180; The Scow Bolivar, Olc. Adm. 477; The Eastern Star, Ware (U. S.) 185.

Holders of liens equalling or exceeding the whole value of the vessel must enforce them with diligence; after a comparatively short period of inactivity such liens will be postponed on the ground of laches, in favor of subsequent maritime liens acquired without notice. The Young American, 30 Fed. Rep. 789.

changed, and no appreciable injury has resulted to the owner, forbearance to enforce a lien will not ordinarily be attended by a loss of the specific remedy against the vessel.¹

Unless due diligence is used to prosecute a lien for towage it cannot be enforced against a purchaser in good faith and without notice. The Frank, 25 Fed. Rep. 287.

Where a vessel is sold and the proceeds paid into the registry, the shares of the different owners of the surplus are equitably liable pro rata for the payment of any additional liens upon it. If a person having such liens purposely delays filing his claims against the remnants until the share of some of the owners have been drawn out, and then files it in order to charge the whole upon the remaining shares, such withholding is equivalent to a release of the shares withdrawn and a discharge of the lien pro tanto; the remaining shares are only chargeable with their due proportion of the claim filed. Re Wright, 16 Fed. Rep. 482.

A forbearance by seamen to libel a vessel at the port where they are discharged, before the end of the voyage, does not amount to a waiver of their lien as against a subsequent bona fide purchaser. The Mary, 1 Paine (U. S.) 180.

Ordinarily the lien of a material man will not be upheld beyond the termination of the voyage for which the supplies are furnished. The Boston, B. & H. Adm. 309. See in general The Hercules, 1 Brown Adm. 560; Paul Boggs, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 369; Anderson v. The Solon, Crabbe (U. S.) 17; Packard v. The Louisa, 2 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 48; Winterport Granite etc. Co. v. The Jasper, 1 Holmes 99; Cole v. The Atlantic, Crabbe (U. S.) 440; The D. M. French, 1 Lowell (U. S.) 43; The Hercules, 1 Brown Adm. 560; The Wexford, 7 Fed. Rep. 674; Macy v. De Wolf, 3 Woodb. & M. 193; Clark v. The Leopard, 4 L. Rep. 153; The Utility, B. & H. Adm. 218.

1. Fisher v. Galloway, C. Morris, 7 Phila. (U. S.) 572.

A seaman's lien for wages is not lost by delay in enforcing it, where no third person has acquired any right to the vessel and the owner has not been injured by the delay. The Canton, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 437.

In The Martino Cilento, 22 Fed. Rep.

859, it was held that where there is no change in the ownership of a vessel nor any question of priority as respects subsequent lienors, a claim against a vessel for damages caused by negligence will not be barred by an inexcusable delay of two years for no other reason than the possible loss of some testimony that might have been obtained by the respondents if the suit had been brought sooner. BROWN, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "It is urged that the claim should not be entertained on account of the lapse of two years before the libel was filed, most of the bark's witnesses in the meantime having passed beyond reach. It is shown that the bark during these two years had been in New York four different times, remaining from two to three weeks each time, and that the libellant, therefore, had opportunity to commence his suit earlier. For the libellant, it is shown, quite soon after the damages arose, he placed his claim in the hands of his proctors, who reported to him that they were unable to find the bark; that he was afterwards absent from the State about a year, and that he caused the arrest of the vessel upon her first arrival here that became actually known to him. I do not know of any precedent for holding, nor do I think it would be reasonable to hold, that a claim is barred under such circumstances for no other reason than for the possible loss of some testimony that might have been obtained by the respondents if the suit had been brought sooner. There has been no change in the ownership of the vessel, and there is no question of priority as respects subsequent lienors. In a suit in personam the owners would clearly be liable; and any loss or inconvenience through the difficulty of procuring all the evidence they might desire would be felt as such in a suit in personam as in this suit in rem. The difficulty arising from the partial loss of testimony through the discharge of seamen are of constant occurrence in admiralty causes; but these difficulties alone have never been deemed a sufficient ground for limiting a libellant's lien to the period of his first or second opportunity of enforcing it."

2. By Judicial Sale of the Vessel.—A judicial sale of a vessel under a decree in admiralty in a proceeding in rem will pass title to the vessel divested of all maritime liens.¹

3. By Private Sale.—Where a master is justified by necessity in selling his vessel, and does so in good faith, prior liens will be transferred to the proceeds, and the vessel cannot be held liable in the hands of the purchaser.²

1. Effect of Judicial Sale.—Thus where an American vessel was sold by the maritime court of Ontario the sale was held to discharge a lien for necessities furnished in Cleveland, Ohio, notwithstanding the court had declined to enforce such lien against the vessel for want of jurisdiction. The court held that in such a case the lien holder is remitted to his remedy against the proceeds of sale, and that his claim will be allowed wherever a lien for it exists by the law of the place where the contract was executed. The Trenton, 4 Fed. Rep. 657.

A and B were, with others, part owners of a vessel on which they served as mariners. The vessel was sold on execution out of a State court on a judgment against all the owners. It was held that the sale discharged the lien of A and B as seamen, and they could not libel the vessel in the hands of the purchaser at sheriff's sale for wages due prior thereto, notwithstanding the former part ownership. Callantine v. The Pilot, 2 Wall. Jr. C. C. 592.

When a note has been taken in payment for repairs to a vessel and judgment had thereon, and the vessel has been taken in execution under that judgment and sold for less than will satisfy it, there can be no lien against the vessel for the balance under the general admiralty law. The Mary Morgan, 28 Fed. Rep. 196.

Where a material man has a lien upon a vessel under the general maritime law of the United States, he may enforce that lien by a suit in the United States court, although the vessel may have been subsequently seized and sold under a State statute. The Golden Gate, Newb. Adm. 296. See in general Hill v. The Golden Gate, 6 Am. Law Reg. 308; Williams v. Armroyd, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 424; The Tremont, 1 W. Rob. Adm. 163; The Mary, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 126; The Amelie, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 18; The Granite State, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 277; The Helena, 4 Rob. Adm. 4; Grant v. McLachlin, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 34.

14 C. of L.—29

2. Effect of Private Sale.—In the case of the Amelie, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 18, a vessel owned in Amsterdam was sold in Port au Prince after a careful survey by five persons, one, the British Lloyds agent; another, the agent of the American Underwriters, and the remaining three captains of vessels temporarily detained in port—the whole appointed by and acting under the authority of the consul of the country where the vessel was owned. The five surveyors unanimously agreed that the vessel was not worth repairing, and advised the sale of it. The court held that the sale divested all liens. MR. JUSTICE DAVIS, in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "The sale of a ship becomes a necessity within the meaning of the commercial law when nothing better can be done for the owner, or those concerned in the adventure. If the master, on his part, has an honest purpose to serve those who are interested in ship and cargo, and can clearly prove that the condition of his vessel required him to sell, then he is justified. As the power is liable to abuse, it must be exercised in the most perfect good faith, and it is the duty of courts and juries to watch with great care the conduct of the master. In order to justify the sale, good faith in making it and the necessity for it must both concur, and the purchaser, to protect his title, must be able to show their concurrence. The question is not whether it is expedient to break up a voyage and to sell the ship, but whether there was a legal necessity to do it. If this can be shown, the master is justified; otherwise not. And this necessity is a question of fact, to be determined in each case by the circumstances in which the master is placed, and the perils to which the property is exposed. If the master can within a reasonable time consult the owners, he is required to do it, because they should have an opportunity to decide whether in their judgment a sale is necessary. And he should never sell when in port with a disabled ship without first calling to his aid disinterested persons of skill and experience, who are competent to advise, after a full survey of the vessel and her injuries, whether she had better be repaired or sold. And although his authority to sell does not depend on their recommendation, yet, if they advise a sale, and he acts on their advice, he is in a condition to furnish the court or jury reviewing the proceedings strong evidence in justification of his conduct.

449

Where a vessel has been sold at private sale, but not by necessity, prior liens will not in general be divested, if there has been no want of diligence in enforcing them.¹

. . . It is insisted, even if the circumstances were such as to justify the sale and pass a valid title to the vendee, he, nevertheless, took the title subject to all existing liens. If the position were sound it would materially affect the interest of commerce; for, as exigencies are constantly arising, requiring the master to terminate the voyage as hopeless, and sell the property in his charge for the highest price he can get, would any man of common prudence buy a ship sold under such circumstances if he took the title encumbered with secret liens, about which, in the great majority of cases, he could not have the opportunity of learning anything? The ground on which the right to sell rests is, that in case of disaster, the master, from necessity, becomes the agent of all the parties interested, and is bound to do the best for them that he can, in the condition in which he is placed, and, therefore, has the power to dispose of the property for their benefit. When nothing better can be done for the interest of those concerned in the property than to sell, it is a case of necessity, and as the master acts for all, and is the agent of all, he sells as well for the lien holder as the owner. The very object of the sale, according to the uniform current of the decisions, is to save something for the benefit of all concerned, and if this is so, the proceeds of the ship, necessarily, by operation of the law stand in the place of the ship. If the ship can only be sold in case of necessity, where the good faith of the master is unquestioned, and if it be the purpose of the sale to save something for the parties in interest, does not sound policy require a clear title to be given the purchaser in order that the property may bring its full value? If the sale is impeached, the law imposes on the purchaser the burden of showing the necessity for it, and this he is in a position to do, because the facts which constitute the legal necessity are within his reach; but he cannot know, nor be expected to know, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, the nature and extent of the liens that have attached to the vessel. Without pursuing the subject further, we are clearly of the opinion, when the ship is lawfully sold, the purchaser takes an absolute title divested of all liens, and that the liens are transferred to the proceeds of the ship, which, in the sense of the admiralty law, becomes the substitute for the ship."

A sale cannot be held to be fraudulent when it appears by the clear weight of testimony that a vessel was driven ashore and filled with water and running ice, and was regarded as a substantial wreck not only by the master, but by the agents and surveyors of the underwriters and other disinterested persons. The Raleigh, 32 Fed. Rep. 633; s. c., 37 Fed. Rep. 125.

1. In the Tonawanda, 27 Fed. Rep. 575, the libellants furnished wharfage and cooperage materials for the ship Tonawanda of Philadelphia at Jersey City, at the request of A. & Co., who had been the ship's agent in New York, and who were dealt with as such, when in fact, although unknown to the libellants, they were the owners of the ship. Payments were promptly sought of A. & Co., and, upon their promise to pay, the Tonawanda was allowed to sail for Europe. She returned to Philadelphia twice, but of these visits libellants knew nothing. On her subsequent return to Philadelphia she was attached. This was two years after the expenses were incurred. In the meantime the ship had been bought by the respondents. It was held that, as the expenses had been incurred in a foreign port, the unpaid charges became a lien, to which the libellants were still entitled, as the facts did not show them to have been guilty of negligence. In delivering the opinion of the court, BUTLER, J., said: "It was the libellants' duty to exercise reasonable vigilance to enforce payment. Had the vessel returned to Jersey City, and they known it, or under such circumstances that they should have known it, and been permitted to depart without payment, the lien would have been lost. While she was abroad, of course, no amount of vigilance would have accomplished anything, except to ascertain her whereabouts. The libellants were not required to follow her then. The only time when she was in reach were the two occasions when she visited Philadelphia in 1883. The libellants were ignorant of these visits; otherwise they should have attached her there. The only question, therefore, is, should this ignorance be ascribed to carelessness, want of proper vigilance? This is certainly a serious question—one about which there is room for doubt. The libellants could have ascertained the fact, of course, either by keeping a constant watch upon the vessel's movements, or upon the entries at the port of Philadelphia. Did their duty, however, require this? Is such a course, under similar conditions, customary? I think not. When all the circumstances are considered, I think the libellants must be held to a higher degree of vigilance than is usually exercised or required, to visit them with the consequences of remissness, for failing to discover these visits. Certainly they were not bound to enquire into the proposed movements of the vessel when she left their dock, nor to hunt her up while treating with her supposed agents for payment. To do this would have been unusual, and to require it would be unreasonable. They expected payment from the agents, and, as is customary and proper, first exhausted their efforts in that direction. As soon as they ascertained, or could well ascertain, that the lien must be resorted to, they sought for and found the vessel. When she next visited the country they attached her. I think no more was required. Although a good deal of time elapsed between the creation of the lien and the attachment, I am not satisfied that the libellants are blamable respecting it. While the holders of such liens should be held to a proper degree of vigilance as against innocent purchasers, unreasonable activity and haste should not be required. It must not be overlooked that the purchaser always has it within his power to protect himself by his contract."

4. By Taking Commercial Paper.—The lien upon a vessel is not necessarily extinguished by the acceptance of commercial paper, unless such paper was expressly accepted as an absolute payment.¹

Where the purchaser of a vessel had information sufficient before or at the end of his purchase, to put him on enquiry as to any liens which might exist against the vessel, the fact that the proceedings were not instituted against the vessel until after the purchase does not operate as a waiver of the lien which originally existed. The Louie Dole, 14 Fed. Rep. 862.

The lien for seaman's wages can be enforced against the vessel in the hands of a bona fide purchaser of her, if she was sold without the knowledge of the seaman, and he pursues his claim at the first opportunity after his debt has accrued. The Bolivar, Olc. Adm. 480.

The lien accorded by the maritime law, for a maritime tort (such as a collision) upon the offending vessel, is a proprietary interest, which travels with the vessel. It may be enforced, notwithstanding she has sailed into another jurisdiction where no remedy by seizure is allowed, and has there been sold, by private transfer, to a purchaser in good faith and without notice. The Avon, 1 Brown Adm. 170.

See in general The Eliza Jane, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 152; The Atalanta, 1 Brown Adm. 489; The Superior, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 346; Compare The Hercules, 1 Brown Adm. (U. S.) 560; The Chusan, 2 Story (U. S.) 455; The Bolivar, Olc. Adm. 474; The General Jackson, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 554; The Paul Boggs, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 369; The Detroit, Brown Adm. 141; The Bristol, 11 Fed. Rep. 156; The Canary No. 2, 22 Fed. Rep. 532; The St. Mary, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 329; The Mary Elizabeth, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 491; The Granite State, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 277; The Union Express, 1 Brown Adm. 537; Anderson v. The Solon, Crabbe (U. S.) 17.

1. The St. Lawrence, 1 Black (U. S.) 522; The Kimball, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 37; The Bird of Paradise, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 545; The Pride of America, 19 Fed. Rep. 607; The Alabama, 22 Fed. Rep. 449; Borland v. Zittloesen, 27 Fed. Rep. 131; Baker v. Draper, 4 Cliff. (U. S.) 420; The Betsey and Rhoda, 2 Ware (U. S.) 112; Murray v. Lazarus, 1 Paine (U. S.) 572; Sutton v. The Albatross, 2 Wall. Jr. C. C. (U. S.) 327;

But where the lien is sought to be enforced the note or bill must be surrendered.¹

5. By Taking Collateral Security.—A maritime lien may be waived by an express contract on the part of the creditor, to look to other security.²

Raymond v. Ellen Stewart, 5 McLean (U. S.) 269; The Active, Olc. Adm. 286; Page v. Hubbard, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 335; Palmer v. Priest, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 512; Moore v. Newbury, 6 McLean (U. S.) 472; Moore v. The Fashion, Newb. Adm. 49; The St. Lawrence, 1 Black (U. S.) 522; The Napoleon, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 393; Strodes v. The Collier, 3 West L. Month. 521; Logan v. The Æolian, 1 Bond (U. S.) 267; The Pride of America, 19 Fed. Rep. 607; The Guy, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 758; The Gen. Meade, 20 Fed. Rep. 923; The Eclipse, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 99; The Sarah J. Weed, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 555; The Harriet, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 33; The Eastern Star, 1 Ware (U. S.) 185; The Illinois, 2 Flip. (U. S.) 383.

In The St. Lawrence, 1 Black (U. S.) 522, the Supreme Court of the United States laid down the rule "that by the principles of the maritime law a lien is not lost by the acceptance of notes unless the claimant can show that the lien holders agreed to receive the notes in lieu of the original claim."

The master of a vessel in a foreign port, being without money sufficient to pay for necessary repairs and supplies and defray other expenses, borrowed the necessary funds and gave to the lenders drafts on the owners of the vessel for the amount, payable thirty days after sight, which drafts were accepted on presentation, out were protested for nonpayment. It was held that the drafts were only conditional payment, and did not discharge and satisfy the original debt. The Emily Souder, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 666.

Where the libellants furnished materials to a vessel in New York, took therefor the negotiable promissory note of one of the owners, on time, it was held that under the lex loci, which declared a note taken for a debt to be a conditional payment, there was no waiver of the maritime lien. The Chusan, 2 Story (U. S.) 455.

The mere fact that upon an advance to meet the necessities of a master, made while the vessel is in a foreign port, bills of exchange are drawn for the reimbursement of the lenders, does not deprive them of their lien. The reimbursement must have been made in some mode, even though the lien upon the vessel was the libellant's reliance. Why not by paying their drafts drawn on the owners? The Acme, 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 366.

1. Carter v. The Byzantium, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 1; Ramsey v. Allegre, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 611; The Napoleon, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 393; Harris v. The Kensington, 8 Am. L. Reg. 144; Marshall v. Bazin, 7 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 342; The Eclipse, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 99.

2. Collateral Security.—Moore v. The Fashion, Newb. Adm. 49; Taylor v. The Commonwealth, 14 Am. L. Reg. (U. S.) 86; Stielman v. The Buckeye State, Newb. Adm. 111; The Maggie Jones, 1 Flip. (U. S.) 635.

A maritime lien will not be considered as waived by anything less than an express contract. Attaching the vessel under a State law, and settling that proceeding on receiving notes secured by a mortgage on the vessel, which have since become worthless, does not constitute a waiver of such lien, but a libel may still be sustained. The Gate City, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 200.

Though a lien for repairs is presumed to be waived by taking a mortgage upon real estate, parol evidence is admissible to show that the mortgage was received as collateral security, and with no intention of waiving a lien. The Theodore Perry, 8 Cent. L. J. 191.

A lien for supplies furnished in a foreign port, created by an hypothecation of a vessel in a form of a mortgage, is not lost by taking another security for the claim. The Hilarity, B. & H. Adm. 90.

The fact that the master gave his personal security does not relieve the vessel or her owners from liability, nor does the holding of bills of sale absolute on their face preclude the material man from attaching the vessel, if it can be clearly shown that such bills of sale were intended to be held merely as collateral security. The Ellen Holgate, 30 Fed. Rep. 125.

A material man having a considerable claim against a vessel on an ac-

6. By Destruction of the Vessel.—A lien for supplies on a vessel which is afterwards taken to pieces, and a portion used in the construction of a new vessel will not follow and attach to the latter.¹

7. By Departure of the Vessel.—In general a maritime lien is not extinguished by the vessel's proceeding to sea.² An exception to the rule is in the case of wharfage, where the lien is lost by a departure of the ship from its moorings.³

8. By Assignment of the Claim.—A material-man may assign his claim against the vessel, and the lien is not thereby lost. If the assignment is absolute, the assignee may proceed in admiralty in his own name, against the vessel.⁴

VII. LIENS ON VESSELS AT COMMON LAW.—At common law a shipwright has a lien for repairs and work done on a ship, so long as she remains in his possession. If, however, the owner retains possession during the repairs, or if after the repairs are made, the shipwright voluntarily yields up the possession his lien is gone. Such a lien being of a maritime nature may be enforced in admiralty.⁵

count running through several months, some items of which were not maritime, took cash for part of the amount, and notes at short dates for the residue, and a mortgage on the vessel to secure the notes. It was held that the cash payment must be applied to the extinguishment of the items not maritime; the notes having been taken at short dates did not waive the lien of the amounts for which they were taken; the mortgage being recent and not prejudicial to other maritime liens, and attended by no act inconsistent with the rights of other maritime conditions, did not waive the maritime lien. The D. B. Steelman, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 210.

Neither the taking of notes for the debts nor the taking of a deed of trust to one of the creditors is a waiver of a maritime lien. The Illinois, 2 Flip. (U. S.) 383.

1. Strodes v. Collier, 3 West L. M. 521.

2. The Active, Olc. Adm. 286; Knox v. Ninetta, Crabbe (U. S.) 534.

3. Johnson v. McDonough, Gilp. (U. S.) 101; Russel v. The Asa R. Swift, Newb. Adm. 553. See also WHARVES AND WHARFAGE.

4. The Sarah J. Weed, 2 Lowell (U. S.) 555; The General Jackson, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 554.

In the case of Carrol v. T. P. Leathers, Newb. Adm. 432, it was decided that if A holds a lien against a vessel for materials furnished, and the master requests B to pay the account of A, the lien originally held by the latter is not by such payment transferred to B, and he has no right of action in rem in the admiralty.

5. Common Law Liens.—In the leading case of The General Smith, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 438. MR. JUSTICE STORY said: "A shipwright who has taken a ship into his own possession to repair it is not bound to part with the possession until he is paid for the repairs, more than any other artificer. But if he has once parted with the possession, or has worked upon it without taking possession, he is not deemed a privileged creditor, having any claim upon the ship itself." See also The Marion, 1 Story (U. S.) 68.

A common law possessory lien may be acquired for repairs where the vessel is lawfully delivered into the possession of the shipwright by part owners having the lawful custody and control of her, though such repairs, if beyond what is necessary, are not binding upon the interests of nonassenting part owners. The Two Marys, 16 Fed. Rep. 697.

The master of a vessel having surrendered her into custody of libellant, a shipwright, for repairs, he being understood by both parties to be responsible for her care and safety, although the master, who was also the owner, stayed by the vessel most of the time, and retained the cook and mate, who slept on board, the presence of the master and the retention of the cook and mate not being with the intent to retain the custody of the vessel, but to

VIII. LIENS UNDER STATE LAWS—1. In General.—A State law may give a lien for repairs and supplies, furnished to a domestic vessel in a home port, and such a lien may be enforced in admiralty¹ The lien on a domestic vessel depends upon the local help in repairing and lessen expenses: Held, that the libellant had such actual possession of the vessel as would give him a common law lien. The B. F. Woolsey, 7 Fed. Rep. 108.

1. "It seems to be settled in our jurisprudence that so long as congress does not interpose to regulate the subject, the rights of a material man furnishing necessities to a vessel in her home port may be regulated in each State by State legislation. State laws, it is true, cannot exclude the contract for furnishing such necessities from the domain of admiralty jurisdiction, for it is a maritime contract, and they cannot alter the limits of that jurisdiction; nor can they enforce it upon the State courts so as to enable them to proceed in rem for the enforcement of liens created by such State laws, for it is exclusively conferred upon the district courts of the United States. They can only authorize the enforcement thereof by common law remedies, or such remedies as are equivalent thereto. But the district courts of the United States having jurisdiction of the contract as a maritime one, may enforce liens given for its security, even when created by the State laws. The practice may be somewhat anomalous, but it has existed from the origin of the government, and, perhaps, was originally superinduced by the fact that prior to the adoption of the constitution liens of this sort created by State laws had been enforced by the State courts of admiralty; and as these courts were immediately succeeded by the district courts of the United States, and in several instances the judge of the State court was transferred to the district court, it was natural, in the infancy of federal legislation on commercial subjects, for the latter courts to entertain jurisdiction over the same classes of cases, in every respect as the State courts had done, without due regard to the new relations which the States had assumed towards the maritime law and admiralty jurisdiction. For example, in 1784 the legislature of Pennsylvania passed a law allowing persons concerned in building, repairing, fitting out and furnishing vessels for a voyage, to sue in admiralty, as mariners sue for wages. Two cases, those of The Collier, and The Enterprise, arising under the law, and coming before the admiralty court of Pennsylvania, are reported in Judge Hopkinson's works. No doubt other cases of the same kind occurred in the courts of other States. But, whatever may have been the origin of the practice, and whether or not it was based on the soundest principles, it became firmly settled, and it is now too late to question its validity. It is true that the inconveniences arising from the often intricate and conflicting State laws creating such liens induced this court, in December term, 1858, to abrogate that portion of the twelfth admiralty rule of 1844 which allowed proceedings in rem against domestic ships for repairs and supplies furnished in the home port, and to allow proceedings in personam only in such cases. But we have now restored the rule of 1844, or, rather, we have made it general in its terms, giving to material men in all cases their option to proceed either in rem or in personam. Of course this modification of the rule cannot avail where no lien exists, but where one does exist, no matter by what law, it removes all obstacles to a proceeding in rem if credit is given to the vessel." The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 558, 559.

See also The Edith, 94 U. S. 518; The Harrison, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 74; The Ella B., 26 Fed. Rep. 111; The Helen Brown, 28 Fed. Rep. 111; The Whistler, 30 Fed. Rep. 199; The City of Salem, 31 Fed. Rep. 616; James Dalzell's Son & Co. v. The Daniel Kaine, 31 Fed. Rep. 746; The John Farron, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 24; The Kate Hinchman, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 238; The Eliza Ladd, 1 N. Y. Week. Dig. 517; Baldwin v. The Braddish Johnson, 3 Woods (U. S.) 582; The B. F. Woolsey, 7 Fed. Rep. 108; The N. W. Thomas, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 210.

A State law may impose a lien on a vessel for tolls, in consideration of her use of river and harbor improvements, and such lien may be enforced by an action in rem. The St. Joseph, 7 N. Y. Week. Dig. 35.

A State law cannot confer jurisdiction on a court of admiralty by attach-statutory law, and is in effect an element of the original contract.¹

The lien given by a statute of a State applies to boats navigating the waters of the State on contracts made within the State.²

The lien of a pilot conferred by State laws is enforceable in admiralty,³ so also is a lien for towage services given by State ing a lien to a nonmaritime contract. Admiralty will enforce such State liens only as are given on maritime contracts. The Guiding Star, 18 Fed. Rep. 263; The J. F. Warner, 22 Fed. Rep. 342; The Canary No. 2, 22 Fed. Rep. 532; The Kingston, 23 Fed. Rep. 200; The Alanson Sumner, 28 Fed. Rep. 670; The Robert Fulton, 1 Paine (U. S.) 620; The Samuel Stronge, Newb. Adm. 187; The General Tompkins, 9 Fed. Rep. 620; The Theodore Perry, 8 Cen. L. J. 191; The Alida, 1 Abb. Adm. 165; The Infanta, 1 Abb. Adm. 263; Parmlee v. The Charles Mears, Newb. Adm. 197.

The fact that the proceeding is pending in a federal court held in a different State from that whose law created the lien does not defeat it. White v. The Cynthia, 2 Fed. Rep. 112; affirmed, 10 Fed. Rep. 232.

If the State statute giving a lien prescribes a limit of time within which it may be enforced, the federal courts must observe that limitation. The Edith, 94 U. S. 518; affirmed, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 415, which affirmed 5 Ben. (U. S.) 432.

The State law must clearly give a lien on the vessel, not merely define a liability of her owners, in order to warrant the district court in entertaining a libel in rem. Wick v. The Samuel Strong, 6 McLean (U. S.) 587.

1. The Kate Tramaine, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 63; The Maggie Hammond, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 435. In the latter case, MR. JUSTICE CLIFFORD said: "Where the lien or privilege is created by the lex loci contractus, says Judge Story, it will generally, although not universally, be respected and enforced in all places where the property is found, or where the right can be beneficially enforced by the lex fori. Such a lien is regarded as being in effect an element of the original contract." The Stephen Allen, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 178; Clinton v. The Hannah, Bee (U. S.) 419; The General Smith, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 438; The St. Jago de Cuba, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 400; The Robert Fulton, 1 Paine (U. S.) 620; The Island City, 1 Low. (U. S.) 375; The Lady Franklin, 1 Biss.

(U. S.) 557; Wooley v. The Peruvian, 3 Ware (U. S.) 154; The John Richards, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 106; The Belfast, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 624; Leon v. Calceran, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 185; Vose v. Cockroft, 44 N. Y. 415; The Josephine, 30 N. Y. 10; The Plymouth, Newb. (U. S.) 194; Wick v. Samuel Strong, 6 McLean (U. S.) 543; Webster v. Andes, 18 Ohio 187; Waverly v. The Clements, 14 Ohio 28; The Ferry Steamers Norfolk and Union, 2 Hughes (U. S.) 123; The Raleigh Cannon, and Astoria, 2 Hughes (U. S.) 41; The Alida, Abb. Adm. (U. S.) 160; Fox v. Holt, 4 Ben. (U. S.) 236; Macy v. DeWolf, 3 Wood. & M. 203; Boyland v. Victory, 40 Mo. 244; Francis v. Harrison, 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 355; The Hilarity, Blatchf. & H. (U. S.) 92; The Zodiac, 1 Hagg. Adm. 32.

2. Ashbrook v. Golden Gate, Newb. (U. S.) 297; James v. The Pawnee, 19 Mo. 517. Thus a sloop of tonnage required to take out a licence under the act of congress employed in navigating the Hudson between Albany and New York, may be proceeded against by attachment under the New York statute authorizing the arrest of ships or vessels for debts. Walker v. Blackwell, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 557. See also The Joseph E. Coffee, Olc. (U. S.) 405; The Farmers' Delight v. Lawrence, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 564; Hancox v. Dunning, 6 Hill (U. S.) 494. In Wisconsin it has been held that a statute for the collection of demands against domestic vessels does not confer a maritime lien, and that the district court has no jurisdiction to enforce a liability created by such statute. Celestine, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 1.

3. Pilots.—Thus where a pilot licensed under a State statute had tendered his services to pilot a vessel out of port, and such services were refused, his claim to half-pilotage fees allowed by the statute became perfect. Steamship Company v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. (U. S.). See also Port Wardens, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 34; Ex parte McNeil, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 241; Hunt v. Mackey, 12 Met. (Mass.) 346; The California, 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 463; The American, 1 Low. (U. S.) 177; The Alaska, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 392; The statute.¹ Reference to the various State statutes and decisions under them appear in the note.²

2. Divestment of State Liens.—As a general rule a lien provided by statute ceases when the vessel is permitted to depart from the port where the repairs were made or supplies furnished. This

Robert J. Mercer, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 284; The Mary Gratwick, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 344; Smith v. Smith, 8 Met. (Mass.) 329; Nickerson v. Mason, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 64.

1. Towage.—The General Cass, 1 Brown Adm. (U. S.) 392; The Detroit, 1 Brown 141; The W. J. Welsh, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 74; The Kate Tramaime, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 60; The Sarah Jane, 2 Am. Law Rev. 455; The Belfast, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 624; The Eng. Mut. Mar. Ins. Co. v. Durham, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 1; The Celestine, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 3; Davis v. Child, 2 Ware (U. S.) 74; Macy v. DeWolf, 3 Wood. & M. 203; People's Ferry Co. v. Beers, 20 How. (U. S.) 402.

2. Alabama.—Code 1876, § 3465.

Arizona.—R. S. 1887, § 2287.

California.—3 Codes and Stat. 1885, § 8137, Civil Procedure; Crawford v. The Caroline Reid, 42 Cal. 469; Edgerly v. The San Lorenzo, 29 Cal. 418.

Connecticut.—G. Stat. 1888, §§ 3041-3044.

Florida.—Dig. Laws 1881, ch. 143, § 18.

Georgia.—Code 1882, § 1982; Kirkpatrick v. Bank of Augusta, 30 Ga. 465; Cape Fear Steamboat Co. v. Torrent, 46 Ga. 585.

Illinois.—Annot. Stat. 1885, ch. 12, § 1; The E. P. Dorr v. Waldron, 62 Ill. 221; The Montauk, 47 Ill. 335; Johnson v. Chicago & P. E. Co., 105 Ill. 462.

Indiana.—Rev. Stat. 1881, §§ 5277-5280.

Kentucky.—Gen. Stat. 1883, p. 984; The Rapid Transit, 11 Fed. Rep.

Louisiana.—R. Civ. Code 1870, art. 3237; The Canary No. 2, 22 Fed. Rep. 532; Hyde v. Culver, 4 La. An. 9; Wickham v. Levistones, 11 La. An. 702; Owens v. Davis, 15 La. An. 22; Bank v. Bark Jane, 19 La. An. 1.

Maine.—Rev. Stat. 1883, ch. 91, § 8; Hull of a New Ship, Ware (U. S.) 565; Hull of a New Brig, 1 Story (U. S.) 244; The Kearsarge, Ware (U. S.) 546; Hayford v. Cunningham, 71 Me. 128.

Maryland.—R. Code 1878, p. 701.

Massachusetts.—Pub. Stat. 1882, ch. 198, §§ 14-17; Foster v. Richard Bus-teed, 100 Mass. 409; McDonald v. The Nimbus, 137 Mass. 360; Briggs v. Light Boats, 11 Allen (Mass.) 157; Rogers v. Currier, 13 Gray (Mass.) 129; Barstow v. Robinson, 2 Allen (Mass.) 605; Young v. The Orphans, 119 Mass. 179; Jones v. Keen, 115 Mass. 170; Donnell v. The Starlight, 103 Mass. 227; Hawes v. Mitchell, 15 Gray (Mass.) 234; Dunham v. Johnson, 135 Mass. 310; The Helen Brown, 28 Fed. Rep. 111; The Huron, 29 Fed. Rep. 183; Young v. The Orphans, 119 Mass. 179; Story v. Buffum, 8 Allen (Mass.) 35; McMonagle v. Nolan, 98 Mass. 320.

Michigan.—Annot. Stat. 1882, §§ 8236-8279; Gould v. Jacobson, 58 Mich. 288.

Minnesota.—Code, § 1209.

Mississippi.—Rev. Code 1880, § 1395; Archibold v. Bank, 64 Miss. 523.

Missouri.—2 Rev. Stat. 1879, § 4225.

New Hampshire.—Gen. L. 1878, p. 334.
New Jersey.—Supp. Rev. 1886, p. 427; Edwards v. Elliott, 36 N. J. L. 449; Baeder v. Carnie, 44 N. J. L. 208; Randall v. Roche, 30 N. J. L. 220.

New York.—3 Rev. Stat. 1882, p. 2404-2410; Happy v. Mosher, 48 N. Y. 313; Sheppard v. Steele, 43 N. Y. 52; King v. Greenway, 71 N. Y. 413; Mott v. Lansing, 57 N. Y. 112; Squires v. Abbott, 61 N. Y. 530; The Whistler, 30 Fed. Rep. 199; The Kingston, 23 Fed. Rep. 200; The Arctic, 22 Fed. Rep. 126; Onderdonk v. Voorhes, 36 N. Y. 358.

North Carolina.—Code 1883, vol. 1, § 1804.

Ohio.—Code, § 1220; Johnson v. Ward, 27 Ohio St. 517; The Guiding Star, 9 Fed. Rep. 521.

Oregon.—Laws 1876, p. 9.

Pennsylvania.—Brightly's Purdon Dig. 1883, p. 124; Dalzell v. The Daniel Kane, 31 Fed. Rep. 746; The Venture, 26 Fed. Rep. 285.

South Carolina.—Gen. Stat., § 2389.

Tennessee.—Code 1884, §§ 2751, 4293.

Texas.—Rev. Stat. 1879, p. 461.

Vermont.—R. L. 1880, § 1981.

Washington.—Code 1881, ch. 136; Waddell v. The Daisy, 2 Wash. Ter. 76.

West Virginia.—Acts 1882, ch. 64, §

rule, however, does not apply where a short excursion is made beyond the limits of the State, for the mere purpose of testing machinery, and where there is an immediate return to port.¹

MARK.—(a) A sign, traced on paper or parchment, which stands in the place of a signature; usually made by persons who cannot write.² It is most often the sign of the cross made in a little space left between the Christian name and surname, and the word his is usually written above the mark, and the word mark below it.³

(b) A label, token or impression; a sign, badge, index; as, post mark, trade mark.⁴

Wisconsin.—Rev. Stat. 1878, § 3348; Weston v. Morse, 40 Wis. 455.

1. The New York statute (2 R. S. 493, § 2) provides that "when the ship or vessel shall depart from the port at which she was when such debt was contracted, to some other port within this State, every such debt shall cease to be a lien at the expiration of twelve days after the day of such departure; and in all cases such lien shall cease immediately after the vessel shall have left this State." See Johnson v. McDonough, Gilp. (U. S.) 103; Packard v. Louisa, 2 Wood. & M. (U. S.) 58; Leland v. Medora, 2 Wood. & M. (U. S.) 98; Spring v. S. C. Ins. Co., 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 268; Leonard v. Huntington, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 290; James v. Bixby, 11 Mass. 34; Stewart v. Hall, 2 Dow. 29.

The vessel must leave upon a voyage or employment in the pursuit of trade or business. The Alida, Abb. Adm. (U. S.) 172; Hancox v. Dunning, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 494; The Joseph E. Coffee, Olc. (U. S.) 407; The Sam Slick, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 292; Davis v. A New Brig. Gilp. (U. S.) 473.

2. Bouv. Law Dict.

3. 2 Bla. Com. 305.

Marksman.—One who signs by means of a mark. 2 Bla. Com. 305; Grayson v. Atkinson, 2 Ves. Sr. 454.

Under the Statute of Frauds, 29 C. II, ch. 3, §§ 5 and 6, the making of a mark by the deviser, to a will of real estate is a sufficient signing; and it is not necessary to prove that he could not write his name at the time. Baker v. Denning, 8 Ad. & E. 94; In the goods of Field, deceased, 3 Curt. 753; Meehan v. Rourke, 2 Bradf. Surr. (N. Y.) 385. Flannery's Will, 24 Pa. St. 502 and cases cited; St. Louis Hospital Ass'n v. Williams Adm., 19 Mo. 609; Horton v. Johnson, 18 Ga. 396.

It is not necessary to the validity of a deed that the words "her mark" shall accompany the cross of the grantor in a deed, who signs by making her mark, when it appears that it was made by her, or, being made by some other person, that she adopted it as hers. Sellers v. Sellers, 3 S. E. Rep. (N. Car.) 917; see also State v. Byrd, 93 N. Car. 624; Tatom v. White, 95 N. Car. 453.

Under the laws of Louisiana, and the decisions of the courts of that State, a "mark" for the name, to an instrument, by a person who is unable to write his name, is of the same effect as a signature of the name. Zacharie v. Franklin, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 151; see also Madison v. Zabriskie, 11 La. Rep. 251.

This principle is fully settled by many cases. Among others, Jackson v. Van Dusen, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 144.

4. Adams v. Heisel, 31 F. R. 280.

Ear Mark.—A mark placed upon a thing by which to identify it. Anderson's Law Dict.

Trade Mark.—A trade mark is the name, symbol, figure, letter, form or device adopted and used by a manufacturer, or merchant, in order to designate the goods that he manufactures or sells, and distinguish them from those manufactured or sold by another, to the end that they may be known in the market as his, and thus enable him to secure such profits as result from a reputation for superior skill, industry or enterprise. Upton on Trade Marks, p. 9.

Form of Barrel as a "Trade Mark."—A barrel of peculiar form, dimensions and capacity, irrespective of any marks or brands impressed upon or connected with it, cannot become a lawful trade mark, or a substantive part of a lawful trade mark. Moorman v. Hoge, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 78. See generally TRADE MARK.

MARKET—MARKETABLE TITLE—MARKET OVERT.

(c) To point out, settle, define, describe, with or without visible boundaries.¹

(d) To determine by marks on the ground.²

(e) To note or enter upon a record.³

MARKET.—See note 4.

MARKETABLE TITLE.—A marketable title in equity is one in which there is no doubt involved either as to matter of law or fact.⁵

MARKET OVERT.—An open or public market; a place appointed by law or custom for the sale of goods and chattels at stated times in public.⁶ In England, a sale of anything vendible in-market overt is good as between the parties, and binding on all who have a property in the thing.⁷ The doctrine has never been recognized in the United States.⁸

1. Allen v. Smith, 12 N. J. L. 165.

"Mark and Lay Out the Bounds and Rules," etc.—The legislature, in requiring the court of common pleas to "mark and lay out the bounds and rules of the prison in their several counties," did not intend to use the word "mark" in a literal sense; they meant by it to point out, to settle, to define, to describe; and the bounds therefore may be sufficiently marked and laid out by course and distance, without fixing any visible marks or boundaries on the ground. Allen v. Smith, 7 Halst. (N. J.) 160.

2. As to mark a boundary line. Keller v. Young, 78 Pa. St. 170.

Where there is a conflict between the marks made on the ground and the draft of the survey, the line is to be determined by the marks. Keller v. Young, 78 Pa. St. 166.

3. As to mark for use. Indicate upon the record of a suit or judgment for whose benefit the same is maintained or exists. Anderson's Law Dict.

4. In Milliman v. Neher, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 37, the words "market the crops" were held to be equivalent to "sell the crops."

5. Dalzell v. Crawford, 1 Parsons' Sel. Cases in Eq. 45. It should be such as dealers in real estate, savings banks and trust companies would be willing to take and invest in. Vought v. Williams, 46 Hun (N. Y.) 638. See also SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

6. Bouv. Law Dict.

7. 2 Bla. Com. 449.

Our ordinary markets bear no resemblance to market overt. The reason why a sale of stolen property, made in market overt, conveyed a title to the purchaser is understood to be that, as the market was held at stated intervals, in particular places, and known to the whole community, those who had lost property by theft or otherwise could be present and make known their loss; failing to do so, and as by the publicity of the transaction, every assurance was given to purchasers that the sale was honest and fair, it was but just the purchasers should be protected in the title thus acquired. Fawcett, Isham & Co. v. Osbourn, Adams & Co., 32 Ill. 426.

8. In Ventress v. Smith, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 175, it was said this doctrine of market overt, which controls and interferes with the application of the common law, has never been recognized in any of the United States, or received any judicial sanction. See also Easton v. Worthington, 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 130; Wheelwright v. Depeyster, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 480; Bryant v. Whitchen, 52 N. H. 158; Dame v. Baldwin, 8 Mass. 519; Roland v. Gundy, 5 Ohio 202; Coombs v. Gordon, 59 Me. 111.

Marketable Security.—By the stamp act 1870 (33 and 34 Vict., ch. 97, § 2), and the Customs and Inland Revenue act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict., ch. 8, § 13), a "marketable security" is defined as meaning "a security of such a description as to be capable of being sold in any stock market in the United Kingdom." Texas Land & Cattle Co. Lim. v. Comms. of Inland Revenue, 16 Ct. of Sess. Cas. 69.

MARKETS.

- I. Definition, 459.
- II. Right to Establish, 460.
- III. Market Lands and Houses, 460.
- IV. Markets in Streets—Nuisances, 461.
- V. Municipal Regulations, 462.
- VI. Use of Market—Sales, 464.
- VII. Occupation of Stalls and Stands, 465.
- VIII. Removal and Discontinuance, 467.
- IX. Actions Against Municipality for Negligence, 467.

I. Definition.—A market, in the general sense of the word, may be defined as a public place for the sale of commodities.¹

1. Ketchum v. City of Buffalo, 14 N. Y. 356.

It is a franchise or liberty derived from the crown and arising from the king's grant or prescription, which supposes an ancient grant to have a market. A market is a privilege within a town to have a market. Ketchum v. Buffalo, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 204, 296; Caldwell v. Alton, 33 Ill. 419, 85 Am. Dec. 282.

In Smith v. Newbern, 70 N. Car. 14, 16 Am. Rep. 766, the court declared a market to be a public place, appointed by local authorities, where all sorts of things necessary for the subsistence or for the convenience of life are sold. And in Caldwell v. Alton, 33 Ill. 416, 419, 85 Am. Dec. 282, it was described as a designated place in a town or city to which all persons can repair who wish to buy or sell articles there exposed for sale.

In New Orleans v. Morris, 3 Woods (U. S.) 103, 107, markets were defined as places where comestibles, perishable in their nature, are sold for the daily consumption of the people, which, from the very nature of the things therein sold, require sanitary regulations and thus fall within the police powers of cities. And it was accordingly held that a place known as a market bazaar, where articles other than perishable food products were exposed for sale, was not a market in such a sense as to be properly devoted to public use, and therefore exempt from execution under a judgment against the city.

Blackstone defines a market to be a franchise derived from the crown by grant or prescription, which presumes a grant. 2 Black. Com. 37.

In Cincinnati v. Buckingham, 10 Ohio 257, 261, the court declared the component parts of a municipal market to be, (1) a place for the sale of provisions and articles of daily consumption; (2) convenient fixtures; (3) a system of police regulations fixing market hours, making provisions for lighting, watching, cleaning, detecting false weights and unwholesome food, and other arrangements calculated to facilitate the intercourse and insure the honesty of buyer and seller; and (4) proper officers to preserve order and enforce obedience to rules. State v. Fernandez, 39 La. An. 538.

A place remains a public market although the market building has been erected by private individuals under a contract with a municipal corporation by which the persons erecting the building are entitled to receive the rents of the stalls and other charges for a term of years, the building thereafter becoming the property of the city. Le Claire v. City of Davenport, 13 Iowa 210, overruling Davenport v. Kelly, 7 Iowa 102.

A market place does not necessarily or usually mean an uncovered space of ground dedicated to market purposes, but usually a market house. Smith v. City of Newbern, 70 N. Car. 14. See also Mayor etc. of Savannah v. Wilson, 49 Ga. 476.

"All fairs are markets, but all markets are not fairs." Bracton 1, 2, c. 24; Co. Litt. 22; Crabb's Law of Real Property, § 679.

Public Markets.—In State v. Fernandez, 39 La. An. 538, the court held, that when the legislature (Louisiana) removed or exempted public markets from the operation of the statute known as the "Sunday Law" (act 18 of 1886, Louisiana) they meant those public markets, wherever situated in the State, within the limits of which stores would not be kept, the like of which are required to be closed beyond those limits.

"Market Garden."—A portion of a market garden, to the extent of one acre, was covered in with glass by means of several greenhouses, under which fruit and flowers were cultivated for the market. Held, that the portion of the ground covered by glass was

II. Right to Establish Markets.—In some cases, the right to establish markets has been treated as a branch of the sovereign power.¹ But in Pennsylvania the court declared that by the common law of that State every municipal corporation which is vested with power to make by-laws and establish ordinances in promotion of the public welfare, may fix the times and places of holding public markets for the sale of food, and make such other regulations concerning them as may conduce to the public interest.²

III. Market Lands and Houses.—The power to establish a market implies authority to purchase the land necessary therefor and to erect the necessary buildings.³ And when the charter authorizes a city to "appoint market places and regulate the sale," an implied power exists to build a market house, a market house being reasonably necessary and conducive to the enjoyment of the market place.⁴

Where the owner of lands sought to be acquired for market purposes has petitioned for the appointment of commissioners to assess compensation, he will be estopped from attacking the validity of the order appointing the commissioners on the ground of the alleged unconstitutionality of the statute and noncompliance with the statutory conditions.⁵ And where the city, by an ordinance authorized by its charter, has provided for the issuance of bonds to furnish funds for building a market house, and by the none the less a "market garden" within the meaning of section 211 of the Public Health act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict., ch. 55), and as such was only liable to be rated at one fourth of its net annual value. Purser v. Worthing Local Board, 35 W. Rep. 519.

1. See First Municipality v. Cutting, 4 La. An. 336; Pierre Cougot v. New Orleans, 16 La. An. 21; Bowling Green v. Carson, 10 Bush (Ky.) 64.

2. Wartman v. Philadelphia, 33 Pa. St. 202.

Farming Out Revenues.—Construction of a contract by which the city of New Orleans transferred to an individual the right to collect the revenues of the city accruing from the meat market, and admissibility of evidence in an action for damages for a violation of the contract. Kaiser v. New Orleans, 17 La. Ann. 178.

3. Ketchum v. Buffalo, 14 N. Y. 356, affirming 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 204; People v. Lowber, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 65; Caldwell v. Alton, 33 Ill. 416; 85 Am. Dec. 282. But compare State v. Patterson, 34 N. J. L. 163.

The power to purchase land for a public market is not affected by a limitation contained in the charter as to the yearly value of the real estate which the corporation may hold. People v. Lowber, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 65; 7 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 158.

Power of the city councils, after the passage of the consolidation act of February 2, 1854, to make contracts for the purchase of sites for market houses. Twitchell v. Philadelphia, 33 Pa. St. 212.

Dedication for Market Purposes.—If a municipal corporation has acquired real estate in fee, the fact that it was purchased for the purpose of erecting a market house, and the further fact that the property was so used will not make it trust property for use only for market purposes, nor will the use of the property for market purposes for a period of forty years be sufficient to establish a dedication of the land to the public for market uses. Gall v. City of Cincinnati, 18 Ohio St. 563.

4. Smith v. Newbern, 70 N. Car. 14; 16 Am. Rep. 766. In Wade v. Newbern, 77 N. Car. 460, it was held that when a city has power to build a market house, it has also authority to hire a building for market purposes.

5. In re Cooper's Application, 93 N. Y. 507; 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 419.

terms of the bonds the revenue of the market is appropriated to payment of the interest on the bonds and to the creation of a sinking fund for their redemption, the city cannot divert to other purposes the revenues derived from the market house.¹

It has been held that a market house is not a locus publicus,² and although destined to public use it would appear that it is not necessarily public property.³ Accordingly a market house may be owned jointly by a city and by a private individual, and at the suit of one of the parties thereto a partition sale may be decreed.⁴

In Iowa it has been held that a city may authorize an individual to erect a market building upon private property and lease stalls therein, and may treat such building as a public market, prohibiting sales at other places.⁵ A similar method of providing for the erection of public market houses seems to have existed in other places without having been called in question.⁶

IV. Markets in Streets—Nuisances.—The erection of market buildings along the centre of a street is illegal and constitutes a nuisance, although the city causes space for the passage of vehicles to be left along the sides of the streets.⁷ And a municipal corporation may be restrained at the instance of a property owner from allowing the streets in the vicinity of his residence to be used as a market place to his annoyance and detriment.⁸

1. Fazende v. Houston, 34 Fed. Rep. 95. See also Houston v. Voorhies, 70 Tex. 356; 22 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 271.

2. New Orleans v. Guillotte Heirs, 14 La. An. 888.

3. Davis v. Municipality No. 2, 14 La. An. 885.

4. New Orleans v. Guillotte Heirs, 14 La. An. 888.

A contract between a city and a market house association, giving the latter for twenty-one years exclusive market privileges in the city and exemption from city taxes in consideration of the erection of a market house, in which the city was to have certain rights—construed and sustained. Palestine v. Barnes, 50 Tex. 538.

5. Le Claire v. Davenport, 13 Iowa 210 (overruling the earlier case of Davenport v. Kelly, 7 Iowa 102).

6. See Harney v. St. Louis, 90 Mo. 214; Allegheny County v. McKeesport Diamond Market, 123 Pa. St. 164.

But in Michigan, a contrary view has been adopted, and it has been held that a contract by which the plaintiff contracted to build a market house, and to put it under the control of the village authorities for a period of ten years in consideration that they would pay over the rents to him, appoint a person to superintend it, and permit no other market house to be erected or used, or certain articles specified to be sold elsewhere in the city during the said period, was against public policy and void. Gale v. Village of Kalamazoo, 23 Mich. 244, 9 Am. Rep. 80 aff'd 1 Mich. N. P. 5. This case was decided upon the grounds that, by the contract, the village bound itself for the period of ten years to maintain a market house, and thereby abrogated its inherent right to abandon the market house if it should be found desirable for the interests of the village, and also upon the ground that, as the plaintiff was to have an unlimited right to control the occupation of the market house through the power given him to determine the rents to be paid by lessees, he was thus vested with a practical monopoly of the public markets.

7. State v. Mobile, 5 Porter (Ala.) 279; Wartman v. Philadelphia, 33 Pa. St. 202, 210; Harrisburg's Appeal (Pa. 1887), 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 603.

8. McDonald v. Newark, 42 N. J. Eq. 136; Atwater v. Newark, 7 N. J. L. 176. See also Higgins v. Princeton, 8 N. J. Eq. 309; State v. Laverick, 34 N. J. L. 201. Certiorari has been allowed to remove an ordinance and resolution regulating the use of a public street as

But it would appear that if it is not proposed to erect market buildings in a street, the city may permit the market to be held there provided no injury is caused to abutting lot owners. The right to so use the street is sustained upon the ground that the inconvenience to the public occasioned by the temporary obstruction of the streets is more than counterbalanced by the increased facilities afforded for the sale and purchase of the necessities of life.¹

If a city propose to erect market buildings on a public street, a bill for injunction in the name of the city upon the relation of the attorney general and taxpayers, will lie to restrain the nuisance.² And in New Jersey it has been held that the legislature could not authorize a market to be held in a public street without providing compensation to the proprietors of the lands fronting on the street.³

Where a place had been used as a market to which persons resorted to expose articles for sale, it was held to be a sufficient answer to an indictment for a nuisance that the same had been enjoyed as a market place for more than twenty years without interruption.⁴

V. Municipal Regulations.—A city may, under the power to regulate markets, adopt such regulations as are necessary for the preservation of peace and good order and the health of the city, but these regulations must be of a police and sanitary character; and not an attempt to restrain trade under the color of regulating it.⁵ An ordinance requiring all persons selling hay or other produce and delivering the same within the city limits to pay a fee of five cents, is unreasonable and illegal.⁶ The validity of an a market, on the ground that the city council could neither authorize nor regulate a public nuisance. Anon., 9 N. J. Law Jour. 241. But the court will not maintain a suit to enjoin the holding of a market on a public street except it is shown that the property owner has suffered special damage thereby. The mere fact that a dwelling house would be less eligible if a market place were erected is not sufficient to support a bill for an injunction. Higgins v. Princeton, 8 N. J. Eq. 309.

1. Denehey v. Harrisburg, 2 Pearson (Pa.) 330; Harrisburg's Appeal (Pa.), 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 603, 609.

2. Harrisburg's Appeal (Pa.), 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 603.

3. State v. Laverick, 34 N. J. L. 201.

4. Rex v. Smith, 4 Esp. 111.

5. Caldwell v. Alton, 33 Ill. 416; 85 Am. Dec. 282; Peoria v. Calhoun, 29 Ill. 317; Bloomington v. Wahl, 46 Ill. 489. See also Winsboro v. Smart, 11 Rich. (S. Car.) 551.

Extent of the powers of the metropolitan board of health over markets. Mayor etc. of New York v. Schultz, 31 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 385.

Regulation of private markets after they had been leased for the year. New Orleans v. Stafford, 27 La. An. 417.

Penalty for carrying on a private market in contravention of the city ordinances. Jacobs v. Levy, 27 La. An. 619.

Under the charter of Richmond the city council may require one who resides outside the city limits, but rents a stall in the market house, to take out a licence for using his carts and horses to bring meats from his house to his stall, and pay a tax on the licence. Frommer v. Richmond, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 646.

Power of the city corporation to pass an ordinance prohibiting the sale of beef in the western moiety of the market house, between Seventh and Eighth streets. Mayor v. Davis, 6 Watts & S. (Pa.) 269.

6. Kip v. Patterson, 26 N. J. L. 298.

ordinance regulating the sale of goods within the city limits is for the court, and not for the jury.¹

It has been held in some cases that an ordinance by a municipal corporation which prohibits the selling of marketable articles elsewhere than in the public market during market hours, is an exercise of the police power of the municipality and is not in restraint of trade, and is therefore valid.² But the validity of such an ordinance has not been uniformly recognized.³ Under the power to regulate markets, a municipality cannot adopt an ordinance prohibiting hawking and peddling in the streets except by parties who have attended market during regular market hours on the market days. Such an ordinance is partial in its operation and is invalid.⁴ But it has been held that where a municipal corporation is authorized to licence and regulate the sale of meats and vegetables, a regulation which prohibits the keeping of a stall for the sale of these articles outside of a public market without obtaining a licence is not invalid.⁵

When the limits of a market are defined by ordinance and do not extend to the whole city, ordinances regulating the use of the market are only effectual within the market limits.⁶ And under the

1. Peoria v. Calhoun, 29 Ill. 317.

2. Ex parte Byrd, 84 Ala. 17; Shelton v. Mobile, 30 Ala. 540; 68 Am. Dec. 143; Le Claire v. Davenport, 13 Iowa 210; Davenport v. Kelly, 7 Iowa 102; Bowling Green v. Carson, 10 Bush (Ky.) 64; State v. Gisch, 31 La. An. 544; New Orleans v. Stafford, 27 La. An. 417; Gossigi v. New Orleans (La.), 4 So. Rep. 15; St. Louis v. Webber, 44 Mo. 547; St. Louis v. Jackson, 25 Mo. 37; Dunham v. Rochester, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 462; Bush v. Seabury, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 418; Buffalo v. Webster, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 99; Winsboro v. Smart, 11 Rich. (S. Car.) 551; Badkins v. Robinson, 53 Ga. 613; Ex parte Canto, 21 Tex. App. 61; 57 Am. Rep. 609; Commonwealth v. Brooks, 109 Mass. 355; and see St. Louis v. Jackson, 25 Mo. 37.

3. See Bethune v. Hughes, 28 Ga. 560; 73 Am. Dec. 789; Bloomington v. Wahl, 46 Ill. 489; Caldwell v. Alton, 33 Ill. 416; 85 Am. Dec. 282; St. Paul v. Laidler, 2 Minn. 190. The New Orleans ordinance exacting twenty-five cents for every load of supplies for sale by one not occupying a market stall, is intended to raise a revenue, and, either as a tax or a licence, is unconstitutional. State v. Blaser, 36 La. An. 363.

4. Danville v. Peters, 8 Luz. L. Reg. (Pa.) 273.

But although such an ordinance is void, an ordinance regulating the general market system and providing for the time of selling particular articles in the streets is valid. Milton v. Hoagland, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 283.

5. Ash v. People, 11 Mich. 347; 83 Am. Dec. 740. But compare City of St. Paul v. Laidler, 2 Minn. 190; 72 Am. Dec. 89.

Some courts have held that a power "to regulate and manage markets" is sufficient to sustain an ordinance prohibiting the sale of meats elsewhere than in the public market. Ex parte Byrd, 84 Ala. 17; Ex parte Canto, 21 Tex. App. 51; 57 Am. Rep. 609. But compare Bethune v. Hughes, 28 Ga. 560; 73 Am. Dec. 789; Burlington v. Dankwardt, 73 Iowa 170.

A legislative enactment authorizing a city to prohibit sales of vegetables and farm products "during market hours" does not authorize a general prohibition against their sale, except by licensed vendors. State v. St. Paul Municipal Court, 32 Minn. 329.

6. But strangers who come within the market limits are subject to the ordinances. Buffalo v. Webster, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 99.

The power to restrain hawkers and peddlers from using the streets of the city for the purpose of traffic is not necessarily connected with the power to regulate a market. The prohibition power to regulate markets, it has been held that a municipal corporation may require persons selling fresh meat outside the market limits to procure a licence and pay a fee therefor.¹

Under a statute which provides that towns may establish markets and provide for the weighing of coal, hay, or other articles for sale, the municipality may erect scales, appoint a weighmaster and regulate the use of the scales by ordinance.² And when the charter authorizes the city to regulate the place and manner of selling hay, the city may forbid under penalty the exposing of any hay for sale in certain places without first having it weighed by the attendant of some established city hay scale, from whom a certificate of the weight must be obtained.³

But under the right to make necessary regulations under the police power, a city cannot levy a tax for revenue, and a charge levied for purposes of revenue upon persons selling articles within the corporate limits, and without the market-house is illegal.⁴

Where a city is authorized by charter to establish and regulate the markets and to prevent huckstering, it cannot adopt an ordinance defining a huckster to be "any person not a farmer or butcher who shall sell or offer for sale any commodity not of his own produce or manufacture." The city cannot include persons as hucksters who do not fall within the ordinary meaning of that term.⁵

VI. Use of Market—Sales.—All persons are entitled to enter a public market for the purpose of buying, but not necessarily for the purpose of selling; right to sell is usually confined to stall holders.⁶ And by-laws regulating markets must not be so reof peddling may be justified under power to prevent nuisances. Caldwell v. Alton, 33 Ill. 416; 85 Am. Dec. 282.

1. Such licence fee is not a tax, but is reasonable compensation which the city is entitled to ask from those who do not sell in the public markets, for the additional labor of its officers and the expense occasioned thereby. Ash v. People, 11 Mich. 347; 83 Am. Dec. 740. But in State v. Municipal Court of St. Paul (Minn.), 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 321, and St. Paul v. Traegar, 25 Minn. 248, it was held that a city cannot require persons making sales of vegetables and farm products on the city streets to procure a licence under the authority of an act empowering the passage of ordinances prohibiting such sales "during market hours." A licence fee may be exacted by a city from keepers of private markets, although persons engaged in the same business in the public markets are not subject thereto. New Orleans v. Du Barry, 33 La. An. 481; 39 Am. Rep. 273.

2. Davis v. Anita, 75 Iowa 325; 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 502.

3. Yates v. Milwaukee, 12 Wis. 752.

4. Mestayer v. Corrige, 38 La. An. 707; State v. Blaser, 36 La. An. 363. See also as to licences St. Louis v. Freivogel, 95 Mo. 533; Vosse v. City of Memphis (Tenn.), 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 16. In Frommer v. Richmond, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 646, it was held that a city council might, under the powers conferred upon it by charter, require a person who resided outside the city limits but rented a stall in the market house, to take out a licence for using his vehicles to bring meats from his house to his stall and pay a tax on the licence.

5. Mays v. City of Cincinnati, 1 Ohio St. 268.

6. Davis's Heirs v. New Orleans, 16 La. An. 404; Hughes v. Farmers' Assoc., 1 Phila. (Pa.) 338.

But a city authorized to maintain a market house cannot exclude the public therefrom during market hours and devote the building to other purposes.

strictive as to prevent a frequenter of it from resorting to it.¹ The municipality may, however, limit the sales to perishable articles necessary to the daily support of the inhabitants of the city, and may prohibit the selling of other articles,—e. g., groceries.²

A corporation may, however, adopt a by-law providing that part of the market shall be used for sale by wholesale only, and imposing a penalty for selling by retail in that part.³ But although a corporation may impose fines and other penalties, it has no power to enact that if fruit is found in a market in baskets not marked in a prescribed manner, both fruit and baskets shall be forfeited.⁴

An ordinance prohibiting wagons containing perishable produce from remaining in streets within the limits of a market more than twenty minutes during market hours, unless permitted to do so by the market superintendent, is reasonable, and is not an undue restraint of trade.⁵ So, too, the city may require that persons occupying stands shall satisfy the clerk of the market that the articles are the produce of their own farms, or some farm not more than three miles distant from the dwelling house.⁶ And it may provide that any person who shall occupy a market stall without authority of law for the purpose of selling meat or provisions, shall be subject to a penalty.⁷

VII. Occupation of Stalls and Stands.—The right to occupy a market stall pursuant to the permission of the clerk of markets, or of the city, is not a right of property of which the courts can take cognizance. It is merely a licence.⁸ Where the mode of renting a market stand is provided for by ordinance, the right to occupy it cannot be acquired by possession. Every seller must be deemed to hold his stand by contract with the city subject to Magistrates of Edinburgh v. Blackie (Eng.), 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 534.

1. Worthy v. Nottingham Local Board, 21 L. T. 582.

2. First Municipality v. Cutting, 4 La. An. 335.

But an ordinance which prohibits sales of any articles in a public market maintained by a city, pursuant to statutory authority, except from stands leased or occupied by the sellers, and confines farmers and gardeners with their vehicles to other markets where the accommodation is inadequate, is void as infringing the rights of the farmers and gardeners to the use of the public market, and prohibition will lie to restrain proceedings for violating such ordinance. Hughes v. City of Detroit, 75 Mich. 574; 27 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 622.

3. Strike v. Collins, 54 L. T., N. S. 152.

4. Phillips v. Allen, 41 Pa. St. 81; 82 Am. Dec. 486.

If the sale of beef is prohibited in a certain part of the market, although such space is devoted to the use of farmers for the sale of their farm produce, the flesh of an ox raised on a farm and slaughtered by a farmer cannot be sold in that part of the market. Philadelphia v. Davis, 5 Watts & S. (Pa.) 269.
14 C. of L.—30

5. Com. v. Brooks, 109 Mass. 335.

But when the power conferred upon the city to pass bylaws and ordinances imposing a penalty is confined to such ordinances as have penalties attached which do not exceed $20 for one offence, an ordinance prescribing a penalty of not less than $1 nor more than $5 "for every hour" that a person shall keep his wagon within the limits of the market after notice from the clerk of the market to remove it, is unauthorized and void. Com. v. Wilkins, 121 Mass. 356.

6. Com. v. Rice, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 253.

7. State v. Leiber, 11 Iowa 407.

8. Barry v. Kennedy, 11 Abb. (N.Y.) Pr. N. S. 421.

market regulations, and not adversely to its authority.¹ But an action may be maintained by the owner of a market for stallage without showing any contract in fact between him and the occupier of the stall.²

A lease of a stall in a city market for a period of one year is not a disposal or sale of real estate belonging to the city within the meaning of the provisions of a charter having reference to such real estate, and is not governed thereby.³ And when by ordinance it is provided that market stalls shall be leased at public auction to the highest bidder above a fixed minimum price, who should then become the tenant at a fixed yearly rent, the person acquiring right to stalls only acquires the privilege of a choice in the tenancy, and in the event of the market being torn down he has no claim to the return of the premium paid.⁴

If a difficulty arises between the holders of contiguous stands it is the duty of the market clerk to interpose and determine their respective rights, and if necessary to call the police to his aid in preserving order and peace in the market.⁵

A grant by a city of a lease of a market stall does not amount to a contract by it to prevent unlicensed sales by other persons, the breach of which will excuse the payment of rent, although it is the duty of the officers of the city to prevent such sales.⁶

1. Hatch v. Pendergast, 15 Md. 251; Rose v. Baltimore, 51 Md. 256.

A bylaw of a city providing that no inhabitant of a city, or of any town in the vicinity thereof, not offering for sale the produce of his own farm, shall, without the permission of the clerk of the market, be suffered to occupy any stand for the purpose of vending commodities, in certain streets which by bylaws are a part of the market, is a sanitary police regulation, and not void as making a distinction between the inhabitants of the city and its vicinity, and those of distant towns, nor as being in restraint of trade. Nightingale's Case, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 168. An ordinance requiring persons occupying stands in the market place to pay the sum of twenty-five cents for every market day's occupation, is lawful and may be enforced by fine and judgment before the mayor. Cincinnati v. Buckingham, 10 Ohio 257. As to the right of the farmer of the revenues of the market to eject a person occupying a stall, see Douat v. Beombay, 15 La. An. 377.

Licence Tax.—In Delcambre v. Clere, 34 La. An. 1050, it was held that a charge of a specified amount for the daily privilege of occupying a butcher's stand is a licence or tax; that the power of municipal corporations to tax or licence occupations must be expressly conferred by law; and that such corporations may under their police powers regulate or suppress private markets, but cannot impose a tax for revenue.

2. Mayor etc. of Newport v. Saunders, 3 B. & Ad. 411.

3. Dubque v. Miller, 11 Iowa 583.

But where a municipal corporation under a general power to lease, sell or dispose of market stalls for any term it may think proper, sells a stall in a public market without limitation of time, and without any special ordinance authorizing the sale and prescribing the term, such sale confers no absolute property, but only the right of exclusive enjoyment and possession for market purposes during the existence of the market, and is not in excess of the powers of the city. Rose v. Mayor etc. of Baltimore, 51 Md. 256; 34 Am. Rep. 307.

4. Woelpper v. Philadelphia, 38 Pa. St. 202.

Constitutionality and effect of the ordinance of the city council of Charleston of 1835, authorizing the commissioners of the market to vacate the lease of any of the market stalls. City Council v. Goldsmith, 2 Spears (S. Car.) 428.

5. Hatch v. Pendergast, 15 Md. 251.

6. Peck v. Austin, 22 Tex. 261.

VIII. Removal and Discontinuance.—In Michigan, it has been held that a grant of authority to maintain a public market being a franchise for public purposes, a city, which by its charter has received the power of maintaining such a market, and has acquired property and issued bonds in payment thereof, cannot of its own free act discontinue such market, even though the market building be erected upon land owned by the city, but must continue the same and collect and apply the income provided from such franchise in the manner prescribed by the statute.¹ But in other States it has been held that a power conferred in general terms upon the authorities of a city to establish and regulate markets is a continuing power. The fact that the city council had at one time exercised it by establishing a market place and erecting a market house in a particular locality, will not prevent it from afterwards abandoning that site and removing the market to another. Such a removal, if made in the reasonable exercise of the discretion vested in the city by law, will not be restrained by injunction at the suit of a taxpayer.²

IX. Actions Against Municipality for Negligence.—Where a municipality receives toll for the use of space in a public market, a duty is imposed upon it to keep the market in a safe condition.³

MARKET VALUE.—A price established by public sales in the way of ordinary business.⁴

1. Taggart v. Detroit (Mich.), 22 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 177. It was also held in this case that the public have such an interest in the continuance of a public market as confers upon the attorney general the power of bringing a suit in equity to restrain a municipal corporation from wrongfully discontinuing it. See New Orleans v. Heirs of Guillotte, 12 La. An. 818.

2. Gall v. Cincinnati, 18 Ohio St. 563. See also Wartman v. Philadelphia, 33 Pa. St. 202; Magistrates of Edinburgh v. Blackie (Eng.), 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 535; Wortley v. Nottingham Local Board, 21 L. T., N. S. 582; Mayor etc. of Dorchester v. Ensor, L. R., 4 Ex. 335. But it would appear that under a grant of authority to maintain a market, the removal will be bad unless the public have the same privilege in the new market as in the old. Rex v. Starkey, 7 A. & E. 95.

3. In the case of Lax v. Corp. of Darlington, L. R., 5 Ex. Div. 28; 48 L. J., Q. B. 143, the plaintiff sued the borough of Darlington to recover damages for injury to a cow in the public market place. The defendants were the owners of the market, and in the market place they had erected a statue around which it had placed a railing as a fence. Plaintiffs attended the market with their cattle and occupied a particular site for which they paid a toll. A cow belonging to them, in attempting to jump the railing, injured herself and subsequently died from the injuries. The jury found that the railing was dangerous. It was held that the defendants, having received toll from the plaintiffs, invited them to come to the market with their cattle, and a duty was imposed on them to keep the market in a safe condition, and that therefore an action would lie for the loss sustained by the plaintiffs.

Obstruction of Street.—In Black v. Cleveland, 3 West Law Monthly (Ohio) 96, it was held that a municipal corporation is not liable to an individual for damages sustained by him in driving along a street appropriated to market uses occasioned by the street being obstructed by market teams, wagons and marketmen.

4. Murray v. Stanton, 99 Mass. 348; Meixell v. Kirkpatrick, 6 Pac. Rep. 241. The "market value" is such a sum of money as the property is worth in the market to persons generally who would pay the just and full value. Esch

Definition.

MARKET VALUE.

Definition.

v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 39 N. W. Rep. (Wis.) 129; Low v. R. Co., 3 Atl. Rep. (N. H.) 739; 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 31.

By "market value" is meant such a price as the vendor could obtain after ample time taken to effect a sale. Railway v. Woodruff, 5 S. W. Rep. (Ark.) 792.

The question is, what is the value of land sought to be condemned for any purpose, not what it is worth to the Railroad Co. Stinson v. R. Co., 6 N. W. Rep. (Minn.) 784.

The "market value" is what the land was worth at the time it was condemned, not what it was worth at the time of the location of the improvements. Stafford v. City of Providence, 10 R. I. 567. See EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 567.

Where There Is No Evidence of Value, the Face Value Is Deemed to be the "Market Value."—In Meixell v. Kirkpatrick, 29 Kan. 679, BREWER, J., observes: "We do not doubt that a municipal bond so far resembles an ordinary chose in action that where no evidence of value is offered, its face value is to be deemed the market value, but we think that it must be also conceded that such securities have become so abundant, and so much received as an article of ordinary commerce, that they possess, strictly speaking, a 'market value,' and, when such market value is shown, that it is to be deemed as the measure of damages for any conversion. 'Market value' signifies a price established by public sales, or sales in the way of ordinary business."

Proof of Market Value.—See Bullard v. Stone, 8 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 17.

"Market Value" of Leases.—In Lawrence v. Boston, 119 Mass. 126, on the trial of a petition under the St. of 1871, ch. 382, § 7, Massachusetts, by the lessee of a part of a building, for the assessment of damages occasioned by the taking of the land on which the building stood by the city, the court instructed the jury as follows: "The value of the leases is their market value. 'Market value' means the fair value of the property as between one who wants to purchase and one who wants to sell any article, not what could be obtained for it under peculiar circumstances, when a greater than its fair price could be obtained; not its speculative value; not a value obtained from the necessities of another. Nor, on the other hand, is it to be limited to that price which the property would bring when forced off at auction, under the hammer. It is what it would bring at a fair public sale, when one party wanted to sell and the other to buy. The fact, therefore, that one of these lessees, Lawrence, as has been argued by his counsel, did not want to move, wanted to stay there, would have paid a very large sum to stay there, is not a test of market value, because it is not a case of one who wants to sell and one who wants to buy. If Lawrence had wanted to go out, the question is, what would his lease have brought? Not what it would have been worth to him if he had wanted to stay there, because it may have been of greater value or of less value to him than its value upon the market. The question for you to consider is, if Lawrence wanted to sell this lease, what could he have obtained for it upon the market, from parties who wanted to buy and would give its fair value?"

In Dwight v. County Commissioners, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 201, the court said: "The market value is a near and perhaps the closest approximation to the true value." See also Edmunds v. Boston, 108 Mass. 235; Cobb v. Boston, 112 Mass. 181; Jacksonville & Southeastern R. Co. v. Walsh, 106 Ill. 253; Green v. City of Chicago, 97 Ill. 370; Everett v. Union Pac. R. Co., 59 Iowa 243; Chicago & Evanston R. Co. v. Jacobs, 110 Ill. 414; King v. Minneapolis Union R. Co., 32 Minn. 224.

In Green v. The City of Chicago, 97 Ill. 370, the "market value" was spoken of as the minimum of compensation.

What is meant by the market value is not the price that the land would bring at a forced sale, but what it, or land similarly situated, would bring at a sale after due notice and under fair conditions. Somerville & Easton R. Co. v. Doughty, 22 N. J. L. 495; Fall River Print Works v. City of Fall River, 110 Mass. 428; Howard v. City of Providence, 6 R. I. 514; Gardner v. Brookline, 127 Mass. 358.

In Everett v. Union Pac. R. Co., 59 Iowa 243, the court said in charging the jury, "Market value is what it would bring when sold as such property is ordinarily sold in the community where it is situated."

In Kiernan v. C. I. Y. & C. R. Co., 123 Ill. 188 and R. R. Co. v. Moore, 15

MARQUE.—See LETTER OF MARQUE.

N. E. Rep. 164, it was held that "the price fixed should be the price at which a sale could be made in the market for cash. It has been objected, in Brown v. Calumet River R. Co., 18 N. E. Rep. 284, that such a rule made a distinction between a cash value and a market value, but the objection, after consideration, was overruled.

Depreciating in Market Value.—The makers of a promissory note deposited in pledge with the payee certain certificates of shares in a corporation, and also a life policy of insurance of one of the makers of the note, calling for $5,000. The certificates of stock proved to be counterfeits and worthless. The contract of the parties provided that on default of payment of the note at maturity the pledgee might sell the pledge, and also "in event of said security, or any part thereof, depreciating in market value," that the pledgee might, either before or after maturity of the note, sell the pledge, either at public or private sale, and waived any and all notice of the sale to the pledgors. Held, that the words "depreciating in market value" had no reference to the security of the certificates of stock, for, being worthless, their value could not depreciate; and that a sale by the pledgee before the maturity of his debt did not pass the absolute title, but that the pledgors might redeem the same by payment of the note when due. Nat. Bank of Ill. v. Baker, 128 Ill. 534.

The "market value" is the price at which goods can be replaced for money in the market; not the retail value or price for which they are sold at retail. Wehle v. Haviland, 69 N. Y. 448.

A "market value," as signifying a price established by public sales, or sales in the way of ordinary business, as of merchandise, is not necessary to the assessment of damages, or the appraisal of property which is the subject of a judicial valuation. Property is often the subject of such legal valuation, for which no proof of value in the market could be given, because it is not brought into the course of trade, and is not known in the market, and therefore is incapable of any estimate in that mode. In such cases the real value is to be ascertained from such elements of value as are attainable. Murray v. Stanton, 99 Mass. 345.

Circumstances Peculiar to Plaintiff.—Plaintiff sent goods by the railroad company defendant to his travelling salesman at Cardiff. Through defendant's negligence, the goods were delayed until the traveller had left Cardiff. In consequence, plaintiff lost the profits which he would have derived from a sale at Cardiff. Held, that in the absence of notice to the defendant of the object for which the goods were sent, the plaintiff could not recover from them such profits as damages for the delay. The court held that "the market value of the goods was their value in the market independently of any circumstances peculiar to the plaintiff, and that the profits that would have been made by the sale of the goods at Cardiff through the plaintiff's traveller being present could not be recovered." Great Western R. Co. v. Redmayne, L. R., 1 C. P. 329. See also Borries v. Hutchinson, 18 C. B., N. S. 445; Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Ex. 341. Query whether knowledge by carrier of purpose would entitle to damages for delay, in the absence of contract to that effect. Wood's Mayne on Damages 400 (*263).

Resale of Land.—A co-owner of land, selling the same representing that he has the authority of all the other owners, is liable to the vendee in case the others disavow his sale. The damages is the difference between the contract price and the market price, besides costs. In case of sale to another vendee by the lawful owners, the sum obtained on the effectual sale is prima facie evidence of the market price. Godwin v. Francis, L. R., 5 C. P. 295. The rule of Flureau v. Thornhill, 2 W. Bl. 1078, "is confined to the single case of failure of title." Engell v. Fitch, L. R., 4 Q. B. 665; Godwin v. Francis, L. R., 5 C. P. 308. See Sikes v. Wild, 4 B. & S. 421. Bad faith was once thought to render the proposed vendor liable for loss of the bargain. 1 Sutherland on Damages 150. See the cases reviewed in Wood's Mayne 53. Difference between sum bid at auction sale of land and that bid at resale is a proper criterion against the first bidder who refused to comply with his bid. Gardner v. Armstrong, 31 Mo. 535. See also Springer v. Berry, 47 Me. 330. The market value of the land at the time of a breach of contract of sale, with interest from that date, is the true rule of damages in action for such breach. Brinckerhoff v. Phelps, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 100.

MARRIAGE—(See DIVORCE; DOMICIL; HUSBAND AND WIFE).I. Preliminary Matters Relating to Marriage. 470.

1. Definitions. 470.
2. Contracts to Marry (Breach of Promise, vol. 2, p. 520). 473.
3. Contracts Not to Marry. 473.
4. Contracts to Bring About Marriage (Marriage Brocage, vol. 2, p. 596; vol. 9, p. 919). 474.
5. Contracts in Restraint of Marriage. 474.
6. Contracts to Provide for Marriage Property Rights (Marriage Settlements). 479.
7. Contracts in Evasion of Marriage Rights. 479.

II. Essentials of a Marriage. 482.

1. Essentials in General. 482.
 - a. Competent Parties. 482.
 - b. A Contract of Marriage. 482.
 - c. A Marriage Celebration or Marriage Formalities. 482.
 - d. A Consummation. 482.
2. Valid, Void, Voidable and Illegal Marriages. 482.
3. Conflict of Laws. 486.
4. Capacity of Parties as an Essential. 487.
5. Capacity of Parties. 487.
 - a. As to Age. 487.
 - b. As to Mental Capacity. 489.
 - c. As to Sexual Capacity. 492.
 - d. Affinity and Consanguinity.
 - e. Slavery. 497. [496.]
 - f. Race. 498.
 - g. Former Marriage. 499.
6. Consent of Parties. 508.
 - a. As to Its Necessity. 508.
 - b. As to Its Form. 511.
 - c. As to Its Effect. 514.

7. Celebration or Ceremonies of Marriage. 514.

- a. Necessity. 514.
- b. Nature. 516.
- c. Effect. 518.

8. *Consummation of Marriage.III. Proof of Marriage. 519. [518.]

1. In General. 519.
2. Presumptions in General. 519.
3. Presumption of Marriage. 520.
4. Presumption of Innocence. 520.
5. Presumption of Life. 521.
6. Presumption of Performance of Duties. 522.
7. Proof in General. 522.
8. Records, Certificates, etc. 523.
9. Witnesses. 525.
10. Parties as Witnesses. 526.
11. Cohabitation and Repute. 527.
12. When Proof by Cohabitation and Repute Is Sufficient. 529.
13. When Celebration and Actual Marriage Must be Proved. 530.
14. Proof of Foreign Marriages. 531.
15. Proof Under Special Statutes. 531.

IV. Nullity Suits. 532.

1. In General. 532.
2. Facilitation of Marriage. 532.
3. Kinds of Nullity Suits. 533.
4. Declaring Void Marriage Void Where No Decree Is Necessary. 533.
5. Nullifying Voidable Marriage Where Decree Is Necessary.
 - a. Jurisdiction. 535. [535.]
 - b. Causes. 536.
 - c. Parties. 536.
 - d. Effect of Decree. 537.

V. Penalties Attending Illegal Marriages. 538.

I. PRELIMINARY MATTERS RELATING TO MARRIAGE—1. Definitions.—Marriage is the legal status or condition of husbands and wives (see HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, p. 520), just as infancy is the legal status or condition of persons under age. A marriage is the combination of acts by which a man and a woman become husband and wife.¹

1. In Stewart's Marriage and Divorce, ch. 11, are found the following definitions: Marriage: The legal conditions under which man and woman may lawfully cohabit and have legitimate children. The conditions are precedent, continuing and subsequent. A Marriage: Those legal conditions which must exist or be performed before man and woman may lawfully cohabit constitute a marriage. Valid and Invalid: A marriage is valid when all these conditions exist or are performed; invalid when one or more of them is wanting. Legal and Illegal: A marriage is legal when all the provisions of law relating thereto have been complied with; illegal when one or more of them has been omitted. Valid and legal: A marriage if legal must be valid, but a valid marriage may be illegal. Void, voidable and prohibited: A void marriage is not a marriage at all; it is invalid and illegal. A voidable marriage is one which is valid until duly avoided, or void until duly confirmed; thus it may be valid or invalid, and it is illegal. A prohibited marriage is a valid marriage, in respect to which some one has done or omitted something prohibited or commanded by law, sometimes under penalty; it is simply illegal. Husband, Wife, Children: After a valid marriage between them, man and woman are husband and wife, and their offspring are legitimate or legal children. The married state: Those continuing conditions which determine the legal position of husband and wife with regard to each other, their children and the rest of the community, constitute the status of marriage, or the marriage or married state. Dissolution: The married state may come to an end wholly by the death of one of the parties; partially by the act of one or both the parties; and wholly or partially by act of law. Decrees of nullity and of divorce: A decree separating parties validly married is a decree of divorce; a decree declaring a void marriage void, or making a voidable marriage void, is a decree of nullity. Results of dissolution: After dissolution, the parties, or the survivor, have special rights and liabilities; the conditions subsequent of marriage apply. Divisions: Marriage laws thus fall into three great divisions: (1) the formation of marriage; (2) the marriage state; (3) the dissolution of marriage.

Some other definitions are as follows: "Our law considers marriage in no other light than as a civil contract. The holiness of the matrimonial state is left entirely to the ecclesiastical law. And such contract is good and valid if the parties (1) were at the time of making it willing to contract, (2) able to contract, and (3) actually did contract in the proper forms and solemnities required by law." 1 Black. Com. 439. "A contract." "The most beneficial institution of society." 2 Kent Com. 75, 76. "It is a present and perfect consent the which alone maketh matrimony, without either public solemnization or carnal copulation, for neither is the one nor the other the essence of matrimony, but consent only." Swinburne, Esq. 4. "A civil contract regulated and prescribed by law, and endowed with civil consequences." Story Conf. L. 108. "A contract according to the form presented by the law, by which a man and woman, capable of entering into such a contract, mutually engage with each other to live their whole lives together in the state of union which ought to exist between a husband and his wife." Shelford M. & D. 1. "A lawful coupling and joining together of a man and woman in an individual state or society of life, during the lifetime of one of the parties; and this society of life is contracted by the consent and mutual good will of the parties toward each other." Ayliffe Paregon Jur. 359. "Marriage is, first, that act by which a man and woman unite for life, with the intent to discharge towards society and one another those duties which result from the relation of husband and wife. The act of marriage having been once accomplished, the word comes afterwards to denote the relation itself." Schouler Dom. Rel. 22; Hus. & W. 11. "The civil status of one man and one woman united in law for life, under the obligation to discharge to each other and the community those duties which the community by its laws holds incumbent on persons whose association is founded on the distinction of sex." 1 Bish. M. & D. 3. "Marriage is a personal relation arising out of a civil contract, to which the consent of parties capable of making it is necessary. Consent alone will not constitute marriage; it must be followed by a solemnization, or by a mutual assumption of marital rights, duties or obligations." Hart's Cal. Civ. Code 55. "Union of one man and one woman so long as they shall both live, to the exclusion of all others, by an obligation which, during that lifetime, the parties cannot of their own volition or act dissolve, but which can be dissolved only by the authority of the state." PERKINS, J., 19 Ind. 57. "Is to be considered in law as a civil contract, to which the consent of parties is essential; the marriage ceremony may be regarded either as a civil contract or as a religious sacrament; but the marriage relation shall only be entered into, maintained or abrogated as provided by law." Kan. Rev. L. 1881, 3121. Is a civil contract to which the consent of the parties is essential." Rev. Laws of Ark. 1874, 4171; Col. 1877, p. 611; Ind. 1881, 5324; Iowa 1880, 2185; Minn. 1878, p. 623; Mo. 1879, 3264; Neb. 1881, p. 341; Nev. 1873, 195; N. Y. 1881, p. 2331;

More generally, marriage is the set of legal terms or conditions under which a State allows its people to live in sexual union. In all countries one finds the intercourse of the sexes regulated and a system of marriage more or less complex adopted, the nuptials being accompanied by more or less ceremony and the durability and nature of the union varying greatly.¹ In international law, all the various systems of marriage are not recognized, the line being drawn, seemingly, at polygamous and incestuous unions, which are not regarded as marriages at all. (See CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 601, n. 2.)

Many disputes have arisen over the definition of marriage, and some of these are discussed in the notes, where there will also be found a list of general authorities on the subject of this title.²

Marriage is not a contract, nor is the relation of husband and wife a contractual relation;³ but there are many contracts which are connected with marriage, which will now be discussed. (See also UNLAWFUL CONTRACTS RELATIVE TO MARRIAGE, vol. 9, p. 918.)

Wash. 1881, 2380; Wis. 1878, 2328. For other definitions and discussions see Mr. Bishop's work, 1 Mar. & D., ch. 1.

1. Herbert Spencer, Data of Sociology, vol. 1, pt. 3; Encyc. Brit., vol. 15, p. 565; Duntze v. Levett, 3 Eng. Ec. 360, 495, 502; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.) 181.

2. Bishop on Marriage and Divorce has a world wide reputation; Stewart on Marriage and Divorce contains a brief logical statement of the law with a great number of authorities; Schouler on Husband and Wife is sometimes cited.

3. Marriage Not a Contract.—The consent of the parties is essential to a valid marriage, but, as will appear further on, it is only one of several essentials, and does not alone make a marriage. Marriage is constantly referred to as a civil contract, but in such cases it is intended to emphasize the word civil and not the word contract, and to mark the fact that under modern law marriage is not controlled by the peculiar mandates and dogmas of particular churches or sects. That the distinctive rights and obligations of married persons arise, not from any contract between them, but by law, is seen from the following facts:

(1) The obligations and rights of husband and wife are not only mutual, but also to and against the community. HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, p. 789;

1 Bish. M. & D., § 4; Niboyet v. Niboyet, 4 L. R., P. D. 11; Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.) 181.

(2) Except as to property the parties cannot by contract before marriage settle their rights and obligations. MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS, post; Duntze v. Levett, Serg. 68; 3 Eng. Encyc. 360, 385, 397; Lindo v. Belisaris, 1 Hog. Con. 216; Holmes v. Holmes, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 205; Sandford v. Sandford, 5 Day (Conn.) 353; Crane v. Meginnis, 1 Gill & J. (Md.) 463; Harding v. Alden, 9 Greenl. (Me.) 140.

(3) Nor can they after marriage by contract merge or modify them. HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, p. 789; MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS, post; Ditson v. Ditson, 4 R. I. 87.

(4) These rights and obligations may change with a change of residence. Dicey Domicil, Rules 46, etc. CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 499.

(5) They may change by a change of law. DIVORCE, vol. 5, p. 746; Townsend v. Griffin, 4 Har. (Del.) 440.

(6) Disregard of them gives no right of action for breach of contract. 1 Bish. M. & D., § 4.

(7) They may be put an end to by divorce, although the contract was for life, without impairing the obligation of any contract. DIVORCE, vol. 5, p. 746.

The latest of this subject from high authority is found in Maynard v. Hill, 125 U. S. 190; 31 L. Ed., p. 659, Mr. JUSTICE FIELD saying: "It is also

2. Contracts to Marry.—See title BREACH OF PROMISE, vol. 2, p. 520.

3. Contracts Not to Marry.—Any promise not to marry at all, or not to marry except after an unreasonable time or upon unreasonable conditions, is against public policy and void.¹

to be observed that, whilst marriage is often termed by text writers and in decisions of courts as a civil contract, generally to indicate that it must be founded upon the agreement of the parties and does not require any religious ceremony for its solemnization, it is something more than a mere contract. The consent of the parties is of course essential to its existence; but when the contract to marry is executed by the marriage, a relation between the parties is created which they cannot change. Other contracts may be modified, restricted, or enlarged, or entirely released upon the consent of the parties. Not so with marriage. The relation once formed, the law steps in and holds the parties to various obligations and liabilities. It is an institution, in the maintenance of which in its purity the public is deeply interested, for it is the foundation of the family and of society, without which there would be neither civilization nor progress. This view is well expressed by the supreme court of Maine in Adams v. Palmer, 51 Me. 481, 483. Said that court, speaking by CHIEF JUSTICE APPLETON: 'When the contracting parties have entered into the married state, they have not so much entered into a contract as into a new relation, the rights, duties and obligations of which rest not upon their agreement, but upon the general law of the State, statutory or common, which defines and prescribes those rights, duties and obligations. They are of law, not of contract. It was a contract that the relation should be established, but, being established, the power of the parties as to its extent or duration is at an end. Their rights under it are determined by the will of the Sovereign, as evidenced by law. They can neither be modified nor changed by any agreement of parties. It is a relation for life, and the parties cannot terminate it at any shorter period by virtue of any contract they may make. The reciprocal rights arising from this relation, so long as it continues, are such as the law determines from time to time, and none other.' And again: 'It is not a contract within the meaning of the clause of the constitution which prohibits the impairing the obligation of contracts. It is, rather, a social relation, like that of parent and child, the obligations of which arise not from the consent of concurring minds, but are the creation of the law itself, a relation the most important as affecting the happiness of individuals, the first step from barbarism to incipient civilization, the purest tie of social life, and the true basis of human progress.' And the chief justice cites in support of this view the case of Maguire v. Maguire, 7 Dana (Ky.) 181, 183, and Ditson v. Ditson, 4 R. I. 87, 101. In the first of these the supreme court of Kentucky said that marriage was more than a contract; that it was the most elementary and useful of all the social relations, was regulated and controlled by the sovereign power of the state, and could not, like mere contracts, be dissolved by the mutual consent of the contracting parties, but might be abrogated by the sovereign will whenever the public good, or justice to both parties, or either of the parties, would thereby be subserved; that being more than a contract, and depending especially upon the sovereign will, it was not embraced by the constitutional inhibition of legislative acts impairing the obligation of contracts. In the second case the supreme court of Rhode Island said that marriage, in the sense in which it is dealt with by a decree of divorce, is not a contract, but one of the domestic relations. In strictness, though formed by contract, it signifies the relation of husband and wife, deriving both its rights and duties from a source higher than any contract of which the parties are capable, and as to those uncontrollable by any contract which they can make when formed, this relation is not more a contract than 'fatherhood' or 'sonship' is a contract."

1. Contracts Not to Marry.—Strathmore v. Bowes, 1 Ves. Jr. 22; Linker v. Smith, 4 Wash. (C. C.) 224; Robinson v. Buck, 71 Pa. St. 386; Bunell v. Witherow, 29 Ind. 123; Logan v. Simmons, 3 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 487; Baker

4. Contracts to Bring About Marriage.—Marriage Brocage Contracts, see title BROKER, vol. 2, p. 598; title ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, vol. 9, p. 919.

5. Contracts in Restraint of Marriage.—Contracts,¹ or clauses in contracts,² having a tendency to prevent the marriage of some person affected, are frequently held to be void, as against public policy,³ to try to prevent marriage having been called the blackest of all political sins.⁴ The effect of the contract or clause may depend very largely upon its form, whether it is a condition or a limitation, whether it is a condition subsequent or precedent, whether it is general or aimed at a particular marriage; whether it affects realty or personalty, and what provisions it makes in case of its breach.⁵ The law upon these subjects cannot be said to be well settled,⁶ but it is perfectly practicable by putting the

v. Chase, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 482; Gregory v. Winston, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 102.

For a general discussion of the subject see vol. 8, p. 654, of this work.

The rule as above stated applies even to the mutual exclusive promises of engaged parties. Hall v. Wright, El. B. & E. 788.

So a bond of a widow not to marry again. Baker v. White, 2 Vern. 215.

But a promise not to marry any person belonging to a particular country (Perrin v. Lyon, 9 East 170) or religious sect (Duggan v. Kelly, 10 Irish Eq. 295) may be valid unless it amounts to an unreasonable prohibition.

See CONTRACTS IN RESTRAINT OF MARRIAGE.

1. See CONTRACTS NOT TO MARRY, above.

2. It is with these that we have mostly to deal.

3. See tit. ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, vol. 9, p. 918.

4. Lowe v. Peers, 4 Burr. 2225.

5. See notes 1, 2, p. 475; notes 1, 2, 3, p. 476; notes 1, 2, 3, 4, p. 477; note 1, p. 478.

6. Arthur v. Cole, 56 Md. 101 (1880.). "This is a subject that has been fruitful of discussion, and, indeed, of conflicting decisions."

In Hartley v. Rice, 10 East, p. 22 (Eng. King's Bench 1808), "the plaintiff declared in assumpsit upon a wager made on the 25th of November, 1799, whereby he betted with the defendant 50 guineas that he, the plaintiff, should not be married in six years; stating that in consideration that the plaintiff promised to pay the defendant 50 guineas in case he, the plaintiff, should be married within that time, the defendant promised to pay the plaintiff the like sum if the plaintiff should not be married within that time. LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C. J.: On the face of the contract its immediate tendency is, as far as it goes, to discourage marriage; and we have no scales to weigh the degree of effect it would have on the human mind. It is said, however, that the restraint is not to operate for an indefinite period, but only for six years, and that there might be reasonable grounds to restrain the party for that period. But no circumstances are stated to us to show that the restraint was reasonable; and the distinct and immediate tendency of the restraint stamps it as an illegal ingredient in the contract. Wagers in general are seldom indifferent in their tendency, and this certainly is not so. GROSE, J.: Every contract in restraint of marriage is illegal, as was said by LORD HARDWICKE: But this is endeavored to be distinguished from former cases, as not being a total and indefinite restraint of marriage; that, however, must depend upon the duration of the party's life. If good for six years, why not for a longer period? LE BLANC, J.: This case is presented to us stripped of all particular circumstances, and therefore must be determined by the general rule of law. Now it is impossible to say that such a contract might not have an effect on the mind of the party to deter him from marrying during the six years; but a contract to restrain marriage generally has been determined to be illegal, as being against the sound policy of the law; and nothing is stated here to show it to be otherwise in the particular instance."

In Waters v. Tazewell, 9 Md. 291, a provision against marriage in a proper form to secure its efficiency,¹ and a few general rules may be laid down as follows: (1) A limitation, as distinguished from a condition, is valid.² (2) A deed conveying leasehold property in trust for the sole and separate use of a feme covert contained a provision that in case the husband should survive the wife, he and his assigns should have the rents, issues and profits during his natural life only, to and for his own use and benefit, provided he should continue unmarried after the death of his wife then living, and from and immediately after his death, then over. On page 309 the court say: "Unqualified restrictions on marriage are discouraged on grounds of public policy, and instead of aiding them by applying liberal rules of construction, the courts have been disposed to construe them strictly, in such manner as will favor the persons on whom the restraints are laid. We, therefore, cannot adopt the views of the appellant's counsel, so as to consider the gift over, after the husband's decease, as taking effect upon his second marriage; or that his life estate terminated upon the occurrence of that event. 1 Story's Eq., §§ 279, 280, 283, 286 to 290, and notes; 1 Jarm. on Wills 841, 842, 843."

1. Stewart on Marriage and Divorce, § 31. "The law is in a state of change and uncertainty, but a settler can always carry out his intentions by putting the condition in the form of a limitation. See Arthur v. Cole, 56 Md. 100, and cases cited therein."

2. In Arthur v. Cole, 56 Md. at 102, "The doctrine that conditions in restraint of marriage are void, was derived from the civil law, and though it still prevails, and is everywhere recognized and enforced with greater or less strictness, some of the English judges in recent cases have suggested that the reason upon which the doctrine was originally founded has ceased to exist. Allen v. Jackson, 1 Ch. Div. (Law Rep. 399); Jones v. Jones, 1 Queen's Bench Div. (Law Rep. 279). But no case has yet gone to the extent of repudiating the doctrine altogether, though the tendency of modern decisions perhaps, is not to extend it, nor to strive to bring within its operation cases which, by fair and just construction fall under the well recognized distinctions and exceptions. One of these distinctions sustained by the great preponderance of authority, is that between a limitation and a condition subsequent, or, in other words, between the language by which the duration of an estate or interest is prescribed, and that by which an estate previously created is cut down, defeated or divested. One of the cases in which this distinction is forcibly stated is Heath v. Lewis, 3 De G. McN. & G. 954. In that case a testator bequeathed an annuity to an unmarried woman 'during the term of her natural life, if she shall so long remain unmarried.' The annuitant, after enjoying the annuity for some years, married, and the question was whether the annuity was determined by her marriage. LORD JUSTICE KNIGHT BRUCE said: "It must be agreed on all hands that it is, by the English law, competent for a man to give to a single woman an annuity until she shall die or be married, whichever of these two events shall first happen. All men agree that if such a legatee shall marry, the annuity will thereupon cease. But this proposition has been advanced—a proposition which, if true (and I do not deny its truth), is perhaps not creditable to the English law—that if a man give an annuity to a woman who has never married, for life, and afterwards declare that if she shall marry the annuity shall be forfeited, the condition is void, and she may yet marry as often as she will, and retain her annuity. Such is the state of our English law on this subject said, and perhaps truly, to be; and the question argued before us has been, to which of these two classes the gift in this will belongs, being a gift of an annuity to a single lady 'during the term of her natural life, if she shall so long remain unmarried,' this language being the technical and proper language of limitation as distinguished from condition, long known to the English law and familiar to us all. Both upon precedent and reason, upon principle and authority, I am of opinion that this is a limitation as distinguished from a condition, and that the annuity ceased when the lady married."

The facts in Arthur v. Cole, 56 Md. 100, from which case the above has been taken are well stated in the head notes as follows: "W. H. C., in consideration of one dime and of natural love and affection, conveyed by deed condition against a particular marriage, if reasonable, is valid;¹ but if it practically amounts to a general prohibition against marriage, it is treated as a general condition, and is void.² (3) A condition precedent is valid.³ (4) An absolute condition subse-certain leasehold property 'to his two sisters, M and E, 'to have and to hold the same unto the said M and E as tenants in common so long as they both shall live, and from and after the death of either of them, then unto the survivor so long as she shall live and no longer; or so long as they both shall remain unmarried; and from and after the marriage of either of them, then unto the one remaining unmarried, so long as she shall live, and no longer.' M married, and E who remained unmarried took exclusive possession of the premises. Upon an ejectment brought by M and her husband to recover an undivided moiety of the premises, it was held:

(1) That the purpose of the brother evidently was, not to restrain the marriage, or promote the celibacy of his sisters, but to give them a small property as a home or support, until they should severally marry and have husbands to maintain them.

(2) That there was nothing immoral or illegal in this purpose, and it was carried out by this deed without infringing any rule of law.

(3) That the weight of authority fully sustained the validity of the grant."

See also Morley v. Rennoldson, 2 Hare 570; Webb v. Grace, 2 Phill. Ch. 701; Jones v. Jones, 1 Law R., Q. B. C. 279; Vance v. Campbell, 1 Dana (Ky.) 229; Otis v. Prince, 10 Gray (Mass.) 581; Hotz's Est., 38 Pa. St. 422; Pringle v. Dunkley, 14 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 16; Bennett v. Robinson, 10 Watts (Pa.) 348; Little v. Birdwell, 21 Tex. 597.

1. In Graydon v. Graydon, 23 N. J. Eq. 229, at page 234, "The only disposition of any rest or residue of his estate is that contained in that part of the eighth clause which directs his executors, in case of John's marriage to A. I. Cameron's daughter, to dispose of his estate as if John had died in his lifetime intestate, and without issue, but subject in other things to the provisions of the will. . . . It is further contended that this condition is void, because it is in restraint of marriage, and because it requires John to do an illegal and immoral act; to violate his engagement with his present wife, made and entered into before he knew of this provision in his father's will, and, in fact, before the will was executed. . . . I am of opinion that the condition is certain and is a legal and valid condition, and makes void the bequests to John."

The testator in the case of Randal v. Payne, 1 Brown's Chancery Reports (English 1779), devised subject to this contingency: "If either of the devisees should marry into the families of Rivington or Gosling, and have a son, I give all my estate to him for life with remainder over; if not, to Randal. The devisees married, but not into the favored families. Randal files his bill, but dismissed, for the devisees have their whole lives to perform the condition."

Conditions that a grantee shall not marry a resident of a particular country (Perrins v. Lyon, 9 East 170, English), or an adherent of a particular religious sect (Duggan v. Kelly, 10 I. R. Eq. 295), or against marriage except with particular ceremonies (Houghton v. Houghton, 1 Molloy 611), or before a particular age (Collier v. Slaughter, 20 Ala. 263; Shackelford v. Hall, 19 Ill. 212), may be valid.

2. In Maddox v. Maddox, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 804, "A member of the Society of Friends, by his will, gives a legacy of a remainder after a life interest, to his niece M, 'during her single life, and forever, if her conduct should be orderly, and she remain a member of the Society of Friends.' When M arrived at a marriageable age, there were but five or six unmarried men of the society in the neighborhood in which she lived, and during the life estate she married a man not a member of the society. Held, the condition is an unreasonable restraint upon marriage, and is void." See also Kelly v. Monck, 3 Ridge P. C. 205.

3. In Hemmings v. Munkley, 1 Brown Chancery Reports 304 (English, 1783), the testator gave a portion of his estate "to his daughter Rachael, on her attaining her age of twenty-eight years, or day of marriage, which shall first happen, provided his daughter should quent is void.¹ A condition subsequent is valid as to personalty if there be a gift over,² otherwise void.³ A condition subsequent is good as to real estate if the provision is not intended to prevent marriage but to provide for the grantee until marriage.⁴

marry with the approbation of his said executors, etc. Rachael married without the consent of the executors." LORD LOUGHBOROUGH decided that the above provision was a condition precedent, and as it had not been complied with the estate did not vest in Rachael. See also Fry v. Porter, 1 Ch. Cases 138; Reynish v. Martin, 3 Atk. 330; Collier v. Slaughter, 20 Ala. 263.

But this is denied as to personalty in the absence of a limitation over. Gough v. Manning, 26 Md. 347; Maddox v. Maddox, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 804.

1. In Waters v. Tazewell, 9 Md. 292, "A deed conveying leasehold property in trust for the sale and separate use of a feme covert, contained a provision that in case the husband should survive the wife, he and his assigns should have the rents, issues and profits 'during his natural life only, to and for his own use and benefit, provided he should continue unmarried after the death of his wife then living, and from and immediately after his decease, then over. Held, that this proviso, being a general restraint upon marriage by means of a condition subsequent, was void, and the husband's life estate was not terminated by a second marriage." See also Bellairs v. Bellairs, L. R., 18 Eq. 510.

2. In Cornell v. Lovett, 35 Pa. St. 100, "A testator directed a sum of money to be secured on his real estate, upon the sale thereof by his executors, and the annual interest of it to be paid to his widow during her life or widowhood; and provided that if she should marry again, such yearly bequest should cease and terminate; and the principal sum so secured should be distributed, with the residue of his estate, among the grandsons of the testator; the widow accepted under the will, and subsequently contracted a second marriage. Held, that the condition was not void, and that on the marriage of the widow her right to the annual payment of such interest determined." On page 102 the court said: "The English cases in regard to conditions subsequent in restraint of marriage seem to have settled down to this, that if there is no limitation over on breach of the condition, nor throwing of the legacy into the residuum disposed of, or if the legacy is simply reduced on the happening of the event, or the disposition over is none other than the law itself would have made, had there been none, then the restraint shall be considered as in terrorem only, is void, and the bequest absolute. 3 Meriv. 120; 3 Atk. 364-7; 2 Vent. 352; 2 Bro. C. C. 431, 489. Nor will a mere residuary bequest amount to a disposition over; for there may be a residue without the particular legacy, and therefore non constat, that the testator designed it to form parcel of the residue, and pass with it to the residuary legatee. There may be a disposition of the residue, and still none of the legacy." See also Morley v. Rennoldson, 2 Hare 579; Gough v. Manning, 26 Md. 347, and note 3 below.

3. In Parsons v. Winslow, 6 Mass. 169, there was "a devise to the testator's wife of an annuity 'during her widowhood and life' was held to cease upon her second marriage, by the testator's intention; but it was further held that such intention being in terrorem, and against the policy of the law as in restraint of marriage, it could not take effect, and that the wife was entitled to the annuity during her life, notwithstanding her second marriage, the same not being expressly devised over, except to the residuary legatee, who was the heir at law to the testator." See also Otis v. Prince, 10 Gray (Mass.) 581; Maddox v. Maddox, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 804, and note 2 above.

4. Jones v. Jones, Law Reports, 1 Q. B. Div. 279. "D made his will as follows: 'I give, devise and bequeath unto my sister Mary, her daughter Elizabeth, and Sarah, the daughter of David Jones, all my landed property, together with all my goods, chattels and effects, to possess and enjoy the same jointly during their lifetime; and when any one or some of the before mentioned parties shall depart this life, I give, devise and bequeath her or their shares to be possessed and enjoyed by my sister Jemima, the wife of John Davies, together with her daughter Mary, during their lifetime; provided the said Mary, daughter of the said Jemima, my sister, shall remain in her present state of single woman, otherwise if she shall alter her present state of single woman,

In some States conditions in restraint of marriage are said to be always valid as to real estate, because the heir can enter and enforce the forfeiture.¹ (5) These rules apply equally, whether the provision be against a first or a second marriage,² of a woman or a man.³ and bind herself in wedlock, she is liable to lose her share of the said property immediately, and her share to be possessed by the other mentioned parties, share and share alike.' Held, that the estate of Mary Davies in the land ceased on her marriage; for that the object of the testator appeared to be, not to restrain marriage, but to provide for Mary Davies while she was unmarried; and the question whether the clause amounted to a condition or a limitation was immaterial, as the authorities upon such a distinction did not apply to a devise of realty." See also Arthur v. Cole, 56 Md. 100, and Gough v. Manning, 26 Md. 347.

1. In Com. v. Stauffer, 10 Pa. St. 350, at 354, "This action is brought for surplus proceeds of land devised to the testator's widow for life, on condition not to marry, but sold by order of the orphans court for payment of his debts. She did marry shortly after the sale; and the question is, whether a subsequent condition in general restraint of marriage, when annexed to a devise of land, is void for reason of public policy. When annexed to a legacy, the decisions of the ecclesiastical courts, followed in chancery, have certainly established that it is; and so the rule is held in Pennsylvania, both at law and in equity, as is shown by McIlvain v. Gethen, 3 Whart. (Pa.) 575, and Hoopes v. Dundas, 10 Pa. St. 75. But it is said in 2 Powell on Dev. 282, that the rule of the ecclesiastical courts in legatory cases are inapplicable to devises of land, or money charged upon it; and that it owes its existence, in any case, to the ecclesiastical judges, who borrowed most of their rules from the civil law. The same thing is repeated in 1 Jarm. on Wills 836, and fortified by references to Reeves v. Herne, 5 Vin. 393, pl. 46; Harvey v. Aston, 1 Atk. 361; Reynish v. Martin, 3 Atk. 330; Stackpole v. Beaumont, 3 Ves. 96; and the cases collected in Mr. Sanders' note to Harvey v. Aston, to which may be added the great case of Fry v. Porter, 1 Mod. 308. The ground on which these precedents stand is the indisputable fact that devises of land are governed, not by the Roman, but by the common law." See also Phillips v. Medbury, 7 Conn. 568.

2 In Allen v. Jackson, Law Rep., 1 Ch. Div. 399, at 403, "It seems to have been laid down by a great number of cases that what is called a general restraint upon marriage is against the policy of the law. That, of course, can be the only principle which can be the foundation of any rule at all on the subject. The general restraint of marriage, for some reason or other, probably a good reason, is to be discouraged, and a condition subsequently annexed by way of forfeiture to a marriage is therefore void. That is the law both as to man and woman; but it has been most distinctly settled that with regard to the second marriage of a woman, that law does not apply, that whether the gift be a gift to a widow by a husband or a gift to the widow by some other person, the law does not apply to that case, and that such a condition is perfectly valid. Now, there is no act of parliament which has provided, and there is no decision of any court whatever which has established, that there is any distinction whatever between the second marriage of a woman and the second marriage of a man; and, in the absence of any decision to the contrary, I am myself unable to see any principle whatever upon which the distinction can be drawn between them. . . . The case before us seems to me to show what immense mischief one would be doing if one were to introduce a different rule of law in the case of a widower to that in the case of a widow. Now, in the case of a widow, it has been considered to be very right and proper that a man should prevent his widow from marrying again." See also Newton v. Marsden, 2 Johns. & H. 356; Barton v. Barton, 2 Vern. 308; Marples v. Bainbridge, 1 Madd. 590; Snider v. Newsom, 24 Ga. 139; Holmes v. Field, 12 Ill. 424; Gough v. Manning, 26 Md. 347; Dumey v. Schoeffler, 24 Mo. 170; Phillips v. Medbury, 7 Conn. 568; Beekman v. Hudson, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 53; Holtz Estate, 38 Pa. St. 422; Little v. Birdwell, 21 Tex. 597.

3. See note 2 above.

The recent cases (1888) of Rowland

6. Contracts Providing for Marriage Property Rights.—See title MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS.

7. Contracts in Evasion of Marriage Rights.—As set forth under title HUSBAND AND WIFE (vol. 9, p. 789), husbands and wives acquire valuable rights by marriage in each other's property, and contracts, gifts, conveyances and settlements made by one of the parties before marriage so as to evade the marriage rights of the other may be fraudulent and void. In order to have such a contract, gift, conveyance, etc., set aside or declared void, the injured party need only show (1) that there was an actual engagement of marriage at the time of the conveyance, etc.,¹ and (2), that the fact of the conveyance, etc., was not known until after such engagement of marriage had been consummated by marriage.² This

v. Rowland (South Carolina), Squier v. Harvey (Rhode Island), and Beshore v. Lytle, 114 Ind. 8, show that conditions in restraint of second marriages are valid and not against public policy.

In Bostick v. Blades, 59 Md. 231, there was "a devise by a wife of her real estate to her husband for life 'if he shall not marry,' but in the event of his marriage, to her brother in fee, is valid; and the husband having married again, the brother is entitled to recover in ejectment the estate so devised. There is no substantial distinction between a condition imposed in restraint of a second marriage of a woman and a like condition in restraint of a second marriage of a man. They are alike valid and effectual."

1. Evasion of Marriage Rights.—In Gainor v. Gainor, 26 Iowa 337, at page 340, it is laid down that "a voluntary settlement or conveyance of property by a wife or husband, prior to marriage, will be held fraudulent as to the marital rights of the one to whom she or he may afterward be joined in matrimony, only when made in contemplation of marriage, and pending a treaty of marriage between the parties. See 1 Leading Cases in Equity, 444; notes to Countess of Strathmore v. Bowes; Hill on Trustees, p. 163."

The master of rolls in Downes v. Jennings, 32 Beacon (English Chancery 1863), at page 293, said: "The first question is one of fact, viz, whether this settlement was executed in contemplation of the marriage, which was solemnized seven weeks afterwards? If this be answered in the affirmative, then arises the second question, which is one of law, viz, whether having regard to the contents of this settlement, it can properly be considered to be one in fraud of the marital right? If this should be decided in favor of the plaintiff, then the time suffered by him to elapse before filing the bill remains to be considered. The first question depends, in my opinion, on whether the evidence establishes first, that the plaintiff and Mrs. Marshall were ever engaged to marry previous to their actual marriage; secondly, whether, if they were, this engagement, or rather an active intention on their part to marry, was subsisting at the time when this settlement was executed; and thirdly, whether, when this settlement was executed, the intended marriage was then settled to take place immediately or within some short space from that time." See also Wilson v. Daniel, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 348; Williams v. Carle, 10 N. J. Eq. 543, 552; Gregory v. Winston, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 102; Robinson v. Buck, 71 Pa. St. 386; Tucker v. Andrews, 13 Me. 124; Jenny v. Jenny, 24 Vt. 324; Waters v. Tazewell, 9 Md. 291. See note 2, a, p. 480.

2. In St. George v. Wake, 1 Mylne & Keen (English Chancery 1833) 610, at page 616, "As there is no evidence that the transaction was concealed from the plaintiff, and as there is no allegation in the bill of such concealment, or of the plaintiff's ignorance before the marriage of the assignments having been made, it is to be presumed that the plaintiff had notice of the assignments previously to the marriage; and if a person is acquainted before his marriage with the fact of an assignment of property made by his intended wife, such assignment cannot be said to be a fraud upon his marital right. If he still thinks fit to marry the lady, he cannot reasonably complain that he is deceived or defrauded." Wrigley v.

rule applies both to wives¹ and to husbands,² and is not affected

Swanson, 18 Law J. Ch. 396, 400 (English Chancery); Cole v. O'Neill, 3 Md. Ch. 174; Fletcher v. Ashley, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 332; Prather v. Burgess, 5 Cranch (C. C.) 276; Cheshire v. Payne, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 618; Poston v. Gillespie, 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 258. See note 2. a. infra.

1. See case of St. George v. Wake, 1 Mylne & Keen (English Chancery) in note 2, p. 479. See also Wrigley v. Swanson, 18 Law J. Ch. 396, 400.

In Freeman v. Hartman, 45 Ill., at page 59, Mr. JUSTICE LAWRENCE remarked: "It is a settled rule that a voluntary conveyance by a woman on the eve of her marriage, of property which her intended husband knew her to own made without his knowledge is void as against him, because in derogation of his marital rights and just expectations. Strathmore v. Bowes, 1 Ves. 22; England v. Downs, 2 Beav. 522; Logan v. Simmons, 3 Ired. Ch. 487; Tucker v. Andrews, 13 Me. 125. The case before us falls within this principle. The deed was made but three days before the marriage, and without the knowledge of Hartman, the intended husband." See also Tucker v. Andrews, 13 Me. 124; McAfee v. Ferguson, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 475; Manes v. Durant, 2 Rich Eq. (S. Car.) 404; and Gainor v. Gainor, 26 Iowa 337, in note 1, p. 479.

2. See Gainor v. Gainor, 26 Iowa 337, in note 1, p. 479; Gibson v. Carson, 3 Ala. 421; Dearmond v. Dearmond, 10 Ind. 191; Leach v. Duvall, 8 Bush (Ky.) 201; Cranson v. Cranson, 4 Mich. 230; Smith v. Smith, 6 N. J. Eq. 515; Jenny v. Jenny, 24 Vt. 324.

In Butler v. Butler, 21 Kan. 521, at page 524, the court say: "It is doubtless true that at common law it was the disposition of courts to hold that a voluntary conveyance of all her property by a woman engaged to be married, made without the knowledge of her intended husband, was a fraud upon his marital rights, and might, after the marriage, be avoided by him. See in support of this view the valuable list of authorities in brief of counsel for plaintiff in error. Whether the same rule obtained when the husband just before marriage made such a conveyance of his property is not so clear. See 1 Bright's Husband and Wife, p. 356; 1 Leading Cases in Equity; White & Tudor's notes, p. 618.

The reason for the supposed difference in the rule grew out of the different rights each acquired in the property of the other and the different obligations assumed by each to and for the other by that relation. We deem it unnecessary to enter into any discussion of these matters, for the constant tendency has been to do away with these differences and give to each the same rights in the property of the other. Of course, when each acquires by marriage the same rights in the property of the other, and is under the same obligations to and for the other, then that which would be a fraud if done by one will under the same circumstances be a fraud if done by the other."

In line with the above quotation are McKeogh v. McKeogh, 4 I. R. Eq. 338; Banks v. Sutton, 2 P. Wms. 700; Swannock v. Lifford, Co. Litt. 208 a, note 1; s. c., 1 Amb. 6.

The case of Fisher v. Schlosser, 41 Ohio St. 147, was decided on a similar principle of law. There a case for breach of promise of marriage was pending between L S and J F, which fact was known to M E W. Then J F married M E W and in consideration thereof settled $25,000 on her. At the suit of L S, this conveyance was held fraudulent.

a. But a distinction has been made in some cases where the grantor gives property to those who have a legal or moral claim upon the grantor. In Downes v. Jennings, 32 Beav. (English Chancery), at page 295, the master of the rolls said: "The greatest length any case has gone, that I am aware of, is the case of Hunt v. Matthews, 1 Vern. 408, where a widow, before her second marriage, assigned the greatest part of her estate as a provision for her children by the first marriage. In that case the court held that she was justified in providing for such children before she placed herself under the power of a second husband. Assuming that, in that case, the settlement was made after the treaty for marriage, it is difficult to reconcile it with LORD THURLOW's observations in Strathmore v. Bowes, 1 Ves. Jr. 28. But, even in that case, the settlement was confined to the children of the first marriage who were unprovided for. But the settlement before me cannot be treated in so favorable a light. By this deed present and contingent benefits are given to persons whom she was not bound to benefit by any legal or moral tie."

by separate property statutes.¹ The burden of proof is upon the

To the same effect is the case of Butler v. Butler and Austin, 21 Kansas at page 527: "Again, the conveyance was meritorious, and to those having claims upon the grantor. It was to his minor children, and as a provision for them. Surely the duty of a father to his minor children by a deceased wife is as great as that to a woman he is hoping to wed. It was not an absolute rule that an antenuptial voluntary conveyance was fraudulent and void. In Schouler Dom. Rel., p. 270, it is said: "From the decisions it would appear that some alienation of the wife's property without her intended husband's knowledge will be allowed to stand. The facts are always open to enquiry, and it seems settled that the court is warranted in considering such circumstances as the meritorious object of the conveyance and the situation of the husband in point of pecuniary means." LORD THURLOW held that such a conveyance being made by the absolute owner of the property was prima facie good, and that the facts and circumstances must be shown indicating an intention to deprive the husband of that which he might rightfully and reasonably expect to obtain by the marriage, before it could be adjudged fraudulent and void. Strathmore v. Bowes, 1 Ves. Jr. 22. CHANCELLOR KENT, in his Commentary, vol. 2, p. 175, says: "If the settlement be upon children of a former husband and there be no imposition practiced upon the husband, the settlement would be valid without notice;" citing King v. Cotton, 2 P. Wms. 674; Jones v. Cole, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 330; see also Lyles v. Lyles, Harper (S. Car.) Eq. 228.

The settlement need not have been actively concealed. Strathmore v. Bowes, 1 Ves. Jr. 22; England v. Downs, 2 Beav. 22; Taylor v. Pugh, 1 Hare 608.

And the notice to him must (perhaps) be actual. O'Neill v. Cole, 4 Md. 107. If he hears of some settlement, this puts him on enquiry, and is tantamount to notice. Wrigley v. Swainson, 38 Law J. Ch. 396; Spencer v. Spencer, 3 Jones (N. Car.) Eq. 404. Contra, Johnson v. Peterson, 6 Jones (S. Car.) Eq. 12, unless upon enquiry he is, on behalf of the settler, falsely informed. Prideoux v. Lonsdale, 4 Giff. 159. Notice binds him, though he is a minor. Slocombe v. Glubb, 2 Bro. C. C. 545.

This rule does not apply to bona fide transactions on valuable consideration. Blanchet v. Foster, 2 Ves. Sr. 264; Freeman v. Hartman, 45 Ill. 57; Gregory v. Winston, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 102. Nor to cases where the injured party by some unequivocal act has ratified the settlement. England v. Downs, 2 Beav. 522; Maber v. Hobbs, 2 Younge & C. 317; Duncan's Appeal, 43 Pa. St. 67.

Nor where a man has put it out of the woman's power to hold off for a settlement by seducing her. Taylor v. Pugh, 1 Hare 608, 614-616.

Nor where the complaining party has been guilty of laches. Loader v. Clarke, 2 Mac. & G. 382; Butler v. Butler, 21 Kan. 521.

For a further discussion of this subject see Stewart on Marriage and Divorce, § 44.

An interesting discussion on the subject of conveyances made during coverture to defeat marriage rights will be found in Robbitt v. Gaither, 67 Md. 94.

1. Baker v. Jordan, 73 N. Car. 145, was a case where on the day before her marriage, unknown to her intended husband, Catherine Baker conveyed to her stepmother all of her property. It was argued that inasmuch as the constitution of 1868 had changed the property rights of a husband from what they had been at the common law, and had declared that all property of a married woman should remain hers just as much as if she were a feme sole, that therefore the husband could not have been defrauded by any conveyance made. But the court held otherwise at page 147. "We do not concur in this proposition. A husband is entitled since the constitution of 1868, and the marriage act, to the society of the wife, is under an obligation to support her and the children, and for that purpose is entitled to her services and to contribution from the profits of her estate. He has a right to live in his wife's house and to ride her horse if she own one. The plaintiff was surprised by the fact that his wife had been induced to give away all the estate she owned and to which he with reason looked for aid in supporting her. He was deceived, and the question is, party alleging the fraud,¹ and the proceedings and principles are much the same as have been discussed under the title FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES (vol. 8, p. 748).

II. ESSENTIALS OF A MARRIAGE—1. Essentials in General.—There are four elements which have been deemed essential to a marriage, and which will be particularly discussed in the succeeding sections of this part of this article, to wit:

a. Competent Parties.—Each of the parties must have the capacity to marry the other.² Thus, a man may not be able to marry a certain woman either because he is not old enough to marry anyone, or because she is too nearly related to him or is not of the same color.

b. A Contract of Marriage.—The parties must mutually agree to be thenceforth husband and wife.³ No one can be married without his or her consent, no matter how competent the parties may be or what formalities they go through.

c. A Marriage Celebration or Marriage Formalities.—The parties must go through certain formalities, sometimes religious and sometimes civil.⁴ That is to say, the State, for the protection of the people, generally prescribes formalities, and does not leave marriage free to be formed as an ordinary partnership.

d. A Consummation.—The parties must become husband and wife in fact, must assume marriage rights, duties and obligations.⁵ In the notorious Sharon divorce case, no marriage was found because the parties had simply lived together as man and mistress, although they had agreed in writing to be husband and wife.⁶

As will hereafter be set forth fully, the absence of one or more of these elements may not render the marriage invalid; and, as a general rule, absence of any formality whatever and of any consummation of the marriage, will not prevent the parties from being husband and wife, whatever other results may be entailed upon them.⁷ For a marriage which is valid may be invalid in certain respects, or it may be a prohibited or voidable marriage.

2. Valid, Void, Voidable and Illegal Marriages.—A legal marriage is one with respect to which all the provisions of the law have was he defrauded of any right to which he was entitled as husband? We think he was."

1. See Geyer v. Mobile Bank, 21 Ala. 414; Freeman v. Hartman, 45 Ill. 57; Cole v. Van Riper, 44 Ill. 58; Robinson v. Buck, 71 Pa. St. 386; Bunuel v. Witherow, 29 Ind. 123; Gainor v. Gainor, 26 Iowa 337; Tucker v. Andrews, 13 Me. 124; Smith v. Smith, 6 N. J. Eq. 515; Westerman v. Westerman, 25 Ohio St. 500; Duncan's Appeal, 43 Pa. St. 67; Gregory v. Winston, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 102.

2. Capacity, discussed post, II, §§ 4-5, g.

3. Consent, discussed post, II, § 6, a, b, c. Consent of the parties is the very essence of a marriage, and no one can be married without it. Rundle v. Pegram, 49 Miss. 751; State v. Worthingham, 23 Minn. 528, 533; Clark v. Field, 13 Vt. 460. But the most honest belief of the parties that they are married will not be sufficient to make them so. White v. White, 105 Mass. 325.

4. Formalities, discussed post, II, § 7, a, b, c.

5. Consummation, discussed post, II, § 8.

6. Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 1.

7. LORD BROUGHAM calls these irregular marriages. Piers v. Piers, 2 H. L. Cases, 331, 371. As to punishments and penalties see post.

been complied with ; but there are many laws relating to marriages which may be disregarded without preventing the parties from becoming by the marriage completely husband and wife.¹ Thus, a licence is usually required by law, but failure to secure a licence will not prevent the parties from becoming husband and wife if they are otherwise properly married.² Any marriage contrary to law in any respect is in this sense illegal, and any marriage by which the parties become completely husband and wife is valid. There have been marriages by which the parties are made husband and wife only in certain respects, but they are not important.³

A marriage per se, and without any judgment or decree, invalid for all intents and purposes, no matter in what proceeding or in what court the question arises, is called a void marriage.⁴ Thus, if a man, being already married, marries another woman, his marriage is invalid to all intents and purposes without any judgment or decree,⁵ whether in a proceeding between the parties to settle the question,⁶ or in a proceeding after his death, in which his is-

1. Stewart Mar. & Div., §§ 48-52. Sometimes the marriage is recognized, but the parties are punished for marrying or for marrying in the way pursued; as in Maryland, where a marriage without licence or publication of banns is valid but the parties are fined $100 each. Sometimes the marriage will not be recognized, but there is no penalty; as in Massachusetts, where if a woman marries a second time when her husband has been absent unheard of for seven years, if he be not dead at the time of the second marriage, this is void, but she is not punishable for bigamy. Glass v. Glass, 114 Mass. 563; and to illustrate more fully the importance of these distinctions, the marriage of a minor without the consent of his parents was, in England, under LORD HARDWICKE'S act, void. Jones v. Robinson, 2 Phillim. 285; Piers v. Piers, 2 H. L. Cas. 331. In Scotland, voidable for one year. Rex v. Jacobs, 1 Moody C. C. 140; in Maryland, simply prohibited, code 1888; see post, § 5.

Jones v. Jones, 45 Md. 144, 159: "The statute prohibited ministers of the gospel from publishing the banns or celebrating matrimony between servants or a servant and a free person under penalty, without the consent of the master. But the statute did not declare the marriage void, nor was that the operation of it. The minister subjected himself to a fine, but the marriage was valid."

2. Blackburn v. Crawford, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 185; post, II, § 7.

3. Partial Validity.—A marriage may be valid for certain purposes only, as formerly precontract, which prevented a second marriage but would not give dower. Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hogg Const. 54; Reg. v. Millis, 10 Clark & S. 782.

So a marriage in good faith may, though void, be valid so far as to render the children legitimate. Eubanks v. Banks, 34 Ga. 407. Generally by statute. Graham v. Bennet, 2 Cal. 503; Lincecum v. Lincecum, 3 Mo. 441.

So a marriage may, by statute, though void, give the deceived party marriage property rights. Clendenning v. Clendenning, 15 Mart. (La.) 438; Strode v. Strode, 3 Bush (Ky.) 227; Carroll v. Carroll, 20 Tex. 731.

So a marriage may be valid in one State but not in another. Hyde v. Hyde, L. R., 1 P. & D. 130; title CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 598.

4. Void Marriages.—Patterson v. Gaines, 6 How. (U. S.) 550; Smart v. Whaley, 6 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 308; Fornhill v. Murray, 1 Bland Ch. (Md.) 479; Higgins v. Breen, 9 Mo. 497; Spicer v. Spicer, 16 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. N. S. 112; Gathings v. Williams, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 487; Hantz v. Sealey, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 405; Purgree v. Goodrich, 41 Vt. 47.

5. Reg. v. Chadwick, 11 Q. B. 173; Martin v. Martin, 22 Ala. 86; Reeves v. Reeves, 54 Ill. 332; Tefft v. Tefft, 35 Ind. 44; Emerson v. Shaw, 56 N. H. 418; Blossom v. Barrett, 37 N. Y. 434; post, II, § 5, g.

6. Tefft v. Tefft, 35 Ind. 44.

sue claim as legitimate.¹ And if his first marriage was void because the woman was already married, this may be made to appear in a prosecution against him for bigamy,² or in a petition against his estate for dower.³

A marriage which is valid to all intents and purposes, unless and until duly avoided, or which is valid to all intents and purposes, unless and until duly confirmed, is called a voidable marriage.⁴

A marriage may be valid to all intents and purposes unless and until duly avoided, but if duly avoided absolutely void from the beginning. To this class belong marriages which, for incapacity of party existing at the time of the marriage, may be avoided under the ecclesiastical law,⁵ or under special statutes,⁶ by a special proceeding instituted within a specified time,⁷ i. e., by a nullity suit.⁸

A marriage may be void for all intents and purposes unless and until duly confirmed, but if duly confirmed, valid ab initio. To this class belong marriages which for incompleteness or un-reality of consent are void as wanting the essential contract, and which are inchoate and incomplete rather than voidable marriages.⁹

It is therefore very important to have some means of determining to which class of marriages a given imperfect or illegal marriage belongs, and there are certain rules of construction which may be useful for this purpose, to wit: (1) Unless by express words, a statute goes to the validity of a marriage (i. e., unless there are words of nullity), it will be held to affect the le-

1. Plant v. Taylor, 7 Hurl. & N. 211; Middleborough v. Rochester, 12 Mass. 363.

2. See Williams v. State, 44 Ala. 24.

3. Reeves v. Reeves, 54 Ill. 332; Shoak v. Shoak, 4 Brewst. 305.

4. Voidable Marriages.—Sir JOHN NICHOLL, in Elliott v. Gurr, 2 Phillim. 16, 1 Eng. Ec. 166, 168, says: "The marriage was within the prohibited degrees; but the marriage was not declared void in the lifetime of the parties. Now the difference between void and voidable is so clear that no person who ever looked into any elementary book on the subject is ignorant of it. The canonical disabilities, such as consanguinity, affinity and certain corporal infirmities only make the marriage voidable and not ipso facto void, until sentence of nullity be obtained; and such marriages are esteemed valid unto all civil purposes, unless such sentence of nullity is actually declared during the lifetime of the parties. Civil disabilities, such as a prior marriage, want of age, idiocy and the like, make the marriage contract void ab initio, not merely voidable; these do not dissolve a contract already made, but they render the parties incapable of contracting at all; they do not put asunder those who are joined together, but they previously hinder the junction; and if any persons under these legal incapacities come together, it is a meretricious and not a matrimonial union, and, therefore, no sentence of avoidance is necessary."

5. Harrison v. Harrison, 22 Md. 468, 484.

6. See Cropsey v. McHeaney, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 47.

7. Rex v. Jacobs, 1 Moody (C. C.) 140; Cal. Civ. Code, § 83.

8. Nullity suits, discussed post, II, § 5, c, d, and part 4.

9. Koonce v. Wallace, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 194; Warwick v. Cooper, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 659.

A marriage invalid for want of age may be avoided with or without judicial proceedings, or it may be confirmed, post, § 5.

gality of the marriage only.¹ Thus, a statute providing simply that a white and a negro shall not intermarry was held not to render such marriage invalid.² And so, statutes prescribing particular formalities, but not providing that if such formalities are not followed the marriage shall be void, are held to be directory only.³ (2) A statute referring to the formation of marriage will be made to harmonize as far as possible with the pre-existing

